Tuesday night the Spanish Club was entertained with numbers by Calista Palmer and Alice Proctor.

The club is planning a party for December 16, which will be open to all of the students who have taken Spanish, or who are taking it at the present time.

Father had been married more than a year."

"Oh, but that was quite different. Come now; let's get to bed. It's almost ten."

Lady Marie Adams, a typical mother of the eighth century, reclines upon her couch, holding a glass of wine in a jeweled hand. The maid servant enters and her mistress asks, "Has my daughter returned?"

"She has just arrived, your ladyship", answers the maid.

"Then send her to me at once"—and the girl is sent.

"Hail, Mother! Why that look of anger on thy face?"

"Ah, my unseemly wench, thou hast come at last. Hours ago thou shouldst have been slumbering upon thy couch. Methinks I heard Sir Jonathan's voice. He must have tarried long to say adieu—and did he kiss thee? Thrice, you say? For shame! Why in my youth—"

"Ah Mother, when scarce four years and ten thou hadst lived thou hadst five suitors. One year more and thou wert wed."

"Ah, but 'twas different then. Come now, we must to bed."

Had the first Mrs. Adam a daughter she would, doubtless, have chided her for her misadventures, but—praise be to Allah! she could never have said "Now, when I was your age, girls—".

of dialogue into the song. Tragedy as fully developed by Aeschylus and changed a little by Sophocles and Euripides was given in contest at state festivals in honor of Dionysus.

"A Greek drama is a musical performance, and is far more closely akin to the modern oratorio than to the modern stage play. The chorus is the central part of the tragedy, and when once it has taken its place it is present till the end of the play. Its presence affects the entire play; everything is said and done before it, the divisions are named with a view to it, and all that precedes its entrance is the prologue. Sometimes the choral song serves to sum up the situation, to review what has happened, or to forecast what will occur. Sometimes it serves for contrast or relief. The chorus serves also as spectators both within and without the drama."

In his paper, Prof. Davis sketched some representative Greek dramas and showed on the screen pictures of the Greek theatres which remain today in ruins at Athens, Epidauros, and Delphi. Then he concluded his paper by having thrown on the screen ten kodak views of a presentation of Agamenon which was given at Harvard a few years ago.

More than likely, one of these outside teams will be Tennessee Wesleyan. Cumberland was not played this year, but if they are played next year, a full conference schedule will be had.

The schedule will be completed, and final arrangements with the other colleges will be made at a conference meeting next Monday at Carson-Newman College.

B. G. CLUB ENJOYS HIKE TO COWAN SPRINGS

The B. G. Hiking Club held their semi-annual hike the week-end of November 25 at Gamble's Cabin at Cowan Springs. Miss Hudson and Miss Gamble went as sponsors. The entire group was able to go. The old members were, Lucille Swafford, Eleanor Johnson, Ruth Farlee, Catherine Wayland, and Tess Frey. The new members who were initiated were Mary Gladys Brown, Elizabeth Kunkel, and Bobby Reveley. Miss Beebe joined the group on Sunday. The outing proved a very pleasant one.

time Jack Atkins isn't deserving of first team honors we'll eat the elephant ears and the eyeballs. But the unpardonable sin arose when Martin Gillespie, fullback who has played an outstanding defensive game throughout the entire season, and who has consistently gained thru the line for the Scots, worrying many an opposing mentor, was left completely out of the running, not even receiving honorable mention.

—S—

Far from being flashy, and often concealed in the forward rush of linesmen, Gillespie's playing has been the keynote to most of the Highlanders' victories this season, and in defeats it has backed up the line as only the all-conference type could have done it. Martin was at the height of his career Thanksgiving Day when he blocked and tackled so viciously that Carson-Newman rarely made gains thru the line, relying wholly on the confusing shift and end run plays. The committee on selection slipped a wide cog when it failed to give even honorable mention to one of the greatest fullbacks Maryville has ever had.

—S—

With the autumnal wars the country over ringing down the curtain on a colorful season, the eyes of the football world gaze westward toward the magnificent Rose Bowl at Pasadena, California, in which the annual Tournament of Roses will soon proclaim a new football champion for the nation. Stanford university has accepted the invitation to represent the West in what is perhaps the greatest sport classic in the world, barring the Olympic Games. After the unearthing of various old documents concerning post-season games by carefully considered eastern universities, the committee on selection finally arrived at Columbia university, which hastily accepted the bid to represent the East. New York writers, in mock tribute to the team decidedly not on the pinnacle of eastern football, described it as an indication that Opportunity now "knocks daily" instead of the customary "once in a lifetime".

Joe Williams, World-Telegram Sport Editor, wonders if future Rose Bowl competitors will be selected on an I. Q. basis. He says, "To my knowledge this is the first time a footall team has ever been decided upon as a desirable opponent on the basis of intelligence. Heretofore the main requirements have been speed, power, and skill. Perhaps this is prophetic of a new era in competitive sports, with the high forehead replacing the blacksmith"s chest. . . It is possible only to speculate as to how gray matter as opposed to red corpuscles would operate in other sports, if at all."

Annual Conference Is Attended By Several Maryville Professors

Tentative Football Schedule Arranged For Coming Year

The annual Smoky Mountain Conference was held Monday, December 12, at Jefferson City. Professors J. H. McMurray, L. S. Honaker, George D. Howell and Robert C. Thrower were the Maryville professors who attended. Important business was discussed and Maryville's football schedule for the season of 1934 was almost completed.

The membership of the Conference was increased to nine members when Appalachian State Teachers College of Boone, N. Car. was admitted. Western State Teachers College of Cullowhee, N. Car. was placed on the preferred list and no doubt will be admitted as the tenth member next year. This is in accordance with a new rule, made this year, which is that a college must be placed on the preferred list for one year before it is eligible for membership. The following colleges now compose the Smoky Mountain Conference: Maryville, Carson-Newman, King, Milligan, East Tennessee Teachers, Tusculum, L. M. U., Cumberland and Appalachian State Teachers.

Dr. James H. McMurray was again elected president of the Conference; W. O. Lowe of Knoxville, re-elected commissioner; Prof. H. C. Amis, of Tusculum, vice president; and Prof. Alex Chavis of Carson-Newman, secretary-treasurer.

Probably the most important thing that was accomplished through the efforts of Coach Honaker was the tentative arrangement of (Mary-

Subjects Announced For Bates Orations

Contest Is Open To Women This Year.

At the present time plans are under way for the William H. Bates Oratorical Prize Foundation which was founded by the Reverend William H. Bates, D. D., of Greeley, Colorado. Mr. Bates, an alumnus of Hamilton College, Dr. Knapp's Alma Mater, where there was an important senior oratorical prize. Through his interest in this, Dr. Bates decided to provide a similar prize here at Maryville College, and so he contributed the sum of one thousand dollars, the annual income from which is used to provide a prize in oratory. In 1919. the first contest was held, and since that time one has been held every year, with the exception of the last two.

The contests are open to the men of the junior and senior classes in one year, and to the women of the junior and and senior classes in the next year. This year the women are contesting.

The subjects from which the contestants may choose are as follows:

1.—Government for the People
2.—No Truce with Alcohol
3.—Social Planning and the Future
4.—Fifteen Years of Peace
5.—The Cry of the Children
6.—The Iron Man (Machine Age)

The students entering are to write their own oration, from 1500 to 2000 words in length, and present their manuscripts on or before

Death Takes Oldest Maryville Alumnus

Funeral Services of Dr. Duncan Held In Maryville

News of the death of Dr. Calvin A. Duncan, of the class of 1871, is received with great regret in Maryville College. Dr. Duncan who died at his home in Superior, Arizona, on December 9, had for a number of years enjoyed the distinction of being the oldest living alumnus of the college, and also its oldest director.

The Duncan farm, located about a mile from the college campus, was tenanted by John Duncan, a Revolutionary soldier, about the year 1789 and has been in the hands of the Duncan family for almost one hundred and fifty years since. It was in this historic home that Calvin A. Duncan, a grandson of John Duncan, was born August 30, 1851.

He was only ten years old at the outbreak of the Civil War at which time he was receiving his early education in a family school taught by Prof. Thomas Lamar. After the close of the war Maryville College was re-opened under Prof. Lamar, and Dr. Duncan was the youngest member of the group of thirteen boys who entered at that time.

Upon his graduation in 1871, Dr. Duncan remained as a tutor in the college for two years and during the next three years attended Lane Seminary. The college has conferred many honors upon him. In 1875 he was granted the degree of Master of Arts; in 1893 the degree of Doctor of Divinity; and in 1928 the degree of Doctor of Laws. He has

New Members Pledged In Theta Alpha Phi

Plans Under Way For Plays And Banquet

At a meeting of the Theta Alpha Phi on Monday, December 11, 1933, the following persons were invited to join: Carrie Lou Tweed, Veta Mae Stephens, Earle Crawford, Glover Leitch, and Ernest Lowe. Marjorie Steffner was transferred from the Tennessee Gamma chapter at the University of Chattanooga. The requirement that the names of the new members be handed in to the Grand Secretary of the Society by December 1st, necessitated their choice before Theta's play. Formal initiation will take place January 15, 1934. There will be an additional selection of members and another initiation later in the year.

To be admitted to the Theta Alpha Phi one must be an upper classman, must have been stage manager for two full length plays, must have taken a major part in two full length plays, must have taken a minor part in four full length plays, must have written one full length play or two one-act plays, or one of the major technical directors of three plays.

Many plans for the year have been made by Theta Alpha Phi. At present they are considering a one act play for broadcast over one of the local radio stations after the mid-winters, and are also planning a play to be given here. A banquet may be sponsored by the society during the latter part of the school year. To this banquet will be invited all those who are taking part in the plays of this year.

Over One Hundred Voices Make Up Chorus

The recently organized Oratorio Society of Maryville will present its initial performance, Handel's "Messiah", on Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, in Voorhees chapel. The choral group is composed of one hundred and fifteen voices selected from the Maryville and Alcoa church choirs, the women's clubs of Maryville and the musical organizations of the college.

The oratorio will be presented under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, with Martha Henry Burchfield as accompanist. The soloists include Alexander Jones, Francis Huber, Carrie Pearson, Calvin Schmidt, Mary Miles, and Mary Snelson. The college ensemble, composed of Eva Mildred Butcher, Glover Leitch, Julia Hilditch, Mary Hollis Carter, Martha Martin, and Charlotte Upp will play the Overture and a selection from Handel's "Pastoral Symphony".

So far as is known the presentation on Sunday afternoon is the first performance of "Messiah" in Maryville. However, it is the purpose of the Oratorio Society to make an annual oratorio a Maryville tradition, if possible.

It was almost two centuries ago that George Frederic Handel gave to the world the greatest of all sacred musical compositions, the oratorio, "Messiah". Charles Jennen in the late summer of 1741 sent to Handel the words for the oratori. Although Jennen clamed the authorship of the libretto, it was, in reality, the work of a poor, half starved clergyman who lived in Jennen's household.

Immediately after receiving the libretto manuscript Handel began

There are few things, indeed, that may be said in an editorial way at the Christmas season. It has all been said before, such a great number of times, in fact, that most thoughts connected with this season have become exceedingly trite.

We would like to point out one thing, however, which is that to all apparent observations there is more to be genuinely thankful for this Christmas than there has been for a number of years. If we may believe our newspapers thousands of men have returned to work during the past year. Thousands of women and children who have been at the brink of starvation are now assured of shelter and food. Because in an economic way the United States is on the "up and up", great numbers of people are happier than they have been in months, which is something for even those who have remained in comfortable circumstances thru depression times to be thankful.

We realize, however, there are still countless people for whom Christmas can mean little but heartache this year, and we pause to send them a silent hope that the future may bring brighter things.

Were we to ask a Christmas present for our nation we should ask a state which would insure a normal economic well-being for all, even the least of her citizens.

Suits to Santa

December 16, 1933.

Dear Santa:

We do not intend this year to ask you for things which cost a great deal of money because a disease, called Depression, which has made our pocketbooks sick may have affected yours, too. But cheer up! President Roosevelt has invented a new medicine, NRA, that will cure everything, it is said, except, perhaps, the mumps.

We should like for you to bring the freshmen a stick of Moderation to eat with turkey and plum pudding. They are not accustomed to such delicacies here, and we fear that their appetites may master their better judgment, for which they are renowned. For the sophomores we ask a box of Christmas Spirit. Some of them, we think, have not been sufficiently enthusiastic about this holiday season. We hope you will put a bag of Patience in the stockings of the Juniors, who are becoming anxious to acquire the dignity and prestige of Seniors. The Seniors themselves want a magnet which they can use next spring to attract jobs.

Our faculty is a very deserving group of people, so deserving, in fact, that we do not believe we are making too large a request when we ask for a gift that is a little more costly than those mentioned above. Santa, will you please bring our faculty a bottle of Kindness-of-Heart, a bottle big enough to last at least until the end of the semester.

We ourselves want just one thing, a talking toy. If we have not asked for too much already, we would be very, very happy if you should give us a Jack-in-the-Box, who could say to everybody for us, "MERRY CHRISTMAS".

With best wishes to you and Mrs. Santa, we are Very sincerely yours,

Happy and Yule Tide.

Women can keep a secret just as well as men, but generally it takes more of them to do it.

Sixteen Debaters Make Up Year's Debate Team

Work Begun On The Varsity Question

Since the beginning of the semester thirty-four students in the public speaking class have been meeting twice each week under the direction of Professor Queener. In recent weeks the varsity question has been given much consideration.

Last Monday twenty-eight members of the class tried out for the varsity debate squad in Athenian Hall before Miss Johnson, Dean Hunter, and Dr. Knapp as judges. The judges selected nine men and seven women to form the squad. Those selected are:

Women: Mary Gladys Brown, Roberta Howie, E. Ercelle Hunter, M. Florence Hyde, Eleanor M. Pflanze, Catherine B. Smith, and Maria Wynn.

Men: James P. Badgett, Douglas Mack Carhart, Alex Christie, Earle W. Crawford, G. Edward Friar, Clifford T. Morgan, Archibald F. Pieper, James G. Saint, Jr., and James R. Smith.

As soon as the judges' decision was announced the squad met and made plans for a more intensive study of the question, Resolved: that the powers of the President of the United States be substantially increased as a permanent policy. Meetings of the squad are being held every evening.

While the complete debate schedule for the season is not yet drawn up, it can be announced that it will be the heaviest undertaken in recent years. In addition to the usual debates with schools in the vicinity, several have been arranged with colleges in neighboring states. Prof. Queener plans to take as many of the squad as possible to a tri-sate convention at Greensboro, North Carolina, and then to the national convention at Lexington, Kentucky. The first debate will be a triangular meet on February 1, with Lincoln Memorial University, and Emory and Henry. These two colleges will debate here while Maryville sends a team to each of them.

Theta Epsilon Play Is Decided Success

Excellent Character Portrayals Done By Cast

Presenting as their second bid for the coveted Theta Alpha Phi cup the Theta Epsilon Literary Society pleased a reasonably large audience on Thursday night with the presentation "Little Women", the dramatization of the novel by that name, wnritten by Louisa M. Alcott.

Progressing rather laboriously through the long first act, which was made to seem even longer because of some unfamiliarity with the lines, the play got off to rather an awkward start. The four "little women" were introduced in the first of the play, and did relatively good acting.

The second act and succeeding acts moved much more smoothly with the characters familiarizing themselves with their stage work, and with the stage manipulations being handled successfully. The death scene occupied a maximum of time during which interval the audience seemed in doubt as to the emotion which was provoked.

The change of set for the fourth act was quickly and effectively accomplished. One particularly unruly apple tree seemed to create some confusion during the act.

Observed as a unit, the staging of "Little Women" was a decided success. Allowing for the discrepancies of acting early in the play and for the stage handicaps later, the play had much to rest its case on in the consistently good character portrayals, and in the make-up work. The makeup of the character, Beth, was especially good. This may be said equally of the characters Mr. Laurence, Aunt March, and Mr. March, as played by Robert Beyer, Louise Reichelderfer and Jonathan Gillingham respectively.

The chief virtue of the play lay in the fact that it was well cast, and the characters did equally successful work in carrying their respective roles. Eleanor Denslow as Jo, Robert Howie as Amy, and Louise Reichelderfer as Aunt March seemed to receive the special plaudits of the audience, but even the acting of these characters can not be considered of a higher type than the consistently good work of the remaining cast.

Scot Cagesters Top Gulf Pro's, 62-31, Opener

Honaker's Men Show Fair Pre-Season Form To Win One-sided Tilt

HENRY IS HIGH SCORER

Yearlings Brighten Prospects With Promise of Full Reserve Strength

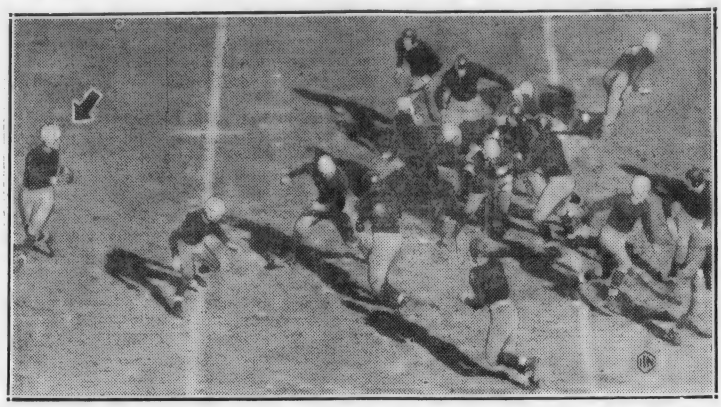
By Dick Meadows

Led in the scoring by Henry, speedy freshman forward, the Highlander basketeers opened the 1934 season last Tuesday night with an easy 62-31 victory over the Gulf Refiners, independent team from Knoxville.

The Scotties displayed a fast moving combination in Captain Kizer, senior, and VanHee, special guard, Hannah, freshman, center, ad Allen junior, and Henry, freshman, forwards. These men played well in their first game together, showing good team work for an early season contest.

Frequent substitutions were made throughout the game, enabling fifteen men to get into action. Substitutes played most of the last quarter and a large part of the second quarter.

Henry, with twelve points, was high-score man for the night, and Patton, of Gulf, with eleven points, was second. Patton was easily Gulf's outstanding performer. Allen and Hannah were tied for third place in the individual scoring with ten points each.



The Scots opened the game with a rush, making three baskets before the Refiners could score. Van Hee scored first by dribbling through the Gulf defense and shooting from under the basket. Hannah added another field goal, and a few seconds later, Kizer received the ball on a fast-breaking play and made a pretty shot from the side of the goal for two more points, and a 6-0 lead. Following a missed free throw on one of Maryville's three personal fouls, Armstrong, forward, made Gulf's first points on a field goal from a mix-up of players under the goal. The Scotties soon pulled away, however, and, with Allen, Henry, Kizer, and VanHee adding twelve more points between them, held an 18-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

The Gulf team outplayed Maryville in the second quarter, scoring thirteen points to ten for the Scots. Patton was the leader of this attack, ringing four field goals and a free throw. Substitutes accounted for six of the Scot's points in this quarter.

The third quarter found the Scotties at their best. The starting line-up played nearly al the quarter, and had little trouble in working the ball down to the basket, where someone was always ready to make a shot. Henry rang four field goals, Hannah, three, Allen, two, and VanHee, one, for a total of twenty points during the quarter. Although Kizer failed to score, he was a big help in getting the ball to his mates when they were in a position to shoot. The Scotties kept the ball in their possession so well that the Refiners were able to score only one field goal during the entire quarter.

Continuing their good playing, the Scots found the basket for fourteen markers during the last quarter. Gulf played on nearer even terms with the Highlanders in this quarter, however, by scoring ten points. Morris and Armstrong, of Gulf, and Hannah and Peery, of Maryville, each rang two field goals in the final quarter.

Princeton's 27 to 2 victory over Yale, at New Haven, was a perfect windup of a great season for the Tigers, the only unbeaten, untied major team in the country. Here is Bill Keesling, Yale halfback, receiving the kickoff. He was tackled by Constable.

Russell Will Join Pro Baseball Club

Accepts Contract With Piedmont Club To Work Out Next Spring

Ray Russell, former Highlander football captain and invaluable left fielder on the baseball nine, will leave Maryville College at the end of the semester for Greensboro, North Carolina, where he has accepted a contract to play pro baseball with the Greensboro division of the Piedmont League.

Russell has received offers from several of the clubs in the Piedmont section, but will go to Greensboro. The club has achieved prominence in southern baseball in recent years, winning both halves of the Piedmont race last summer. The farm where he will workout is a branch of the St. Louis Cardinals, members of the National League.

Ray reached the spotlight after playing with the High Point Pointers, a semi-pro league from High Point, N. C., last summer. He led the club, which is made up of teams from Winston-Salem and other large North Carolina towns, with a .400 percentage, and it was while playing against the Piedmont club that he received recognition and consideration.

Playing on the Highlander varsity team for the past two years, Russell has led the pack, batting close to .400 each year. Last year he was neck and neck with Cecil Stone, now at Carson-Newman college, for batting honors, but always kept the lead. His leaving will deplete greatly the ranks of the Scotties next spring.

Since the Carson-Newman game he has received an overflow of unjust criticism because he did not dress for the game, but his critics hae not realized the seriousness of the chest injury he received in the Kentucky game last Fall. Looking forward to the contract throughout the year he has tried to protect his physique, but the injury was yet raw at the last game, and he was in no condition to play.

FRENCH CLUB

The French Club had its last meeting before the Christmas holidays Tuesday, December 12th, in Bainonian Hall. George Stanley presided over the meeting as president. A very interesting program was presented by the committee. Edith Vannamon read a paper on Britain customs, Emily Watson played a violin solo with Joan Dexter as accompanist, and Phyllis Dexter gave the story of Cyrano do Bergerac.

SPORT TALK

By BRYAN PAYNE

We can't be very polite this week. As far as we can see into the sea of mountains to the north there is yet no treasure ship approaching, bearing the glad promises of a gluttonous afternoon at the family dining board. But that is not the half of it. Indiana basketball is in full swing, both in colleges and in high schools, and anyone who has seen an Indiana state tourney knows what full-swing basketball is. Ninety-two counties boasting several hundred teams are moving toward the front, prepared for the speediest, bitterest classic in all basketball annals, the state tourney. The unbelievable amount of enthusiasm stirred up each year draws the yokels to the village in droves, and betting runs high. It's a great thing to watch.

—S—

If there was any gloom lurking in the corners of Alumni Gym because of what hardwood prospects might be, it was dissipated during the opening tilt with Gulf Independents the other night. The initial performance was rough in spots, but not so rough as others have been, and mid-season form should find "Honaker's Horribles" a worthy conference foe, if not a dangerous one. When the conference schedule begins the Highlanders will have played twice, and that, with scrimmages, should have found a scrappy combination for the Cullowhee netters, when they play here January 12.

Perhaps the most gratifying thing to note in Tuesday night's game was the bold threat the freshmen cagesters made in the last half to carry off the season's honors. Precisely we are thinking of Henry, Hannah, Crawford, and Peery, local and near-local products with respectable records on the basketball floor. Crumbaugh, another freshman, was evidently not at his best, perhaps because of a last minute shift of positions, but handled the ball as if it were no stranger. Hulette should see more action as the season advances, and . . . . well, as a matter of fact, three of the first five were freshmen, which fact should bring no little pride to the freshman class. . . and no little admiration and good will from upperclassmen.

This business of scribbling a weekly blister catches us defending here, and opposing there, to say nothing of squelching endless thoughts in the interim, but this week we felt called to do both. The final stand of fan mail (via the mouth) brings along with the slag, bits of unjust criticism concerning the performance of one of the cleverest ball-handlers Alumni Gym has roofed in many a year. Because Kenneth VanHee didn't step out and win the fray all by himself he was described as "not what he is cracked up to be." Well listen, critics, if Van wants to step out and play a little pure basketball for the sake of the game, there is small room for objection as we see it, and the man who has played on a national championshhip team doubtless will hold his own in the pinches. His dribbling is a technique to be admired, not to mention his passing, under-basket shooting, and above all the speed with which he breaks in a fast pass attack.

None but the surviving members of last year's cage squad realizes the severe blow dealt to the present ranks when John Waldrop was forced to withdraw. Faithful to the last day, as he has proved himself to be in times before, he reported for practice during the first two or three weeks of the current season, but the lack of time became too pressing. As a freshman Waldrop had little trouble in making the varsity first team at guard, which position he kept during the entire

Varsity Tankmen Are Confident As Meet With Rivals Nears

NEW RECORDS EXPECTED

Coach Fischbach Announces Lineup; Includes Seven Freshmen

The Scottie tank team opens the season here tonight with a dual meet against the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. swimmers, and from all reports the local men are considered slight favorites to upset their powerful rivals.

This year's team is practically an unknown quantity, which is yet to be tested under fire. Although defeated last season by the Knoxville squad, the Scotties are confident of turning the trick tonight.

Several new faces will be seen in the local ranks, since there are seven freshmen awaiting the gun. Obert, sophomore diver, will be up to par, along with Oldham, a newcomer. More speed in the dashes will be furnished by Esbach and Ingram, while Herries, Meeks, and Shields will hold down the distance events.

The Knoxville team is nearly intact from last year, and boasts several South Atlantic Championship winners. Last year, the Y's. trounced the Scots by a big margin.

A return meet has been scheduled with Knoxville for early in January, and others on the year's card are Tusculum and the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. teams.

The meet will start promptly at 8:00 p. m., and a treasurer's receipt will be necessary for admittance.

The events and probable entries are:

200 yard free-style relay—Vinsant, Eyster, Greiner and Ingram
400 yard free-style—Shields and Burnham
100 yard backstroke—Burckhalter
50 yard free-style—Vinsant and Greiner
100 yard free-style—Ingram and Mowatt
200-yard breast stroke—Herries and Meeks
200 yard free-style—Esbach
Diving—Obert and Oldham
300 yard medley relay—Burckhalter, Herries and Esbach

OBSERVATIONS

Five days. . . four days. . . three days. . . . . I'm a coming. And so says Santy Claws as the calendar days are successively done away with in favor of the coming tide of yule. We think we never looked forward much more , or much more forward to a Christmas vacation than we do this one. The only distracting element is the very plain fact that this is the last one in good old Marry Ville for us, if all goeth well.

—o—

There is just this one thing about thecomm unity known as the Maryville college campus: during the Christmas holidays it is positively the most lifeless thing ever to come from the anvil of the creator. It's just plain dead, and we speak very much from experience, having been here two winters. Of course, the one redeeming feature comprises those other students who find it expedient to stay. Once in a while or so one sees one walking about and he looks like a gift from the goddesses.

—o—

We think it would be very good indeed to have the night watchman take a short vacation, his position to be filled by the new flashlight brandisher, Mr. Jesse Willis. Mr. Willis came in our place of "after 10:30 habitation" last week and got to flashing that light around while we lay asleep over one of the tables.

—o—

We understand he's been taken for the watch of the night in previous times. The most striking feature of Mr. Irwin, it seems apparent, is his flashlight. Well, it might be his gun, but we never got struck by that.

—o—

We wonder if Mr. Bryan Payne is going to tell us about our basketball team this week. We'd like to see a good old game of roly poly be.ore (darn, here's the holidays agin, but we can't help it) Christmas. We confess that's it's not the kind of basketball that we like to see played, but it's basketball because they use a large leather sphere, and basketball is the game of games in our part of this little old country.

—o—

Going into athletics makes us think of Kay Carpenter and her swimming class. She was going to tell the instructor one recent day that she didn't like athletics, but she showed a slight reversal of form in relating that intention. She was going to "go fishing and tell Mr. Swimbach that she didn't need any exercise today.

—o—

This advertising for "Little Women" was what might be considered of the better sort. It measured up to anything since "Dracula" (we've got to show some Literary Society loyalty). Mr. Glover Leitch apparently puts considerable time to his art work, which we should say, yields a worthwhile productive reward for that time spent.

—o—

The Baggy Knees club has not formed entirely yet. It's gaining yet. It's gaining in membership, however, and many of the boys and standing on the outside wanting in. We're going to lower the doors before long and let membership be open to all of the boys. You may mark us, this is going to be one of the most popular organizations on the campus (we've quit saying "cowmpus") before too long.

PRE-MEDICAL CLUB

At a Pre-Medical Club meeting in the Philosophy class room Wednesday, December 13th, Miss Bonnie Hudson gave an interesting recount of a visit to the University of Vanderbilt Medical School. Plans for the rest of the year were discussed. Lectures, observations of operations, group discussions, exhibitions, and group research are to be arranged for the future.

Although the oratorio was completed in September, 1741, it was not until the following spring that it was presented to the public. On April 13, 1742, it was given in Dublin by the combined choral societies of two cathedrals and an instrumental group under the direction of Dubourg, the violin maestro.

The performance was hailed with enthusiasm at the time and has since taken its place as the most loved of the world's oratorios.

Sept. 22—Kentucky at Lexington
Sept.—Tennessee Wesleyan (here) tentative
Oct. 6—Tusculum at Greeneville
Oct. 13—Open
Oct. 20—King (here)
Oct. 26—State Teachers (Johnson City (here) Homecoming
Nov. 3—Milligan at Johnson City tentative
Nov. 10—Cumberland (there)
Nov. 17—Open

On the whole the convention was a very satisfactory one. Next year the Conference meeting will be held at Tusculum College.

As we have come to see Mr. Black, Mr. Proffitt, and Mr. George Fishbach incorporated into the order of Chapel leaders we wonder how long it will be until Robert "Toreador" Thrower begins to take that responsibility. In fact we've wondered over a period of years how come the professor-coach was passed by when the eligibles were chosen for that position.

Dr. Duncan's first pastorate was in Jonesboro, Tennessee. In 1892 he became the Synodical Superintendent for Tennessee and Western North Carolina. During his twenty one years in this work an almost miraculous transformation was made in the schools and churches of the mountainous sections of this region. From 1913 to 1921, he served as pastor of the church at Harriman, Tennessee and then, because of the health of his family, moved to New Mexico, and later to Superior, Arizona, where his son, Rev. Calvin A. Duncan, Jr., is pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

The life of Dr. Duncan has been a long and useful one. His staunch character, charming personality, and deep love for others, will always be remembered by his friends and relatives. Dr. Duncan was a grand uncle of Lillian Crawford, Earl, Lynn and Hugh Crawford.

The funeral was held in New Providence Church on Thursday afternoon.

season. Playing never a flashy game, but always a steady and reliable one, he made himself extremely unpopular with Highlander opponents, and his accuracy in middle distance shots made him one of the high scorers. Torn between conflicting senses of duty he has chosen the more difficult way to distinction, but his fine sense of sportsmanship will be long remembered.

—S—

Mr. Football has decided to stay with us for another month, and after that month is over he will probably stick around for a few more charity games, and for an appearance in behalf of "Mrs. O'Leary's dead cow", and by that time sports writers will have caught the cue for spring football prattle, all of which goes to prove nothing. The latest consignment of food for the bearded gent's meditation is the big all-star football meet to be held in Knoxville on New Year's Day at Shields-Watkins Field, and to be called The Great Smoky Mountain Football Classic. Contracts have been made with all outstanding southern players, and practice is expected to start soon. It is not likely that eight hundred Maryville students will forego the back-to-town movement to attend it, but whoever does can certainly take in the acme of southern football at a glance.

Bartlett and Robertson, Duo Artists, Appear On Lyceum Program Here January 19th

English Pianists Promise Artistic and Versatile Program For Maryville Audience

The second of the Lyceum numbers, which will be distinguished for its novelty and for its musical interest, marks the appearance of Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson who will present one of their famous two piano recitals here on Friday, January 19, at 8:00 P. M.

Ethel Bartlett was born and educated in London. She comes of a musical family, and very early in her career won the Associated Board Scholarship. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music with Frederick Moore and Tobias Matthay. Later she went to Berlin, where her teacher was Arthur Schnabel. Returning to England she made a highly successful debut in London, and for a time played and toured extensively as a virtuoso.

She also made a great reputation for herself in chamber music, and besides quintet, quartet and trio work, was associated with John Barbirolli in 'cello sonata recitals. When she and Barbirolli were still students together at the Academy, they gave a London recital, after which "The Daily Telegraph" critic stated that she was "far on the road to fame."

Rae Robertson was born in Inverness. He cannot remember the time when he did not play the piano. His home was near some military barracks, and he would repeat by ear all the tunes he heard there, whether it was band or pipe music.

When he was six, his playing at a party attracted the attention of a lady who had been a pupil at the Leipzig Conservatory. She offered to give him free tuition and the offer was immediately accepted. Later he went to Edinburgh University to prepare for his M. A. degree, and while there continued his piano work with Phillip Halstead. He won the Bucher Scholarship for music, and was preparing to go to Berlin to study with Carreno when the war broke out. So, instead of Berlin, he came to London for a few months, and studied with Tobias Matthay at the Royal Academy. Then he threw up his scholarship and joined the army as a Tommy.

He served for four years, and was wounded twice; in the arm, on the Somme in 1916, and in the hand, in the Ypres battle in 1917. Then he came home to England to a hospital. Here the authorities discovered his genius at the piano, and gave him no alternative but to join the hospital concert party.

After the war he completed his scholarship at the Academy. When he first went to the Academy he had met Ethel Bartlett as a fellow student. Something more than a warm friendship sprang up between them, and as soon as their Academy days were over they were married.

After their marriage both Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson built up considerable reputations as solo pianists. Both of them made frequent tours. Everything was going beautifully except that they rarely seemed to see each other. In fact, they only seemed to meet for their holidays.

In 1925 they gave their first

President Lloyd Plans Trip Thru Mid-West

Will Attend Conventions And Assembies In Interests of The College

President Ralph W. Lloyd is leaving Monday on a motor trip to attend educational conventions at St. Louis. Mrs. Lloyd will accompany him.

He will spend the greater part of next week at St. Louis, then will go to Oklahoma City. On Sunday, January twenty-first, he is to preach at Murphysboro, Illinois, which was his first pastorate after his graduation from seminary.

The first convention President Lloyd will attend will be that of the Liberal Arts College movement, meeting on January sixteenth. Then on January seventeeth, he plas to attend an assembly of the Presbyterian College Union, an organization composed of the Presidents of fifty colleges connected with the Presbyterian churches. Conventions of similar groups of Baptist, Lutheran, and Methodist colleges will also meet in St. Louis next week.

The assembly of the American Association of Colleges, to meet January eighteenth and nineteenth will include nearly all colleges and many universities of America. Reports from committees on such subjects as the cost of education, college athletics, college finances and trust funds, and educational surveys will provide part of the convention program.

President and Mrs. Lloyd expect to return to the campus on Tuesday, January twenty-third.

Miss Coulter Retires After Many Years Work

It is announced that Miss Sarah F. Coulter has retired from active service with the College, after twenty-three years as Manager of the Boarding Club. She goes with the appreciation and good will of all who have known her throughout almost four college generations.

She and Miss Darby, whose resignation was reported in the ECHO some weeks ago, have had responsibility for much of the work of one of the largest and most difficult departments of the College. Miss Coulter has planned and supervised not fewer than seventeen thousand meals served to an aggregate of more than twenty-five million persons. For twenty-one years Miss Darby has been associated with her as assistant in charge of the dining room.

Miss Coulter is now at her home near Walland, Tennessee, and Miss Darby has accepted a position in Sarasota, Florida.

Boarding Club Is Now Under New Supervision

Trained Dietitian Takes Charge Of Pearsons Meals

The Boarding Department of the College opened after the Christmas holidays with Miss Edith Elizabeth Hunt, of Memphis, Tenn., as Manager and Dietitian. Miss Hunt succeeds Miss Sarah F. Coulter whose service began in 1910 and Miss Lula G. Darby who came in 1912.

On the evening of January 5, President Lloyd came to the dining room during the supper hour and made a general public introduction of Miss Hunt to those who eat there.

Miss Hunt graduated from The University of Tennessee in 1928, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in Home Economics, with a major in Foods and Nutrition, and has done graduate work at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, majoring in Nutrition and Institution Management.

For the past five years she has been Manager of the Boarding Department and Instructor in Home Economics, teaching Foods and Nutrition, at The University of Tennessee Junior College in Martin. Prior to going to Martin she was for one year Assistant Manager of the YMCA cafeteria in Chattanooga and before her graduation from the University she had two years experience as teacher of Home Economics and manager of the lunch room in a high school. While a student at the University she had experience as one of the staff in the University Cafeteria, under the supervision of Miss Frances J. Mathias, Institution Manager.

Miss Hunt is a native of East Tennessee but now counts Memphis her home. She comes to Maryville highly recommended. She is in direct charge of the Boarding Department, which is under the general supervision of Mr. Louis A. Black, the College Business Manager.

Faculty Hears Paper On Nature Of Water

Professor Griffitts Gives Summary of Research He Is Engaged In

"Having water on the brain is far truer than most people realize when making such a comment. The human body is about 70 percent water and the content in the brain is still higher," said Prof. Fred A. Griffitts at the Faculty Club Dinner, on Monday evening, January 8, when he read a portion of an extensive paper prepared by him on the subject, "The Nature of Water."

Basing his discussion of it entirely on its exceptional properties, Mr. Griffitts spoke of water in regard to its solvent properties, maximum density, surface tension, conduction of and high specific heat, heat of fusion, heat of vaporization and boiling point, viscosity, and chemical and related properties.

While the paper is technical in part, it is generally intelligible and interesting to laymen. Following are excerpts which are especially enlightening:

"The solubility of certain materials in water makes it the greatest sculptor. It is only necessary to call to mind such instances as the Garden of the Gods, some scenes of Yellowstone park or the Grand

Reverend Roy Ewing Vale Of Detroit Announced Leader Of The February Meetings

Rev. Sidney E. Stringham To Lead Singing As In Former Years

It is our privilege to announce that the College has secured Rev. Roy Ewing Vale, D.D., LL.D., Pastor of the Woodward Avenue Presbyterian Church, Detroit, as the leader of this year's February Meetings which open on February 16 and that Rev. Sidney E. Stringham, now Pastor of the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, St. Louis, will lead the singing for the thirteenth consecutive year.

To give to Maryville College almost two weeks of time out of a tremendously crowded year is a magnanimous service, and this is the second time Dr. Vale has done so. He was the leader of the meetings in 1930, when he was Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Oak Park, Chicago. And he serves the College also as one of its Directors.

Although a comparatively young man Dr. Vale has been widely known for many years as a preacher of great earnestness, conciseness, and spiritual power. Since his graduation from Princeton Theological Seminary in 1912, he has been Pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Lambertville, New Jersey; Second Reformed Church, Somerville, New Jersey; Second Presbyterian Church, Oak Park, Chicago; and Woodward Avnue Presbyterian Church, Detroit. He has been called to many other churches, and has recently declined a call to California. Both the Oak Park and the Detroit churches have large memberships of more than two thousand. He was well-known and beloved in Tennessee and at Maryville during the four years of his pastorate at Knoxville, where he served in the tempestuous years of the World War. Maryville students will find him their sincere friend.

It will be our great pleasure to welcome Dr. Vale and Mr. Stringham back to the Hill as old friends.

The President of the College and those associated with him have been planning for months for the meetings of this year. All Christian people are asked to pray that they may bring a blessing to all of us. They offer an opportunity, unsurpassed anywhere, for college men and women to unite their thoughts around the great issues of life and the great truths of God. The world has never needed more than now educated leaders of sound knowledge, reasoned and firm faith, and unswerving devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ. The meetings are conducted quietly but earnestly and may be a mountaintop experience for each person who sincerely takes advantage of the opportunity.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

The subject of the coming Wednesday morning chapel service is "The Minority Is Sometimes Right." The choir anthem will be "Art Thou Weary, Art Thou Languid" by Wolcott.

Student Volunteers Gives Space In Echo

Substitution Made For The Discontinuance of The World News Bulletin

The Student Volunteer Group has made two additions to their programs which are of interest to the general student body.

One of the changes is the discontinuance of the World News Bulletin which formerly summarized news of the world. To take the place of the Bulletin the Volunteers have made arrangements with the ECHO staff to contribute to each issue a short review of world news. Thihs feature will be similar to the column now called "The World Today" and will start with the next issue of the Echo.

The other addition to the Volunteer program is an outdoor bulletin board which has been erected on the campus on the north side of the book store. On the board will be posted scripture passages and other thoughts that the group wants to keep before the students.

Interesting meetings are still carried on every Sunday night after Vespers in Bainonian Hall. Last week Dr. Lloyd addressed the group on "Preparation for Christian Service." Other such worthwhile meetings have been arranged and a cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend these regular weekly meetings.

We regret very much to hear that Glover Leitch is confined to the hospital with the mumps, and trust that he will be seen on the campus again soon.

Chilhowean Contest Opens Next Tuesday

The Chilhowean staff has completed arrangements for a novel contest which will begin next Tuesday and continue for a month. As previously announced the prizes are free copies of the 1934 annual with the winner's name stamped in gold on the cover.

Firms which have contracted for advertising space in the Chilhowean have made up a number of posters each of which will be displayed for one day in the lobby of Thaw and in each of the four dormitories. In the corner of the advertisement will be a picture of some well-known individual whose name will be suggested in some way by the wording on the poster.

Students (except members of the Chilhowean staff) are invited to identify the pictures and submit their lists at the end of the contest. The students who have the largest number correct will be the winners.

Our resentment at statements made in a recent magazine article provokes us to comment. The article was that written by a college professor who, for obvious reasons did not sign his name, and entitled "Confessions of a College Professor."

It seems that the author has a confirmed and emphatic opinion that college students as a general rule must be regarded as objects to be coddled, never to be taken seriously, seldom possessed of any such qualities as earnestness of purpose or seriousness of intent. Had the gentleman stated that such an attitude was the exception our feeling would not have been so aroused. But he evidently considered the attitude he sets forth a very general one.

Most college students, according to this anonymous author, are in college because it is obviously the thing to do, because their friends are there; in short, because its a very good place to have a "grand time" We point out to Mr. Whoever-he-is that most of us are in college at such a sacrifice because of present conditions, that we feel such an attitude would be both inconsistent and despicable.

Furthermore, we hear that we object strongly to using our own minds; we call our teachers "hard" when they ask of us a normal amount of work. We not only want to be coddled, we refuse to be taken seriously. Again we object, because we feel that the average student takes a normal amount of enjoyment in the work he has deliberately chosen to study, and that for the most part, he regards his college teacher, that is, the average sympathetic and understanding professor, (which type we believe to be in the majority), as a friend.

We are willing to admit, of course, that the enjoyable extra curricular side of college life is one we are fully aware of, but to admit that we feel it is the most important is somet hing else. We are willing to agree that there are a few who go through college with pleasure as their chief aim, but we feel such people are the exception rather than the general rule.

We do wonder, though, whether we should take so seriously the opinion of a man who admits, in spite of his distinctly superior attitude, that he became an "easy teacher" against his principle, just that the students and faculty might consider him a "fine fellow".

How Round Is a Circle—By A. Christie

According to Will Rogers, the great molder of American life and opinion, the modern college paper does not sufficiently uplift its readers. It does not elevate their tastes or nourish their intellectual capacities. (These people who would remove animal pleasure from life, and make dining clubs into great social enterprises, for instance!). This week, therefore, we seek to make up for our past failings by publishing a scientific treatise on the topic: How round is a circle?

In considering the question of the roundness of a circle we must first decide what kind of a circle we mean. Take, for instance, the Arctic Circle. How round is it? Well, we don't know and we care less for it's difficult to get off the earth to see that circle and appreciate its form. Even if we did get off the earth to see it and get safely back again our testimony would not be received. People just would doubt our word about having been in a place to view the circle. Hence we can dismiss the Arctic Circle from our discussions.

Take now Piccadilly Circus (or Circle, it's the same difference). The best way to find how round it is is to walk around it and see. However, you can't get over there and investigate and still take these perennial tests or quizzes or set-to's that we have every so often around here. In that case you'd have to send someone to walk around it for you. But that's unsatisfactory. Your investigator might get drunk and stagger around it and bring back the report that Piccadilly Circle was round like the edge of a circular saw.

There's more kinds of circles or rings, piston rings, boxing rings, diamond rings (there's one at our table since Christmas, L.M.D., you knoow) and so forth. Let's think of the ring that accumulates around the neck, say of a roommate. Now in my preparation for this treatise I had been observing the ring around my roommate's neck to see its rotundity. It was difficult to do that. He was seldom in when I was in. He wouldn't keep still. He kept his Adam's Apple bobbing up and down munching and swallowing hard candy. And then to crown his non-co-operation or passive resistance or apathy to my scientific bent he had to impound himself under Mrs. Hall's care with the mumps. Not only did he so remove himself from the sphere (more circles) of my investigations but he busticated the sphericity of that circle around his neck. Thus we are prevented in another way from finding the solution to our problem "How Round is a Circle?"

Now it occurs to us that there's another element to the question. Should the increased powers be made permanent—oh, that's something else. The other element is the one who makes the circle. We've had delightful knowledge of the difference that the maker of things makes. Think of the vast change in Pearsons recently. Since you, then, have practical acquaintance with the difference that the maker makes, we do not need to enlarge upon the idea that the drawer of the circle makes a difference in its roundness.

And the conclusion of the whole matter (you can pass it on to Mr. Rogers) is that the topic is too endless for us. Indeed we'd never come to the end of trying to imbue culture in college students. Why spoil them anyway? Instead we respectfully suggest that Dr. Knapp explore the question of the rotundity of circles for a future faculty dinner.

ALPHA SIGMA

The Alpha Sigma Literary Society met in Alpha Sigma Hall Saturday evening. They had as their guests the Athenian Society and a group of Memorial Hall girls who took part in the entertainment. President John McQueen welcomed the visitors with a short talk. A very clever rebuttal was given by Harry Waldron. The girls of Memorial Hall presented "The Freshman Follies of 1934". Lou Moranara read some poetry which he himself composed. Norman Sylar furnished delightful piano music with two pieces, "Puddin Head Jones" and "Good Night Little Girl of My Dreams".

Canyon, to realize what the solvent action of water has given us in the way of beauty. Add to this the green of leaves, the color of flowers, the hue of the rainbow and sunset, and where does one find a greater artist than water?"

"The pressure created in the crevices of rocks by the freezing of water splits off particles and thereby furnishes a gradual but almost eternal source of minerals for the soil. The force of a layer of water under the United States capital when frozen would actually lift it."

"According to the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce in Knoxville, the corporate area is 26.4 square miles. Calculating on the average rainfall, as reported by the United States weather bureau, at 50 inches annually gives us a total of 95,556,200 tons of rainfall."

"Water is a much better conductor than many liquids. Water in the form of ice and snow is a poor conductor, and as a result these save the grain crops in the North from the severe cold. The nocturnal loss of heat from the soil is of no significance when the ground is snow covered."

"Can 100 percent pure water be obtained? The answer is, 'it cannot be done'. At least it is not thought to have been done more than once in the history of chemistry, if then. Kohlrousch and Heydweiller, in 1894, got very nearly pure water by distilling in vacuo forty-two times and collecting it in a container that had been washed with conductivity water for ten years to remove all soluble substances in the glass."

"One thing must be referred to in conclusion. . . . It is the so called, "Heavy Water". . . . It has different freezing and boiling points, is lethal to certain fish and worms, —paramecia lived twenty hours in it—is not as good a solvent as ordinary water. It is difficult to secure and is, therefore, expensive being listed at $150.00 per gram, $600.00 per teaspoonful, and $150,000.00 per quart."

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Last night's sack of of a decidedly inferior Cullowhee leather sphere association officially commenced intercollegiate basketball competition for the Highlanders, and their performance at that time eclipsed, together with the two other showings this week, anything they have shown so far this season, or, boldly, anything they displayed last year, in spite of Yankee Lewis and the assurance of a consistant tip-off, a la Carl Haub. The clever combination of Henry and Hannah under the basket Monday night, in spite of one or two slips, which, happily, can be attributed to a fairly tight defense on the part of the V-eighters, was unbeatable, and strangely enough Henry, who starred for Friendsville Hi before he became a Highlander, flips underbasket goals with the very familiar cleverness and precision of none other than Yankee himself, who wrote some tasty pages into Scot basketball history during his four years here.

—S—

Wednesday night the basketeers encountered their toughest opposition to date in one of Knoxville's best independent leagues, the Athletic Housers, and it is significant to note that in the final period the Scotties, tho they bedlammed in complete disorganization for a few minutes, pulled safely thru the crisis of their first big scare. And incidentally, for the first time also, the crowd became a trifle throaty as the contest waxed hotter and wilder, which again is a new experience to the organization, taken ccollectively, now plying the hardwood in varsity regalia. In future situations of this sort, and may there be many of them, the quintet will effect a better organization as a natural result of previous experience.

—S—

Outstanding in the three games played this week have been Henry's close-in shots and coming defensive play, Van Hee's super-accurate pass work and uncanny speed and deception in his dribbling, Rex Allen's spectacular one-handed flip that does or does not touch the rim on its way thru (thinking of Wednesday night), Kizer's effective use of his inexhaustible supply of energy, and Pee Wee Pierson's puerile practice of purloining the show. The team seems to be getting over the illusion that because it couldn't keep up with Van's passing and dribbling he, Van, was no good, and it was learned to anticipate the tedious, short passing type of play in close quarters under the basket where ordinarily the sphere has been passed back out to the guards.

—S—

Never again will we attempt to uphold the noble publicity of homestate basketball, for when the Toreador turns us down, we're whupped. Sensing a fertile spot in which to plant a seed we accosted the ol' boy the other night and turned the talk to the state basketball tourney at Indianapolis next March. It was only naural that we should suggest a trip north to view the spectacle, but after we had outlined the potentialities of such a venture, sugaring over the whole proposal with promises of first class seats on the ground ramp and inexpensive quarters at which to stay, he turned the whole proposition over on its back and said he'd rather see a horse-race. In the same breath he mentioned the Kentucky Derby at Louisville, causing us to stop and think, for even your scribe, still a loyal native of God's country, would rather see a horse-race. . . . in Louisville.

Scotties Annex Sixth Straight Win As

HONAKER'S MEN

Defeat Athletic House Quintet of Knoxville, 33-30 in Wild Game Last Week

DISPLAY FAIR FORM

Blount Motor Co. Five Falls To Scotties Monday, 46-32 As Vacation Ends

Although meeting the strongest opposition it has faced this season, the Highlander basketball team added another triumph to its list of victories over independent teams by defeating the Knoxville Athletic House 33-30 last Wednesday night in the Alumni gym.

The Scotties completely outplayed their opponents during the first half, but in the last half, the Knoxville team found the basket with long range shots, and pulled up to within one point of tying the score in the last two minutes of play. With the score 31-20 in favor of Maryville near the middle of the final period, Knoxville made five field goals in succession, making the score 31-30. After a minute of wild shooting by both teams, without another score, Hannah put the game on ice for the Scotties by ringing a field goal from near the foul line just before the game ended.

Neither team got off to a fast start, but when the Highlanders did get started, they piled up a good lead, being ahead 18-8 at the end of the half. Knoxville scored only two points in the opening quarter, as compared to Maryville's ten. They out-pointed the Scots in the final period, however, 12 to 4. The third quarter was nearer even, with Maryville making eleven markers and Knoxville ten.

Henry, Scot forward, had the highest individual score for the night with eleven points, and Radcliffe, Knoxville guard, was close behind with ten. J. Foster, Knoxville forward, was third with seven points. The rest of the scoring was fairly evenly divided among the starters and one substitute for each team.

Maryville's entire starting lineup played well. The passing seemed to have been improved somewhat over that shown in earlier performances.

As has been the general rule in the games against independents, frequent substitutions were made by the Highlanders. Of the seven substitutes who played for the Scots, Crumbaugh showed up best.

After being held to a 12-12 tie for the first quarter, and to a slim lead of 20-17 at the half, the Scottie basketball five hit its stride early in the third quarter of the game with Blount Motor Company last Saturday night and ended the contest with a 46-22 victory.

The Highlanders score first, on baskets by Captain Kizer and Allen, and never relinquished the lead, although they shared it with the Blount team on three different occasions, twice during the first quarter and once during the second.

Kizer and Allen flashed old time form for the Scots by ringing up eleven and ten points respectively. Henry, also, did good offensive work, making five field goals. Hannah was close behind, with four field goals and a free throw to his credit. Van Hee and Crumbaugh guarded their territory well, forcing the Blount players to shoot hurriedly, especially when the Motor Company was inside of the foul circle.

For Blount, Overly, former Highlander athlete, led his mates in the scoring with seven points. He handled the ball well, and his passing kept the Maryville defense constantly on its toes. Marshall registered six points and the other Motormen's scores ranged from five down to none.

The game was rather rough at times and fouls were numerous. The Scots were charged with thirteen personal violations and Blount with eleven. The Scots made good on seven of their free throws and Blount on eleven.

Bob Thrower Is Leading His Mat Stars To Another Championship

'Toreador,' Known as a Builder of Champions, Looks Over His Handiwork to Date And Says, "Good."

By Dick Meadows

Big Bob Thrower's championship wrestling Highlanders, for the past two years the champions of the state of Tennessee, are getting off to another season of grappling, and looking more and more like the champions they are.

It goes without saying that all credit for the success of the Highlander top-notchers reflects back to none other than the Toreador, once himself the wearer of many "M's" and the strong point in many Highlander teams.

During his four years as a Maryville athlete, 1921-25, Coach Thrower participated in three sports, football, basketball and track. In the spring of his senior year, he established a shot put record which has not yet been equaled by a Maryville man. As a junior, he was a member of the 1923 football team which tied the University of Tennessee in a game that found the Tennessee players coming from behind a 7-0 score in favor of Maryville to even the count at 7-7.

There was no wrestling team at Maryville during Coach's playing days here. The team was organized two or three years after his graduation and was coached by one of the students until he was appointed to the post in 1931. Since he took over the position as wrestling coach here his mat teams have not lost a single match.

Last year, Coach Thrower put out one of the best wrestling teams that has yet represented the Orange and Garnet. This team amassed a total of 168 points during the season, and allowed 16 points to be scored against it. The best their opponents could do against the Scot grapplers was to win two falls and two time advantages. John Topé, 155 pound member of this team, did not lose a bout during his career as a Scot wrestler.

This year, the squad looks promising for another good season. Captain Steve Boretsky, 145-pound collegiate champion of Tennessee, and who, at the end of the year, will be the first wrestler to have gone four years under Coach Thrower's tutorship, is back in the 145-pound class and is expected to take up where he left off last season.

In the 175-pound class, "Buck" Millsaps returned from last year's squad all set for another good season. Other letter men who will probably hold down their positions this season are Ridder, 118-pound class; Hoglan, 125-pound; Bya-, 165 pound; and Mose Gamble, unlimited. The 155-pound and the 135-pound classes will have to be filled by new men. Dean, one of the most promising of the newcomers, is the only entry in the 155-pound class since two or three others have

Varsity Swimmers Go To Tusculum Tuesday

Coach Fischback Arrays A Sweeping Schedule, And Possible Trip South

SWIMMING

Tuesday night will find Coach Fischbach and his varsity swimmers matching fins with the Tusculum tankmen as guests of that institution, and from all advance reports the Scotties are heavy favorites, although Tusculum is practically unknown to the local men.

In previous meets with the Bulldogs the Highlanders have been victorious, but thru'out the past four or five years no tank meets have been scheduled between the two teams.

With the local team showing up in practice with much better speed and form, Coach Fischbach and his men declare themselves in the best of shape, altho Herries has been away from practice several days and Burckhalter out with a heavy cold.

Some anxiety was expressed over the length of the Tusculum pool, since the men have been training in a seventy-five feet tank. But whatever the conditions, the Scotties are confident of meeting them.

Fischbach's tentative plans for the season include two meets with the University of Tennessee, with the possibility of meets with Georgia Tech and other southern universities. Vanderbilt is already scheduled.

The Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. team, always counted on as a visitor, has not been scheduled, having indicated no desire for a meet.

CULLOWHEE FALLS

49-26 To Honaker's Fast Moving Team in One-Sided Tilt Last Night

HANNAH SCORES HIGH

Henry, Hannah, Kizer Play Brilliant Game; Miller Stars For Cullowhee

Basketball fans who swarmed into Alumni gym last night to see Honaker's hardwooders play the Catamounts from Cullowhee, 49-26, in a dragging, one-sided affair, went away satisfied that the Highlanders are heading this year for the high trail of victory and a top-notch position in the Smoky Mountain Conference for 1934.

High scoring honors, which were fairly evenly distributed between three men, went to Hannah, who chalked up five field goals and two free shots for a total of 12 points for the evening. Henry and Allen followed closely with 11 and 10 points each, with Kizer contributing three field shots and VanHee trailing with two and a free toss.

Officially opening the schedule for intercollegiate competition the Highlanders seemed a bit nervous and disorganized, and were slow to get off to a driving game, but the novelty of the change of clothing and the excitement of a 'first night' soon wore off, and when it did, Kizer was caught under the basket making a field goal to begin the evening's entertainment.

A moment later Henry, playing a brilliant game for the Scotties, swished a donation thru the net from the foul line, making the score 3-0 and smooth sailing ahead. On the tip-off Henry muffed a hard pass under the rim, but on the next play Hannah was fouled and made the shot.

Miller, high score man for the Cats, scored from the side, and on the next tip-off VanHee recovered the ball, breaking fast down the floor, and passed to Crumbaugh, who flipped, but gritted his teeth as the ball bounced off the rim, to be taken by a Cullowhee man for no score whatsoever.

OBSERVATIONS

Let us see, this must be the first appearance of what Dr. Fields calls, rather called, the scandal sheet, since before the memorable days of pre-Christmas, and those were the days when we had something to look forward to besides "the rest of the examinations".

—O—

What we did look forward to, or what we got forward to, was the opportunity (shall we say?) of chewing the rag, and a few other things, including candy from their homes, with Misters Godfrey, Leitch and Kirchner (listed in order of size beginning with the pony. Of course, it was just plain hard to tell what Kirchner and Co. would be doing, but he was soon off to the promised land of Tellico plains and .... what then? Or maybe, "so what?"

—O—

Friday Neff blew into town for the third time this year and told us that he has most of his cuts taken in Princeton Seminary. Friday is allowed 25 percent cuts in all classes (this is the way we got it) and he has all of them taken in two courses. It looks like the same old Friday it used to be. . . . getting nearer and nearer to Saturday, if that denotes extremes, or extremities. . . in which case, with developments, he might soon become a pastor.

—O—

Friday says that at the beginning of our season it looked like we couldn't see much but Kipp in the way of observations. We guess he was right. The boys of Princeton (this doesn't leave Neff out) were about to write us a signed open letter to "Open Forum" about our near sightedness, but they never got around to it, or something. If Friday had written it, that would have made his repertoire complete in that line. But Friday has many lines.

—O—

This reminds us of the Massey wondering what she's going to do after the last Ethics test when, according to Dr. Orr, we go fishin'. She didn't have any string, but we suggested that she use the same old line. That should prove very satisfactory.

—O—

Acquaint yourselves with the fact that we're not supposed to be doing this job this week. We turned our job over to brother Thom to let him give vent to some of this bottled up humor of his, but his sense is better than ourn. He came around (after we came around) to report that he hadn't done it, but he still intended to. By that gesture, we should say that the good brother has done all that's significantly necessary to make the sophomore staff. He's proved himself to be a typical "Highland Echo Journalist."

—O—

Payne was on the hill a few days after school was out just a pining his life away to the four winds, mostly to the northwind, in the direction of Indiana. Finally, after the zero hour, Bryan went his way to town, and the telegraph office to send Ma and Pa a telegram. Bryan just knew the theme statement. . . . he didn't care about the number of words. . . just to get the message across. After all of 1 minute's deliberation about the wording of the wire mail the finished product came out thus: "HAVE RECEIVED NO MONEY; WHAT SHALL DO?"

Bryan tied the bill on "Grandma's" telephone bill, went home, saw the mailman who had a nice fat letter with the required spondulix to defray expenses on the homeward trip. They had fireworks as far north as Winchester, Indiana, on Christmas.

—O—

Bryan Payne is the other typical one, only more so. Bryan's never sure of but one thing on the sport page. That's "BRYAN PAYNE". Sometimes the sport news comes along and helps fill, but if it's lacking in any way, Bryan just orders out some bigger type to fill in the blank spots. People used to ask who our sports editor was. . . but nevah . . .nevah . . . more.

—O—

We were reading Eugene O'Neill's "Ah Wilderness" and came to the place where a man was telling the woman a story which seemed incredible to her, to the extent that she instructed him o "tell it to the Marines". We figured that was pretty good, and were quite well satisfied but became more satisfied a few lines down where the woman subtly reiterated with, "It sounds fishy to me!"

—O—

Now, for the sake of unity, we'll finish the one about Dr. Fields. We happened in to see him seeking information generally (not excluding the reason for his giving us our first and only F slip at mid semester) and the conversation developed to one of our particular interests of the time, "The Highland Echo".

—O—

After some chat, in which neither of us got anywhere we advanced with, "Well, Dr. Fields, would you call our paper a "yellow sheet". "That's it, said, the psychologist, that's what I mean, it IS a yellow sheet."

—O—

This came just after the headline on our yet unblemished paper which read "UNIVERSITY OF TENNESSEE TRACK OFFICIALS REFUSE MEET WITH COACH THROWER'S SQUAD." That was folowed with "Coach Britton of U. T. Fears Obvious Consequences of Meeting Scots Crack Cinder Aggregation". Those consequences looked less obvious after a coupla weeks.

LYCEUM

joint recital. Much to their surprise, it was an unqualified success. This seemed a solution of their difficulties which might prove a very acceptable one. The rest of their story is one of amazing success.

They were the first two English artists to play works for two pianos. They have since played in Holland, Belgium, Poland, Spain, Germany and in America. Their 1933-34 concert season opened auspiciously when they appeared as guest soloists for the New York Philharmonic Orchestra on December 28 and again on January 6.

Not only have they discovered a vast and interesting literature for two pianos, but composers have not been slow to realize that a new field has been opened, and to write new works especially for them. Arnold Bax has already dedicated four such works for two pianos to Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson. While their's is not a new art, it is an art that has been neglected. If they have done nothing more, they have opened up for the enjoyment of musicians a rich treasure—house of music.

Most critics have referred to the singular unanimity of their playing and the sameness of outlook. It is difficult to believe that the music is made by two pianists, it seems so much the product of one brain and one body controlling the two pair of hands.

Rain poured dismally in the Sierra Nevada foothills and Los Angeles county was swept by a flood. Over 1,000 emergency workers counted 39 dead and scores missing.

CULLOWHEE GAME

After an interval which saw both teams in possession of the ball, passing around for an opening and taking a few long tries, Henry scored on a pretty under-basket shot, making the score 6-2, and Hannah followed on the tip-off play with another one from the side. VanHee and Kizer rang up two markers in rapid succession, making the whole thing look like anything but a good basketball game.

In the meantime Wilson and Miller dropped in one each for the enemy, but quit that sort of play as the Scotties threatened to get serious. Allen replaced Crumbaugh and dribbed down the side, only to have his arm come up sending the ball unmolested through the net on one of those famous one-handed shots of his, thus making the score read 14-8. But Miller, Cullowhee's one speck of brilliance, scored shortly on a one-handed flip, and in the next minute scored again to bring the scores closer together than at any other time during the evening.

In the late of the first half, after Hannah, Allen, and Davis had made two from the field and one charity toss, Henry scored on a crip-shot, which followed some lightning passes and fancy ball handling by four men in a ten-feetcircle, or, in short, one of the prettiest plays of the game. The half ended after Fisher, replacing Hannah, rang a free toss and Henry scored again, making the count 24-12 in favor of the ol' ball club.

After the mid-period lecture in the dressing room the Scotties returned to the floor a steadier and more confident crew, and commenced the second period as Allen tallied again from the side. Miller again scored for Cullowhee, and Kizer followed on the next play with a flip from the side of the floor, which was immediately followed by a fielder each from Allen and Henry.

Miller, Cullowhee's crack forward, came up from center for another marker, lifting the count to 31-17, after which the Scotties grabbed the tip-off, passing in and out around the basket and vicinity. Kizer pulled over to the side for a long shot, and as it approached the basket a trifle short Hannah leaped in the air to tip it in for a beautiful shot and two more points.

Throughout the remainder of the period the Scotties, led by Henry, Allen and VanHee, scored frequently, and with five minutes left to play and the score 47-25 Coach Honaker sent in an entire new team which closed the period with free throws from Fisher and Davis.

Unquestionably the outstanding services of the evening were rendered for the Highlanders by Henry, speedy forward, and Hannah, center, in their fast offensive work under the backboard. Either of the two is always coming under from the side and open for a pass, and Henry open under the goal means a marker in most cases.

Although Allen had trouble in holding to passes he made up for it, in scoring with the one-hand shot, which only he can execute to perfection. Kizer, as usual, played an all-around top-notcher, and the whole first five hung together, both on offense and defense.

The Cullowhee 'five' displayed nothing spectacular, altho Miller, clever forward, played a good game under the circumstances, contributing most of the enemy scores, and Cook, center, was next high and with some good defensive work to his credit. On the whole the North Carolina team gave the impression that they lacked experience, and that, together with several tough breaks under the basket, made the going much easier for hte Scotties.

WRESTLING

dropped out. A keen fight for a position will probably be staged between the 135-pounders Kipp, Joe Battaglia and Shields.

The first match of the season will be held against the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. next Saturday night in the Alumni gym, Knoxville will put up a strong team against the Scotties in an effort to avenge, last year's defeat. The second match is slated for a week later against Appalachian Teachers and others are in view against Vanderbilt and the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A.

Kelly's "Torchbearer" Chosen As Bainonian Literary Society Play

Bainonian Cast Is Selected And Work Begun On Production

Many people who are eager to know what happens behind the "green curtains" are at last to have this curiosity satisfied. The Bainonian Literary Society has selected for its mid-winter play a clever burlesque on amateur theatricals called "The Torch-Bearer", "The Torch-Bearer", by George Kelly presents in a most ridiculous manner the coach, the prompter, the stage manager, and all the cast of a play. The play is a difficult one, and is the first satire to be given at Maryville in some time. Those in the cast are:

Mrs. Pompenelli (coach) ---------- Lois Wallace
Mrs. Fell------ Veta May Stephens
Mrs. Ritter ---------- Vi Webb
Mrs. Shepherd.. Carrie Lou Tweed
Florence --------- Dorothy Carrell
Jenny (the maid) Madge McQuagg
Mr. Ritter--- William MacCalmont
Mr. Hosseprosse ---------- Arthur G. Courtenay
Mr. Spindler ------ John Talmadge
Mr. Twieler ------ Robert Lodwick
Mr. Spearing ----- Gordon Grooms
Stage Manager ----- Charles Allen

Lorena May Dunlap, the stage manager, will be assisted by Stuart Gillis. Dorothy Hassell is the business manager.

Much new talent has been brought to light in the mid-winters. Since the plays produced by The College Players and Theta Alpha Phi are usually staged by the more advanced students of the expression department, it is interesting to note that in the two latest plays, fourteen people have appeared on the Maryville platform for the first time.

Cooperation Urged By The Chilhowean Staff

Printing House Is Demanding Portraits That Annual May Progress

An urgent request from the printers of the Chilhowean demands an early delivery of photographic materials in order that the 1934 Chilhowean may appear as scheduled. Because of the N.R.A. rulings for printer's associations, is will be impossible for the staff to delay delivery in the hope that the firm will do overtime work at the last minute. Regardless of the willingness of the firm to work overtime such a thing would be impossible under present conditions.

For this reason underclassmen who have not yet had their pictures taken are urged to do so at the earliest possible moment. Senior pictures have been satisfactorily completed. There are still a great number of juniors and sophomores who have failed to get their proofs in. The drastic reduction the staff has succeeded in making in the cost of the annual to the student necessitates the utmost cooperation with the publishers. In view of the success of the staff in putting the annual in easier reach of the student, all students should be willing to lend their heartiest co-operation. It is this support the Chilhowean asks in making again the announcement that it is imperative that all pictures be made AT ONCE.

Date Set For Concert Of Women's Glee Club

Novel Fashion Review To Be A Feature of Program

The evening of February 19 has been selected for the concert to be given by the Women's Glee Club On the program, are three groups of choruses including many beautiful selections, among them "How Lovely are Thy Dwellings", from Brahm's Requiem, "Song of India", by Rimsky-Korsakov, an arrangement of "Humoresque" and "Swanee River" with a violin obligato played by Glover Leitch, and a clever choral fantasy on Nursery Rhymes with a four hand piano accompaniment played by Kay Carpenter and Helen Chambers.

A novel feature in the form of a Fashion Review will present the latest from New York's dashing wardrobe for both men and women. In spite of the fact that the models are well-known on the campus, the audience may not recognize the students.

The Fashion Parade will be opened with a unique drill by French and Irish maids. Throughout the review, comments will be given upon the various modes. Scenery of modernistic design will constitute the background.

The Women's Glee Club consisting of twenty-four voices has shown under the direction of Miss Frances Henry an exceptional ability to harmonize and to interpret music. The members are looking forward to the concert with enthusiasm.

SUNDAY VESPERS

Dr. Stevenson's theme for Sunday evening, January 21, will be "The Lamb of God Taking Away the Sin of the World". The Vesper Choir will offer "An Evening Hymn", by by Pease, as its anthem.

Bartlett-Robinson Duos Well Received By Lyceum Audience

Versatile British Pianists Present Varied Program

The duo-artists, Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, presented last night on the Maryville platform in the Maryville College Artists' Series were enthusiastically received by a large audience. The work of the British pianists displayd a coordination that was nothing short of remarkable, and thoroughly deserved the very generous applause.

A great variety of musical types was included in the program, ranging from simple beauty of the Bach choral preludes to the extreme brilliance of the Hungarian Rakoczy March. The various numbers not only gave ample opportunity for the display of excellent technique, but also for the revealing of the musical personalities of the artists, a process which was in itself highly interesting.

Particularly interesting were the two numbers, "Red Autumn" and "Polka", dedicated to Bartlett and Robertson by the composers and played for the first time to the Maryville audience. The light and fantastic character of the "Polka", designated on the programs as a musical joke, was especially clever.

Other numbers on the program, however, were better suited to the exhibition of the rare powers of the artists. Striking contrasts were produced by the combination on the same program of numbers as different in musical character as the charming Chopin rando, the lieting "Scherzo" from "Midsummer Night's Dream", the bizarre minor "Fetes" of Debussy, and the quieter Schumann and Orensky numbers. The "Rakocsky March" which concluded the program brought the house down, and the pianists were brought back to the stage numbers of times by the thunderous applause.

Three delightful encores were played, the second of which, the "Blue Danube Waltz" in a new and very novel arrangement, particularly pleased the audience. The final number was the very beautiful second section of the Arensky Suite.

Theta Alpha Phi To Pledge New Members

Initiation Has Been Deferred Because of Illness of Pledge

By special permission from the National Council of Theta Alpha Phi, the local chapter of this honorary dramatic fraternity has postponed its initiation, which was to have been held January 16, in order to include those who have reached eligibility in the last two plays presetned. The initiation will probably take place February 19.

In addition to Ernest Lowe, Glover Leitch, and Veta May Stephens, the three who were to have been initiated earlier, Lorena May Dunlap, Frances Massey, Maria Wynn, and Lucille Swafford will be taken in. The initiation will take place some time after the February meetings.

At the biennial convention of Theta Alpha Phi in New York City December 26-28, Michael Testa, president of the Maryville chapter, reported on the work being done here. It was seen that Maryville stood among the six highest colleges in the country. Mr. Testa was elected regional secretary of North Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee. While in New York, the representatives visited Radio City, production houses, theaters ,supply houses, scenic studios and costume and playwright houses.

Members of the organization here are working on a radio broadcast and another play to be given in the next few months, after which there will be another initiation in May.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

On Wednesday morning, January 24, at the regular chapel service Dr. Stevenson will speak on "Homesickness of the Soul." The choir will sing "Let Not Your Heart Be Truobled" from "The Resurrection and the Life" by Wilson.

NOTICE TO SENIORS

The first order of the senior class rings will be here by Wednesday, January 25. All seniors who have rings in this order are requested to pay the balance of their money before that date.

Popular Oscar Wilde Play Is Offered As Athenian Mid-winte

Plans For Society Play Nea Completion

"The Importance of Being Earnest", the production of the Athenia Literary Society, has been cast, an preparations are being made for it presentation, which will probabl take place about the last of Febru ary. Professor Cloeting, secretar and treasurer of the national Thet Alphi Phi, calls his play the "onl perfect comedy ever written." I was done by Oscar Wilde, and wa first produced in London in 189 Since that time it has been one o the most popular plays for colleg production.

The plot relates the difficulties o Mr. John Worthing and Mr. Alger non Moncrief, both of whom pos under the name "Ernest". Joh Worthing, the country man is "Er nest" in town while Algernon th city bred Englishman becomes Er nest to his country friends. Th fact that each man is supposed t have a brother "Ernest" makes th plot even more complicated. The un raveling of the plot and alleviatio of conditions for the two youn men (which involve the death o one brother Ernest as the result o a severe chill) occupies the majo part of the denouement while th play ends with no Ernest left ex cept th major "Importance of bein Earnest".

Try-outs were held last Monda and Tuesday, and the probabl cast selected from a great numbe of students. The actors and th characters are as follows:

John Worthing, J. P. ---------- Richard Or Algernon Moncrief-- Herr Whissle
The Reverend Canon Chasuble --- Willis Garre
Lady Bracknell ----- Celia Conove
The Honorable Gwendolyn Fairfax Lois Brow
Cecily Cardew -------- Helen Rus

"Berkeley Square Cast" Invited To Knoxville

Merits of Play Approved By Knoxville Visitors

The cast and director of "Berkeley Square" have been highly complimented by the request to repeat the performance of the production in Knoxville. Arrangements have not been fully completed, and there is some doubt as to whether the Knoxville poeple will accept the required terms. Circle number seven of the Church Street Methodist Church is the organization which is hoping to secure the College Players and present their play as a benefit entertainment.

The play, which was given here last week, was admirably done, being notable for the consistently good acting, the naturalness of the character interpretation, the excellent lighting effects, and the ease with which the shifting of scenes was accomplished. The fine cooperation of the cast made for a unity that was extraordinary for a college play. Evidently these various good attributes were well marked by Knoxville people in the audience with the result that they hope to have the play repeated in that city

EXAMINATIONS—B. GAINES

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party"—WHOA! My powers of concentration failed me for a moment, and my fingers pounded out, one by one, the letters of the practice sentence I used as a beginner in typewriting long ago. I had intended to write, "Now the time for all good students to study for Exams." "But what are Exams?' ask my inexperienced classmates. Read on—

"Exam" is the shortened form of the word "Examination", so shortened because of need for time to cram. Exams are designed to determine one's rank among his classmates. One may be a skilled cook, or an experienced bridge shark, but pass Exams he must to remain in DEAR OLD MARYVILLE.

Ah me! After such a lengthy and involved discussion of the meaning of that rather hackneyed abbreviation, "Exam", I must needs pass on to a more lengthy and involved discussion of the kinds of exams with which we are afflicted. In climactic order they would be Pop Quizzes, Discussion Tests, Objective Tests, and, finally, Just Plain Exams. What's the difference?

A Pop Quizz is a professor's alarm clock designed for use in the classroom where students find it difficult to remain in the state of consciousness. A Pop Quizz may be as easy as a first-grade arithmetic problem, and yet be brought upon one so suddenly and with such ferocious intent that all the tiny suggestions of thought go scampepirng back in their hideaways.

We have next, O honorable classmates, (upper-classmen may read, but need not be influenced. Their ideas, although not suitable for print, have been molded and set long ago.)—we have next in our classification of exams the most illustrious Discussion Tests. These tests are the most hypocritical, sanctimonious, deceitful, insidious, fraudulent, wily, artful, disingenuous—Well, these Discussion Tests are most deceptive, because of their brevity and clarity. But, I ask you, did anyone ever make a good grade on a Discussion Test? No! Why not? Because, O worthy classmates, it can't be done! Despite the labor you introduce into the construction and composition of answers to questions on a Discussion Test, YOU CAN'T WIN! In one place there should have been a comma, not a period; and in another question the tense of the verb was missed. Ah, me! I must pass on—

Objective Tests are next in line for discussion and explanation. Be not afraid, of insignificant freshmen, of the five or six closely written pages of the Objective Test. Be you strong—and begin. Whether or not you will finish rests with the gods alone. Words like supercalifandelistic-expelodocious need not frighten you. I repeat—Be not afraid! Pitch in and do your worst!

Without even troubling to discuss the class known as Just Plain Exams, I would rest my case the time-honored Exams. My recommendation to the worthy faculty of this institution and to the student body, would be to banish them from our lives, and to let us enjoy our

"The Educated Heart", an article in the January "Reader's Digest" makes a number of suggestions, which if they were observed would be valuable assets to the college student.

Gelett Burgess, the author of the article, contends that the person with the educated heart is one who isn't satisfied with the Golden Rule, but goes a step farther; he is not merely kind, but he "does kindness with style." Mr. Burgess goes on to point out that many people are not acquainted with the niceties of life, and that many who are concede to them with such an ungracious air that the value of the thing love is lost because of the spirit in which it was done.

Giving, for instance, should be a gracious act. If a gift is given in a begrudging way it embarrasses the person who must receive it, and is of no benefit to the giver. One should says Mr. Burgess, give a few cents worth of oneself, too. Other bad social habits that many people acquire unconsciously are the habit of not giving ones full attention to the person who is talking, not lending a genuine sympathy to the troubled person because of preoccupation with ones own affairs.

The value of tact in all circumstances was particularly well brought out. Tact, declares the author, is what makes kindness real and effective. So, the person who not only gives up his seat on the street car but gives it up willingly and graciously, the person who not only acknowledges a gift, but gives evidence of appreciation of that gift—these are examples of the educated heart.

It was Mr. Burgess' remarks about the unfortunate tendency of people to consider themselves first that brought us to think in terms of ourselves. There is much opportunity on a college campus to demonstrate whether or not one is possessed of the educated heart. Various classroom situations come to our mind, but nothing strikes us more forcibly in this connection than the situation which exists in our dining room. It is a question whether visitors to Maryville could decide with any certainty that there existed here any "educated hearts", were they to judge by general behavior at meals.

We would like to point out what we believe is general student opinion that the periodic alarm clock, performance and corresponding behavior is entirely out of place in the dining room of a school like ours. We refer the people whose thoughtlessness results in such unncessary bedlam, to the abovementioned article in the hope that it may make some impression.

AMERICAS

The most important news of the week comes from Washington. President Roosevelt has asked Congress for authority to impound all gold in the treasury and devalue the dollar to a maximum of sixty cents and a minimum of fifty cents.

A new ray more penetrating than either X-rays or radium, a ray made of neutrons, the most destructive substance known to science, has been developed at the University of California.

Argentina's efforts to bring about a peace between Paraguary and Bolivia in the Chaco area dispute have ended in failure.

Another civil war is threatening in Cuba following the resignation of President Grau and the appointment of Carlos Hevia to his office by the revolutionary junta. In addition a general strike has been voted by the extreme labor groups.

EUROPE

France and Russia have made a commercial treaty guaranteeing to each other substantial trade concessions. The treaty is the result of a year's negotiations.

Russia had the largest crop of grain that she has known for many years. Next year an even greater production is planned.

The British trade dropped $200,000,000 in 1933 according to the preliminary reports given by the board of trade.

ASIA

The civil war in Ningsia Province, China, is becoming serious and is likely to involve four or five Northwestern Provinces.

REGISTRATION ANNOUNCMENT

Registration is well under way at the administration offices. The registration of seniors is completed and other classes are expected to be registered by January twenty-ninth.

It is hoped that those who can fill in schedule cards without aid will do so promptly to avoid congestion the latter part of the week.

Schedules for special consultations are posted in the dormitories and Thaw Hall. Juniors may have appointments Monday, Sophomores, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and Freshmen, Friday, Saturday and Monday, January twenty-ninth.

All registration cards must be checked before payments of semester bills. The Treasurer's office will be open for this purpose January twenty-sixth from nine A. M. to six P. M., and on January thirtieth, thirty-first, and February first.

A late registration fee of five dollars will be collected with all payments made after February first.

For those who are interested in a Survey of Vocations open to women Y. W. C. A. is offering a series of meetings in the next few weeks entitled "New Vocational Vistas". Every girl is welcome. The meetings begin at 1:15 with a song service preceding them.

Book Browsing

The little volume, Julia Newberry's Diary, which first came to light this year, is a real literary find. It is the authentic diary of a prominent young Chicago girl during the years from 1869 to 1872.

At the time of the Chicago fire in 1871, the famed Newberry home with all its rare art treasures, books and furnishings was entirely destroyed. The family, however, happened to be traveling in Europe and so the diary of the younger daughter escaped destruction.

After the death of the members of the immediate family, Julia Newberry's diary came into the hands of cousins, who did not trouble to open its lock. Only this year was it opened and read; and recently it has been published without change of English or spelling.

Some of the famous men and women of that day walk through its pages. All the events are told with a charming naivete which is rarely to be found. After reading her diary one is convinced that Julia Newberry's early death robbed America of a novelist of note.

James To Demonstrate Liquid Air Qualities

Demonstration To Be Here Tuesday Night

On Tuesday evening at 7:30 p. m. in Voorhees Chapel, Elliot James, will present a demonstration on liquid air.

Mr. James, quoted as the foremost liquid air demonstrator in America, has had wide experience in his field. A native Kentuckian, he has traveled over most of the states of the Union in the past ten years, and has given many thousand demonstration. These demonstrations are not only fascinating, but extremely educational. Last summer at the World's Fair in Chicago Mr. James gave more than 1600 performances to over half a million people. His programs were so popular that it was impossible to accommodate the crowds in the auditorium at the Hall of Science.

Elliott James presents a program that not only illustrates the practical use of liquid air, but also shows the peculiar qualities various substances acquire when exposed to extreme cold. For instance, when a rubber ball is treated with the liquid air it becomes so brittle that when thrown to the floor it breaks into many fragments; a piece of lead is made to ring like a steel bar. These and many more interesting experiments are performed by Mr. Jones.

Admission to the program is ten cents.

FRENCH CLUB

At a meeting of the French Club on Wednesday night an election was held. The following officers were elected:

President—Phyllis Dexter
Vice-President—Michael Testa
Secretary—Margaret Cooley
Treasurer—John Crump
Program Secretaries— Mary Sloane Welsh, Eula Sibsy, Joseph Battaglia, Eddie Friar

The program consisted of a cornet solo by John Phay, and a talk by Louis Krainock.

The Home Economics Club met Wednesday night for election of officers. Those chosen were:

President—Helen Mahan
Vice-President—Betty Brewer
Secretary—Ernestine Tipton
Treasurer—Elvira Ressler
Prgoram Secretaries—Ruth Farlee and Betty Bacon
Editor—Violet Webb
Entertainment—Mary Ellen Cramer

An amusing reading, "The Milliner's Bill" was given by Roberta Howie.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Speaking of the class of '34, it occurred to us that it should not only be remembered for its wide speaking on debate platforms and behind library magazines, eloquent as that may be. Nor is the pen its only weapon. We refer to the dissecting needle—and to the young lady who wields it, Frances Massey.

Miss Massey, one of the privileged seniors doing Honors Work, is at present probing into the mystery of how a tadpole emerges into a frog. Frogs-to-be offer a fascinating field to a person endowed with her native enthusiasm. Her keen sense of humour added to sharp powers of observation have made Frances' four year's work with the microscope profitable ones. During two of the four she has held a position as biology assistant.

From formadlehyde and microscopes to green paint and powdered wigs suggests the extraordinary gamut of her interests. Of course she has eyes for the drama of life that is enacted beneath a cover glass. But there is more to it than that. President this year of the College Players and cast in several productions in former years (not to mention her experience in stage managing) it is clear that her interest in dramatics is more than passing. Strangely enough, she appeared in Berkeley Square as a high-born 18th century lady who would have shuddered at the sight of a frog.

She has been seen too in other capacities, as a Nu Gamma leader, for instance, or as hostess at a Y. W. tea, winning friends here as easily as in a laboratory.

One of the high points of Frances' college career was her trip to Washington, D. C. last year, a trip which she made with Miss Clemmie Henry. The occasion was the D. A. R. convention in that city. Frances was chosen to represent the entire Maryville student body at this gathering, a responsibility which speaks well for her standing on the Hill, and which she carried well, speaking, we heard, later, in glowing terms of Maryville affairs.

And speaking of terms reminds us that she has served several in various capacities as a Theta Epsilon officer.

Though she is quiet and so unassuming she would never have been guilty of telling you all these things about herself, still she has one of the strongest of the claims of this year's seniors to being labeled that very desirable thing, a Superior Scottie.

The smoothest combination the Highlander basketeers have struck in many moons is the one consisting of Hannah at center, Kizer and VanHee at guards, Henry at left forward, and Allen and Crumbaugh alterating at the other forward position. That was clearly seen Thursday night when frequent substituting of players other than the above alternation broke up the fast offense and slowed the game down to a walk. In no way does this mean that reserve strength is weak, but it does indicate that if Maryville is to finish the season, already so auspiciously begun, with flying colors and a conference title, the above combination will be played to its fullest advantage. Already Crumbaugh, having had practically no previous experience in the game at all, has come to the top as a full fledged Highlander basketeer, playing always a good defensive game and getting under the goal frequently for neat crip shots together with successful long range ties.

—S—

The chief difference between the Highlanders and Lincoln Memorial University's highly touted quintet in Monday's game was the fresh and earnest fighting spirit on the part of the Honakerites, together with an accurate fast-pass offense and good all-around defensive play. Although the local defense didn't begin to click until late in the first half, neither did the visiting offense. Time and again the L.M.U. squad, with Slover and Bowling seeming always to be open for a pass under the cage and Captain Kennedy working in and around the whole crew, brought the sphere down into ideal scoring positions, from which advatage, had they been experienced shots or hit even an average number of tries, the Scotties could never have rallied. There is no doubt, however, that the home cagesters made the better showing and have th better team, though the men from L.M.U. must be given credit for some good ground work and a number of capable ball-handlers.

FLASH! !! !

BLOUNT HOTEL APTS. Jan. 19

Scoring 420 points in a ten-feet range target duel with a pin-and-feather pop gun Wendell Donald, Miami, Fla. pistol flash, led the pack of four entries, Ed Thom, Chet Holley, and The great Hugh Wolcott, in a heated shooting scrape at their luxurious hotel apartments here tonight. It is only fair to state here that Mr. Thom, who rose to fame when shooting cinders off the courthouse steeple in Pittsburg for the benefit of caretakers who balked at such dizzy heights, was evidently not at his best, scoring only 40 points during the whole meet. His only words at the close of the duel were, "I think I was, uh, what shall I say, uh, a trifle off from, to use a popular sporting phrase."

PING-PONG TOURNEY

Further activities of the athletic board of the Y. got underway this week as they carried forward plans for the annual ping-pong tourney, to be held during the following week.

Some thirty men are entered, and the drawings give promise of some rally good matchs. The drawings are posted in the lobby of Carnegie Hall, and in the Y.

Two oustanding seniors will be looking for laurels, when Roland Beck, runner-up in last year's tourney, and Talmadge begin their advance to the finals.

TANKMEN DEFEAT TUSCULUM OUTFIT

"Have Enjoyable All-Night Session Playing With Victory Bell"—Fischbach

Carrying off first places in seven of the nine events of a meet with Tusculum last Tuesday night, the Scot swimmers had very little trouble in trouncing the Pioneers 55-29; but in trying to get back home in time for classes the next day, they found the going too tough for their means of transportation, and arrived at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon.

Next Tuesday night the local tankmen will engage the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. in Knoxville. The Scots are anxious to avenge the defeat handed to them by Knoxville earlier in the season, but they will be handicapped by the absence of Burckhalter in the backstroke.

Summary of the Tusculum meet:

Scot Wrestlers Will Meet Knox 'Y' Tonight

Two Outstanding Matches Expected As Boretsky And Dean Hit Top-Notchers.

The first wrestling match of the season gets under way tonight at eight o'clock when the Scots meet the strong Knoxville Y. M. C. A. squad in the Alumni gym.

Both teams are reported to be in top condition and all bouts are expected to be hotly contested.

Knoxville has a team of experienced wrestlers, one of them being a Tri-State champion in the 175-pound class, and another being a former 135 pound Southern champion, who has outgrown his championship, and who is now in the 155-pound class.

The end of the final try-outs, last Saturday afternoon, for a chance to wrestle tonight found five letter men and two first year men on the line-up. The Scot wrestlers for tonight will be Ridder, 118-pound class; Hoglan, 125 pound; Kipp, 135 pound; Captain Boretsky, 145 pound; Dean, 155 pound; Byar, 165 pound; Millsaps, 175 pound; and Gamble, unlimited.

BASKETEERS PLAY TUSCULUM TONIGHT

Anticipate Little Trouble In Seeking Second Conference Win.

Tonight the Highlander basketeers will seek further conference laurals when they meet their second league foe of the season on the enemy's floor.

Little is known of Tusculum except that they took a terrific lacing at the hands of the Carson-Newman crew last week, who in turn scored twenty-two points less than the Highlanders did to defeat the Cullohee aggregation.

On paper the Scotties are fifty-two points better than tonight's invaders, but recent experience will have cut that down to a fair ball game before the whistle blows tonight.

Monday night local fans will get their first sight of Glen Roberts, dubbed the magician of the courts, when the strong Emory-Henry outfit enters the fold.

Emory-Henry, in addition to the great Roberts, will present a nearly intact team from last year, boasting, as before, two fast forwards, and good defensive play.

Last year Roberts averaged around twenty-five points to the game, and started the current season scoring 38 points. Although his lead has been cut some in the last few weeks, he is still capable.

A good defensive duel is expected btween Roberts and Hannah, who will play chief audience to the magician. Hannah has been successful this sseason in knocking down the peculiar pivot shot, and fans are interested to see how Roberts will fare against the Maryville center.

Gray Joins Athletic Board

O'Neil Gray, member of the 1933 football squad and high-jumper on Scot track teams, was selected last week as a member of the Y. M. C. A. athletic board, occupying the position recently vacated by the resignation of John Waldrop.

Rex Allen, the other member of the board, will retain his position as before. Waldrop resigned his place when he made plans to attend seminary.

Scot Cagesters Show Good Form To Remain Undefeated

Fast Pass Offense Gives Scotties 41-36 Victory Over L.M.U. Cagesters In First Conference Game.

Honaker's hardwooders captured their first conference game of the sason when they defeated the Lincoln Memorial Universiy quintet in a fast game here Monday night, 41 to 36.

Playing to a scoreless tie for the first seven minutes the L.M.U. squad advanced within easy scoring range time and again, but missed consistently, both on crip shots and long range trials.

Henry commenced the scoring for the Highlanders on a neat undergoal play, and Kizer followed with a one-hand from the side. Mitchell and Kennedy came for a free throw and field shot, bringing the score to 6-3.

Goals by Henry and Allen followed in rapid succession, after which Kennedy tallied again from center-floor. Crumbaugh went in for Kizer and the fun began, as he connected thrice in succession for long shots.

Allen, Henry, and VanHee hit again, and Mitchell followed with a field toss as the half ended 23-14 in the Scotties' favor.

Bradley, Mitchell, and Slover commenced a scoring jaunt in the early minutes of the second period to bring the game down to tighter defense and a smoother offense.

VanHee's pass down the floor to Henry who was wide open under the basket was good for two more points, and a few moments later Hannah scored two one-handed goals in rapid order.

Frequent goals from both sides kept the scoring on an even basis, with the Scotties holding their five point lead through the closing minutes. VanHee tallied the last marker on a neat shot from the center of the floor to end the game 41-36.

VanHee's passing, Crumbaugh's accuracy a long range, and Henry's clever work under the basket aided the Scotties for the most part, while Mitchell and Kennedy were best for the invaders.

A motorist near Whitesboro, Okla., bagged a wild goose which flew headlong against his windshield and was killed.

Defeat Inferior Tennessee-Wesleyan Crew, 47-29, In Slow Game Thursday Night; Van Hee Lead In Scoring.

With a lightning offense centered around VanHee, Hannah, and Crumbaugh, aided and abetted by the ever-present Henry, the Scotties piled up a big lead early in the first half which they never lost, defeating the Tennessee Wesleyan basketeers 45-27 Thursday night.

This making the eighth straight win for the season, the local cagesters are well on their road to a successful season, despite the many threats offered in games to come.

VanHee with his perfect dribbling and fast breaking under the goal scored frequently from long range and crip positions to gather eleven points and high scoring honors for the evening, while Hannah was second with nine points.

On the first tip-off Henry passed to VanHee who faked and dribbled through the entire Wesleyan squad for a crip shot and two points, starting the scoring for the Scotties. He followed a moment later, with a free throw, making the score 3-0.

On the next play Henry got under the basket for an up-and-over, worth two points and a good lead. Black and Chaffin, scoring for the Bulldogs, got underway for a field goal and a charity toss, bringing the score to 6-3.

Moving expertly down into scoring position after the tip, goals by Hannah and Crumbaugh were followed rapidly by a beautiful shot on ol' "number two" by Crumbaugh, who came fast around under the backboard on the prettiest play of the game.

Both teams began a series of long range trials, VanHee, Allen, and Hannah scoring from mid-distace and Chaffin and Keith successful for the visitors. A few minutes later Keith scored from center and followed with a tip-in play. Crumbaugh countered with two more and Chaffin dribbled under for a goal, bringing the score to 23-13.

After a field toss from Allen and a free throw from Davis, Hannah

One outfit, consisting of eight men took a "back to nature" plan where they do all their own cooking, firing, dishwashing, and eating. We never mentioned studying.

—O—

Kay Carpeter, the woman with the short appendages told us a story in Writer's Workshop last week about riding a mule. . . an Alabama mule, during the Christmas vacation, and if laughter makes for longevity, we all had our lives extended no less than 10 years.

—O—

Someone said he'd like to have a moving picture of it. Well, we have a mental picture that suffices. Every little old once in a while we see Kay going down one of those narrow roads with her feet madly searching . . . . always in vain, of course. . . for the stirrups. It must be tough riding one of those animals. . . .sitting back behind those gigantic ears, being cut off from all foresight, and therefore having no idea of where one's going.

—O—

One thing a person can depend on . . . the mule knows where he's going. . . . when he's going home.

—O—

Our own experience with the long eared horse variety has been more in the matter of making four of them, hitched as a team, cross a narrow bridge. This is lovely outdoors activity, besides being a good exercise to get one in the right frame of mind in the early morning hours.

—O—

You see this column writer, when he's not at Maryville College, is a farmer. It's O. K., you knew it all the time. . . but we're telling you. We'll have you know that we have been taken for a banker's son. What do you all think of that? But that was in 1929. And that's not all. . . it was a farmer's daughter who took us for that. Tishes.

—O—

We were interested to see the procedure of Dean Huntr in Chapel last Wednesday as Dr. Stevenson got off on that line of figures and digits,—mostly digits. When he got stuck and asked Dr. Hunter the answer to one of his perplexing questions the Dean of the College simply held up four fingers, indicating thereby his mathematical frame of mind that the College Pastor had produced.

Try this one on your English major. Miss Carroll gave a question on her freshman biology test (good old freshman biology; our advice to youngsters is to get the science requirement off as early as possible) which reads thus: Draw the section of an ovary, a stamen and a pistill. A number of the more literal students (we're not saying which side we fell on) tried to figure out what the cross section of a stamen, or a pistil looked like.

—O—

This business of being "watched like a hawk", in regard to using correct English, through the entire college course, is every bit as discouraging as taking a test in the senior year, wethinks. But, of course, we don't have to go through the motions of taking the test, thereby testifying again that there's thereby testifying again that there's modicum of good in it.

Seniors Plan Theatre Party For Tuesday

Plans Completed For First Closed Party For Seniors

The Senior Class is to have a theatre party next Tuesday night. Free tickets will be provided for all seniors who have paid one semester's dues, and for those who have not at the rate of fifteen cents. The party is to be a closed one.

Parties will leave the hill at 7:15 for the theatre, where a Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell picture, "Tess of the Storm Country" will be playing. The chaperones are Mrs. Huber and Professor Queener.

Plans for further senior parties are being made under the direction of Clifford Withers. At present tentative arrangements are being made for an open party in February and a senior banquet the latter part of April.

The class mascot and Chilhowean class sponsor were recently chosen, the former being Louise Lloyd, and the latter Nell Jo Knight.

Maryville Delegates Attend Inter-racial Commission Meeting

The East Tennessee Inter-racial Commission held a meeting at Knoxville College on January thirteenth, with representatives from Morristown, Knoxville College, Tusculum, University of Tennessee, and Maryville in attendance.

A musical program was furnished by Knoxville College, including a violin solo by Mr. W. Barnum, and a vocal number by Mr. Eugene Bryce.

Dr. Reeves, of the Personvill division of the Tennessee Valley Authority, addressed the group. His address emphasized the importance of the project to the nation as well as to the Southern States.

The main features of the project, Dr. Reeves said, were the agricultural improvements, the co-ordination of agriculture and industry, improvements in domestic industry, a more economical production of fertilizers, better inland navigation, a more efficient flood cotnrol which would prevent soil erosion and permit utilization of natural resources.

Dr. Reeves pointed out that the plan, by improving rural conditions may alleviate the crowded, unwholesome congestion in cities.

The next meeting of the commission will be at Maryville on February fourth.

BAINONIAN

At Bainonian last Saturday night a revised form of the constitution of the Society was read. The final decision on the constitution is to be given tonight. The entertainment consisted of a reading by Marjorie Jones and a violin solo by Lillian Crawford, accompanied by Grace Proffitt.

The Senate agriculture committee approved a bill authorizing $100,000,000 for farm crop loans in 1934.

Tennessee Wesleyan Game

followed with a neat squeeze shot under the goal, making the score read 28-13 as the half neded.

With the Scot defense slowing down somewhat as the second period started, Hannah scored two points, which were followed by long shots from Chaffin and Keith, both of which helped the enemy's standing.

Kizer dribbled under for a marker, after which a series of substitutions brought Hulette, Crawford, and Davis into the game. VanHee hit again from center-floor, bringing the score to 39-23, after which the game slowed down considerably, both sides scoring about evenly through the rest of the period.

Hulette, VanHee, and Davis scored one each from the field, followed by a "Roberts Special" from the foul circle by Mitchell of Wesleyan for the final marker, the game ending 47-29.

Scoring honors were only a part of the glory which VanHee heaped upon himself throughout the entire game. Van was the key man in bringing the sphere into scoring position, and his steady eye for open men contributed frequent scores. Where Van will go next with the ball is as much a mystery to the sidelines as it is to players opposing him.

An improved defense marked the Highlanders' playing throughout. Hannah, who got his first real taste of the "magical shot", which Glen Roberts of Emory-Henry college will exhibit here Monday night, more than once reached up a long arm to knock th pivot shot out into the sawdust.

The Wesleyan outfit, displaying a slow brand of ball, centered their offense around Keith and Chaffin, who scored frequently from long range. Their only definite play, which was a short pass from the pivot man to right or left forward and under, was easily stopped, and defense functioned only occasionally.

Maryville Forensic Squad Prepares For Busy Debate Season

Teams Train Enthusiastically For Full Schedule.

The Maryville debating squad, which was selected on December 2 has been steadily meeting for practice. Professor Queener, who has conducted debating here since 1927, is pleased with the ambition and ability of the team, placing it above last year's squad, one team from which won fifth place in the national convention.

The squad consists of James Badgett, Mary Gladys Brown, Alex Christie, Edward Friar, Roberta Howie, Clifford Morgan, Catheryn Smith, James Saint, Eleanor Pflanze, Archibald Pieper, Earl Crawford, Florence Hyde, James Smith, Maria Wynn, and Ercelle Hunter. The first ten are sophomores, the last is a senior, and the others juniors.

The subject for debate this year is Resolved: The powers of the president should be substantially increased as a separate policy. The debating schedule is a very full one. Home debates are as follows: February 1, Emory-Henry, L. M. U., (men); February 2, King, Tusculum, Milligan, (women) March 5, Milligan, Carson-Newman, (men). Except for that with Virginia Intermont, these are triangular debates.

Abroad, in North and South Carolina, the schedule reads: March 6, Asheville Normal; March 7, Wake Forest College; March 12, Catawba College; March 13, Presbyterian College; March 14, Erskine College.

On March 8, 9, and 10 the convention at Greensboro, of delegates from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee, will be attended by Maryvillians. On March 19 Waynesburg, a Pennsylvania college, will be met at Maryville.

From April 2 to April 6 the national convention of Pi Kappa Delta, National Forensic Society, will take place at Lexington, Kentucky. Maryville will be fully represented. Over one hundred other institutions of the 140 odd in the organization will send about five hundred delegates. There will be three types of forensic contest, the extempore speech, the oration, and the debate. Maryville's orators are Grace Proffitt, Roberta Howie, Archibald Pieper and Newman Smith.

Lloyds Return From Trip Through Mid-West

President Gives Interesting Account of Conventions Attended

President and Mrs. Lloyd returned on Wednesday from St. Louis and other points in the mid-west, after an absence from the College of more than a week.

Leaving Maryville they motored by way of Nashville, Tennessee, and Cairo, Illinois, to St. Louis where they attended the annual meetings of The Association of American Colleges, The Presbyterian College Union, The Liberal Arts College Movement, and The Council of Church Boards. Dr. Lloyd then went by train to Oklahoma City on college business and Mrs. Lloyd went to Murphysboro, Ill., where Dr. Lloyd was pastor of The First Presbyterian Church immediately following graduation from the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago, in 1924. Dr. Lloyd returned to Murphysboro in time to preach there on Sunday, and to speak at a meeting on Monday. President and Mrs. Anderson of Tusculum College accompanied them on the trip.

They report that college leaders are expressing more optimism about the financial outlook than they did a year ago, but are emphasizing anew the fact that colleges must build their programs around the greater values, and, in view of the terrific cost of maintenance, must reserve the opportunities of high education for young people of real earnestness, character, and capacity.

Number Of Students Finish At Mid-Year

At the end of the first semester, the following four students will complete their work at Maryville: George Lauver, Westmont, N. J.; Sylvester Payne, Maryville; Julia Rink and Mary Rink, LaFayette, Georgia.

In addition to these, three more will be leaving although they have some work to be completed. They are Marjorie Jones, Rahway, N. J.; Marjorie Salmons, Trenton, N. J.; and Tom West, Winston-Salem, N. C. The same arangement has been made with them for the completion of their work that is made with those who lack a few hours at the end of the school year.

Three of the seven have transferred to Maryville from other schools. Miss Salmons came from New Jersey State Normal, and the Misses Rink from Cumberland University.

SUNDAY VESPERS

Dr. Stevenson's theme for Vesper service on the evening of January 28 will be "Things New and Old". The Vesper Choir will sing "I Will Sing of The Mercies of The Lord", by h Roberts.

Theta Alpha Phi Is Accorded National Honor At Convention

Local Chapter Rated High In Every Respect

At the bicentennial convention of the national honorary dramatic fraternity, Theta Alpha Phi, which met in New York City last December, the Maryville College group of that organization was represented by its president, Michael Testa.

The local chapter, which is the Tennessee Delta Chapter, received recognition as being one of the most active chapters in the organization. It was rated among the six foremost groups in the country by President Coker. This rating is assigned on the following bases: the number of initiations of new members each year, according to the size of the college in which the chapter is located; the promptness with which the annual dues are paid, and the fact of full or partial payment; and the number and caliber of the plays produced by the chapter during the year.

The Maryville organization was outstanding for its superiority in each of these fields. Last year ten members were received into the society. This year seven new members have been accepted, and there will be another election before the year is over. This is an increase over the average number voted into Theta Alpha Phi several years ago, and enables the organization to carry on its activities over a wider field more efficiently.

In the second field of judgment Maryville ranked high. The annual fees due the national headquarters have been met by this group regularly the last two years; remittance has been in full, and often in advance.

In respect to the caliber of plays produced the Maryville chapter was rated aobve the average. There was no Theta Alpha Phi play last year, but for the four years before that the plays were consistently well selected, mounted, and acted. To recall a few titles of recent Theta Alpha Phi plays, which entitle the Tennessee Delta chapter to distinction in that respect: Eugene O'Neil's Pulitzer Prize winner for 1920, "Beyond the Horizon" was produced by a Maryville cast in 1929. The next year the selection was Shaw's famous satire "Arms and the Man". In 1931 a play by John Galsworthy, late English novelist, dramatist, man of letters, and winner of the Nobel prize for literature, was presented. It was the episodic drama "Escape", with Harry Gauding cast in the leading role. The Theta Alpha Phi production for 1932 was Sutton Vane's innovation "Outward Bound", of the recent body of fantastic and metaphysical plays.

Besides its own productions, Theta Alpha Phi supports the other plays offered by the literary societies, the Maryville College Players, and the senior class. The average number of plays produced each year at Maryville College is eight. This in itself, compared with the average number of performances of

Articles May Be Submitted By Freshman Up Till Feb. 3

During the next two weeks try-outs will be held for the purpose of filling the remaining three vacancies on the HIGHLAND ECHO staff. The places which are open to freshmen, were not filled at the beginning of the year as is usual, due to the fact that the staff did not feel that the material submitted warranted the selection of the full number of freshman.

It is assumed, however, that those who did not succeed in making the staff at the beginning of the year, and who are interested in college newspaper work, have had an opportunity to improve their work, and deserve a further tryout. Those who were selected to attend the tryout meetings in October are especially urged to submit articles. These and others who care to compete must submit two of the following types of article: feature, sports article, news article, book review. Articles may be turned in at the ECHO office or to any staff member, and must be submitted by Saturday, February 3. Appointments will be made by February 10.

Individual Delivery Of Mail Begins Next Week

The Student Council is sponsoring a project by which the mail will be delivered to each of the rooms in the girl's dormitories. The work of delivering the mail will be given to one of the college students who will be sworn in by the government. The Student Council feels that it will be safer if mail was delivered to each room, and furthermore that such a plan would save the time of both matrons and girls. The new system, which is under the supervision of Dr. Knapp and Miss Henry, will go into effect at the beginning of the next semester. Students are particularly asked to have their correspondents include the name of the dormitory and the room number on their mail.

Well Known Psychology Professor Is Heard By Numerous Students

Dr. Dockeray Presents Interesting Data On Infant Behavior

Dr. Floyd C. Dockeray, professor of Psychology of the Ohio State University, spoke informally Monday afternoon to a large group of students and faculty members. He visited the campus as a guest of Dr. Fields who was at one time a student under him at Ohio State. Being the author of the textbook used in the General Psychology classes Dr. Dockeray's visit aroused especial interest.

The psychologist, spoke on infant behavior which has been, and still is a problem of experimental research at Ohio State. In opening his discussion Dr. Dockeray remarked that he defined psychology in terms of the development of an infant to an adult.

The study of infant behavior was inaugurated by Albert Weiss. Following his death it has been continued under the direction of Dr. Dockeray. The research is confined to infants from a few minutes after birth to ten days. Dr. Dockeray spoke in particular of four experiments which are being conducted by his students at the present time. The first is to attempt to discover how keen a sense of smell young infants possess. By a very careful regulation of conditions it has been possible to get some data on this. The conclusions drawn from the experiments are that infants react to all smells, but they apparently do not distinguish between agreeable and disagreeable odors.

The second problem mentioned was in connection with feeding. By use of a complicated apparatus the infant's preference in food can be recorded.

Another topic was right and left handedness. Eighty percent of all the infants are predominantly right handed," stated Dr. Dockeray. In this connection he mentioned an experiment with white rats in which the tendancy toward right handedness was ascertained.

A fourth problem is speech. The birth cry of all infants is the same, but in some languages that sound is dropped as the infant grows older. No explanation for this phenomena has been found. Experiments with different sounds a young infant makes are being carried on, cries of pain and hunger being distinguished from other cries, etc.

Dr. Dockeray's address was found

Because Morpheus has been overworked we are enlisting the services of another deity, the Grecian Hypnus. We have other reasons for invoking him, of course, but we shall not disclose them. They should form an enticing problem for the reader with the forgetive mind.

Hypnus is a great god. There is no poet, no potentate, no philanthropist like him. Kings pale, Coleridges dream unimagined verse, and orphans smile in his arms. We luxuriate. You see, we are one of the sons of Mary, not because of fortune but because of the undeniable demands of our body.

Let us hesitate a moment. We have been progressing too rapidly. Let us think a little—as little as necessary. Let us consider the luxury of laziness, chiefly as it takes the form of lying abed.

There was not a time when we awoke at five in the morning, threw on our clothes, and dashed out for a before breakfast run. We say that there was not a time—aye, and there will never be a time. Five o'clock rising is for freaks, farmers, fastidious fetish followers, and fictitious footballers. But it is pleasant to awake at five in the morning. Ah, Mr. Coleridge, how quite right you were. . .

And still dreams on.

And on. And so, onwards. But not too rapidly.

Stop just a minute and lets solve that problem which has been in your mind for the past week. At least, we have judged there is a problem, from the worried frowns, vacant stares and darkly circled eyes we have noticed.

It's a deep question, one worthy of much pondering and extensive research. In the halls of state men are in conference on the subject. But alas, we have only a second to jot down some scattered ideas and wait until we have more time.

The subject is leisure or, speaking specifically, our holiday on Wednesday. All these sleepless nights and haggard faces are due, we are sure, to long, hectic hours spent in trying to decide how to spend one day's leisure.

Twenty-four hours with no classes, no assignments, no term papers no systematic speeches, and no— we refuse even to give that hated word space in our column. We would surely spend the rest of our minute denouncing certain pastimes of our professors and their curtailment of our spare time. We can't go into all that; we must settle this leisure question before it is too late.

We remember reading some good suggestions for killing time. We might hunt the magazine and give a review of the article but that would take too long. We can remember only a few of its ideas. One proposal was for systematic reading They are trying to educate the masses, it seems. That might do for some folk, but we are sure that

In a recent interview with the president of the student council, in which was discussed the possibility of the pep committee continuing its activity on through the basektball season, Mr. Kirchner voiced theh opinion that the social calendar is uncompromisingly full as it stands, and that further attempts to inflate it would be disastrous to the now well-balanced order of events for the coming semester.

As an alternative he suggested that the pep corps continue its function, though without the customary rehearsal on the eve before the event is to take place. It goes without saying that student attitude during the basketball season approaches closely that of a drove of hearse-horses, and the plan that more completely satisfies all parties concerned is the one on which action should be taken immediately.

The present season is approximately half over, yet the grand total of two yells have been given, and they on the spur of the moment, to give the basketeers the backing they have a right to expect from the student body. Although pep sessions are not customary at this season the majority of the first five is young and fresh from the high schools in which the cheering section plays a big part in the event. An immediate move on the part of the student council to this effect might aid in steering the Scotties back to the victory trail, and would certainly liven the game at despairing moments.

It was recently brought to our attention by an alumnus that the HIGHLAND ECHO is at present in its nineteenth year; consequently the change of volume 18 to volume 19 on the front page.

Several questions have come up recently in regard to contributions to the HIGHLAND ECHO. Anyone who is not on the staff and wishes to submit material for publication may feel free to do so at any time. Such contributions may be turned in at the Echo office up till Thursday noon. The ECHO assures students that their offerings will at least be carefully read and considered.

other colleges similar in size and organization, is a large number, and when considered in the light of the limited stage and property facilities, is even more deserving of note. Prof. Arthur E. Cloeting, secretary of the national organization, on his visit to Maryville College last spring, noted this fact, and was very flattering to the Expression Department in his praise of its ambitious program. In his report at the national convention last December Mr. Cloetingh spoke highly of the work done here, especially emphasizing the inadequate facilities for stage production, and the fact that the support for each play comes almost entirely from within the Expression Department.

Plans are being made now for a Theta Alphi Phi play to be given this year. The organization also hopes to perfect plans for the broadcast of a one-act play later in the season.

The Maryville chapter, and its president in particular, was accorded another honor of recognition. Mr. Testa was elected regional secretary of Theta Alphi Phi. The territory included in this region is Tennessee, North Carolina, and Alabama. The duties of the office require that its holder visit the colleges of these three states which have chapters of Theta Alpha Phi and make a detailed report to the national organization, basing his statements on a definite study of each chapter's organization, program, and accomplishments.

The Tennessee Delta Chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, located at Maryville College, is one of three chapters of the dramatic fraternity in the entire state. The other two are at Memphis and Chattanooga. The Maryville group was organized in 1927, and since that time has made rapid advancement toward national recognition. This progress has been steady through each administration but it has been most outstanding during the present one.

Kant, Schiller, and Schweitzer, taken in any fashion, would not make our holiday exactly hilarious.

While we are scribbling here we are distracted by the sound of rollerskating beneath our window. That couple has solved the problem to their satisfaction. We admit that if one can't have variety in consorts in moonshining, one should have variety in methods. But moonshining has little to do with the topic at hand, except that the gratifying decline of such labors of love merely make his discussion more pertinent.

Fence walking is a good entertainment, known to be indulged in by some people for hours at a time. The scarcity of fences on the campus, however, renders this recreation insufficient to keep Maryvillians out of mischief on Wednesday.

The dilemna of dining room diversions, too, has become a distressing one. (Alliteration used by permission of the copyright owner, Dr. Stevenson). That question involves a change of scenery, it is doubtful if food will adorn Pearson's tables on Wednesday. We hope that the power of suggestion will hereby be proved fallible.

Wouldn't it be awkward for six hundred hungry people to enter Pearsons Hall and just sit? They must, by all means, be amused. For this purpose, let us inform you that the practice of flipping spoons into water glasses has been observed to entertain the most restive of persons at meals.

There are any number of avocations as yet not introduced on the campus. They are only waiting for some enterprising somebody with an eye for innovations to inaugurate them. Among these possibilities are hoop-flying, kite-jumping and rope-rolling. Bicycle-riding, star gazing and fire-escape climbing has been attempted by some students with moderate success. Hardy's "native" took to furze-cutting. We're wondering if there won't soon be an opening in that line on the campus.

One woman in a tenement district says that in her spare hours she "just sets and ruminates". We're not passing on this advice, it hardly seems necessary. It's being done now, particularly in Baldwin parlor. And you know, two ruminators are better than one—.

We shall have to pass over such pastimes as "x and o games", truth and consequence parties, bull sessions, and street light serenades. We must also overlook such hobbies as saxophone-playing, reading poetry aloud, and "tuning in" on mountain music. We wish we could as gracefully overlook the dire offenses themselves.

We hope we have helped you. If, as Wednesday approaches, your brow become more calm and serene, we will feel that this stolen moment is justified.

If none of these suggestions suit you, you might spend the day—but no, we haven't time to go into detail—.

Scotties Lose Hard One To Teacher Quint

Crouch Slops In Crazy Goal In Last Second To Win 40-39 For Teachers After Close Game All The Way.

BY WENDELL DONALD

After the Scotties had to all intents and purposes put the game on ice with a neat one-handed shot by Allen, Crouch, Teacher forward, threw the sphere at the basket for the winning goal in the last second of play to put the Teachers ahead 40-39 in the locals' third conference game here Thursday night.

Bailey, giant center for the Teachers and the individual star of the game, opened the scoring with a one-handed shot from the foul circle. Nidiffer followed a moment later with another to put the Teachers in the lead 4-0.

Crumbaugh opened the scoring for the locals with a single foul shot. Bailey made two crips in fast succession and Massengill made a foul shot to give the Teachers a 9-1 lead. Davis went in for Crumbaugh as VanHee made a foul shot. Hannah made a field goal and a free-throw to put the Scotties back in the race. In a melee under the Maryville goal, in which everybody but the referee took a shot, nobody scored.

After Bailey made two more of his one handed shots Allen went in for Hannah. VanHee began clicking on his long shots, making two in a row from near the center of the court. Bailey made a pretty follow in shot to make the score 18-16 at the half in favor of the Teachers.

As the second half opened the Teachers put on a spurt to run their lead to 26-20. VanHee and Allen made five points between them to bring the Scotties within one point of the Teachers. The Teachers again put on a rally, headed by Bailey to run their lead to 36-29. with eight minutes to go. At this point the Scotties put on their brilliant rally.

Hannah pulled a "Robert's special" to perfection and VanHee counted one from center. Henry made a one-handed shot from the side to pull the locals to within one point of the Teachers.

McCall again put the Teachers ahead with a long shot. VanHee made a long one and Allen made his beautiful one-hander to put the Scotties in a one point lead with twelve seconds to play. The Teachers called time out and Crouch took the tip-off in the last seconds winning the fray with his timely heave.

Allen, VanHee, and Hannah looked good on the offense for Maryville. Henry, Kiser, and Crumbaugh were the defensive stars for the locals. Bailey was the outstanding man on the floor for the Teachers. Henry, Maryville star, was kept in check throughout the game, making only three points.

Interclass Swimming Meet Tuesday Night

The Y. M. C. A. athletic board announced this morning that an interclass swimming meet will be held at the pool next Tuesday night. All men not on the varsity squad will be eligible for competition. The outcome of the meet will be counted toward the athletic cup award given each year, and for which the sophomore class is now leading the field.

Glenn Roberts Defeats Scots

Emory-Henry Wasps Hand Scotties First Defeat In Ten Starts, 60-28

Coach Honaker's Highlanders were handed their first defeat in ten starts Monday night when Glen (Slim) Roberts led his Emory-Henry Wasps to a 60-28 victory, in which he, Slim, scored thirty four points.

In spite of an injured arch the big center was at his prime under the backboard, and neither Hannah nor Henry, who alternated at center position for the Scotties, was able to break the scoring streak.

Robison, Mackey, and Fulk had rung one field toss each from side and center before Henry, playing a brilliant game for the Highlanders, scored from the side of the floor on a beautiful one-hand shot, making the score read 6-2 with the enemy leading.

Roberts failed to connect in the first five trials but on the next one scored, and followed later with a free throw which was good. In the meantime Henry, with a neat crip shot and a free throw plus another, brought the score to 9-6 and on the next play came hard under the basket to catch a rebound, throwing it back over his head for a sensational shot and two more points.

After Roberts and Mackey had tallied one from the field each Henry broke fast down the floor on a pass from VanHee but missed under the goal, and a few moments later Allen caught a rebound and scored from the foul line on another one-hand trial.

VanHee scored one point on a charity shot and on the next break the Wasps passed to Roberts under the basket for two more points as the half ended 22-13, the Scotties trailing.

Roberts had missed his stride somewhat in the first period, but in the last half began to pull away from the Highlanders, scoring eight points in the ensuing four minutes. Allen tallied with a well-timed follow-in and Henry scored two more at long range before Fulk countered from the side for the Wasps.

Fulk, Countes, and Roberts had pushed the count up to 34-17 before

Sport Talk

BY

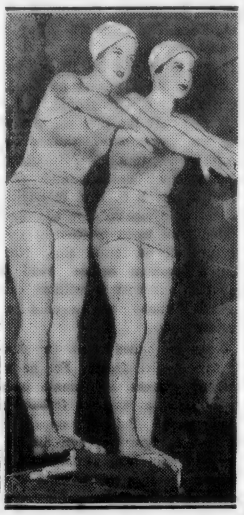
BRYAN PAYNE

Maryville College played host to a distinguished association last Monday night when Coach Pedie Jackson and his Wasps from Emory-Henry College played the Highlanders. Fans who saw the nationally known Glen Roberts contact all too frequently with the basket for a total of thirty-four points, and play a brilliant floor game for good measure,, little realized the volume of "power behind the throne" as produced by Coach Jackson. Not only has Jackson come to the front with successful football teams, but always presents a powerful squad of basketeers, who manage annually to hold up their heads among the larger associations in the country. Coach Jackson is now considering an offer of a coaching position which will lead him to bigger game, and it is safe to say that Emory-Henry will be sorry to see him go.

—S—

Mr. Jackson is a man with ideas. Among his most fruitful ones is a clever plan for speeding up the game of basketball, which he thinks is too slow as it now stands. If only there were a rule requiring all players to travel the hardwood at a specified speed, Pedie would have his cagsters wear speedometers with alarms which would sound when the minimum speed is reached. If we remember correctly, tho, his Wasps didn't exactly play a lightning game, but from where we sat it looked mighty effective just the same. Pedie also gave us a good idea of why his Wasps lost to the University of Tennessee the other night. For the time being we'll lay it away with all our other little unprintables, but just as a hint the trouble did not lie in Tennessee superiority.

—S—



"Slim's got another year, folks," his teammates announce exultantly. And that means another big year for the Wasps. The very picture of sincere modesty he takes no credit whatsoever for his drastic scoring jaunts, attributing his success to his fellow players, whom he accuses of "feedin' me the ball all the time". Nevertheless that proposition works both ways. Asked where he got on to the shot he replied, "Aw, I just acquired it, been shootin' that way ever since my last year in high school, an', well, I've been pretty lucky, I reckon". Here's an example of the boy's courage. He played his thirty-five minutes of the game with an injured arch that gave him plenty of trouble. Coach Honaker pulled a good one when he walked up to Roberts after the game. After taking his hand in congratulations he said, "Well, ol' boy, it it hadn't been for your foot you might've looked pretty good out there."

—S—

The psychology alone of Roberts being on the floor against the Highlanders was in itself an interesting thing to watch. Thru'out the entire game Henry played the outstanding defensive game against th magician and his followers, frequently knocking down passes and field attempts, but when the big center left the floor with eight minutes to play, the whole Maryville "five" caught a new spirit and snapped back into the running, tho a bit late. The success of the "Roberts Special" hung not so much on the type of shot as in the ability of the big boy to fake around and over his guard. The Wasps have developed a great slow offensive around "Slim", but what are they going to do when his four years are washed up?

Times got so hard that the hitch hikers stood on the highways and offered to go either way.

"Y" Tops Scots In Close Meet

Final Event, Relay, Decides Meet, 44-40, As Scotties Show Improvement

In a close tank encounter which found the lead changing hands several times, the Highlander swimmers lost a hard meet to the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. in the Knoxville pool last Tuesday night by four points, 44-40.

With the score tied 36-all at the beginning of the last event, the 160 yard relay, the Y. M. C. A. swimmers beat the Scots in the home stretch, winning by about a yard, and added eight points to their total while the Scots added only four.

Coach Cash Presents Power In The Light-weights, But Floundered In The Heavies; Lose 23-11

Bob Thrower's matmen witheld all taint of defeat last night when they bucked a tough squad of Appalachian Teachers, winning 23-11 after losing the first three bouts on falls and advantages.

Boretsky at once loomed as the outstanding man for the Scotties when he grappled with Claude Fatherine of the Teachers who is ten pounds his better. After a stiff match in which it looked as if the weight advantage were too much Steve won on a time advantage.

Ridder of Maryville suffered defeat for the first time in many, many starts, but nevertheless put up a game fight. After Hoglan and Kipp had lost their bouts the Scotties tore thru for the remainder.

The shortest bout of the evening was that between Buck Millsaps and his opponent, with Buck winning on a fall in 1:44. Gamble entered his bout with a thirty-six pound advantage and came out successful after a good match.

In two exhibition bouts preliminary to the features Alexander of Maryville lost to Hinkle of Teachers, and the Battaglia brothers fought to a draw.

OBSERVATIONS

Aside from the fact that Hugh Powell contracted a severe sore throat the same day that Dot Casseres took the mumps, and that Dot herself got them as soon as Glover Leitch got over them and a few other things of that sort, more social than discreet, we find ourselves almost lacking in our observations of what happens heah, theah, and everywheah.

—O—

This statement reminds us that we heard from the once great Benjamin Peter Groves who is at present taking Cincinnati just like he took Maryville. This yer Groves fellow is going to be a man of the world if the world doesn't monkey around and accidentally swallow him up when he gets in a bigger and better place than Cincinnati.

—O—

But now that brings Kipp down on us in a cluster, so we'll retract that statement. Cincinnati is a pretty big town, so we'll just say "a better place than Cincinnati."

—O—

We've taken it on the chin about Cincinnati in such a way that we've become plumb sour on the place. Every time "city" was mentioned in Political Science, during the time we were disposing of 12 hours of that, Kipp or Byar would say, "Well Dr., up in Cincinnati they do this way." And about that time a fellow by the name of Boehme of Ohio would start Ohioing and then Charley Beale would say in that proud southern accent, "Well down in Gawgia it's like this."

—O—

All of which is to say. . . . anything to keep from talking about what might be in the text book. Orr would get the idea about this time and tell how things were done in Illinois and that usually started a discussion because those lands are close to the heart of the Sociology department head who spent the "near best" days of his life there. The best days have been spent in Maryville.

—O—

Other great gent'men are men of Illinois in one way or another. Dr. Orr, the Ethics man got his start in married life because there was a fair damsel by the name of Alexander down there in southern Illinois patiently waiting for the right man to come along. And he came. And now here's a right smart family of little Orrs ranging from Eugene down and from the baby up.

—O—

Dr. Hunter got his own start, his wife, and of course his literary background in almost the same locality. Dr. McMurray used to be president of Lincoln College in Illinois; Dr. Lloyd was a minister in Murfreesboro until he took the long step (for a short man to take) to Pittsburgh.

—O—

We've held off saying anything about the Maryville food situation simply because we were unduly skeptical. That should never have been. We're at least sure of ourselves now. Everyday we eat (and that's everyday multiplied by least 3) we enjoy this food more. Our employment of "we" is not this time the editorial usage, but includes just about every person.

—O—

We've often thought what a shame it might have been for this new dietician to have gone and got herself married to waste all that cooking art on one insignificant man (that is, in comparison with the kind of men she feeds at Maryville College).

—O—

Hearing and seeing President Roosevelt give the Christmas greetings at the Senior picher party on Tuesday reminds us that we meant to say how much we (and again his is the inclusive use) like the quaint little lights which show the way down the steps of Carnegie's back yard. They're just about the duckiest things ever to appear on this campus and that includes all freshmen girls who waddle about.

Dame Divergence, let us introduce a king. His kingdom is outside our remembrance. It consisted of one, or possibly two, of three established, although officially unrecognized, states— Kalamazoo, Coraopolis, and Hong-Kong. We have it! Allow us to elucidate.

It was none of the three aforementioned, but the last named has given us a clue, Hong-Kong is flat, is it not? At the time we met the king we were flatter than a two-dimensional pancake. He became King of our Creditors, and Chief Vowel of our I. O. U.'s. In addition he lent us sympathy, for he was of a kind with us, a brother in sloth. Never shall we forget him. Never shall a favonian breeze wend its way into our nostrils without causing recollections of his mild and western ways.

Texas he hailed from. Or should we say mailed from? For he was sent by express. His innate inability to smile at exercise forbade the climbing of Pullman steps. His father was forced to nail him in a box and ship him, accompanied for obvious reasons by a valet and a wheelchair, to his Maryville room.

His arrival was not an event. He was shipped, unloaded, and delivered in privacy. His valet registered him properly at the college, attended the classes for him, took notes on the lectures, attempted the exams, and did all the other things, except one, that a good valet should do. That one failure in duty caused the demise of our friend.

The valet took a night off and left the gas burning in an air-tight room. When he returned on the following morning he found his master dead, a brave smile on his face. At some time in the night the gas had gone out. Such was the loyalty of our friend to the great love of his life that in the face of certain death, of which the smile on his face gave evidence that he had cognizance, he had continued to repose! Ah, what pleasures Lord Hypnus must give to command such devotion.

NATURE CLUB

Miss Green spoke at some length on the true chameleon and showed sketches of this lizard at the meeting of the Nature Club last Tuesday evening.

A business discussion followed the talk. Mrs. Walker has become interested in the garden project and will donate the necessary fence and posts. It remains now for the club to get the garden actually started.

As soon as the second semester begins, a campaign for membership will be directed among freshmen Biology students. Requirements for admission will be posted.

The main business of the evening was the election of officers for the second semester. The following were elected:

President—Glenn Hook
Vice President—Mary Gillingham
Secretary-Treasurer—
Robert Godfrey
Program Secretaries—Lee Sahnon,
Mary Eleanor Himmelright

The next meeting will be held on Monday evening, February 5, 1934.

Emory-Henry Game

Allen tallied again from the side on a hard pass from VanHee. Henry and Allen rang one each from the free-throw line, and Roberts countered with nine straight points.

With the score reading 52-22 Roberts left the floor amid the cheers of the entire student body and townspeople who had packed Alumni gym to overflowing to see the star perform. It was a sporting tribute to the big center who had proved himself the master of the situation.

The morale of the Highlanders raised fifty percent they snapped back into better form, but with only eight minutes left to play were helpless to overcome the 32-point lead, and with each team scoring two each from the field the game ended 6028.

Without Roberts the Wasps present an ordinary team, capable, however, of putting up a good scrap. His mark alone of thirty-four points attests to his value to the team. Besides Roberts, Fulk and Robison were outstanding for the visitors.

Not only highscore honors but also the best all-around defensive game of the day belong to John Henry, forward and alternate center for the Highlanders. Henry was breaking away for scores, intercepted passes, and in short, was never idle. His total of fifteen points was followed by that of Allen, who scored eight.

Four Literary Society Parties Provide Novel Evening's Diversion

Varied Programs And Good Refreshments Made Jolly Parties

A novel evening's entertainment was enjoyed by the four literary societies last Monday night in Thaw Hall. Unique programs imitative of night clubs were presented.

Athenian and Bainonian Societies entertained at the "Ath-Bain Cabaret in Bartlett Square. Eleanor Johnson and Cecelia Conover were in charge of this division. Working with them were Grace Proffitt, who was in charge of decorations, and Pauline Throne, who provided for refreshments.

The refreshments, decorations and program were in keeping with the idea of cabaret. Decorations were carried out in several shades of green. Guests were seated at small tables and served by waiters.

The program consisted of a dance by Marjorie Jones and Tilly Goodwin, a skit by Kent and Allen, several numbers by the Bainonian trio and a piano solo by Joyce Fields. Jean Campbell, an alumna Bainonian, sang "Deep Night" and "Smoke Gets In Your Eyes". This was followed with a reading by Lorena Mae Dunlap, and another dance by Violet Webb and Dan Hicks. The program closed with songs by the Dixie Vagabond Quartet.

Menus which included chocolate sundaes, ginger ale and pretzels, were printed in English and German.

The members of the faculty present were Professor R. L. Smith and Miss Jessie Johnson.

Also, Wimpy's Bar was opened by Theta Epsilon and Alphha Sigma.

Leone Ann Brown, Ronald Beck, and Margaret Hennessey arranged for the program. The decorations which were in charge of Mary Gillingham, Hazel White, and John Eyster, were cleverly appropriate. Oil lamps, sawdust floors, and a lunch counter were all factors in lending a "Wimpy" atmosphere to Thaw Hall.

Carl Fisher was master of ceremonies and proprietor of the lunch room. Wimpy (Eddie Friar) and Pop-Eye (Kenneth VanHee) added much to the evening's entertainment.

Piano solos by Opal Johnson, vocal solos by Betty Stewart, and

February Meetings Are To Open Next Tuesday

Dr. Vale and Mr. Stringham To Arrive Monday Evening

Dr. Roy E. Vale of Detroit will deliver his first address as leader of the fifty-eighth series of February Meetings on Tuesday morning at 9:45.

In partial preparation for the Meetings proper, Dr. Lloyd will speak tomorrow (Sunday) morning at 10:30 at New Providence Church, and Dr. Stevenson will conduct the College Vespers as usual in the evening. Various prayer groups are being held by a considerable number of the faculty and students. Letters from many quarters tell of the interest of alumni, parents, and friends, throughout America and in foreign countries.

Maryville College conducts these Meetings each year because they afford an opportunity, not offered in any other way, to consider intensively the great issues and meanings of life in light of religion.

Dr. Vale is an interesting, dynamic, and wise interpreter of life and of Christian belief and conduct. Everyone who enters responsively and wholeheartedly into the spirit and program of the coming days will find a warmth of fellowship and an uplift of mind and heart which will be a permanent enrichment. During the past years many have benefited by the instruction and inspiration of the public services and private conferences afforded by the Meetings.

Dr. Vale and Mr. Stringham who will lead the singing, will probably arrive in Maryville on Monday evening.

Expression Students Spend Busy Week

The schedule of the expression department, always a full one, has been especially so during the past week. Members of the department have appeared on quite a number of programs at various places.

Maria Wynn presented a half hour recital to Everett High School students on January 25. Edwina Lowe and Nina Gamble read at a social gathering held at the Presbyterian Church on January 26. Roberta Howie appeared at the Sigma Society, and the Y. W. C. A.

New Rulings Reduce Number Of Absences

System of Checks On Athletes Also Rearranged

The Executive Council of the Faculty, on January 25, took action on three matters of interest to the students in general.

At present the regulations regarding the amount of work to be passed in order to continue in College is that three regular courses must have been passed in the preceding semester. Beginning September, 1934 the requirement will be that students classified as freshmen must pass three regular courses and students classified as sophomore or above must pass four regular courses to remain in College. This regulation is to become effective on the basis of the work of the coming semester.

In connection with this the system of bi-weekly checks on the class standing of members of athletic squads is to be discontinued. Eligibility for the teams is to be determined by the past semester's record by exactly the same standard as the students' privilege of remaining in College is determined, that is, a freshman must complete three regular courses, and a student classified sophomore or above must complete four in order to be eligible in the succeeding semester. The full application of this eligibility requirement will be made on the basis of the work of the coming semester.

The third matter deals with the number of absences permitted. The allowance for Chapel and Sunday School and Church is not changed. The allowance for absences from classes is modified as follows: First semester freshmhen and all other students who did not "make" the previous semester's Honor Roll are permitted two absences a semester in physical training; one absence in a one-hour class; two in a two-hour class; three in a three-hour class; and four in a four-hour class. Students whose names appeared on the preceding semester's Honor Roll are permitted two absences in physical training; two absences in a one-hour class; three in a two-hour class; four in a three-hour class; and five in a four-hour class. This regulation becomes effective for the semester beginning February 1, 1934.

The deduction of credit for excess absences remains the same; one-half hour of negative credit for each excess absence and one and one-half grade points reduction.

Several Debate Teams Met At Other Colleges

Critic Judge Decision Given To Maryville On Home Debate

On Thursday night, February 1, Cathryn Smith and Eleanor Pflanze met an affirmative team from Virginia Intermont at Bristol in a non decision debate.

The men's team from Maryville College, Earle Crawford and Archibald Pieper continued the forensic program of the Pi Kappa Delta question on February 2 by meeting the Virginia Intermont team in the afternoon in a similar non-decision debate. In the evening the same team took the affirmative case in a triangle debate with King College at Bristol, winning a critic judge decision with a well prepared, satisfactorily presented argument.

The Maryville negative team Edward Friar and Alex Christie met the affirmative team from Tusculum College at Maryville in the triangular debate.

The decision of the critic judge was in favor of the Maryville team, although he admited that these two teams were very evenly matched.

The critic judge for the debate held at Maryville was Dr. J. B. Emperor of the English department of the University of Tennessee, and Coach of the debate and public speaking work there. He criticized the manner, method, and content involved in the presentation of the opposing cases, and discussed the weak as well as the strong points of arguments and refutation.

There will be no HIGHLAND ECHO next week.

Mrs. Lloyd Entertains Freshman Girls at Tea

Mrs. Lloyd entertained the freshman girls with a charming informal tea on Friday afternoo from 3:30 to 5:30. More than one hundred and fifty girls attended the affair which was given in the Lloyd home. The house was attractively decorated in pink and green. This color scheme was carried out in the refreshments also. Music was furnished by Clark Lathan, accompanied by Charlotte Upp. Mrs. Fields, Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Butman who served, were assisted by Lillian Steed, Katherine Orr, Jane White, and Eleanor Denslow

Debate Season Opens With Heavy Week-End Triangular Schedule

Emory-Henry Team Given Thursday Night Decision

The forensic season was opened Thursday night with a triangle meet with Emory and Henry and Lincoln Memorial University. The debate held here was between the L.M.U. affirmative team, composed of Mr. John Stopinski and Mr. Heywood Cross, and the Emory and Henry negative team, composed of Mr Paul Bankston and Mr. Harold Fink. The question debated was, "Resolved: That the powers of the president be substantially increased as a settled policy." The Emory and Henry negative team won by a three to two vote.

The case of the affirmative was presented in outline by Mr. Stopinski, the first speaker for that side of the question, who claimed that the three powers of the President which were implied were the power of appointtment, the power of of appointment, the power of veto. In stating his case, he said that the affirmative proposed three amendments to the Constitution to strengthen these powers. Mr. Bankston, in turn, presented the case of the negative by submitting two claims: that the proposed change was unnecessary, and that the proposed change would be harmful. In an especially powerful speech he essayed to prove the first of these, endeavoring to show that the President has all the practicable power he can use to advantage now.

Mr. Cross, the second affirmative speaker, refuted his opponents' interpretation of the question, and went on with his argument, in which he brought out his opinion that the only one way out of a corrupt political situation was to take it out of the hands of Congress and give it to the President. He also endeavored to make some connection between the assumption of more power by the President and the discrimination between the criminal rich and the criminal poor.

The greater part of the rebuttal was occupied by arguing over the interpretation of the question, although both the first two speakers went to the heart of the main issues. It was, however, a comparatively even match, as is evidenced

Profitable Semester Closes For Council

Many Projects Successfully Carried Out By Students

The student council members have reached the end of the first semester of thir term of office with the feeling of having accomplished many worthwhile things in behalf of Maryville College.

Numbers of social events during the past four months have been in direct charge of the council, which, incidentally, is planning a program of similar events for the coming semester. The bus for the Carson-Newman game was chartered by this group, and arrangements made by them for the attendance of Maryville students at the game. The plan for the individual delivery of mail originated in this organization.

At present a commttee of the council is engaged in organizing an

FEATURE—K. ORR

It is almost eleven o'clock. We are sitting here by candlelight or flashlight, or what have you, honor bound to write a feature to be delivered by breakfast tomorrow. We don't know what to write about. This week has not been precisely conducive to the production of featuristic articles. In the course of the last seven days we have had a holiday; we have had a snow; we have moved; we have acquired an additional roommate and a turtle. Any one of these exercises, we should say, ought to offer excellent material for our assignment, not forgetting a thought on how long this candle will last.

After these introductory remarks, during which we were trying to make up our minds, we rather think we shall say a word or two in regard to our worthy turtle. We are not on intimate terms with him yet. We are not sure that we like him, and we fear he has a similar feeling toward us. We did, however, make one advance today. We picked him up somewhat gingerly by his back. His response was more or less ambiguous. He stuck his head out at us, gazed at us for a moment in a worldly fashion, and then wriggled his legs at us. We are still in a perplexity, wondering whether such actions on his part were an expression of delight, or whether they were indicative of his enmity toward us. Be that as it may, we, who instinctively resented being wriggled at, set him down quickly and without much ceremony. Doubtless, our treatment of him incurred his animosity, for he immediately crawled behind a picture on our desk. Yes, we are practically sure our relations with our turtle are not all they should be.

What shall we do? Since we must live with him, we think we should learn to like him. Having made up our minds to that, perhaps we can convince ourselves that we are fond of him by enumerating his commendable qualities. He is very quiet and unobstrusive; he does not interrupt us when we are trying to study. (We do wish he were a little more animated, though. He would be so much more interesting.) His disposition is all one could ask for. (We would have admired him, however, if, instead of crawling behind a picture when we annoyed him, he had stuck his tongue out at us.) He looks very wise and learned. (Wise, learned people make us uncomfortable.)

We seem to have arrived at our starting point: What shall we do? Moreover, our candle is getting low, and we are sleepy. It is possible that we may look differently at our troubled situation in the morning. This young turtle, who has come into our life, may, in the morning light, be the object of our interest and affection. Who knows? But if he is not!!!! Come up sometime. We will have turtle soup!

Y. W. C. A. Progressive Party Well Attended

More Than One Hundred Couples Attend

Approximately one hundred couples atended the Y. W. C. A. progressive party in Thaw Hall last Saturday night. Those attending were separated into three divisions each of which was directed in turn to various classrooms where ping pong, cards, and checkers were in order. In the Philosophy Classroom were presented musical numbers by the Dixie Vagabond Quartet, Boyce Jarman, and George Lehr, and a skit, "Romeo and Juliet", with Leroy Obert as master of ceremonies. In the Y. W. C. A. Reading Room refreshments were served with an accompaniment of violin selections by Glover Leitch and Clark Lathan

The evening's entertainment proved a very pleasant one under the capable direction of Maria Wynn and Erceile Hunter.

When the February Meetings convene next week for the fifty-eighth consecutive year students will not only have the opportunity of centering their thoughts around the more serious issues of life with Rev. Dr. Vale, but will come together again under the leadership of Rev. Stringham to sing many old and familiar hymns, reminiscent of earlier years in the lives of their respective churches at home.

Rev. Stringham has through many years of unselfish and inspiring service to the college become endeared to the student body. Realizing that not only the students but many townspeople as well are attracted to the meetings he varies his programs of song accordingly, and includes selections familiar to both old and young.

From the success of his leadership in past years it has become evident that the hymns which are the most familiar to the students receive the most sincere response. Otherwise, none but the choir is able to follow the selection thru. Often in such cases the response is hollow, and the central thought of the hymn makes little or no impression.

After Rev. Stringham leaves it will not be expedient to return to the frequent "experimentation" in song in order to maintain interest and reverence in the student body. Instead the students would appreciate a closer adherence to the hymns which have become meaningful to them through long years of familiarity.

As I passed by
I dreamed again an ancient dream,
I saw a sudden, happy gleam
In your eyes as I passed by.

As I passed by

As I passed by
Phantoms spoke; I heard you sigh
Like the echo of a lost goodby;
Time ran back, and I. . . passed by.

Instead of two teams presenting the affirmative and negative sides of the question, the question was presented from four angles, discussed, and finally summarized.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Our Superior Scottie this week is a Tarheel. For the benefit of the uninitiated, let us further explain that he is a loyal son of North Carolina. That his loyalty is not precisely passive in quality is testified by those people who have made the mistake of saying in his presence "North Caarlina" instead of "North CarOlina". To make the first part of our last statement more emphatic is to say that he is a very agreeable, amenable sort of person, who accomplishes a great deal in a quiet and unassuming, but competent, manner. We are speaking of Jesse Milton Willis, of Morehead City, North Carolina.

Firstly and foremostly, Jesse is a business manager. In his sophomore and junior years he managed the Y.M.C.A. store. He was business manager of Alpha Sigma's 1933 midwinter, "The Gentle Rogue", and at present he is business manager of the Glee Singers and the HIGHLAND ECHO. For the past two years he has been treasurer of his class. Perhaps Jesse will be a financier some day, Who knows?

Jesse's thoughts, however, are not confined exclusively to accounts, and balances and deficits, and other such items which employ the mind of the modern business man. He likes to hike, especially with fellow Pi Epsilons. He is interested in music. He has been a member of the College Band. At present he is a member of the Vesper Choir and assistant director of the Glee Singers. Dramatics command some of his atention; he appeared in "The Crisis", the midwinter play presented by Alpha Sigma in 1931. He is even a collector of poetry we are told.

For four years Jesse has been a staunch supporter of the Alpha Sigma Literary Society. He has run the gamut of offices which the society offers, having occupied almost every position from president to janitor. Other members declare that he has worked faithfully and well, but that he is inclined to make one slip. Although he has led the singing of the Alma Mater for four years at Alpha Sigma meetings, he has been known on occasion to sing the third stanza twice instead of singing the second and third in their proper order. That remark we consider by no means disparaging, however, for few people, except those with encyclopedic minds or with little to do, ever learn more than the first stanza of an Alma Mater. Jesse falls into neither of these catagories. He is, rather, a much more human sort of person entirely worthy of the friendships and respect he has won since he came to our Maryville campus.

Sport Talk

BY

BRYAN PAYNE

Months and months ago—years ago it seems—on a sunny Thanksgiving afternoon the Highlanders packed their moleskins and boarded bus for Jefferson City, headed for another death grapple with the Carson-Newman gridders in the last game of the season. There was a lot of dope-slinging before that game; and why not? An old feud, the last game, two good teams, the last chance for a big crowd and all the glamour that goes with a big autumnal war. A hopeful sports staff peeled off reams and reams of copy, giving the Highlanders an even break to win, and looking with e... eyes toward a big game, a big crowd, and plenty of backing for the boys from home. Interest spread over the whole town, and townspeople who had not seen the Highlanders in action once during the year turned out in droves, to say nothing of those who "would never miss a C-N-Maryville football clash."

Well, you all know how that turned out. Altho the Highlanders fought valiently and outplayed them for nearly the whole first half, they drove thru for four touchdowns to our one, sewing up the third game they had won from us in the last twenty years of bitter athletic rivalry. It was a big moment for the Eagles. They talked of nothing else but Clark and Childers and "Poopey" Davis, and in their selfish praise of themselves they forgot entirely the brilliant plays made by Boretsky and the savage tackles of Gillespie. They forgot that Captain Russell was out of the game, nor did they recognize it later, for there was nothing more said about the matter. But in some degree it was their right to crow thus, and feeling pretty sure that football would be played here at least one more year we resolved to drop the matter, or at least keep one wee ember of resentment smouldering for future use. And right here is where our story begins.

In the following December issue of the Orange and Blue, C.-N. publication, the cold and glittering question "IS THE ECHO STILL ECHOING?" appeared in large type at the bottom of the first page. With our keen eye for slander wide open we scanned every column of its eight pages, finding the general idea permeating the spirit of nearly every story about the game. To our utter delight we found, among some other mistakes, that we had been quoted, almost verbatim. At first our indignation rose to the occasion, but after realizing that they in all their littleness had overlooked the salient points in our attempts to talk up the game we dropped the matter as trivial, resolving not to be drawn into a scribe-war at any cost.

Well, last Saturday night the Highlanders again boarded the gas buggy for the litle Baptist village, going once more to meet their Orange and Blue foe, but this time they were draped in the abbreviated uniforms that mark the difference between a football game and a basketball game nowadays. Coach Honaker set five men out on the floor and told them to play away. Well, the Highlanders played so many rings around the enemy that we venture to say he is still groggy. The game was never in doubt as Coach Honaker's men played straight thru forty minutes without a single substitution, while about everybody on the Carson-Newman squad got in the game trying to stop the Highlander tide. "The Eagles have one of the greatest

Top Mars-Hill, 50-38, In Last Period Drive

Highlanders, Missing Henry, Stage Powerful Rally Around Kizer and Hannah To Stop Carolina "Long-shots"

Their ranks depleted by eligibility rules the Highlander basketeers came from behind in the last period of play to put to rout a crew of long-shot artists from Mars Hill, 50 to 38, in a slow game Wednesday night.

Led by Nettles, star forward for the enemy, the men from "over North Carolina way" plied the rim for a first-period total of nineteen points, with the Scotties trailing at the half time, but lost out in the closing minutes as the local offense got underway.

High scoring honors for the evening were divided between Hannah and Nettles with eighteen points each, and Kizer followed with thirteen.

With a noticeable gap in the ranks caused by the absence of Henry, thhe Highlanders were slow to get under way, but after Nettles had scored from the foul circle Van Hee faked around his guard and dribbled under the ring for two points.

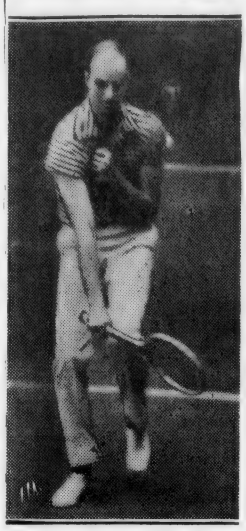
After trying in vain for an opening Nettles let go from near center, scoring cleanly as the ball swished thru the net. On the next play Allen picked up the sphere on a fumble, scoring a one-handed throw, and after a period of haphazard playing on both ends of the floor scored again to bring the count to 6-3 with Maryville leading.

Bailey and Nettles scored again at long range and Fox slipped under for a neat crip shot before the Scotties countered with two more, as Hannah scored on a short pass from Kizer. Being fouled on the play Hannah tallied from the free-throw line and a few moments later tossed in another from the same spot, locking the score at ten all.

Kizer and Hannah tossed in two more from the charity line and VanHee another after he was fouled under the enemy's goal. Nettles gathered another from mid-floor and a free throw before Hannah again scored from the side.

Goals by Hannah for the Highlanders and Nettles and Fox for the visitors brought the count up to 18 to 19, with the locals trailing as the half ended.

After the intermission the home cagesters, being assured that they could go on fairly moderately without the services of Henry, snapped back into the running as Kizer tallied with a one-hand shot under the rim. Thru'out the remainder of the game the Scotties kept the lead.



Hannah scored from pivot territory and Allen went under on a fast break for a crip and two points. Not to be outdone Kizer set one up on the rim, scoring as the sphere dropped thru after dawdling about for a full second.

Allen breasted the tide with six quick points before being replaced by Hulette, and Kizer, after remaining comparatively idle during the first half, began a tirade which gave the Scotties a long lead and a second wind.

With the count reading 46-32 and four minutes to play the scoring stayed even, with Hannah running half the floor's length (and nary a dribble) for a marker as he approached the basket. Nettles and Fox rang six points from afield before the final whistle interrupted the evening's entertainment.

U. T. Wrestling Squad Makes Debut Under Coach Wynn; Crawford Will Wrestle Gamble Again

Coach Bob Thrower and his Highlander wrestlers will have their first test on a foreign mat tonight when they tackle the University of Tennessee wrestlers in the Alumni Memorial gym at Knoxville.

Since this match marks the begining of wrestling at the University of Tennessee, the strength of their team as a whole is unknown. Crawford, however, who wrestled for the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. in their engagement with the Scots two weeks ago, will again face Mose Gamble in the unlimited division.

The match, which is slated to start at 6:30, is being held in connection with the Tennessee-Milligan basketball game.

The line-ups are as follows:

118 pound class—Ridder (M); B. Dean (U. T.)
125 pound class—Hoglan (M); (Undecided)
135 pound class—Kipp (M); Hendrix (U. T.)
145 pound class—Allen (M); Householder (U. T.)
155 pound class—Boretsky (M); Matthews (U. T.)
165 pound class—Byar (M); Bond (U. T.)
175 pound class—Millsaps (M); Bourkard (U. T.)
Unlimited Class—Gamble (M); Crawford (U. T.)

Swimmers Engage Tusculum Tonight

Tusculum Hopes For Better Score, But Fischback's Men Remain Confident of Victory

After having won, lost, and won again in the first three meets of the season, the Scottie tankmen are due to take another victory tonight when they meet the Tusculum Pioneers in the local pool at 8:00 o'clock.

The Scots captured their first meet against Tusculum with plenty of room to spare and then lost a close one to the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. a week later. Now that over a week of practice has ensued since the last meet, the Highlanders are in good condition for the fracas and are eager to balance the won and lost column.

The events, and the probable Maryville line-up, which includes one or two new names, are:

50 yard free style—McIntier and Vinsant
100 yard free style—McIntier and Esbach
200 yard free style—Esbach and Shields
400 yard free style—Shields and Burnham

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

Will Terminate Long Practice Session With Interesting Competition.

There will be a girl's basketball tournament next week. The first game is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, the second for Thursday afternoon, and the third for Saturday evening. One team is made up of juniors and seniors; the other is composed of freshmen and sophomores. Since the girls have been practicing for the last month it is anticipated that both teams will have some good material for the tournament.

Maryville Will Enter Team In State Track Meet

The Scot cinder squad, which will begin rounding into shape in another month under the tutelage of Coach Bob Thrower, will meet its first test of the season when a galaxy of Tennessee stars gathers at the University of Tennessee March 12 for a state-wide track meet.

Other schools participating will be Milligan College, University of Tennessee, Carson-Newman College, and Tusculum, while other colleges will present various units.

Defeat King, 49-40

BRISTOL, Feb. 1—Led in the offense by Captain Johnny Kizer, star guard for the Highlanders, the Maryville quintet nosed out a game King Tornado crew, 49-40, in an exciting conference tilt here tonight, winning the first of their series of three games on the road.

Trailing 26-19 at the half time the Scotties clamped down a gruelling fast-pass attack centered around the Maryville captain and smothered the Tornado with a tirade of crips, which ceased only at the final whistle. Captain Kizer garnered high-score ribbons with 21 points.

Summary:

OBSERVATIONS

Annie doesn't live here anymore. Little old Annie Glen Lowry has scrammed to parts known, leaving George with no one to. . . . to talk to. . . and with nothing to do but rit around and sing solos.

—O—

We didn't konw this was the state of things until we happened in the office of THE HIGHLAND ECHO last week singing the one time song hit, and George started weeping and wailing. He thought we knew and that we were singing to add to his long list of sorrows. That, of course, is not so. . . .it is only sunshine that we spread. . . . shed.

—O—

Midget, the editor, came our way this morning (this is after breakfast Friday) and we were about to tell her that we'd have our copy in by noon. She became frantic for a little woman, and asked "Can't you possibly have it by Chapel?" Well, there you are. We're having it by Chapel, which accounts for the spelling errors (we're going to lay off the linotypist for a spell).

—O—

Little Kay can just about tear her hair as well as any person in college. We like to see her after a Shakespeare test when she guessed wrong, and has just finished verifying her mistake in the big book. Of course, it is still more fun to see her riding mules, but we've never seen her do that. . . yet.

—O—

And from her attitude toward those of the agile heel family, we'll not see her riding one for quite some spell. We hadn't intended giving Kay all this publicity, but she has to suffer some kind of punishment for depriving us our breakfast to Chapel nap.

—O—

Now, we're not saying it was the Gillenwater girl. Oh, we're not saying that it wasn't the little Gillenwater girl, but the fact remains that when Dr. Lloyd called "Lathan" while calling roll in Philosophy a tiny unmistakeably feminine voice came up with "here", and then soon came the big base vile (voice) of Lathan.

—O—

Bob Tripp corrects us and says that maybe Lona Gillenwater is not in Philosophy, but takes practice teaching instead, in which case we'll conclude that it was her spirit. . . Lathan is always getting so completely into the spirit of thing

—O—

Miss Zoe (if she doesn't go treating us better in Biology 102b4. before long we'll call her a Zoe. and Zoe) Wells Carroll suggested a poem written by a U. T. Student if we wanted something "really good" to put in our column. Well, did our sails go down, on account of we thought a little that the stuff we've had all along has been good. Of course, we believe implicitly in our Biology teacher's judgment, and we looked for the thing to read, at least, but there was none to be found.

—O—

It was a poem about a fellow sitting in Biology lab, looking fondly and longingly out the window at the wonders of nature in the raw (not the raw-raw, the biology lab. at U. T. doesn't face the gridiron), while he was lost in the odors of alcohol and formaldehyde, etc. It was, to say the very least, a poem, the spirit of which was very much after our own heart.

Freshman Debaters Organized For Work

Freshman debaters interested in trying out for the freshman debate team met Thursday afternoon with Miss Maria Wynn, varsity debater, for the purpose of choosing teams for the try-outs. The present plan is that five boys' teams will debate five girls' teams, each team being made up of two debaters. The schedule of debates will be posted Saturday.

The question is, "Resolved: That Tennessee Should be Reorganized Into Not More Than Twenty-four Counties."

Add a little here, substract a little there, and you have your grades for the semester. This plus and minus business isn't the worst thing in the world, inasmuch as three of our four grades affected by one or the other were followed not by the 333 line but by the cross. Of course, that doesn't make us cross.

—O—

Dr. McMurray probably goes around saying, "I knew it all the time", in connection with the new grading system. He's given minuses and plusses ever since we've been on the scene, and doubtless a number of years previous. We know; we were worked for three C plusses before we finally crashed thru with our B. Charlie Beale was a little longer. He also had a total of many, many plusses, but he fooled the Doctor this year. When he was sitting back in the back with his head down, he wasn't asleep. He was only faking a sleep. . . . he was really listening. And so, and so, the Charlie got his little B—to send to Mrs. Beale.

—O—

We might suggest to those seniors who missed Theism last Saturday that the notebooks used last year will not be used for this year's course. Sorry. Better get the five fingers limbered up for some good note taking.

—O—

We think the gods must have sent E. Boyce Jarman to Maryville. After everyone had looked on and given up in despair over the condition of our ECHO office, old Jarman just came bravely to the fore with his broom and called "dutch cleanser" on us. We're living in a new house now, due to Mr. Jarman and for that we're anxious to thank the good sir publicly.

MARS HILL GAME

Captain Kizer's last period comeback, which netted him 13 points and second high honors, was perhaps the outstanding performance of the game. Hannah and Allen played the offensive positions up to par, while VanHee was in on some clever pass attacks. Together with Crumbaugh the Highlanders displayed an effective defense, which allowed few attempts at crip-position for the Carolinians.

Outstanding for the visiting quintet was Nettles, forward and sharer of high score honors. Speedy and accurate he was the only one able to penetrate the Scot defense for close range trials, playing also a good defensive game. Nettles is an old friend of Batty Collins, they having played four years of high school basketball together at Princeton, Indiana. He is considering entering Maryville College after he is graduated from the junior college at Mars Hill.

cage teams in recent years" we read from a recent publication, and we're mighty glad, too, for it wouldn't have been true revenge for the Scotties to catch them in an off-season.

And they with their all-conference center, Layman, and other veterans such as Captain Davis and Munroe and Smith; and we with two lettermen on the first five—pshaw and tch-tch-tch. "Ay, there's the rub". Up on their half-size court, so the boys said, the Eagles should have had an air tight defense, but we hear it looked like a broken field on the gridiron. They say that VanHee held them spell-bound with his streak-passes and fast breaks for the basket.

It wasn't such a fruitless day after all when the Highlanders packed their moleskins and headed for the Baptist school on that sunny November afternoon. And "is the ECHO still Echoing?" Indeed, it has made only a good start.

George Lehhr, a reading by Eleanor Denslow, and a chalk-talk by Glover Leitch, made up the first half of the program.

Mimi Baez and Joan Dexter presented a delightful group of dances, displaying Maryville pep song as it would be in the music and dances of other peoples. Charlotte Upp accompanied them.

Throughout the evening, popular music was furnished by the Alpha Sigma orchestra. Hamburgers and punch were served at the lunch counter.

Prof. M. M. Rodgers, Misses Helen Gamble, Merle Beebe and Bonnie Hudson attended the party.

Professor Griffitts acted as chairman; judges were Prof. Kiger, Prof. Davis, Dr. Rodgers, Dr. Fields and Dr. McMurray.

The Maryville affirmative team was at the same time at Emory and Henry meeting the L. M. U. negative team, while the Emory and Henry affirmative team and the Maryville negative team battled it out at L. M. U.

The decision in the latter case was given to the Maryville team.

Music Department To Offer Undergraduate Recital Next Week

Violin, Voice, And Piano Students Will Present Numbers

An entirely new feature will be introduced into the musical program of the college on the night of February 23rd in a concert to be presented by undergraduate musicians. The heads of the music departments, recognizing that there are many studying music who, while not graduates, are students of much musical ability and talent, have aranged a program which will bring these musicians before the public. Those performing have been chosen for their excellent attainments along some line of musical study.

A particularly interesting number of the program is a piano ensemble group to be played by four men students of the piano department, two of whom will also appear in solo numbers. Ensemble numbers will also be played by two groups of girls. Flute, violin, and voice selections combine with piano numbers to make a well balanced program.

The program is as follows:

Nocturne ---------- Chopin
Ruth Flint, Harriett Clark
Care Salve from Atalanta---Handel
Black Bird's Song----- Cyril Scott
Marie Carlson
Majesty of the Deep--------Hamer

College "Big Sisters" Give Valentine Party

Orphanage Children Delighted With Event

The Little Sisters at the Orphanage were given a Valentine Party this afternoon by their Big Sisters. Each child received a valentine which was mailed at the party in a box prepared for that purpose by Florence Bruno.

The decorations, which were planned by a committee of three, Dolores Burchett, chairman, Helen Woodward, and Charlotte King, followed the color scheme of Valentine's Day and were red and white. Hearts and streamers made the room gay and attractive.

The refreshments, also, followed the color scheme of red and white. Ruth Romig, as chairman of the committee was assisted in serving jello, cookies, and candy to the delighted children.

Emily Watson directed the Little Sisters in numerous games. Vi Webb entertained them with a novelty tap dance.

Joan Dexter was responsible for the posters which were placed in the dormitories to remind the Big Sisters of the party.

The Y. W. C. A. topic for tomorrow is "The Present Day Unrest in Religious Thinking", with Joyce Fields in charge. Music will be furnished by the Y. M. C. A.

On February 25, Miss Clemmie Henry will speak.

New Members Taken In Writer's Workshop

At a recent meeting of the Writers' Workshop plans were made for the second semester schedule. The governing board which functioned last semester, consisting of Miss Johnson, Fern Metzgar, Kay Carpenter, and Richard Orr, was elected to a second term's office.

The one vacancy in the personnel of the organization was filled with the voting in of Wilma Dorsey, senior.

The Workshop has had a very profitable semester, having heard many unique and original papers presented by the various members. At present, plans are being made for subscription to a page in the Chilhowean, a plan which has not been followed by the club in recent years.

SUNDAY VESPERS

Dr. Stevenson will speak on "A Tremendous Personal Question." Special music, "Hide Me O My Savior", by Winter, will be provided by a mixed quartet

February Meetings Closed On Wednesday

Dr. and Mrs. Vale To Motor To Detroit

The fifty-eighth series of February Meetings came to a close here Wednesday, a day earlier than in former years. Dr. and Mrs Vale, who, unfortunately, had been suffering from an infected tooth making an early return necessary, left Maryville Thursday morning. They were to make the trip to Detroit by motor.

Dr. Vale, who is a splendid speaker gave fifteen addresses in the chapel, besides appearing at various student organizations, making his program a very busy one. He was much in demand for personal conferences, also, and his schedule in that respect was very full.

The messages brought the students by Dr. Vale were of very real value, and great benefit was sustained by the majority of students. A very fine spirit of cooperation pervaded the meetings.

The themes of the addresses follow in brief:

Tuesday, February 6
Morning

Dr. Vale, in his opening address gave a vision of a new companionship with Jesus Christ which can be gained by forgetting those things which are behind and taking a new stand for a Christian way of life.

Evening

Dr. Vale used as his theme "God's Second Hand Store", in which he showed the value of second things, but at the same time brought out the fact that many of the things of life must not be second hand.

Wednesday, February 7
Morning

Pictures have a releasing, resurrecting, revealing, and refining power. The greatest picture ever given to the world is that of Jesus Christ, which reveals what men may become.

Maryville Debaters Win Four Decisions

Debate Season Opens With Remarkable Success

After the first round of debates, with no decisions recorded against them, the varsity debaters are preparing for the second series of forensic events. The first debate of this round will be a dual meet, scheduled for February 24, between Maryville and the Teachers' College debaters. On February 26 a triangular debate, with representatives from Tusculum, Teachers' College and Maryville, will take place. The next contest will be held on March 2, with debaters from Tusculum, Milligan, and Maryville participating. Following this debate on March 5, a third triangular meet is scheduled to occur, the debaters to represent Milligan, Carson-Newman and Maryville. Teams debating on February 26 and March 5 are composed of men, while the contest to be held March 2 is to be a women's debate. In the triangular debates each college is represented by two teams, both of which travel to other colleges. In this arrangement no team debates at home.

On March 6, the Maryville debaters are scheduled to leave for a week's trip through North and South Carolina. The first debate of the tour will be a contest between Asheville Normal School and the Maryville squad, after which the teams are to attend the tri-state convention in Greensboro, North Carolina, where they will participate in contests in debate, oratory, and extempore speaking. Following the convention the debaters will meet in forensic contests at other Carolina colleges, including Catawba, Erskine, and Presbyterian College.

Seniors To Sponsor Open Party Thursday

The Senior class will hold its second open party of the year at eight o'clock, February 22 in Bartlett Hall. The entertainment, which is to be formal, will be featured by a George Washington program, directed by Charles Beale. All seniors who expect to attend should give their names and the names of their guests to Clifford Withers by Monday, February 19th.

Ruth Farlee is planning the refreshments, and John Eyster will have charge of the decorating.

Masked Fashion Show To Be Featured In Glee Club Concert

Women's Glee Club To Be Assisted By Dixie Vagabond Quartet

The Women's Glee Club will make its initial appearance of the year in the annual concert scheduled for Tuesday evening, February 20, at 8:00 P. M. Rehearsals for this event have been in progress since early fall. Twenty-four voices make up the chorus which is larger than in former years.

The program for the evening has been planned to please varied tastes. Types of selectioons range from the exquisite harmonies of "How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings" from Brahms' "Requiem" to the modern tonal qualities to be found in a choral fantasy of Mother Goose rhymes. The melodic lullaby "Sleepy Time", the smooth-flowing "Whither" of Schubert offer a charming contrast to such numbers as the "Song of India". An interesting arrangement of "Suwanee River" and "Humoresque" will feature a violin obbligato to be played by Glover Leitch.

The Dixie Vagabond Quartet, accompanied by Carl Wells, will present a group of delightful numbers.

An added and unique feature of the evening's entertainment is the masked fashion review directed by Miss Henry and Miss Meiselwitz. Correct costumes for men and women to wear on all occasions will be displayed. Clever singing and dancing novelty numbers will be featured in the review.

The very capable director of the Women's Glee Club is Miss Frances Henry, head of the voice department. Lois Huber, Charlotte Upp, Kay Carpenter, and Helen Chambers are the accompanists of the evening.

The program is as follows:

How Lovely Are Thy Dwellings, from "Requiem" ------- Brahms
Dixie Vagabond Quartet
Andrew Alexander, Gordon Grooms, Lloyd Wells, Arthur Courtenay
Love's Dream After the Ball---- Houseley
Sleepy Time ---------- Collins
Whither? ---------- Schubert
Humoresque, "Suwanee River" ---- Dvorak-Wilson
Song of India ---Rimsky-Korsakow
The Two Clocks ---------- Rogers
A Masked Fashion Review
Choral Fantasy on Nursery Rhymes ---------- Matthews

FEATURE — In One Syllable Words—E. Thom

It has been told us more than once that we write in a way hard to "get". So we shall let our long words go by his time, and use such as these.

There is a tale fixed in our mind that was told to us when we were a child. It deals with a thing or a man who will grant each wish we may make if we make the wish in the right way.

Two days past we were forced to ask a gift of this—myth, shall we call it? You see, it came to our mind that we owed five "bucks" to the man who owns the place where we eat. We did not have the cash, nor did we know where to get it.

Well, we went to our room, said the charm that brought the aid of the myth, and asked for the cash. He did not show his face, but he showed his power in a large way. We found TEN "bucks" in an old sock wrapped up in a sheet in our trunk.

Of course we were drunk with joy. Ten "bucks" when all that we were in debt for was five! Such a rush of wealth called for a small spree.

Thus our next steps took us to a friend who had a watch we had long longed for. It was good gold and gave good time well (After we owned it a while we found that it gave an hour a day more than a watch is meant to give, which proved its worth). We kissed the friend who sold us the watch on both cheeks, put the watch in our shoe, put the shoe on our head, and, dressed to the mode, strolled on down the street to a friend with a drug store.

He was glad to see us since he could tell by the smile on our face that we wished to eat some ice cream. We left ten dimes and the smile in his drug store.

Our next stop, the "five and ten", took one more dime (we saw a

Debates Are Scheduled For Freshman Debaters

The Freshman Debate eliminations were held on Monday, February twelfth. Twelve men and women were chosen to fill places on the freshman debate teams. Those qualifying for such positions are: Marcella Arden, Ruth Barlets, Virginia Pennington, Elizabeth Carlisle, Blanche Webb, Alma Whiffen, John Bryan. John Gilmore, Boyce Jarman, John McIntyre, Richard Schlofer, Edward Thom.

The question on which this group is to work is Resolved: That Tennessee Should be Organized Into Not More Than Twenty-four Counties. Numerous debates have been scheduled for the teams. The girls' team will meet Carson-Newman debaters on April thirteenth. On April fifteenth the boys' team is to debate with a group from the University of Tennessee. Other debates will be announced at a later date.

FEATURE — Charlie Beale

This business of writing thirty-seven inches of nonsense to stick on the front page of the Maryville Misanthrope must seem an awful waste of time to the majority of the student body. One week K. Orr writes a humorously divine pile of nonsense, and every one gets a pleasant ten minutes; the next week Christie gives of his effulgent and affluent Scotch ballyhoo, and one and all get some more entertainment; then Thom presents a thesis on laziness, but no one takes it seriously and laugh shamelessly albeit innocently; then Beale writes about four hours on some piece of high tomfoolery, and the student body tosses aside the ECHO in the midst of the article and sadly observes,, "poor fellow!" or, "he had a sensible idea once, but the strain was too much for him." It's all very discouraging.

And so we go, week after week, providing the populace with a giggle or two every so often, but really doing nothing whatsoever to uplift the staggering ideals or to stimulate the drooping thought of the student readers. The time has arrived for action! We are going to strike (if you don't think the iron is hot, you don't know my landlord). We are going to give you a bit of food for thought. We are going to present a serious and instructive article for the edification of our already burdened readers. We tell you this for fear you'd never discover the fact otherwise.

The subject we choose for discussion is both pertinent, pressing, penetrating and pliable. We say 'both' because one need read only two of the preceding adjectives. We had them in our dictionary and thought we might as well use them and get our money's worth. The Apparently we have in Maryville a group of people who, for lack of a stronger appellative, we shall call souvenir collectors. Attractive posters and signs announcing coming events have a peculiarly fascination for such persons. So strong, it seems, that it is impossible for them to delay obtaining the poster until it has served its purpose of advertising.

Recently some attractive signs were displayed by the Women's Glee Club. Before they had been up three hours the larger part of one was in evidence at various points on the campus in the hands of those who seemed to have an overwhelming desire for a large letter. Several posters that had taken hours of work had disappeared from their places. The time spent on these signs was wasted when one considers that their aim was to reach the general public.

We would like to point out to these people, who obviously do not think of the rights of others, that such a practice is not only childish, but highly inconsiderate as well. We ask them to put themselves for a moment in the places of those who work long and painstakingly on advertising schemes, and ask themselves whether under similar conditions they, too, would not feel keen resentment.

subject is worthy of a far more learned treatment, in fact, than our poor erudition is able to furnish. But we plunge into it with an audacious disregard for such details. We have to. We've got to get the dickens to work on a paper which is due Dr. Hunter the same day this article is scheduled to greet you. And so, offering no further excuses for our plunging approach, we commence.

We commence because we have heard no less personage than Miss Jessie Sloane Heron, M.A., Associate Professor of English at Maryville College, make the observation in a lecture to a composition class that one really must commence if one wants to ever get his composition done. She went on to say that one should always be brief in the introduction to one's writing. But we never were one to pay very much attention to rules, always holding that individuality should take precedent over conformality. Which is a possible explanation for the fact that we have, possibly, consumed too much space in the introduction to this paper.

But there is an excuse for this, which is that we have no desire to commence spilling pearls of wisdom on stony ground. In other and less scripturally entangled words, we hesitate to embark upon such an erudite article without first feeling sure that the attention of every reader is firmly fixed upon the subject.

Because we further learned from Miss Heron that only an idiot or a poor writer, or a combination of both, would risk such a calamity. And so we take no chances. In fact, in so many words, let us adjure you to focus your thought irretrievably on the subject.

But what is the subject! My goo'ness! Miss Heron never said anything about waiting so long to announce the subject of a work. Such a flagrant transgression demands an apology. We'll have to speak to the lady. But perhaps she won't be too greatly upset.

We hasten, however to announce the subject. Ponder on it, gentle reader; take it to your bosom; consider it carefully ere St. Morpheus claims your spirit this night. Do not fail to do it mental justice. It may seem to have somewhat of a mathematical twist, but do not be deceived! Search for the deeper meaning. But, without further adieu, we give you the subject. It is:

GIVEN A MULBERRY TREE WITH 3,585,609 LEAVES; WITH 1,837,210 BERRIES; AND WITH 994,896 SILKWORMS. GIVEN ALSO A WIND FROM THE SOUTH WITH A VELOCITY OF 31 M.P.H. PROBLEM: HOW MANY SQUARE YARDS OF LEAD PAINT NECESSARY TO WHITEWASH AUNT EMMA'S FOUR-GABLED DOG-HOUSE?

Chilhowean Poster Contest

The three winners in the Chilhowean Poster Contest have been announced. Peggy Parnell and William Quigley submitted entries with four errors each, and Charles Haddock submitted one with five errors. To each of these three competitors will be awarded a free copy of the 1934 Chilhowean with the winner's name stamped in gold on the cover.

Many of the students of Union College rubbed their eyes and wondered if they were seeing things when they looked on the stage of the chapel to behold a person whom they might easily have believed to be Abraham Lincoln. It was no other than Judge Bull who bears a remarkable resemblance to Abraham Lincoln. The man has taken the part of Lincoln in several motion pictures.

Jascha Heifetz, world-famous violinist who has made four world tours, appeared for the first time at Duke recently to give a concert His program was enthusiastically received.

Coach Thrower's Champions Wrestle U. T. Squad Tonight

Battaglia, Dean Bat For Hoglan, Boretsky, As Mat Stars Seek Second Win Over Young University Team; Meet Appalachian Teachers Tuesday

The powerful Highlander wrestling squad is expected to add another link to its victory chain tonight when Coach Bob Thrower pits his warriors against the University of Tennessee Volunteers in the Alumni gym at eight o'clock.

The Scotties crushed the University of Tennessee Vols in Knoxville two weeks ago, coming out on top in seven out of eight falls for a 35-5 score. Tonight the Tennessee outfit will be a little more experienced than it was at the first meeting of the two teams, and it should give the Scotties a tough scrap. The outstanding performances will probably be staged in the 175-pound and unlimited divisions.

Next Tuesday night the Scots will be away from home to face the Appalachian Teachers' Wrestlers, who, earlier in the season, put up the best fight the locals have yet encountred. On the following Saturday, February 24, Vanderbilt University will bring its crack team here to battle the Scots in what should be one of the best meets of the season.

Chess Hounds Sign Now For Tourney

'Won't Someone Lend Us A Chess Set', Is Y.M.C.A. Cry; Checker Tourney Soon

All good espousers of the ancient and royal game of chess are expected to sign up for the tourney, which will begin sometime next week. Blanks will be posted in Carnegie Hall and in the Y.M.C.A.

The tournament will be an individual affair, and will not count toward the athletic cup award. The Y. athletic council, sponsors of the tourney, have announced that the chess tourney will be followed shortly by a checker tournament.

Since the Y. is in possession of only one chess set, it would be appreciated if someone owning a set would lend it during the tourney, to avoid congestion in getting the matches played off. An award, probably in the form of a medal will be given the winner.

Frosh-Soph Squad Wins Fem Cage Go

Point System Girls Get In Trim For Volley Ball Tourney In March

The women's cage team composed of freshmen and sophomores won two games of a three-game series last week to defeat the junior-senior squad in the annual women's basketball tourney in Alumni gym. The score of the final game, which was played last Saturday night, was 39 to 20.

With Gillingham leading the scoring field, the junior-senior team played hard in the first game of the series, but lost out to the younger foe in the closing minutes of the game. The score was 33-29.

Although both teams displayed a good brand of basketball, the frosh-sophomore crew outplayed the opponent to cinch the championship in the second game, which was played to a final score of 37-33.

Coming out from their losing streak the junior-senior players staged a decided comeback in the final game, in which the forwards hit the rim for 39 points to the champions' 20. Good floor work was exhibited by both teams.

Point System women will begin preparation Tuesday for a volley ball tournament, which will be held during the first week of Marchh

Cage Team Meets King Crew Tonite

Road Trip Takes Scotties Thru North Carolina and Virginia; Six More Games Left

The King Tornado will blow into camp tonight with an attempt to even matters after suffering a 49 to 40 defeat at the hands of the Scotties earlier in the season. The Tornado attack is led by Pettigrew, elongated center, and Davis star forward.

Tonight's battle will be the last home game for the Scotties until they return from next week's scheduled road trip which takes them into North Carolina and Virginia. Starting Wednesday by seeking revenge upon Tennessee Teachers, who eked out a victory over them here in the last few seconds of play, the Highlanders will battle Milligan and Appalachian Teachers on the two nights following. On Saturday they will have one more chance to stop the celebrated pivot-shot artist, "Houdini" Roberts, at Emory and Henry College.

Top Pioneers In Final Rally

Hannah, Allen, VanHee Star As Scotties Win Sixth Conference Tilt, 39-26, With Final-Period Drive.

A powerful final-period rally centered around Allen, Hannah, and VanHee gave the Highlander cagers a 39 to 26 victory over the Tusculum Pioneers, here last night, after being led 21 to 12 at the half time.

As the second half opened Hannah broke loose for a nice crip shot, and VanHee and Allen followed with baskets to bring the Scotties within one point of the fast moving Pioneers. Tusculum again forged in front only to be caught again as Hannah and Allen found the basket, putting the Highlanders in the lead, which they never lost.

The first half was Tusculum's all the way. VanHee opened the scoring after about two minutes of play with a foul shot. Yelenik followed a few minutes later with two more, following it with a fast crip. Kmetz of Tusculum put on a one-man show for a few minutes to put Tusculum in an apparently safe lead. Allen and Kmetz made a pair of one-handed shots as the half ended with the Pioneers on the long end of a 21 to 12 score.

Maryville opened the second half with a bang and promptly ran up a lead on the Pioneers. The whole team was hitting the basket. First Allen then Hannah and then Van Hee rang up consecutive baskets before Coach Honaker ran in substitutes. With six and a half minutes to go the score was tied 25-25. From this point the Highlanders pulled steadily away from the Pioneers.

For Maryville Allen, VanHee, and Hannah were outstanding. Kmetz, Evans, and Scerbak starred for Tusculum. High point honors for the evening went to Hannah with 15 points.

Last night's victory put the Scotties close to the top in Smoky Mountain Conference circles with six wins and two losses to their credit. After the King game tonight, also a conference tilt, the local boys play only six more games to finish the season.

Water Polo, Water Waltzes, 'Nightie Race' Part Of Premier Showing On Maryville Campus; College Orchestra Plays

The college orchestra nestled back in the foamy fastnesses of King Neptune's Playground will form part of the background of the colorful water carnival which is booked to run one night only on March 3rd.

Plans for the carnival, the first thing of its kind to appear on the local campus, are going forward rapidly under the direction of Coach Fischbach, director of swimming. With him is working a committee composed of varsity swimmers and other members of the tank squad.

The carnival, although based generally on the 'rough and tumble' of water sports, will present several interesting features. The main attraction of the company of varsity swimmers will be the game of water polo, which will be played in quarters of four minutes each. The interesting thing about water polo is that during playing time no player is allowed to hold on to the side of the pool for a rest.

Several water-waltzes, splashed to the dreamy tunes of the latest waltz hits, as played by the college orchestra, will occupy another important berth on the lengthy program. Greiner, Herries, and Meeks are said to have undying fame at the popular art of water-waltzing.

Still another feature will be the Sorority Sister 'Nightie' Race, which will be performed in practically no illumination at all. And who will wear the nighties? Well, that is just another of the store of surprises and secrets Fischbach and his troupe will let out of the bag during the carnival.

If plans work out successfully King Neptune himself and his bride (?) will preside over the events, calling for them at will, and waving his silver trident in approval, or such as his mood may be.

The entire program will occupy some two hours or more. A general admission price of fifteen cents, two for two bits, is being asked, and in view of the popularity of the affair in other places, a large crowd of both townspeople and students is expected.

Keep your March 3rd open for the water carnival!

'SPORT TALK' PLAYED BASKETBALL ONCE!

BY BRYAN PAYNE

A bit of dark-corner comment found its way to our ears the other day—something like this: "I'll bet that guy never played a game of basketball in his life."—and directed at us, we also heard. Why, gentlemen, that little remark saves us a week's torment, for it gives this corner the inspiration for its weekly blister. Now let us tell you a little story.

Back up in the home state after a kid observes from his first attendance at a game that he "wikes" the game because the referee is kind nough to blow his whistle and run around to pick up a fallen player, and when he wants to know why the basket hasn't any bottom to it, why, that's when heh begins to play basketball. When a new infant arrives at the home the first thing the neighbors do is to rush in from all sides to size him up and predict whether he'll be a guard or a center.

A little higher up in grade-school the kids get so eager to play that they willfully stay in after school hours so they can arch paper-wads at the ink-wells. Erasers, chalk, waste-paper, and books soon become the finest of basketballs, and the waste-basket makes an elegant ring above some imaginary floor. If the "ball" won't bounce, a flourish of the hand is all that is needed to complete the dream of a flashy dribble down the floor for a counter from the end-zone.

And then Christmas comes along, bringing with it a new crop of leather spheres. When the snow melts away the outdoors becomes clogged with urchins, for there is a backboard in every alley. The general situation is a queer mixture of football, boxing, and wrestling, with a basketball thrown in to identify the game.

Yah! We grew up in that. Well, one day the principal of our school smothered us with his benign countenace and inquired politely if some of us would care to play a little basketball. There was no more school that day, for the seventh grade rioted, but after the state cavalry had smoothed the urchin-mob plans were laid for some ten or twelve teams.

Came the first practice, and we an imposing 'Wildcat'. Having never held a basketball in our hands before we were somewhat timid, to put it lightly, but after embracing it a couple of times with all the ignorant abandon of our infancy, we threw it over the backboard several times and decided that basketball was all right.

Finally came the big moment—the call to arms. After braving the razzing and snikkers—for we were but a wee mite of 90-some pounds—we managed to grab the last berth on the bench, and thus began our career as a cager. Our first appearance was full of comedy. After sitting most of the game out on the bench we got the call—we were some twenty points ahead. We raced out on the floor clad in shorts that we had to hold up with our hand, and shoes—size ten—that buckled under our feet, and began yelling for the ball. We just mention in passing that some fool passed to us once, and not knowing what

We're writing from a full stomach just now. This immediately follows the Wednesday evening meal which was one of the very best eating experiences we've had in a long time, in spite of the fact that our "mayonnaise" sandwich tried to get away from us.

—0—

Understand we that the Highland Echo as a paper has taken one or two severe pannings around here lately as not being what it's cracked up to be. One of these reasons is its incompetent writers. Another is its narrow field of material. We didn't believe the latter seriously until we got a paper from a neighboring school addressed to "The Twig"—Meredith College, Maryville, Tennessee.

That idea seemed to be in harmony with the opinion of the "ones who know." We'd suggest to our fellows on the paper a little branching out from our present standing. Maybe we'll get to be a branch, or a log, or a Pine Tree Sentinel (all for Miss Heron) or something.

—0—

Three seniors and a junior met the other evening, as scheduled, for a three hour course which meets from 7 to 10 on Tuesday evening. The seniors are Calhoun, Massey and Orr, while the little feller is Ernie Lowe. Well, we met, and we got released a little late. About 10 minutes past the hour of ten we blossomed out of Thaw Hall and the Watchie thought there was evil in the air.

—0—

Two men and two women coming out of a darkened building at 10 minutes past the library closing hour is a matter for concern, thought the Man of Night, but the investigation which followed allowed there was no ill, nor eve ill in the proceedings.

—0—

The latest axe to grind is a two edged axe. It's not so dull. We're perturbed, Mr. Testa and the writer of the "Observation" column, about a little matter in relation to the American flag, commonly referred o as "Old Glory". Old Glory flew on the day that the February Meetings began; Old Glory flew on the day that the February Meetings closed; but Old Glory stayed in her little box the day that commemorated the birth of a son of Illinois, Mr. Abraham Lincoln.

That just about hurt our family pride (we Illinoisans) to have no more recognition given to a man of Lincoln's caliber when the flag is supposed to fly. Of course, with some of you, that still might be a matter of opinion, or even controversy, but with us it's done settled. Understand, now, we're not out to start a civil rumpus.

This brings us to the story told by Dr. Vale on one of the first days. You'll remember about the baseball game in which the two sides were tied, the going was tense, the pitcher spit on his hand, dried the ball, came back, came over and sent one down the groove that the batter didn't even see and OUR SIDE WON. We heard that Charlie Beale exclaimed after the story, "Why he just said the score was tied", and the speaker heard Charlie, who sits on the front row, and reassured his listeners of the truth of the matter with "Yes Sir, I know; I've been right there."

That makes us think of the story told by Dr. Lloyd about the two fellows who walked around the block and decided to jump in the river. We keep wondering who told the man on shore what was in the mind of the men before they jumped in. Maybe there was another one of those little birds. Or maybe there was mental telepathy. . . or does that transpire between dead and live men?

We've almost talked about Dr. Vale two or three times. Now we're going to come out and say what struck us above all things. We're perfectly pleased with the man's pronunciation of the work "ask". You understand, we did see all the other things, and experienced most of the more profound experiences, but the fact remains that the man has a fascinating way of saying "ask."

—0—

In closing let us say a good word for Mr. Richard Meadows who makes it a practice to inhabit the Sport Page (we can't think of the freshman, Meadows, without associating him with "Green Pastures"). We ASKED (sorry you can't get the inflection) brother Meadows to write this line this week, and after two days Mr. Meadows reports that he hasn't found one idea.

Well, there's a secret about that. Mr. Meadows is laboring under a false impression. He thinks that there are ideas behind these things. We'll have to tell the truth now (shhhhh). We don't know just what to call it instead of idea. We can only tell you by example. Just go by the room of Leitch, Christie and Godfrey any time of night or morning, and you'll see it coming out above the door, through the cracks in the wall, and if you open the door you're liable to be forced under. Next, get a little of that, analyze it, and you have essentially the same stuff that little Observations are made of. We don't charge for the information. The information is charged.

ring that caught our eye), and the fourth stop took what was left of our free cash. It was the last day in the week, you see, and we just had to go to the show. What we spent there was well spent, too. It was the first time we had seen one man fight nine and win. More than once we have seen Tom Mix take on eight, but—nine! Yes, sir, that Buck Jones is some man! He makes us think of W. D., our old frau, and the things he did out West in days of the past with big chief Long Hair.

Our spree done, we went with tears in our eyes to the place where we eat. The fact that we were to part with the last of our cash caused most of our tears, but the ice cream helped much.

When we stopped in to see the man to whom we were in debt, he smiled. When we gave him the bills, he frowned.

"Five bucks?" he asked. "You owe me ten."

And it came to our mind that, as the bard hath said, there is oft—yeh, oft—a slip 'twixt the truth and the thought.

to do with it we fell into a fuddle, dancing such a jig that shortly afterward we received several contracts from vaudeville troups.

Well, the coach took us aside, and pulling the "best friend" act, politely explained that it was against the rules to run or dance with the ball, meanwhile showing how to pivot. That was all we could endure for a while, so dodging around the back way we stole home to sleep off the embarrassment. That's all we care to admit at present, but as a hint, we never improved.

Escape from all that without having played basketball? Prut! But alas for the infirmities of old age.

They take us one by one and leave to us only a typewriting acquaintance with the Queen, if not the King, of sports. Anybody that thinks this is a fairy tale and would care to hear more, we invite to a private correspondence.

FEBRUARY MEETINGS

Evening

We are living in a world of the invisible; scientists deal with the invisible. When we see Christ we see The Invisible, and that vision of Him puts a courage into man that can make him indomitable over circumstance.

Thursday, February 8

Morning

God's Four Leaf Clover signifies the best gifts of life. Copper, representing the first leaf, is a symbol of skill; silver, the second, stands for culture; gold, the third, signifies wealth; and the diamond, the fourth is the gift of spirituality.

Evening

We live in an age of discovery; the most important discovery is the vision of Christ.

Friday, February 9

Morning

Many people are willing to take all the material benefits that Christianity offers them; yet they reject Christ. Ignorance, indifference, and selfishness cause people to leave Christianity. Everyone is faced with the choice of Christ or chaos. We have received a Commission Invisible from the Son of God; it is necessary that we recognize that fact.

Saturday, February 10

Morning

In all life there is sin to combat, but we have the words and life of Christ which may give us the power to overcome this peril. It is necessary to recognize him to receive these benefits.

Sunday, February 11

Evening

The theme of this service lies in a quotation of Dr. Vale's: "In olden times all roads led to Rome; today all roads lead to Jesus Christ."

Monday, February 12

Evening

To inherit eternal life we must recognize the power of Jesus Christ; we must be repentant; we must publicly acknowledge Jesus Christ; and follow his mode of living.

Tuesday, February 13

Morning

Every day we are weighed in the balances of righteousness by God. We are rich in opportunity and youth and should take our stand for the Christian life.

Evening

Jesus Christ can not be worshipped as a left-over God; we must give to Him the best that we have

Evening

Jesus is transfigured by the inflowing of God's Spirit through the open gate of prayer. Christ's long will be added to the lives of those who ask for it.

The Ministerial Association will hold its regular monthly meeting next Monday night. Dr. Baldridge of the Maryville Baptist Church will be the guest speaker. Members and any others interested in full time Christian service are urged to attend.

Music Programs Are Marked With Success

Campus Talent Brought To Front In Two Enterainments

Two very fine musical programs augmented this week's activities. The first, the concert of the Women's Glee Club, was conducted with exceptional success.

The high point on this program was the Brahms number from the "Requiem", which was notable for the excellence of tone quality, and good interpretation. Following this number the audience heard the Dixie Vagabond quartet, which rendered three very pretty songs, the outstanding of which, perhaps, was the charming negro lullaby.

Outstanding numbers were also the lovely and somewhat whimsical "Whither", and two clever numbers which departed from the ordinary range of song, "The Two Clocks", and "The Choral Fantasy".

The Fashion Show under the capable direction of Miss Meiselwitz went off exceedingly well, and was apparently enjoyed by the audience for its novelty.

The second program, the undergraduate recital, brought to the front real merit in the performance of some of those members of the music department who are not yet ready for graduation in that department. The program was exceptionally well arranged, combining a good variety of different type musical numbers. The numbers for six and seven pianos were especially noteworthy; the duet by Glover Leitch and Boyce Jarman was also very fine. All who appeared on the program presented their numbers very capably.

The two programs were well received by reasonably large audiences.

Athenian Mid-Winter To Be Given Thursday

Wilde Play Promises Interest To Audience

Athenian will produce its mid-winter play, "The Importance of Being Earnest", on March first. The cast is as follows:

John Worthing, J. P.---Richard Orr
Algernon Moncrieff--- Herr Wissler
Rev. Canon Chasuble, D. D--------
Willis Garrett
Merriman ------- Clifford Williams
Lane ---------- LeRoy Obert
Lady Bracknell ---Cecelia Conover
Hon. Gwendoline Fairfax ---------
Lois Brown
Cecily Cardew -------- Helen Rusk
Miss Prism --------- Ruth Clopton

"The Importance of Being Earnest"", says Mr. Cloelingh, Secretary Treasurer of Theta Alpha Phi, "is the only perfect comedy ever written."

The play, written by Oscar Wilde has an English setting and was first produced in 1895. A few years ago, it was revived in London and made an outstanding success on the stage. It has been said to be "a masterpiece of brilliant comedy." particularly commendable for its clever lines.

Randolph Shields, stage manager for the play, is assisted by Phil Cory. The play is under the direction of Mrs. West.

Folks used to be willing to wait patiently for a slow-moving stage coach, but now they kick like the dickens if they miss one revolution of a revolving door.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

Dr. Stevenson will speak on "Our Open Doors" at the regular chapel service on February 28. The anthem by the choir will be "O Death, Where Is Thy Sting", from "The Resurrection and the Life", by Wilson.

Initiation Of Dramatic Society Goes Forward

Pledges Put Through Many Amusing Stunts

Theta Alpha Phi is initiating an unusually lange number of novices this year. The pledges, who have been undergoing a process of initiation this week, are Lorena Mae Dunlap, Maria Wynn, Frances Massey, Veta Mae Stevens, Lucille Swafford, Glover Leitch and Earnest Lowe. This constitutes the largest group ever initiated at one time by the Maryville chapter.

Jean Campbell, an alumni Alpha Phi, is entertaining the society and its neophytes at her apartment on Monday, February twenty-sixth. Formal initiation will be held at that time. The informal initiation took place on the campus Thursday afternoon. Every new member was assigned a project each day. These projects included nonsense stunts, and also practical work which will be useful to any one in Dramatic work.

The stunts included such activities as an exact count of the trees on the campus, a journey from the Book Store to Pearsons by successive standing broad-jumps, and a thorough cleaning of the expression department. More erudite requirements were an inclusive history of drama, and a classification and tabultaion, accordingto century, of the costumes in the expression department wardrobe.

The Student Council is sponsoring a formal dinner for the entire student body, to be given Wednesday evening, February 28 from 6 to 7 o'clock in Pearson Hall.

The program, under the direction of the Social committee, will consist of music by the Alpha Sigma Orchestra and the Vagabond Quartet. This dinner is to take the place of an "As You Like It" this month.

Federal Emergency Agency Aids College Students Financially

Work To Be Provided For Ten Percent of Student Body

Under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the State Emergency Relief Administrator of Tennessee, a new appropriation has been granted which will aid a number of college students in meeting their financial problems during the rest of the semester. The appropriation is an outgrowth of the urgent request of the Association of American Colleges. An institution applying for a share in the appropriation must be of college or university character. The application may be for ten percent of the school enrollment, averaging fifteen dollars to the student. Each college in Tennessee making application does so through the Commissioner of Education, who makes his recommendation through the State Relief Administrator who in turn makes his recommendation to the Federal Relief Board which provides the money.

The types of work will include clerical, research, library, work on buildings and grounds, work in the dormitories, and work in the dining hall. All jobs must be in addition to those already provided but there is a limit placed on the amount of time that each can work in a week and upon the amount of money each can earn. No one may draw more than twenty dollars a month, and no one working the full month can draw less than ten dollars.

The students are to be selected on a basis of character, ability to do college work, and financial need regarding which the government regulations say that the student's financial conditions must be such that he could not remain in college without some such aid. The divisions of the funds will be equitable between men and women; twenty five percent to be earned by students who were not in school last January.

The president of the institution must make a report of the use of the appropriation to the administration boards each month, but the government gives the college full authority in determining the projects and selecting the students who work. Only those students who, in the opinion of the supervisors, are willing and efficient will be kept at work.

SUNDAY VESPERS

Dr. Stevenson's theme for the vesper service on the evening of February 25 will be "A Supreme Necessity". The choir will sing, "Christ, Beneath Thy Cross," by Stair.

Senior Celebration Honors Washington

Enjoyable Entertainment Featured At Open Party

The George Washington celebration, sponsored by the Senior Class in Bartlett Hall on Thursday evening, was very well attended.

The evening's entertainment consisted of proms and a hilarious program with Charles Beale as master of ceremonies. "February 22 in Silver Chisel" was the title of the program, which was given by the pupils in the school at Silver Chisel in honor of Washington. Earle Crawford, acting as principal of the school, introduced the county supervisor and candidate for the Senate (Madison Byar) as the speaker for the occasion. Following his address on the relative merits of Washington and himself, the orator from the 7th grade, "Red" Kent, gave an oration on the father of his country. Ruth Clopton gave a character reading and Harry Walrond, from the 8th grade, spoke on Washington.

Dan McConnell at the piano furnished several minutes of amusement following which Sidney Portrum read a collection of verse. Cecilia Conover played the part of the teacher. Others who contributed to the fun were the trio, Mimi Baez, Leone Ann Brown, and Lucille Swafford, and a chorus composed of Marie Bailey, Frances Biddle, Mary Elizabeth Harrison, and Peggy Parnell. The Alpha Sigma Orchestra played during the proms.

Both the gym and the auditorium were festooned with appropriately colored streamers. The decorations were the work of John Eyster and his helpers.

The refreshment committee, headed by Ruth Farlee, served the guests cherry pie at the conclusion of the program.

Girl's Debate Team Wins Critic Decision

Howie and Brown Show Ability At Good Quality Debating

Maryville met Teachers College yesterday afternoon in a dual debate. A Maryville affirmative team Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn, journeyed to Johnson City, while Teachers affirmative team came here. Those who debated here were: for Teachers College, Almeda Converse and Evangeline Walker, and for Maryville, Mary Gladys Brown and Roberta Howie. The question was the varsity one, Resolved: that the powers of the president of the United States be substantially increased as a settled policy.

In upholding the affirmative side of the question the Teacher's debaters showed weaknesses in our present system of government and showed how a permanent increase in presidential power would remove these weaknesses. The negative team built its case by showing that neither political nor economic reasons justified the proposed change.

The critic judge, Mr. Barr Miller of Knoxville College, gave the decision to the Maryville, negative team, basing his decision on a consideration of the arguments, both constructive and rebuttal, on the composition of speeches, both language and content, and on the delivery. One of his criticisms was concerned with the definition, as the teams gave different definitions. Mr. Miller felt that the affirmative definition was too vague and general, while that of the negative was specific and well substantiated by common knowledge. Accordingly he judged the debate largely on the negative's restatement of the question. His decision was arrived at, too, by the way the negative insisted that a potential temporary increase in presidential power was adequate.

Inter-Racial Meeting Is Held At Knoxville

Y.M.C.A. Sends Representative From Here

The Maryville College YMCA was represented by Warren Warman, president of the organization, at the Tennessee State Convention held yesterday at the University of Tennessee.

The convention, which lasted all day, consisted of a series of interesting lectures, and discussions by representatives from Vanderbilt and Tennesssee Universities. After the business session, the convention came to a close with a banquet at which a very interesting program was given.

At the same time, and holding over a little longer, the Interracial Commission convened. Many of the members of the commission were able to attend all sessions of both conventions. YMCA representatives were invited to stay at the Knoxville College for these programs also.

Howard Kester, southern secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and Celestine Smith, one of the national student secretaries of the YWCA figured as leaders. The theme, which was "Student Responsibility in a Changing World", proved a beneficial as well as interesting one.

A man recently crossed Broadway, New York, by walking a rope stretched from the top of one tall building to another—the coward.

CURSORY CATCHES (Caught in Chapel)—U. U.

With due respect to The Observer, the Cursory Catcher takes this opportunity to perfunctorily present some panoramic pictures penned in a pensive mood from the vantage point of a peerless platform.

Of course the vast assembly of bright-looking young men and women should and does evoke admiration on the part of the beholder, but the several Catches usually evoke a feeling other than admiration,—don't ask what!

One of the first of our Cursory Catches is Byar. The names of Beale and Morpheus are synonomous but after seeing Madison's interpretation of "I wonder how I look when I'm asleep" we've decided to class him with Charlie—, with due apologies. In that same section of seniors (not sinners) we can't miss Kirchner's dark jaw, or Orr's blank gaze, nor Lampe's languidness.

The opposite section is more intelligent looking, perhaps because more of the girls are wide awake by chapel time. The earnestness of Massey and Lightfoot ought to be mentioned. The reason, however, can easily be discovered. A faculty member sits behind them. Aesop's coat and Miss Heron's hat are like bright spots on a crazy quilt. One head, about the beginning of the junior section, C, looking up like a landmark, generally blocks all view beyond that point. Dr. Shine's tousled top can hardly be seen away back in the freshman rows.

A more conscientious effort to make use of spare time is seen on the part of the girls, especially in—no, we'd better not say in what section. The Observer, excuse me, the C.C. suggests that lounging chairs be provided for several front rows of D section. The occupants would be able to sprawl better and with more aesthetic grace than in the hard seats provided for erect posture.

Perhaps you wonder what other cursory catches we get of the audience. We can't catch a glimpse of their feet. We can't see their clothes. We can't see their figures. But we can see their faces! We can see if they are clean—shaven or painted. We can see if they sing, with a big mouth or a little mouth, if they sing at all. We can see if they look glad or sad, or sleepy, and if you must know, dumb! Yes, we can see lots of things.

Perhaps you wonder what cursory catches we get of the speakers. We can't catch a glimpse of their faces. We can't see if their eyes blink. We can't see if their eyebrows wiggle. But we can see their pants! We can see if they are baggy at the knees. We can see if they are neatly pressed. We can see if their knees shake. We can see if they rock on their heels. We can see if their hands wiggle or clasp and unclasp. Yes, we can see lots of things!

And if the Inky Raser doesn't Ketch up with Speedy, the Cursory Catcher might come back and tell you another chapel-time story.

There appeared in this column, some weeks ago, statements concerning the lack of enthusiasm at the basketball games. We have arrived now at the debate season, and it seems pertinent to say a few words concerning attendance, or rather lack of it, at those inter-collegiate debates which are scheduled on our own campus.

Attendance at evening debates is not so noticeably small as that at the afternoon debates which suffer considerably from the point of view of having a crowded audience. Perhaps the fact that there is a larger gamut of activities from which to select in afternoons accounts for it. Whatever the cause, however, we should be willing to take cognizance of the fact that debaters spend long hours preparing to uphold their college, and, while their activities may not seem to offer as much excitement as certain sports, still they deserve our recognition and support as surely as any contestants we have in intercollegiate affairs.

We would suggest, therefore, a cooperation of students with debaters, which might truly be said to be "hearty cooperation."

The tables were turned on two Lenoir Rhyne boys. During a basketball game in a neighboring college they met two very pretty girls, and their conversation led to the exchange of addresses. After the boys had promptly written asking for dates, a classmate informed them that they had been fooled. The girls, instead of giving their correct names had substituted those of the president of the college and the dean of women. Consequently, one has a date with the president and the other has an engagement with the dean of women.

The arrival of Heartly "Hunk" Anderson, N. C. State College's new football coach, was the occasion of one of the biggest celebrations ever accorded a coach. Anderson was coach of the Notre Dame team last season, so N. C. State has reason to expect a very successful grid team.

GIVE YOUR HEART TO THE HAWKS by Robinson Jeffers. New York. Random House. 1933. $2.50

In this latest book by the poet, Robinson Jeffers, is the opportunity to become acquainted with the part of California concerning which we hear little except in terms of enormous redwoods. Jeffers pictures the country nearest the northern coast line in its incessant, sheer ruggedness, which reflects itself not only through linguistic photography, but as well, through the typical (we are led to believe) characters, who are its products.

The action is swift and significant in the first of the book after which the central story is in a process of dragging for the sake of better character studies and a slight overindulgence in abnormal psychology that, while one feels its unwholesome presence, leads the willing reader on to a tragic, but very beautiful ending.

The story begins with a drunken party on the rough California coast. A great deal of foolishness and typical horseplay are indulged in as the more indulgent individuals continue to drink, and after a time lose power of social restraint, the result of which is adultery. This brings about the murder of a man by his own brother after which the murderer's guilty wife begins a long hopeless struggle to save her husband not only from the law, but from moral disintegration.

The chief interest from this point on is the weakened man trying to give up to the law as his wife suppresses all such efforts. Her advice is to "give your heart to the hawks" rather than to submit to the powers of man who take not only the body, but take a defeated spirit. The romantic idea is to die in the spaces; to die on the open earth, with the hawks as the keepers of secrets never to be told.

The wife's interest detracts the man from his morbid thoughts and his reaction is steadily against her advice. She is always around, it seems. . . . always protecting, looking after him. He speaks to her, showing his disgust of her presence:

If you'd take your red hair and spindly face
Out of my lamplight, I'd be alone; it's like a burst blood vessel

In the eye of thought.

The end can be but despair as the two struggle on with experiences which only enhance their hopelessness. There is the feeling of overhanging, cruel fate always ready to make its last move to squelch.

The story is more cruel than true. It deals with the horrors of lost lives that must live on until peace is felt in death. After death there is no hope left, however. There is no bright future in the lives of those who remain. Death merely accomplishes its own selfish purposes.

Collegiate Swaps

We were very sorry to hear of the death of Dean Moxley Arnold, Freshman Dean at Duke University.

We understand that some of the CWA workers, delving around and renovating the walls of rooms at the University of South Carolina have brought to light names, poetry, and words of wisdom written and covered up as far back as 1858. After all the calcimine had been scraped off the walls of one room, the inscription, "Stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage", was found. We wonder what they'll find when they scrape the paper off our walls a hundred years from now.

The editor of Lenoir Rhyne's paper must have been reading the same article that we were. He writes, "Though 'stone walls do not a prison make, nor iron bars a cage,' they still make trifling obstacles to liberty." By the way, if you want to read a lot of jokes, Lenoir Rhyne's paper is the one to go to.

—:—

We are sorry that the students at the University of Kentucky had to stand in a long line while waiting to register for the new semester. WE are also sorry that their feet became very cold. If we get time, we'll knit them some wool socks to keep their feet warm the next time that they register.

—:—

The Duke Chronicle contains an article concerning the concert given by the operatic star, Madame Jeritza, last week. Her voice was described as being "bell-like in quality" and "clear as a crystal".

Guess that we all use trite expressions now and then.

An article in a newspaper edited by the Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tennessee states that the university needs publicity. After thinking the matter over very carefully, we decided to give them some of our precious space for that purpose. L M U also wants a football team; we hope that they get it.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

She peered intently into the microscope. Her eyes, and only her eyes, betrayed the wonder, the surprise, the excitement she felt. Hers was the emotion that Columbus experienced when he looked upon the New World; that Benjamin Franklin felt when he became aware of the tingle of electricity in his hand as he performed his famous kite experiment in a thunder storm; that Herschel encountered when he first saw the planet, Uranus. Her sensations were, in short, those of a discoverer. There was something new, something strange, something not like anything she had ever seen before, under her microscope. Like a true scientist she investigated, and investigation showed the new discovery to be—nothing more interesting than a label on a prepared slide for the microscope. That is a story her friends like to tell about our Superior Scottie, Viola Lightfoot.

We suppose there must be some truth in it, at least some foundation for truth in it, for Viola likes to tinker with microscopes, and bugs, and frogs, and other things connected with the study of biology and associated "ologies." But she is not a mere tinkerer; she can tell you the whys and wherefores of them, if her grades are any proof of that fact. A's with Viola are no more extraordinary than a rainy day in Maryville.

On the other hand, Viola, is not purely scientific in her interests. She is an English major, and a very successful one, too, we are told. This year and last, she has been a member of the Writers' Workshop. She has been active in the work of the Y. W. C. A. When she was a Junior, she served as a Nu Gamma leader. She has been a faithful Bainonian since she came here. At present she is secretary of the society.

For four years Viola has been a very capable and almost indispensable assistant to Miss Anna J. Jones in the office of the registrar. In addition to that work, she assisted Dr. Samuel T. Wilson in the preparation of his recent book, "Isaac Anderson Memorial".

With the exception of a very small amount of assistance, she has been supported entirely by her own efforts during her college days. She will graduate with Cum Laude honors, a Scottie whose superiority is best known and appreciated and disclosed by those persons who have had long acquaintance with her, and have come to know the very real and lasting worth of her character.

Y. W. Elects Officers For The Coming Year

The regular election of officers for the YWCA was held Thursday in the usual fashion of secret balloting. The new officers will be installed the second Sunday in March. Those elected are:

President—Dorothy Nethery
Vice President—Violet Webb
Secretary—Fern Metzger
Treasurer—Katherine Orr
Nu Gamma Leader—Tess Frey

At the meeting on Sunday afternoon, Miss Clemmie Henry will explain to the organization the presentation of the books and bookcase to the group. Members of the Y W will outline the regulations concerning the use of the new books as well as discuss some of the books themselves.

SCOT WRESTLERS MEET VANDERBILT TONIGHT

Sport Talk

BY

BEN DE LOZIER

Just what is this college wrestling which is playing such a prominent role in Maryville sport circles?

We remember a few years ago when scarcely a word was mentioned about college wrestling, all talk being confined to professional wrestling. But look at it today. A few simple rule changes have converted it from a slow, uninteresting game into a spectacular, exciting show. And still the mat game keeps growing tremendously in popularity. Colleges everywhere are reporting increased interest in the wrestling game which bids to shove other minor sports into the background.

Consider the case here at Maryville, for example, if you will. Have you noticed the way fans have taken to the game? There has not been a meet yet that has failed to pack the bleachers to capacity. The fans seem to like it, too, for there is plenty in the way of entertainment. You haven't noticed anyone having a difficult time finding a seat at the basketball games. You are lucky to find standing room at the wrestling matches.

—S—

Speaking of wrestling, wouldn't it be a fine thing if every school in the Smoky Mountain Conference should turn out a mat team, competing with other members of the loop. Besides providing new competition, wrestling would tend to bind the loop closer together as well as offering many evenings of wholesome entertainment

Another thing we would like to see is the Scot wrestlers meeting V. P. I., Washington and Lee, University of Maryland and others in that section next year. These schools have been turning out some of the best teams in that part of the country, Maryville's record for the past few years being nothing to scoff at, either. We believe that the Scot matmen could stack up favorably with any of them, thus giving the local lads the recognition they deserve.

—S—

Followers of this page will be interested to know that Cecil Stone, formerly a student at Maryville College, is to be given charge of the Carson-Newman baseball team when it comes out for the season within the next month. Stone was a big cog in the Maryville machine, batting around .400 for the whole season, and being probably one of the heaviest hitters on the team.

SCOTTIES TOO MUCH FOR U. T. MATMEN

Last Saturday night at Maryville, the Maryville wrestlers defeated the University of Tennessee matmen for the second straight time. The Scotties captured every match but the heavyweight in winning out by a 33 to 3 score.

Summary:

118 pounds—Ridder (M) won over Dean, fall, 1:44

126 pounds—Battiglia (M) won over Babb, fall, 2:27

135 pounds—Kipp (M) won over Yates, fall, 2:50

145 pounds—Allen (M) won over Householder, fall, 9:57

155 pounds—Dean (M) won over Matthews, fall, 4:53

165 pounds—Byar (M) won over Bond, technical fall, 3:10

175 pounds—Millsaps (M) won over Bourkard, time advantage, 5:22

Heavyweight—Crawford (T) won over Gamble, time advantage, 1:24

Scot Five Wins Two On Road

Appalachian Teachers Defeat Highlanders

Maryville College basketeers, off for a four day road trip, have chalked up two wins as against one defeat.

Wednesday night the Scotties completely routed the East Tennessee Teachers by a 52-31 count. Hannah with 18 points, and Allen with 10 led for Maryville.

On the following night the Scots defeated the Milligan College Buffaloes' first conference loss of the season.

Last night the Highlanders suffered a set-back at the hands of Appalachian Teacherss in a conference game, the score being 36-31.

As things now stand the Scots must win the rest of their games, and East Tennessee Teachers must whip Milligan, in order to throw the conference race into a two-way tie.

Tonight the Scot cage machine is scheduled to meet Emory and Henry to bring the road trip to an end. In their first meeting the Highlanders were trimmed by Mr. Roberts and Co., who are expected to take tonight's contest in easy fashion.

VOLLEY BALL TEAMS FORMED LAST WEEK

The two girl's volley ball teams were organized last Tuesday. The freshman-sophomore girls elected Hyde as captain, and Jackson as manager. The junior-senior girls chose Cassel for captain and Shelley for manager.

Practice is under way and all girls participating in the Point System are urged to come out and practice. The volley ball tournament will be held sometime in March.

Speeding Plans For Water Frolic

Polo Game Features Carnival To Be Held March Third

Positively the first thing of its kind to appear on the Maryville Campus, or throughout the village itself, the water carnival, which carries its own King Neptune and his train of water sprites, will present a wide range of foamy sports, fresh from the ocean playgrounds of Florida and California, when it arrives at the local pool March 3rd.

The setting will be constructed to depict an isolated colony of swimmers nestled back in a quiet cove on some far away island. It seems that these mermen have nothing to do but entertain their king, Neptune, with a wide galaxy of water games and waltzes.

It is planned by those in charge that the event will eclipse in color and scheme anything that yet has been presented on a sports card at the Hill.

Coach Fischbach has not yet released full plans for the show, but with a suggestive nod promised two or three hours of solid entertainment. Printed programs will announce who will waltz and who will be in the 'nightie' race.

Seating capacity for several hundred people will be provided. The committee on decoration has given assurance that there will not be the jostling and poor vision that usually accompanies swimming meets.

These water carnivals are fast becoming a popular sport in all the larger colleges and universities. A successful patronage of the first one will assure other visitations in the future.

Carson-Newman, Milligan Meet Scot Cagesters Next

When the Maryville basketball cagesters return from their road trip tomorrow, local sport followers will get to witness but two more hardwood tilts ere the season is brought to a close next week. Both games will be played on the home court and will be with conference opponents.

Tuesday night the Scotties will attempt to make it two in a row over their ancient rivals, the Carson-Newman Eagles, who invade the local backyard. The Highlanders defeated the Eagles earlier in the season at Jefferson City by a decisive margin and hope to duplicate this feat Tuesday, thus partly atoning for that football defeat of last fall which the Eagles handed the Maryville eleven.

Wednesday night in the final game of the year the Highlander quintet will play hosts to the Milligan College Buffaloes in the second meeting of the teams. Thursday night the Scot cage crew captured a decision from the Buffaloes and will be set to make it two straight. The Milligan team has won the conference championship for the past five years and are headed for their sixth, unless the Scots win all their remaining games.

Only one member of this year's team will not be available for service next year, John Kizer completing his four years as a wearer of the Orange and Garnet. Kizer has played a great role in Maryville athletics, being instrumental in many of the Scot victories. His place will be hard to fill.

Coach Honaker's lineup for the final two games will more than likely be composed of the following: Kizer and Allen, forwards; Hannah, center, and VanHee and Crumbaugh, at guards. In reserve will be held Brittain, Peery, Pearson, Davis and Atchison, all capable of relieving the others in fine fashion.

Chess Tournament Reaches Quarter-Final Round

The chess tournament which began this week is progressing very slowly, only the first round matches being completed as this goes to press. One reason for this is the fact that a few of those who entered the tourney are basketball members who are making a road trip this week.

It is thought that the tournament will not end before the middle of next week, as the matches are taking longer to complete than was first expected. Those advancing to the quarter-finals are W. Quigley, Matthews, Fogaris, VanHee, E. Thom and H. Quigley.

An inter-class basketball tournament will probably be held the latter part of next week and the various classes have been asked to organize a team as early as possible

Highland Matmen Seeking Third State Championship

Victory Over Visitors Would Give Scotties Best Record In State; Vandy Has Veteran Outfit

In what is sexpected to be one of the hardest matches of the year the Maryville College wrestling team, state champpions for the past two seasons, will play hosts tonight in the Alumni Gym to the Vanderbilt University matmen in the last home meet of the year. The opening match is scheduled for 8:00 o'clock.

Since both teams boast exceptionally strong aggregations this season the winner of tonight's battle will have the best claim for the state wrestling championship. Maryville has come through on the long end of the score of the last five meets, winning over some of the best teams in this section of the state. The Scotties' closest battle was with Appalachian Teachers when the latter outfit held the Scots to a 16 to 14 victory last Wednesday.

Vanderbilt is bringing to Maryville one of their strongest outfits in many seasons and may prove plenty troublesome for the Scots. Last year the Vandy matmen did not meet the Highlanders, the last meeting between the teams being held in 1932 when the Scotties came through with a well-earned victory.

The visitors will present two capable performers in Noel and Pierce who wrestle in the 175 pound class and heavyweight division, respectively. If you think Mose Gamble is large just come out and take a look at Pierce. Pierce tips the scales at a mere 245 pounds but handles himself well in spite of his size. Many of the fans will remember seeing him in action two years ago.

Coach Thrower's lineup will be composed of the following: Ridder 118, Hoglan 126, Kipp 135, Boretsky 145, Dean 155, Byar 165, Millsaps 175 and Gamble, unlimited. The visiting combination will be composed of Mooney 118, Sherer 128, Peoples 138, Boswell 148, Scott 160, Noel 175 and Pierce, heavyweight. Their eighth man has not been selected. These men will have from three to five pounds weight advantage over the Scotties.

Scot Wrestlers Defeat Teachers

Local Matmen Win Last Three Matches To Cinch Meet

The Maryville College wrestling team was given its greatest scare of the year last Wednesday night at Boone, N. C., when they were barely able to defeat the Appalachian Teachers by a 16 to 14 count. Four overtime periods were necessary before the Scotties came through with their victory and the fifth win of the season.

The Highlander matmen were forced to capture the last three matches in order to win out by a scant two-point margin. With the Scotties behind by two points Gamble managed to win out over Smith, of the Teachers, by a time advantage of 1 2 seconds. It was the toughest match of the year, requiring more than three hours to complete the eight matches

Captain Steve Boretsky lost his first match in two years when he dropped a decision to McCoy by a time advantage of three minutes and six seconds. Hoglan and Byar were the only Maryville matmen to gain a fall over their opponents.

Summary:

118 pounds—Blalock (T) won over Ridder, time advantage, 5:19

126 pounds—Hoglan (M) won over Austin, fall, 13:20

135 pounds—Finley Moore (T) won over Kipp, fall, 3:20

145 pounds—McCoy (T) won over Boretsky, time advantage, 3:06

155 pounds—Frank Moore (T) won over Dean, time advantage, 3:10

165 pounds—Byar (M) won over Loy, fall, 12:40

175 pounds—Millsaps (M) won over Farthing, time advantage, 9:43

Heavyweight—Gamble (M) won over Smith, time advantage, 12 seconds

Referee—Tom Cash

SPORT TALK

What's wrong with the Highlander basketball machine? We mean this habit of letting the opposition roll up a comfortable margin during the first half of every game, only to see the Scotties display a concentrated attack in the second half to completely outclass their opponents.

We have noted that this has been the case in a majority of the recent games. It seems that the Highlanders can't warm up until they listen to a nice, quiet lecture during intermission. They then come back and play the brand of ball that is expected of them. About the only thing we can suggest is for Coach Honaker to take the lads in before game time and give them the lecture he has prepared for the half-time. Or again, they might play the second-half first.

U. T. Tankmen Lose To Scot Swimmers

Highlanders Win Thrilling Meet By 43-41 Score

The Highlander swimming team won its third victory of the season last Tuesday night when the University of Tennessee tank crew was defeated 43-41 in a close and exciting meet at the local pool.

Summary:

100-yard breast stroke—First Meek (M); second Hernes (M); third Etter (T). Time, 1:20.5

100-yard back stroke—First, Burkhalter (M); second, Rule (T); third, Ingram (M). Time 1:18

OBSERVATIONS

This is an age of pinch-hitting. While Brother DeLozier pinch-hits for us on the other page, we turn around and produce a little slap-stick for this corner, and so the world keeps on turning. Of course there is a difference between pinch-hitting and pinch-hitting de luxe, but we're still just pinch-hitting but at that we are pinch-hitting with the customary modesty, which is all the same difference when one really gets down under theh sur-face of the good old art of pinch-hitting. The point we are trying to make is that Rich Orr finally got someone to write his O's for him, since he announced last week that there need be no ideas behind it all.

All one needs to do to discover that Mr. Richard Meadows is from the south is to take a look at his calendar. It seems that the calendar makers down in Alibammy still re-vel over the fact that Mr. Abraham Lincoln was not a southerner, but a northerner after their hides, and for this reason, we conclude, they do not print February 12 in the customary red ink. But there is a flaw in this, for Mr. George Wash-ington was himself a native of Vir-ginia, the capitol of the Southern Confederacy, yet his birth date is a marked day. Mr. Meadows couldn't quite explain all this, yet he de-fended it vigorously, and even went so far as to insist that there just couldn't be anything wrong with Alabama calendar makers. Possibly this explains why the flag did not fly on that date.

One of Phil Cory's favorite sub-jects is baby clothes. In social psych class a few days ago Miss Gamble was discussing the differences be-tween a young man's and a young woman's affinity for baby clothes. The question arose to the effect that often a young man would ex-hibit the same response as his op-posite when confronted with the articles in question. Well, Mr. Cory did not exactly agree with that, but at the same time he very kind-ly agreed to submit the question to a baby clothes salesman for settle-ment. And so, salesman, here's your big chance. You probably will not sell any, but it's all in the in-terests of psychology . . all in the interests of psychology.

And that leads us around to our own little joke, which we believe is about old enough to put in the Echo. It was a dreary morning in Dr. Shine's 204a, and we were full in the throes of a night-before. The discussion of Old English dic-tion finally drifted around to the noble subject of gender, in com-parison with present English. To illustrate the point Dr. Shine asked for an example of masculine gender, and promptly the answer came, "Man". Upon his asking for the feminine gender Mr. McCalmont suggested, "Woman". Well, the stage was set. We received the next question full in the face, like a bucket of cold water. Torn between a classroom duty and the last no-trump hand at bridge the night before, we meekly announced that a good example of neuter gender would be, in all probability, "child"; but we got no further. We weakly defended the blunder on the grounds that it was only our Ger-man butting in after all, but we suspect that the Doctor knew bet-ter.

We wonder how many peepul still believe that the "little dogie" of the immortal "Last Roundup" is something with a leg in each corn-er, a tail at one end, and a little 'woof', 'woof' at the other. We were sucker enough to believe that up to the very last minute, until we read in a 'Believe It or Not' column that the little dogie is a mother-less calf. As we had pictured the scene, the cowboy rides along on his pony singing to the little 'dog(g)ie' beside him. The story further states that the immortality to which the little dogie has been raised is entirely uncalled for, since the poor animal is the scourge of the cowboy world. That story is like the one about cowboy dress; nobody likes to think of a cowboy wearing bib overalls.

In case the 'Sports Briefs' Writer fails to mention it, we just want to say in passing that this wrestling team under the tutelage of Coach Bob Thrower is the greatest colle-giate team perhaps in the south to-day. Not only has it not lost a meet in the past three years, but it has beaten teams who have beaten bigger teams, who have beaten. . well, anyway they took the Appala-chian Teachers over the cinders last week, and the Teachers beat Duke, so that makes them better than anything Duke has beaten, and so on. There is a thrilling story to that meet with the Teachers. They had been schooled to fight for time advantages, since they could not hope to throw enough men to win. They would wiggle the Scotties over to the edge of the mat, and if a Scot tried to wing the opponent he would get off the mat, and so go back to center again. Well, at the end of the fifth match the Scotties were trailing, 14-5. That meant that they must win every match. Hoglan had won on a fall, Millsaps won on a time advantage, and with the coming of the last match the Scot-ties still trailed 14-13. Big Moss Gamble went in the ring, and came through with one of his best fights of the year to win on a time ad-vantage. That's the kind of stuff that Thrower's men are made of; behind, perhaps, but never licked.

You know how an experienced fisher likes to fish in old fishing clothes. It seems that they kind of become a part of him, not necessar-ily growing to him, but yet recog-nized as his in some sense or an-other. And so it is when we see Kid Boston's green towel bobbing up and down across the green of the campus. Kid Boston, who is Kid Lockerby of the Chemistry and Chemistry departments de luxe in a la Heiro, is probably aware that his green towel has left most of its color in some wash-tub, and that it has been stretched beyond the pro-portions of a human figure, but that doesn't bother the kid, because, well, he's from Boston where they do funny things such as wear tow-els, and the like. Maybe some people would call The Kid's towel a sweat-er, but VanHee calls it a towel, and we. . well, we just smile

The celebrated Lyndell Bond was braving the terrors of earth worm dissection in Biology lab. Mr. Rob-ert Godfrey was the assistant who had just given Miss Bond a worm much too long for the pan, and so was beset with pleas for another, and shorter, earthworm. After he had produced the shorter worm, he stood there musing for a moment, and then asked a question.

"Have you named your worm yet?" asked Bob, jokingly, for each worm had to be tagged for identifi-cation.

"Yes, I've named the worm," she said in her best cuddly-wuddly southern drawl.

"Uh, what did you name the worm," queried the assistant.

"Uh, I named him 'Bob'," came the innocent answer.

Sermonette

WINDOWS OF THE HEART

From the windows of our heart radiates the light that is within us. It is this light which is indicative of spiritual well-being. If it is bright all is well, if it burns low we need a closer communion with God. Jesus often speaks of the light. "I am the light of the world", He said. His life was the light by which life's pathway is illuminated. When Jesus and His disciples gath-ered in that little upper room to commune together for the last time it seemed, at least to the disciples, that there was not much light. Yet from the windows of that little room a ligh t shone out that will illuminate the hearts of men for-ever.

The first window looks to the east, to the rising sun. From here the promise of victory comes. It is the winodw of faith. "Believe", said Jesus, and in that single word he gave himself a place which has stood indisputable—a place which can never be changed. In order to find God, the God that is to life what the sun is to the world, it is necessary to believe in a revelation declared by Jesus. It was the light from this window of faith that brought comfort and cheer to count-less Christians as they prayed in moments of despair. It is the light from this window that has brought a new life to uncounted numbers in uncounted trying situations. But if this window is permitted to be darkened the heart will be afraid.

The second window is that of forgiveness. It looks to the south where the winds are soft and low. It is this window that is too often darkened by unwillingness to for-give a brother's failing. The disci-ples had quarreled among them-selves but when they gathered at the Master's feet all was well. It is the light from this window that shines brightest in the times of crisis; at times when men are drawn together for a common good. Old grievances are forgotten. In this tempestuous life there is much that needs forgiving.

The third window looks to the mountains of the north. This is the window of fidelity. Not always are the paths of service smooth. Seldom are they the smooth, well marked trails of the level places. Rather, they are across the steepest and most rugged mountains. Across these snow clad ranges those of old, like we, were forced to travel in order to follow the Lord to vic-tory. It is by this way that the Kingdom is gained.

The fourth looks to the garden where the grapes are maturing. It is the window of fruitfulness. Dry, withered branches are not beautiful. Their unsightliness spoil the beauty of the garden. If the heart is to know the peace of God it must find some satisfaction in its service. The peace which results from fruitfulness recompenses the effort involved in trying to make the heart a garden.

The fifth is a window in the door. Its view is down the path upon which the heavenly visitor approaches with the ever present lowship—for the Spirit of Jesus will never fail us, and where He is, there is peace that passeth all understanding.

Y.W.C.A. RECEIVES GIFT FROM CHILHOWEE CLUB

The Chilhowee Club, a woman's literary society of Maryville, has presented the YWCA with a gift of a punch bowl and three dozen punch glasses. The club, which meets in the YWCA room the first Tuesday of each month, gave the gifts as a token of appreciation for the accommodation of the YW asso-ciation in the use of the rooms.

The Vanderbilt Alumnus, Nov-ember 1933, received in the office, in its list of class officers in the School of Medicine, shows Richard E. Strain, Maryville Class of 1931, as Vice President of the Third Year Class; and Lea Callaway, of the Class of 1932, as Secretary and Treasurer of the Second-Year Class.

Club Activities

The Law Club met Tuesday night in Professor Queener's class room. After a short business session, Mr. DeLozier, a Maryville lawyer, gave an interesting talk on the knowledge needed by students before entering a Law School.

Tuesday night the Spanish Club met in Bainonian Hall. A very in-teresting program consisted of vocal numbers by Lillian Leland, accom-panied by Katherine Orr, and a saxophone solo by Norman Beamer accompanied at the piano by Bill Frisch.

FRENCH CLUB

On Wednesday the French Club met. The new officers were in charge, Phyllis Dexter presiding. Talks were given on the sports of France by Elizabeth Reimer, Elean-or Denslow, Dorothy Nethery, and Mildred Schoeller. The entire group joined in playing two French games, under the direction of Mary Sloan Welsh.

BAINONIAN AND THETA HAVE JOINT MEETING

The Bainonian Society was the guest of the Theta Sisters Saturday night in Theta Hall. The societies were entertained by a group of children under the direction of Gar-net Manges. They entertained with songs, readings, piano solos, and acrobatic stunts. The last feature of the program was the Rhythm Or-chestra. They played several num-bers and closed with their favorite selection, "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf."

In the British Museum in London one can see 75 drafts of Thomas Gray's poem, "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard". Gray didn't like the first way he wrote it nor the second nor the third. He wasn't satisfied till he scribbled it over and over, 75 times.

Women Meet Milligan, Tusculum Debaters

Milligan-Tusculum Debate Held Here

Professor Queener's girl debate team met Tusculum and Milligan in a triangular meet Friday night, losing to Tusculum, and winning from Miligan. Those debating were Florence Hyde and Ercelle Hunter with Milligan, and Katherine Smith and Eleanor Pflanze with Tusculum. The debate here, was won by the Milligan affirmative team in a two-to-one decision. The audience was one of the largest that has attended any of the debates here this season.

The question was the same as that used for the men's debates this year, pertaining to the increase of powers granted to the President. The affirmative opened its argument by naming the proposed powers to be granted; namely, the control of tariff, the control of currency, and the right of the executive department to initiate legislation. They proceeded in organized argument to show the advantages of the assumption of these powers by the President. The negative team from Tusculum responded with speeches which left the decision depending upon the rebuttal.

The most unusual feature of the debate, and the point which clinched the debate, was the affirmative rebuttal. Both speakers, Miss Sunny Williams and Miss Frances Burk, followed up their well-prepared constructive speeches with rebuttals which left no doubt as to the outcome of the debate.

Professor Griffitts presided. The judges were Dr. Knapp, Professor Kiger, and Professor Howell.

Bainonian Play Will Be Presented Friday

The Bainonian Literary Society will present its mid-winter play, "The Torch-Bearers", on Friday evening, March h9th under the direction of Mrs. West.

This extraordinary clever satire on dramatics, by George Kelly, is one of the most popular of recent comedies. Anyone who has ever been in an amateur production cannot fail to be infected with the fun of the comedy, especially during the scene representing back stage happenings during the performance of an amateur play.

Mr. Kelly, having written, directed and played in a dozen or more one-act comedies and dramas, realized that amateur actors and little theatre directors were always looking for some kind of effective short plays. With this idea in mind, and within the realization that satire would be an effective medium for the expression of such an idea, Mr. Kelly set out to write a play, and achieved remarkable success.

It is unusual inasmuch as all rules for play writing are broken.

Meisle To Appear On Return Engagement

Famous Contralto To Give Concert Here on March 16

Kathryn Meisle will be heard here on Friday, March 16 in the third and last of this year's Artists' Series and Miss Meisle's voice has been pronounced by critics "One of the great contralto voices of the present" was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and when she is not on tour giving concerts or singing in opera, lives there.

On October, 1921 she made her debut as a professional singer as soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. A Chicago recital followed and the remarkable notices which she received from the critics brought many more engagements with subsequent success.

A great Festival favorite, Kathryn Meisle has had the distinction of being thrice engaged for the Ann Arbor Festival. She has also sung at many other Festivals throughout the country.

Her appearance in New York last month elicited this favorable comment in the "Musical American": "In this, her first recital in New York, although she has sung from coast to coast in concert and in opera in several cities here and abroad, Miss Meisle covered herself with glory. A large audience greeted her and applauded her to the echo, an audience which contained celebrities of the music and other art worlds.

"The singer's ingratiating stage presence won her audience from the start. But it was her distinguished artistic achievement; her mastery of her program, her vocal equipment, most impressive in the lower and middle voice, that made her recital so definitely a success. Miss Meisle's enunciation is clarity itself."

This is Miss Meisle's second appearance on the Maryville platform. Her first recital here, in the spring of 1933 was very enthusiastically received.

Theta Alpha Phi was entertained at the apartment of Jean Campbell, an alumni Alpha Phi, on Monday night, February twenty-sixth. At this time the formal initiation of the new members took place. The initiations which were, of course, secret, were conducted by Michael Testa and Professor Harry Gauding. The new members of the Dramatic Society are Lorena Mae Dunlap, Maria Wynn, Frances Massey, Veta Mae Stevens, Lucille Swafford, Glover Leitch, and Ernest Lowe.

After the business had been completed, the new and old members enjoyed an informal social hour together.

Men Debaters Win Two Decisions This Week

Teams Defeat Johnson City And Tusculum

The Maryville debating team met Tusculum and State Teacher's College in a triangular meet Tuesdsay night. The Maryville affirmative team, composed of James Saint and James Badgett, met the Tusculum negative team at Johnson City, where they won a decision. The Maryville negative team, James Smith and Clifford Morgan, also obtained a decision over the Teachers' affirmative at Tusculum. These two decisions put the present Maryville score at ten victories, no losses.

The part of the debate which took place here was between the Tusculum affirmative and the Teacher's negative. There was fairly good attendance, which spoke well for the defeated Tusculum team, who had debated Friar and Christie here before. Dr. Rodgers presided, while Archibald Peiper was the timekeeper. The judges were Dr. Hunter, Professor Smith, Professor Davis, Professor Kiger, and Dr. Knapp. They rendered an unanimous decision to the negative team.

The highlight of the debate was perhaps the rebuttal of the second negative speaker, Mr. Beverly Burbage. After his partner, Mr. David Broyles, had supported him rather weakly in both constructive speech and rebuttal, he made a speech in rebuttal which turned the tables and clinched the argument for the negative. The style of both the affirmative speakers, Mr. Arthur Litt, and Mr. Charles Perrine, was very pleasing, although a good many of the audience seemed to consider him a bit too oratorical for a good debater.

Altogether, it provided an hour of good debating which never lagged. Both sides were unusually well prepared in both constructve speech and rebuttal material. This made for a good debate, which was interesting as well as instructive.

The eager anticipation of Seniors who ordered rings has at last come to an end. The rings which have arrived in installments, over a period of a week or more, have all been distributed, and may be seen on the fingers of many Seniors.

The rings are particularly pretty this year, having less ornamentation about the stone than in former years. The committee, headed by Jess Willis, has been able through diligent work, to secure a lower price for this year's rings, also. At present a second order is being taken. Seniors who still wish a ring should avail themselves of this last opportunity.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

Dr. Stevenson's topic for the chapel service on March 7 will be "Altruism". The choir will sing "Bless the Lord", a Russian composition by Ippoli-toff-Ivanoff.

F. E. R. A. Makes Many Improvements Possible

Campus Appearance Benefits By Number of People Working.

Under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the Emergency Relief Administration of Tennessee it has been possible to give work to many of the students who are in financial need. In accordance with this new project many plans have been formulated for the improvement of the campus.

At present a group of boys are grading the ground for a golf course. This course will extend from Carnegie Hall, behind the chapel, and around to the president's home. Great progress has been made on this project in the last week.

Many Pine trees in the college woods are being cut down. The lumber from these trees will be used for making a barn. Also the old building behind Carnegie Hall, which does not add to the beauty of the campus, is being torn down.

A crew of boys are cleaning the walls of Thaw, Science, and Anderson. The basement of Anderson is also being cleaned out, and a great deal of old worthless lumber has been disposed of.

A large group of girls, with dust rags, mops, and furniture polish, have been engaged in cleaning the books and shelves in the library, polishing all furniture in classrooms, cleaning the seats in the chapel, and washing woodwork in the halls of the dormitories.

Girls with typing ability are addressing envelopes for letters to be sent to the high school graduating classes of numerous states in this vicinity. Other girls are filing in the office.

Athenians Present Comedy Successfully

Though playing to a much smaller house than they deserved, the Athenian cast achieved remarkable success with the play "The Importance of Being Earnest", on the evening of March 1. The play, with its clever comedy, was the type to appeal to a college audience, as was indicated by the hearty laughter and enthusiastic applause.

The production went off very smoothly, scenery changes being effected rapidly and comparatively quietly, and the cast displaying an easy familiarity with their lines.

Creditable performances were given by all members of the cast. Dick Orr gave an excellent portrayal of a temperamental Englishman; Herr Wissler was very amusing as the easy going friend.

Particularly funny were the parts taken by Ruth Clopton and Willis Garrett, whose dialogue and antics gave rise to much laughter. The butlers, also, were to be commended on maintaining the characteristic poker face of the English butler,

FEATURE—Bernice Gaines

Having been assigned to the interviewing of prominent members of the faculty and student body on subjects of interest, the Cub Reporter clad himself in an air of knowledge, a feeling of inferiority, and an apologetically limpid blue serge suit, and set out with pencil, notebook, and the germ of an idea. In as short a time as it takes us to get to chapel he had formulated his question and accosted the nearest senior.

"What indefatigable element have you observed in the recent proclivity toward antemormonic tendencies?" he asked with an optimistic air.

"Hah?" The senior peered over his eyeglasses.

"What indefatigable element have you observed in the recent proclivity toward antemormonic tendencies?" The optismistic air vanished.

"Oh, sure!" This came confidently from the senior.

"Yes, but what?"

"Oh, just what," replied the reporter, industriously scrawling in his notebooks the answers received. "Thanks."

"Don't mention it." This came from a distance as the deity moved on.

Happily unaware of his own deficiencies and those of the subject of the recent interview, the cub reporter progressed to the class room of the most learned and most accommodating professor. He found the worthy man resting peacefully with feet upon desk, handkerchief upon eyes, and fly upon nose.

"Professor Whatasnorer! I say—"

There ensued a sound comparable to the traditional "Ugh" of an American Indian, and yet related in some degree to the bark of a dog.

"I say, sir! What indefatigable element have you observed in the recent proclivity toward antemormonic tendencies?"

"Oh, yes! Why, of course! The

We feel that our college has been very fortunate in being included in the number of schools receiving funds from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration and the cooperating state administration. It is gratifying to know that so many of the members of our student body will be able to remain in school as a result of the aid which has been granted.

The gratitude of those who have been given help has been brought forcibly to our attention. We have heard very little complaint about the type of work assigned, and, with the exception of a few who seem to prize the appearance of their hands more than the advantage of completing the year's study, those who have received employment are duly thankful for the opportunity of earning a part of their expenses.

We have already seen a large number of campus improvements as a result of the work done by the students who are on the F.E.R.A. payroll. We have noticed particularly, the improvement in the appearance of the library since the books and shelves have been dusted and the chairs and tables polished. We are glad too, that the walls of Thaw are being cleaned and that the chairs in all the class rooms are being dusted. The cleaning of dishes, silverware, and chairs in the dining hall also meets our unqualified approval.

Other jobs, including the preparation of the new golf course and the establishment of the proposed museum deserve hearty commendation.

When all the present jobs have been completed, the F.E.R.A. and Miss Clemmie Henry will doubtless have found other means of helping students and improving our campus.

THE RAVEN by Marquis James Indianapolis— Bobbs-Merrill 1929

Somebody back in the dim days of literature said that a good biography was the highest type of writing, or words to that effect. Whether or not this is true, Marquis James has accomplished much in presenting to the literary world some biographical facts in a way more than interesting.

He has written at least one good biography. Reports concerning his life of Jackson place it higher than The Raven, and they are possibly true. For the style that he employs in his biography of Houston is such as to make one think of him as a prolific, as well as an interesting writer. It is an easily comprehended style, facts being presented in an interesting and orderly manner. Of the way in which he obtained his data the writer, who was born in the Cherokee Strip of Oklahoma Territory, says: "Everywhere I have gone I have talked to old people. I have not sought facts from their lips, especially. Community legends and traditions have received close attention and sometimes have been transferred, duly labeled, to the. . . pages. But these reminiscenes enjoyable for their own sake, also seemed to me to impart a sort of "feel" to the different environments which from time to time enclosed the life of my man."

That final "my man" is nicely said. While he sought his data the writer must have clung to the man he sought like a hound to the scent, and there must have grown in him a kind of attachment to his game. At least so it seems in the book where every sentence is written in a familiar but respectful manner, and where, although they are not glossed over, the many faults of Houston are presented in a sane and sympathetic light. Moreover, there is not over-exaggeration of drama, although his subject gave him much room for such a mistake.

Samuel Houston was born near Lexington, Kentucky, in 1793. He died near Huntsville, Texas, in 1864. In the years between he found time to be an acting chieftain in an Indian nation, to conduct a successful rebellion against Mexico, to be governor of one state once and of another state several times, to be president of one republic, and candidate for the presidency of another.

His boyhood should be of especial interest to residents of Maryville, having been spent near here. He was a student at Porter Academy, a predecessor in the educational field of Maryville College, and he taught school for the whole of a summer in a house on what was then John McCulloch's farm, five miles to the east.

Of the Maryville of that time the author says: "Maryville contained forty families and was. . . a place of importance. Two stage routes crossed there: one from the Carolinas to Nashville and one from Georgia to Knoxville. The horses were changed at Russell's Inn. . . . William Toole had a tan-yard on the edge of town. There were four general stores. The largest building in the town was the court-house. . . Back of the court house was the jail and a pair of stocks. Across Pistol Creek was John Craig's grist mill."

A finishing pararaph given to praise. . .One reads every word.

At De Pauw University the cornerstone of the dormitory which recently burned down was opened. Among other things found in the cornerstone was $1.90 in change consisting of an 1884 dollar, an 1884 nickel, an 1858 half dollar, an 1854 quarter, and an 1875 dime. De Pauw was probably visited by a great many coin collectors after the above discovery.

They've discovered a new insect called golf moth. It does 18 holes in a day.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

When is a Scottie not a Scottie? Our Superior Scottie, Mr. Arthur Gordon Courtenay, or better, "Red" Courtenay, is the answer to that question; he is a Canadian. Red's nationality costs him no small amount of time and energy. He feels that his country must be recognized here; and since he is its most representative representative in Maryville, heavy responsibilities fall on his shoulders. The preceding sentence is merely a protracted way of saying that Red Courtenay and the Canada Club are practically synonymous terms. Simultaneously, he holds the offices of president, vice-president, and secretary-treasurer, besides being the champion of the club in chess, pool, tennis, and swimming. Strong shoulders, those, which can carry a burden such as that; but we have never seen any indication of Red's bending under the load.

We have seen them, indeed, taking on additional responsibilities. For four years he has been a member of the choir. For four years his rumbling bass voice has been heard in the Men's Glee Club. At present he is president of that organization. In fact, Red and the other members of the Dixie Vagabond quartet make it their business to make music wherever they go. And what is more important, the people who listen to them find their music entirely likable and entertaining. The aforesaid people are inhabitants of certain dormitories which are the object of certain nocturnal serenades by the Vagabonds.

Besides his musical talents, Red has proved that he is gifted with those of an actor. He has appeared many times on the Maryville stage. Outstanding were his appearances in Bainonian's 1931-32 mid--winter, "When Knighthood Was in Flower", and in two productions of the College Players, "Within the Law", and "Berkley Square".

By a line of reasoning not altogether difficult, we have arrived at the conclusion that Red is more or less scientiscally interested in people. We came to that conclusion when we discovered that he is majoring in sociology; minoring in psychology; and delving into such matters as personality, mental measurement, and spiritual chemistry.

Red's concern for humanity, however, is more than sociological or psychological; it is sympathetic. Many a bewildered freshman in the first days of his college career has thanked the fate that put him in reach of Red Courtenay.

Red's contributions to Maryville College have not been those associated with numerous offices. If we were inclined to tell tales out of school we could name more than one influential organization on this Hill of which Red has declined the presidency. He has been content, rather, to serve in other capacities less conspicuous, but, nevertheless, important. Not the least service for which he will be remembered is the part his genial good humour and sturdy independence have had in making life on the campus interesting and pleasant.

While on the subject of sports we would like to offer something as a mere suggestion. There has been considerable discussion around the campus concerning the formation of a boxing team. It seems that quite a few are interested in trying out for boxing and we thought there might be a possibility later f adding this program to the other sports. We do not know whether it would work or not, at least there is much interest in the affair and perhaps it could be worked out.

Many of the earth's deep canyons that lie under the sea have walls thousands of feet high.

SCOT RASSLIN'S STILL DOIN' THE UP AND UP

BY BRYAN PAYNE

COACH BOB THROWER'S HIGHLAND WRESTLERS have this week finished their third consecutive undefeated season, having handed the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. grunters a severe trouncing in Knoxville Thursday night. Not only have they remained undefeated, but they have retained the state college title for as many years, commencing their championship drive when Coach Bob took over the reins in 1931. This year our state champs will lose three men by graduation, three men who have fought side by side duing those years, and whose efforts have played a large part in keeping the strong team on the victory trail. It would be useless to meander down through the tough battles and crowning victories of those three years, for they each tell the same old story, one of perseverance and reward. Instead let us here join in the general tribute to those three seniors, to those who will carry forward thhe Orange and Garnet next year, and to their great leader, Bob Thrower.

Coach Thrower

Back in the 'twenties' when Coach Bob was himself a student on the Hill, back in the years when Maryville College bowed not even to the University of Tennessee in football, and when baseball and basketball yearly found the Highlanders a top-notcher in the conference and Tennessee, he was a leader in athletics. Not only was he a leader in athletics but was also one of the most popular men on the campus. Today that is one of the traits which make him a builder of champions. Coach Thrower puts his full confidence in his men, and needless to say they respond. If such an attitude is possiblbe he is as proud of his men as they are of him. Little is more impressive than the open hand-shake he gave each of his men at the closing of the bouts in that first meet of the season with Knoxville. Coach Thrower is a sportsman, anxious as any that student booing and unfair play be eliminated from athletic contests. He is as good a loser as he is a winner. Last year when Coach Britton's U. T. cinder squad was finally cornered and forced to give the college a meet, Bob's squad lost, but only after pushing the university crew to the limit. Considering the circumstances it was a hard onoe to lose but Coach accepted it with a smile. "It's all right", he said; "we got the meet, and that's what we wanted." Coach Thrower will be back next year, building bigger and better champions than ever, and that broad, jolly grin of his will be right there behind it all.

* * * * * * *

Steve Boretsky

Captain of the squad, college state champion in the 145-pound class, a veteran athlete. . . . that's Steve for you. To see him stripped there on the mat you wonder how his medium build gives him the drive to capture the position at left halfback on the Smoky Mountain All-Conference. But on the other hand just ask his opponents, and they'll tell you that it isn't such a bewildering problem after all. When the Appalachian Teachers invaded the fold Steve was pitted against a man ten pounds his better, but those ten pounds melted away as Steve pinned his man in less than six minutes. An exponent of fair play, he is never willing to accept the good breaks, rather wishing to share them with his opponent. If you want to probe into his past successes, don't go to him about it, for you'll never be the wiser for it; sincere modesty is a big part of Steve Boretsky. His loss to the Highlanders is a heartbreaker and a hard one to fill, but the athletic history which he has made here on the Hill will be great to remember.

Madison Byar

Don't be hasty with the tears, folks, because Senior Byar's long suit is still around the corner. You thought he was good on the mat? Wait until you see him out on the cinder path. But even that thought doesn't make up for the realization that he is washed up as a Highlander Wrestler, having weathered the season without dropping a bout. Byar is the kind of man whom one feels good about knowing. Coming down from Cincinnati on the last night of vacation we got to know Byar better than we ever had before. Madison was standing there by the big Greyhound singing The Last Round-up. In an understandable way he seemed happy that it would be his last trip into the southland to finish up college days. All down through Kentucky we remembered his interpretation of that song, and we tried to visualize a track meet without Byar, a wresling meet without Byar, a Maryville without Byar. It was hard to do.

Howard Kipp

If Howard Kipp were to go into the professional wrestling game the sport would be a cleaner one for it. Although Howard has not been successful in all his bouts he has never given in without putting up the gamest kind of fight, and his teammates and opponents will tell you that he's one of the cleanest wrestlers and best sports on the squad. Howard is another one of these athletes that go in for high grades along with their exercise. The other night when the Vanderbilt wrestlers invaded the Hill, Kipp was in there anxious as the rest were to make it eight falls straight and a goose-egg for the Commodores, and before many minutes were gone he had pinned his man to the mat. Kipp is the kind of man you like to see wrestle, because he doesn't come away with a grudge, win, lose, or draw, and he doesn't know the first letter of hard feelings on the mat. Kipp's loss to the local mat game will be big in more ways than one.

The Squad

You can always count on Gary Ridder to come out of the bout with a fall, or at the least a time advantage. We'll just bet that Ridder has one big reason for being glad that the season is over. . . . so he won't have to starve to death to keep in his class.

George Hoglan is never licked until the referee pats the other man on the back. He's quick to catch the breaks and go after his man. The gamest fight of the whole year was put up by George against his Vandy opponent last Saturday night. There were about forty seconds yet to go and his man had a time advantage impossible for him to overcome. In

Scotties Rate Third In Loop

Closing of Cage Season Finds Hannah Holding High-Score Honors With 229 Points; Allen Scores 196.

After dropping the last two games to Carson-Newman and Milligan, the Scotties find themselves rated third in the Smoky Mountain Conference standing, with nine wins and five defeats.

The Honakerites started the season well by grabbing nine straight victories, including three from Conference foes. The first setback for the Highlanders came at the hands of the powerful Emory and Henry College outfit. This was followed by a heartbreaking loss to Tennessee Teachers.

Maryville then annexed victories from Carson-Newman, Mars Hill, and King before being stopped on successive nights by Pikeville and Lincoln Memorial University.

A triumph over Cumberland started a five-game winning streak, in which the Scotties downed Tusculum, King, Teachers, and Milligan. This was Milligan's first conference loss.

The Highlanders now found themselves in the running for the championship, but finished the season by four losses in succession, three to Conference foes and one to Emory and Henry.

Individual scoring honors for the Scottie cagesters are held by Hannah, center, who garnered 229 points for an average of 9.1 points per game. Allen, with a 7.8 point average, was his nearest rival.

List of individual scores:

	F.G.	F.T.	T.P.
Hannah	97	35	229
Allen	81	34	196
VanHee	63	50	176
Kiser	73	20	166

BIG SPLASH BEGINS AT 8

King Neptune's Water Carnival Packed With Side-ticklers And Difficult Feats; College Orchestra Will Play

Folks, you've seen it in pictures, and you've read about it, but have you ever seen anyone do it before your eyes? Well, that's fine, because you'll see it in all its reality at King Neptune's big water jamboree over in the pool tonight.

Coach Fischbach and his mermen are all set to lay down one of the cleverest programs ever witnessed on the Hill. The opening performance will click at 8 o'clock. The admission is only fifteen cents or two for a quarter.

This egg and spoon race is a side-splitting bit of clowning, to say nothing of the blindfold dash. Old King Neptune himself guffawed deep into his beard last night during rehearsal.

The college rhythm-makes will be on hand to lead the waterwaltz and pep up the crowd with latest dance tunes. If you've never seen a game of water-polo, now's your chance; it's taking the country by storm.

The climax of the evening will be a high dive through a pool of burning water.

It's a benefit number, folks; the kind from which your money goes for a worthwhile purpose. Your quarter will help carry the Orange and Garnet of the varsity swimmers down into Georgia, to Emory University and Georgia Tech.

Because Fischbach and the boys have worked hard for three weeks to present this number any speeler could look you straight in the face and say that you'll enjoy every minute of the carnival.

Tonight's the night: 8:00 o'clock is the hour; the admission is mild . . . .very mild. Let's all go to the water carnival.

Track Workout Starts Monday

Early Start Will Prepare Cinder Squad For Tough Schedule

The first track practice of the season will be held Monday afternoon at four o'clock in the auditorium of Bartlett Hall. All men interested in trying for a position on the team are requested to report for this meeting, which will be devoted largely to the organization of the squad and to discussions by Coach Thrower. A light work-out will probably be held after the talks, if weather permits.

As was the case last year, a large number of candidates are expected to be out for this season's squad.

A wide schedule including the state track meet at Elizabethton has forced the cinder squad into earlier training.

QUIGLEY WINS CHESS TOURNEY

Defeats VanHee Two Out Of Three Games In Final Match

Bill Quigley, sophomore chess wizard, puzzled his way down through a tough upper bracket to win the Y. M. C. A. chess tourney last week.

Quigley eliminated his strongest opponent, John Talmage, in the first round, and then won two games in three from VanHee, finalist from the lower bracket. VanHee defeated Fogaris and Harold Quigley to reach the finals.

Baseball Practice Begins Next Week

Unusually Low Number of Men Report For First Session

With an unsually low number of men reporting, and few of them letter men, baseball talk got underway with a meeting in Bartlett Hall yesterday.

The loss of such men as Russell, Stone, Holloway, and Duff will find the new baseball machine depending partly on the showing of newcomers, and the remainder of last year's varsity crew.

Practice for the next two weeks will consist of drills in fundamentals and throwing. The schedule for the season will be completed within the next two weeks.

OBSERVATIONS

Now we have Fera working around the place. The other day we watched some girls methodically dusting off the library books. (We use "methodically" to be police. "Lazily" would be a better word). And that raises a little question in our mind. We understand that work undertaken under the government's grants must be in addition to the regular work done. Hence dusting library books is not done regularly. Not a new discovery, of course, but we cite it as proof of a well known fact.

We don't hold ourselves up as fashion experts but we have an objection to Burkhalter's rig-out. May be it's the effect of that fashion review or style parade that the Women's Glee Club trotted out yesterweek, but anyway, we notice that Burkhalter sported white flannels, a light felt hat, and a camel-pile coat. 'Twas too much for us.

* * * *

Of course, it's our nature to be kindly, and we can think of some excuses for this strange attire. He might be trying to beat the frivolous changes in the weather by being ready for all kinds. And mentioning weather, we like the kind served up at this end of the week better than what they gave out at the beginning. Below zero weaher is all right for skating, but we have neither a lake nor skates.

* * * *

We've got to pass on some more compliments to Miss Hunt and the Student Council for Wednesday night's formal dinner (with the usual heavyweight china). We appreciate these little breaks in the monotony at Pearson's. However, we have one serious complaint. Please, Miss Hunt, the next time you serve fish with the bones still in it give us more light. Fish is good, and we don't object much to removing bones, but when we have to operate by candle-light we make too many mistakes.

We like Mr. Mac's fatherly care over his boys in Carnegie. His latest notice on the Bulletin Board is good. It seems that there's scarlet fever going around. Mr. Mac's notice advises us to take good care of our health and "consult a doctor when medical advice is needed." Does he think we'd consult a plumber?

* * * *

While on the subject of Carnegie buletin, we plead for a return of Beck's brown hat. His pathetic notice has stirred our heart strings at least thrice daily for a week now. It's his "only one" and he is "verily in need of a hat." We venture to suggest that the dire need arises from a wish to keep his curly locks in place now that he is particularly interested in a certain pleasant sophomore.

These Theta Alpha Phi people have big times at their initiations. One of the "worms" had the little task of counting the trees on the campus. The report was "615 alive, 9 dead." The judge, "Who killed the nine?" "I don't know." "Why didn't you ask them?" "I couldn't; they were dead." If that's a sample of the wit needed for membership, we all ought to be honorary members.

We've just been watching Carhart shave, an act which brings on a communicative mood. Carhart got confidential and aired a little personal problem. No, Doug, we're not going to bare your immost soul to the vulgar gaze, we just want to tell the folks that if they see you downcast, it's love. Just another victim.

This is Thursday afternoon. We are eagerly waiting for tonight's big event. You know, "The Importance of Being Earnest". We're looking forward to hearing Wissler's Oxford accent. He should be good at that. He practices it enough. And by the same token Garrett ought to be good as Rev. Chasuble. We hear that Orr has to do quite a bit of "slinging it" in the play. 'Nuff said. Altogether it's a well-selected cast.

indefatigable element in the—the indefatigable element—the indef— Why, my dear fellow! I'm a busy man!"

Still laboriously writing in his notebook, the club reporter passed on his way, humming to himself the latest song hit. Sophomores, noted for their wisdom, should help, he thought. He met a girl, repeated his question, and received silence, broken only by the loud beating of his heart. A giggle—a re-repeated question—then an air of worldly-wiseness. "Oh, by all means bobbed hair is more attractive."

Having acquired a date and a new love the weary cub reporter plodded on. In the debate room an intelligent appearing forensic artist pulled his head from beneath a pile of books, and blinking his eyes in the light shook his shaggy head and lent his ears.

"What indefatigable element have you observed in the recent proclivity toward antemormonic tendencies?"

"Just one moment. Would you object to defining your terms?"

Immediately the cub reporter remembered that he had forgotten to give Epidermis, his pet goldfish, his daily walk around the park. And dear little Eppy would be very unhappy should he miss his habitual stroll. So the question remains, as ever, unanswered. "What WILL we eat when the bean supply is exhausted?"

Y. M. C. A Invites U. T. And L. M. U. to Banquet

The annual Y. M. C. A. banquet will include some new features this year. Heretofore the banquet has been attended only by Maryville and University of Tennessee students. This year Lincoln Memorial University has also been invited to send delegates. Those planning the banquet expect six or eight attendants from L. M. U. and fifteen or more from U. T.

The banquet is to be held at the New Providence Presbyterian church and will be served by the women of one of the church circles. The program which will appear later in the ECHO will include talent from all three colleges. The entertainment will be light in character.

BAINONIAN PLAY

It has no plot. It is satire; satire is usually thought of as defeating sympathy; sympathy is ordinarily considered necessary to emotion; emotion is always listed as an element to theatrical success. Yet the Torch-Bearers despite its departures had a successful run on Broadway.

There is along with the clever comedy some seriousness, as Kelly defines, during the course of the play, the practical qualifications for the theatre. The whole thing is artisically done.

Rehearsals so far indicate that the Bainonian cast will give a good performance. The cast is both well selected and directed.

Professors Attend Philological Society

The twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Tennessee Philological Association convened Friday and Saturday of this week at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tennessee.

Several members of the Maryville faculty attended. Two of them were listed on the programs as contributing papers at the convention sessions. Dr. Hunter read on "Macbeth As a Morality" Friday afternoon. Dr. Hussey, who was also scheduled to read a paper on "The Last Words, and a Few Other of Socrates" was prevented from attending the convention.

Among other colleges represented were the Universities of Tennessee and of Chattanooga, Vanderbilt University, Ward-Belmont, Peabody College, Carson-Newman, and the University of the South. Ellen Ransom of Ward-Belmont is president of the Association.

The convention was entertained at a dinner on Friday evening. Those attending from here were Miss Heron, Miss Wilkinson, Miss Johnson, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Shine, and Professor Davis.

Oratorical Prize Is Won By E. W. Crawford

Following the final contest in chapel yesterday morning the T. T. Alexander prize was awarded to Earle Crawford. From the preliminary try-outs which have been extending over a period of some time Earle Crawford and Alexander Christie were chosen to appear before the entire student body.

Both speeches were well constructed, excellently expressed, and beautifully delivered. In this case the speakers used the same subject, "Christ's Atonement for Sin". The margin between the two was a very close one.

The prize, established by an anonymous giver in honor of one of Maryville's foreign missionaries, is one hundred dollars. Next year women will compete.

The judges were B. P. Baldridge, Baptist Church of Maryville; Flynn G. Humphries, Fort Sanders Presbyterian Church of Knoxville; Frederick N. Mercer, Erin Presbyterian Church of Bearden.

The two women leads were well taken by Helen Rusk and Lois Brown. Cecelia Conover deserves especial mention for her portrayal of the irascible parent.

The play was well produced on the whole, and bids fair to have an excellent chance at this year's cup.

Y. W. C. A.

The Y. W. C. A. meeting tomorrow will be concerned with hymnology. The setting of hymns will be discussed and appropriate hymns will be used. The old and new cabinets will meet together following the service.

Everybody comes to Alumni gym to see Buck Millsaps, the iron man, rassle. And Buck always gives the fans a big show full of body slams and severe punishment. Perhaps the biggest drawing card on the squad, Buck has ridden the season without a single mishap.

Big Mose Gamble, the man who saved the Scotties from sure defeat by Appalachian Teachers with a time advantage of 14 seconds, the rassler who is the idol of Maryville fans, being the last of a long line of Gamble athletes to wear the Orange and Garnet, will literally leave the biggest vacancy on the squad when he is through. Fortunately for the Highlanders, he yet has two more years.

Coach Thrower will have these men, and possibly a great many more from which to build another championship team next year. Let's hope they all come back.

We see in "The Triangle" from Judson College, Marion, Ala. that Maryville is not the only college that had the pleasure of seeing, "The Importance of Being Earnest". The Theatre Guild of Judson gave Wilde's play on successive nights, March 2 and 3, using two separate casts.

Dr. Shine Discusses Early Social Views Of English Author

St. Patrick's Day Scheme Carried Out In Faculty Dinner

Dr. Hill Shine, in a paper at the faculty dinner took as his subject, "The Development of Thomas Carlisle's Early Social Views".

The dinner was held in the Home Economics dining room. St. Patrick's colors were present in the decorations. Through the kindness of Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, the waitresses were uniformed in green.

Dr. Shine discussed Carlisle's life between the years 1821 and 1831, and concluded his discourse with a review of "Sartor Resartus". In 1821, Thomas Carlisle despised the common man, perceiving the world in scientific analysis. By 1831, this view had been displaced by human interest.

This transformation, Dr. Shine explained, was brought about by changes which kept pace with Carlisle's character. When a preacher, he became worried with religious doubt and tuned to Physical Science and Mathematics. Later, the literature of Goethe and Schiller led him from Theology and Science to Humanism.

In 1824, Carlisle traveled widely and, throughout manufacturing England, he saw conditions which aroused his sympathy for the common man.

His interpretations of German philosophers, who confer great dignity on the human mind, led him, in 1826 and '27 to plan social reforms

St. Patrick's Day Is To Be Observed Here

Announcement has come from the dining hall that a semi-formal dinner has been arranged for the evening for Saint Patrick's Day, on March 17.

The program will include numbers by the Alpha Sigma orchestra, the Bainonian trio, and Theta Epsilon trio.

Those who can are urged to observe St. Patrick's Day colors. Owing to increased expense, and also the lack of adequate space, only boarding club members will be provided for.

Program Of Kathryn Meisle Lists Many Well Known Favorites

Artist, Who Recently Made New York Debut, To Appear Here Friday

Kathryn Meisle who will appear in the third number of this year's Artists' Series next Friday, March 16, has arranged a well-balanced program which is sure to appeal to the audience which received her so enthusiastically last Spring. Her program will consist of the following numbers:

Tu lo sai ---------- Torelli
Minuetto allegro ---------- Gaffi
Droop not, young lover---- Handel

II.

Provenzalisches Lied ---- Schumann
Ich trage meine Minne---- Strauss
Schlechtes Wetter -------- Strauss
Sie wissins nicht --------- Strauss
Ungeduld ---------- Schumann

III.

Aria: O mio Fernando --Schumann
(from the Opera "La Favorita")

IV.

Over the Steppe -----Gretchaninoff
Homeland Mine ----- Gretchaninoff
Whether By Day ----Tschaikowsky

V.

How's My Boy? -----Sidney Homer
Daisies ---------- Amy Worth
The Bow-Legged Boy--------
Alfred H. Bergin
"Habanera", from the Opera,
"Carmen" -------- Georges Bizet

Miss Meisle is a thorough musician—a gifted and versatile artist—one who can sing widely divergent types of music equally well. She has a charm of personality and sincerity of manner which make her one of the outstanding favorites of the recital platform.

The word "great" is often abused, but when recognized music critics throughout the country apply the word to Kathryn Meisle, the popular American contralto, it must be in order.

An artist who has acquired a reputation in opera is not always successful on the concert platform and vice-versa; in fact it is rare to find one equally successful in both fields. Kathryn Meisle is that unusual artist whose ability has placed her in the exalted position of a leading American operatic artist as well as an extraordinarily concert singer. This is the opinion of leading critics in this country and Europe who go further by acclaiming her "one of the world's great contraltos".

Pre-Convention Debate Held At Lexington, Ky.

Preliminaries Prepare Debaters For Annual Pi Kappa Delta Meet

Two varsity debate teams, a women's team: Mary Gladys Brown and Roberta Howie, and a men's team composed of James Smith and Clifford Morgan, left Maryville on Friday morning with Prof. Smith, for Transylvania College, Lexington, Kentucky, where they will participate in a pre-convention debate tournament, today, March 10.

The tournament has been organized by Transylvania College in view of the importance of the approaching national Pi Kappa Delta Convention which is to be held at Lexington the first week in April. A realization of the keen competition to be encountered in the national forensic meet, prompted the practice tournament which is open to all the Pi Kappa Delta chapters in the Kentucky and Tennessee Province.

There are four Kentucky schools as well as Maryville, entered in the tournament. The teams will be prepared to debate either side of the question, in contests for men and women.

Cabinet Of Y. W. C. A. Enjoys Buffet Supper

The outgoing Y. W. C. A. cabinet enjoyed a buffet supper given in the reading rooms Thursday evening. During and after the supper musical entertainment was provided by members of the cabinet. Veta Mae Stephens, vice president was in charge of the evening's entertainment. The menu was planned by Cora Deats and Ruth Romig, decorations by Barbara Whitman, program by Joan Dexter, and invitations by Lillian Steed.

The Sunday meeting will be in charge of the present cabinet.

As Last Midwinter Bainonian Presents Satire On Theatre

Cast Displays Excellent Cooperation In Presentation Of Comedy

With the Bainonian Literary Society's presentation of "The Torchbearers" last night this season's series of mid-winter productions came to a close. The three-act comedy by George Kelly, was a difficult play for amateurs because of its satire which could easily have been overdone; because of its complicated business and action; and because of its structure, a play within a play.

"The Torchbearers", being a satire on play-producing, might have appealed to a more or less limited audience, consisting of those who had had experience in amateur dramatic activity. But the humor was sufficiently general to make the play delightful entertainment for everyone.

In at least two general respects the Bainonian's production was outstanding. The stage presented one of the most attractive and most practical arrangements which has been offered in recent plays. The difficulties inherent in the subdivision of groups and dialogue on the stage were handled sksillfully. In the first act, especially, simultaneous action in different groups was well coordinated.

Outstanding performances were given by Lois Wallace, in the role of Mrs. J. Duro Pampinelli, the play director; and Violet Webb, cast as Mrs. Paula Ritter, the heroine-actress of the play. The five characters who made their first appearance on the Maryville stage showed excellent stage presence for initial

Y. M. Joint Banquet Proves Successful

More Than One Hundred Forty Persons Attend Fellowship Gathering

The YMCA held its ninth annual joint banquet with the University of Tennessee YMCA last Tuesday night in the New Providence church. Also, for the first time, representatives were present from the YMCA of Lincoln Memorial University. During the evening the sponsors of the banquet and the 'Y' officers expressed the desire to hold such an affair each year with all three schools represented.

The banquet was arranged by the YMCA Fellowship Committee of which "Red" Courtenay is chairman. Louis Krainock, vice-president of the Maryville "Y", acted as toastmaster. Seven men came from L. M. U., eighteen from U. T., and Maryville's representatives brought the total to 142.

The greater part of the evening was spent in the enjoyment of an extremely light program which was contributed to by the three participating colleges. Violin duets, harmonica numbers, vocal solos, piano solos, saxophone music, skits, and humorous speeches made up the program. Louis Krainock, who acted as toastmaster, introduced guests from other colleges.

The program was closed in a unique way by the singing of the Alma Maters of all three colleges.

FEATURE—By Grace Proffitt

We are still wondering how a feature article should be written. After vainly waiting until the eleventh hour for Inspiration the only conclusion we can come to is that feature writers are born, not drafted.

So trying to write such an article is out of the question. Our roommate has no turtle, and we are ill-fated when it comes to asking questions. Cursory Catches Caught in Chapel command our commendation, but this is all beyond our depth.

If, however, some day we should be stricken with the sudden overpowering desire to write features, we have some topics in mind.

There's this matter of uniforms. Such a variety of figures on the campus wear them with such a variety of swaggers. For the discriminating there are those impeccable sock affairs that trip up and down Fayerweather steps. If they are a badge of domesticity, they proclaim it charmingly. There is something quite irresistible about retrieving burnt pie crusts from a smoking oven in a white apron.

Over in the psychology lab they have the same professional atmosphere, the uniforms, that is. Probably the purpose is to impress the rats with the value of being bathed every day for the advancement of science. Even rats must have scruples about defying family tradition. Rats and rabbits are much alike. Both have four feet and live in cages and above all, have pink ears. Only rats are much more intelligent as a result of moving in psychological circles and trotting around in mazes for their morning constitutionals and going through all sorts of shocking experiences by way of acquiring cheese for lunch.

Rats aren't the only ones who work for their daily bread. Think of the campus force who dig, rake, haul, and paint to remind us that the working man didn't go out of vogue along with high button shoes. The only point to be said or even suggested about their uniforms is that they are uniformly patched.

Speaking of the above garments reminds us of others that are frowned upon in high society. Corpardonable. A significant fact about pardnable. A significant fact about them is that, contrary to everyone's suspicions they can exist in more than one state, namely dirty. That is, there are not only mustard cords and blue cords but plum or gooseberry cords. This fact has come

The Theatre Arts Monthly voices, in a recent issue, what it claims is a long inaudible dissatisfaction with everything that has been going on in the Metropolitan Opera House. The belief is that the financial unsuccess of the past few seasons has opened eyes and ears of authorities to the extent that there is at present talk of a new house, stage, and production in more modern terms.

Failure of production has not confined itself to the opera. The percentage of failures among all plays, states a Broadway note, from the beginning of the season to date, stands at 68.5 per cent.

The Cornell University Theater is celebrating its twenty-fifth anniversary this month by a revival of the group's first play, "An Enemy of The People".

An interesting compilation of songs, with a running history of singers and actors has recently been published. The book is "They All Sang", by Edward Marks, and covers song history from Tony Pastor to Rudy Vallee.

Helen Hayes, screen idol, is acquitting herself well since her return to the stage, judging by various reviews of "Mary of Scotland". One paper states that the audience listens to her lines "with a silence more resounding than applause."

Lillian Gish, who took the part of "the white sister", has returned to New York to play as the young mother superior in "The Joyous Season", a Philip Barry play.

Salome, the much talked about, and long looked for Richard Strauss —Oscar Wilde music-drama, has received most unfavorable comment in most papers. Most critics seem to feel that the production failed to get across the footlights. Less important roles received more favorable comment than the major ones, and chief music honors were accorded to the orchestra under Arthur Bodanzsky.

A discriminating Town Hall audience received Kathryn Meisle with great enthusiasm recently. She was described as having "a technically admirable use and coloring of the voice, musicianship, discerning taste, and a sensitive interpretation equipment.

Sir James Frazer, author of "The Golden Bough" is now working on another book, despite the handicap imposed upon him by serious eye trouble. He is over eighty years old.

We read that at Clemson College in South Carolina "several dozen verdant freshmen" decided to get a taste of winter sports regardless of the fact that there was no snow on the ground. They gathered together dust pans and wash basins to be used as sleds. It seems, however, that cement sleigh riding wasn't so very comfortable, as it resulted in several bruised spots on heads and other extremities.

Collegiate Swaps

At De Pauw University pnone employees send through 9108 calls daily. Between five and six in the evening there is a daily average of 829 calls, while only 23 calls are made between six and seven in the morning. The article neglected to state whether the majority of callers are boys or girls; nor did it state what the general topic of conversation is.

The following appeared in an issue of the newspaper put out by the University of South Carolina:

"It lay in a conspicuous part of the campus.

It lay where some student had nonchalantly tossed it, after imbibing its liquid contents.

It lay there boldly, a pint bottle irrefutable evidence that at least one student here drinks that invigorating fluid, milk."

This article had us worried for awhile. However, when we got down to the part about the milk, we realized that even we Maryville students take a sip of milk now and again.

home with particular force and bears remembering. There is not much to be known about corduroy trousers and therefore all that there is to know should be known.

If it were only that simple to understand a number of things. Take the matter of getting up in the morning which has been a debatable subject for centuries. Is it better to rise like a bolt out of the blue or serenely to close one's eyes until mind and body are agreed that sleeping fifteen minutes longer is the best solution? The simple procedure to be followed is that one that should refrain from getting up until it seems the natural thing to do. Then no more horrid, disgruntled looks would be seen of a morning and the millenium would have been reached. For history and the rise and fall of nations hinge on whether or not sovereigns sing as they shave and subjects smile as they read the morning paper. And everyone would live happily ever after, which is as good a place as any, in our rambling speculations on feature topics, to stop.

Two of Eugene O'Neill's plays are at present running in New York, "Ah Wilderness", and his latest play, "Day's Without End". The latter especially seems to be getting favorable press notices. The striking last scenes have attracted wide comment.

SPORT TALK INTERVIEWS BASEBALLER

BY BRYAN PAYNE

According to Clyde Mischlich, one time star left-fielder on the Highlander nine, athletic rivalry, and particularly that between Carson-Newman College and Maryville, was once upon a time all that it should be.

It has been not so very long ago that the team which won the most games was the team which had the biggest backing. At least that was the case when the Highlanders journeyed up to Jefferson City to meet the Eagles back in 1928.

In that year the Highlanders boasted of one of the most powerful teams in this section, with Clemens and Bob Harvey forming the battery, and J. D. Davis holding down first base. Shorty McCall was playing at short stop and Stone and Cartwright were in the outfield along with Mischlich. But let him tell you the story.

"Things had not been going so well all afternoon," said Mischlich. The game had been tight all the way, but Maryville was leading 3-2. Carson-Newman was batting, and Bob Harvey was burning them in fast. Somehow or other they had managed to get a man around to third, when the man at the plate bubnted one out to Harvey. Bob fielded the ball and threw it to first, where Davis tagged the sack. The man on third had started home, so Davis threw to Clemens who blocked the runner about three feet from the plate.

"Then the trouble started", he continued. "The ump, Patrolman Lee of Knoxville, first called the runner out at first and the runner coming in home safe, but a moment later reversed his decision, calling the man at first safe and the other man out.

"Coach Honaker, I, and a few others were sitting there on the bench. Someone got up from the bench and started to argue with Lee over the decision, but Lee took a punch at him, receiving more in return. By that time the diamond was crowded with fans from both sides and a wild free-for-all took place. Someone cold-cocked me behind the ear and I went down, but rose up in time to see someone punch Honaker. The fight stopped right away, and we headed for Maryville with full speed ahead, not even stopping long enough to eat."

Those were the days when the Highlanders were the big worry of Letters in wrestling will be awarded to Ridder, Hoglan, Joe Battagalia, Kipp, Captain Boretsky, Watson Allen, Dean, Byar, Millsaps, Gamble, and Huffstetler, manager.

Huffstetler has been re-appointed as manager of the 1935 wrestling squad.

Diamondeers End First Week Of Practice

Ranks of Five Letter Men Bolstered With Frosh Prospects

BY DICK MEADOWS

With the thin ranks of lettermen bolstered by a flock of freshmen candidates, the baseball squad yesterday completed its first week of training in preparation for the 1934 season.

The practices this week, which have been held in the Alumni gym, have been devoted principally to limbering throwing arms and to learning the fundamentals of fielding ground balls, while short sessions have been held on bunting. The end of another week should find the squad conditioned well enough to get out on the gym for batting practice.

During the past week, the number of candidates reporting for the two and one-half hour workouts has increased from less than thirty to about forty. Of this number, only five are lettermen, four are members of last year's squad who did not letter, and thirty or more are freshmen.

The lettermen of last year who will be back in old positions again this year, and who will be depended on to furnish the main part of the attack, are Kizer, shortstop, Gillespie, second base, Loessberg, pitcher and outfielder, Graf, catcher, and Atchison, pitcher. Although Gillespie did not play in every game last season, he had a stick average of better than .400, the highest on the team. Loessberg and Atchison hung up good pitching records, and when the former was not pitching, he was doing his part in right field and at the plate. Graf shared the catching duties about equally with Clark, who is not back this year, and Kizer played a while at nearly every position on the diamond. The Highlanders will be well fortified in the departments held down by these men, but the remainder of the team is an uncertain prospect.

Blazer and Lehr will again be trying for starting assignments in the infield, as will Coker in the outfield and Gabbard in the pitcher's box. Most of the freshmen have had some experience playing in high school, and under Coach Honaker's able guidance, a number of them should develop enough to make out a well rounded organization by the time the season has opened.

The schedule has not yet been completed, but the Scotties are practically assured of having four game series' with Carson-Newman, Lincoln Memorial University, Emory-Henry, and East Tennessee Teachers, and two games each with Hiwassee and Mars Hill. An effort is

Set New Record

As the camera snapped this picture, a new world's record was being made. The maker is Joe McClusky, of Fordham, who is shown winning the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the A. A. U. championships in New York, in the new record time of 8 minutes and 50 seconds flat.

Slate Calls For Four Game Series With Carson-Newman And L. M. U.

THROWER IS EXPECTING A STAR SQUAD

Missing such veteran performers as the long-legged Spec Moore, Ed Greene and Jim Hitch, each of them worth a first, or at least a second on the path, Coach Bob Thrower began this week to rebuild the Scot track team from the remnants of last year and whatever new material presents itself.

Captain Madison Byar, elected last year to lead his team through the coming season, is speedily getting back into his old stride, which, by the way, is nearly nine feet in the pinches.

Graydon Paul, veteran two-miler, will fill Moore's shoes to a great extent, looming up even as a prospect to outrun the bespectacled star of last year. Mr. Moore holds both the records for the mile and the two-mile.

Stuart Snedecker, who outran the University of Tennessee's great Harold Wolfe last year to set a new college record in the half-mile event, is on deck as sturdy as ever, having kept in steady training since winning the five-mile event last fall.

Along with Captain Byar in the dashes will be Loessburg, who, along with Gray also officiates over in the broad-jump pit. Toms and Gray are the heldovers in the high-jump division. Lavender and Bunch will take charge of the vault situation.

Due to the loss of the mighty strength of Ray Russell the field work will present an even weaker link than last year. Red Woodling and Gene Little are back with the shots, while Woodling will be the mainstay of the discus throw unless some stellar material shows up in that corner soon.

Altogether there are forty-nine men out, a good many of whom are raw recruits, but Coach Thrower is looking ahead with a great deal of optimism.

The schedule for this season, as yet incomplete as far as dates are concerned, will include meets with the University of Tennessee, L. M. U., and competition with other schools in the state at the Southeastern A.A.U. meet at Elizabethton, and the state track meet at the University of Tennessee.

Swim Slate Takes Scots To Atlanta

Mermen In Triangle Meet With Auburn, Georgia, Tech; Meet Emory

Coach Fischbach's menmen will close the season with a short trip to Atlanta where they will participate in a triangle swimming meet, with Georgia Tech and Auburn, meeting Emory University on the following night.

Because Georgia Tech boasts one of the strongest tank teams in the South, they are expected to give the Scotties plenty of trouble. Terrell, in the 50 yard dash, and Catts, in the 100 yard dash are outstanding men on the Georgia team. Richardson, back stroke man, turns in a good performance also.

It will be necessary to take one of these meets in order to end the season with an even break, the Scotties having already won three and lost as many. Two wins have been registered over Tusculum and one over University of Tennessee, with two losses to Knoxville Y. M. C. A. and one to University of Tennessee.

OBSERVATIONS

WHAT WE THINK

We sorta figure that brother Bryan Payne knows too much of our business, and that brother Alexander Godfrey Leitch Christie knows too much of our business, which is to signify that both of them are relatively dangerous, so we're going to take over the old job. And we don't want anyone higher than the freshman class saying that he didn't know we'd left it yet.

WHAT FIELDS "THINKS"

Dr. Fields reported to us last week, after receiving our inquiry, that Miss Katharine Orr is a pretty right good student in psychology except for the fact that she was sick for a spell and missed a few lectures. "Yes", says Dockeray II, "Katharine is a better student than her grades would indicate.

AND NOW, WHAT KATHARINE THINKS

But little old "K" answered thus when we inadvertently mentioned the subject of Psychology to her. "Why, Psychology! I never did take any psychology. I don't even know what it's like."

BE WARY!!

If you see one of us coming at you carrying 100 cards you'll know there's soon going to be mention of a poetry test. At this very present time, we're devout believers in cooperation, brotherhood, and all those things. In short, we want subjects. Mickey Brooks took our test and she made only one mistake. . . . .

And that wasn't a real mistake. As a matter of fact, you can't make a mistake on our test. If you do it exactly opposite from the way it was previously done, you still make 100. And 100 is every bit of A plus . . . .a grade that not all of us can make.

MY KINGDOM FOR MY AGE!

Mickey is in a bigger fix than poetry tests could ever get in, however. Just now, she's having difficulty proving her age. It seems that she could do some real good if she can prove that she's up to and over the age of 21, but Mickey can't prove it. Of course, we think that looks prove everything, but that doesn't prove anything.

AFTER CAREFUL COGITATION

We think that a good deed for any A, whether it be FER NR OR CW, would be to give our worthy boss an electric stove or something. On cold days, such as this one, the librarian's office is unbearably cold, and he has to move out. This certainly doesn't make for efficiency. . . . .nor (from our point of view) does it encourage a warm temperament.

THE NUCLEUS

Of the most high class sewing bees on the campus is composed of Misses Metzger, Lightfoot, and Dexter. We're sure that we have the fellow assistant librarian's second to this idea. The little woming can come to the library and get more said in three hours than any six people on this hill side can say in three hours, and that's saying a lot!

being made to get a series with Vanderbilt, but from the present outlook, the chances of doing so are slim.

The Highlanders did not lose a single series last year, although one was divided with Emory-Henry, and won fourteen games while losing five.

THE CITY DRUG

About this time one year ago the air was fairly soaked with thoughts of a "change in policy", and the "new deal". People all over the United States watched the president and eagerly anticipated the outcome. In keeping with this general feeling of optimism, two men in this city decided to give Maryville a bigger and better drug store than the aforementioned city had ever had before. It was to be a "New Deal" for Maryville drug store customers, a better business under more efficient management, a more desirable place to spend one's afternoons and money. In less than a year's time it has become just that.

The two men who have been responsible for this success are Dr. Oren D. Lowe and Harry Bird. Dr. Lowe who is in charge of the prescription department is a registered Pharmacist and has had two years in medical school. His ability as a dispenser of medicine is unquestioned and is surpassed only by the personality of the man himself. The business is under the very capable management of Mr. Bird, who is a real friend to students.

Perhaps of the most interest to the Student Body is the Soda Fountain. This department is taken care of by a very admirable group of young ladies who appear alternately in green and blue. They are noted for their friendliness, quick service, and excellent food preparations. Among the best known of these is their famous Fruit Salad of which there is none better. Their ice cream sodas, pineapple sundaes, and other similar products can be vouched for only on this line.

The pride of the store is the Prescription Department and they have every reason to be proud of it. All the Biological and Serums are kept in an electric refrigerator at a constant temperature of 40 degrees. In Mr. Bird's words "it is an expense but it is worth it." All the drugs are kept in alphabetical order, and the narcotics and poisons are kept under lock and key. They never use the same bottle in refilling a prescription and here too the aforementioned words apply.

Of special interest to the ladies is the fact that the City Drug is the local agent for Max Factor Make-up products. A full complexion analysis direct from the Max Factor studio in Hollywood may be secured free of charge through the drug store.

Everything considered, the City Drug and its management have secured remarkable success during the previous year. It has indeed been a "New Deal".

SENIOR INVITATIONS

The Senior Invitation chairman, Howard Kipp, has announced that he is receiving orders for invitations. The invitations are similar to those of last year's graduating class. Those with leather covers cost thirty-five cents; those with cardboard covers eighteen cents.

Orders will be taken any time between Saturday, March 10th and Saturday, March 31st. Invitations must be paid for when they are ordered.

which culminated in his work "Sartor Resartus".

Dr. Shine, in his treatment of "Sartor Resartus", pointed out that, for a social melioration of the common man, Carlisle had advocated hero reverence, dutiful working, and universal education.

performances. Elizabeth Gillis did good work in the role which she assumed on such short notice.

Those members of the cast who have been starred before, also gave successful impersonations. Veta Mae Stephens and Arthur Courtenay carried strong roles with ease.

As a whole, the cast consistently and successfully carried the satire of the play. The third act was slower and not so well organized as the other two. The manipulation of the play within the play, in the first, and more especially the second act, was successful. The spectacle of the "cast" making their bows to the "audience", as seen through the doors in the back of the "set" was particularly entertaining.

The rising generation retires about the time the retiring generation rises.

every other coach in Tennessee. One year the boys under Coach Honaker won their sixteen college games, losing only to the Chattanooga Lookouts, minor league, and breaking even in a two game series with the Knoxville Smokies. During the same season they challenged Vanderbilt University but the Commodores backed down and refused to meet them.

* * * *

Another one of the athletic hotspots used to turn up annually when the Highlanders met the University of Tennessee in football. During one game, to which the locals had taken a powerful team, both sides had been waxing pretty warm for some time. The U. T. bunch were sporting a collie all draped out in the Orange and White, U. T. colors. Finally one of the Maryville yell leaders stole over to the other side and yanked the blanket off the collie, running around the field with it to the Maryville section. The entire freshman class of U. T. rose up and started a fight to regain the lost blanket, but after it had carried on for a few minutes the blanket was returned and the game went on.

Asked what he thought of the athletic situation on the Hill today, Mr. Mischlich replied that there are at least two things hindering the progress of Highlander teams. One thing is the lack of material and the other is the lack of interest and backing on the part of both townspeople and faculty.

"And naturally," he added, when you don't have everybody else behind the thing, the student body cannot be expected to take much interest. It seems to me that some people over there are trying to discourage all participation in sports, and that condition accounts partly for the lack of material. If they keep on turning thumbs down to athletics they'll not have any teams worth talking about five years from now."

* * * *

And he's right. But on the other hand take this wrestling squad under Bob Thrower. Coach Thrower has built a machine that wins consistently, and all Maryville is going to pay time and again to see a winner. Think back over the crowds that have swarmed thru Alumni gym during the past season, and you'll remember that every wrestling meet found a packed house.

Men's Debate Team Defeats Waynesburg

Critic Judge Decision Favors Maryville Team

Tuesday night, a Maryville negative debate team, Archibald Pieper and Earle Crawford, met a team from Waynesburg College, Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, debating the regular varsity question, relative to an increase in the powers of the president. This is the last men's varsity debate to be held here on the hill. It is, however, by no means the end of the forensic program for the year. There still remains a women's debate, to be held here on March 31, and the Freshman debates on April 13 and April 15

In the debate Tuesday night, Pieper and Crawford took the affirmative side of the question. Mr. Hutson, the first speaker for the affirmative, outlined the plan of the affirmative, and proceeded to prove the first part. Mr. Pieper in turn did the same for the negative. The next two speeches were mostly constructive argument leaving, according to the critic judge, the debate completely undecided at the end of the constructive speeches.

Pieper, speaking first in rebuttal, refuted almost all the affirmative argument. He showed how two of their points depended on the other two, and proceeded to tear down one of those, leaving the other for Crawford. The final rebuttal of the affirmative was taken by Mr. Hutson, who spoke first in constructive speech. He spent the six minutes of his time refuting the negative argument by aiming at various statements made by both speakers.

The critic judge was Mr. Barr Miller, from Knoxville. He gave a decision in favor of the negative, making over forty victories for Maryville teams this year as over against only four adverse decisions. His decision was based on four comparable points: constructive case, composition of speech rebuttal, and delivery. In all of these except the constructive case he said, the Maryville team surpassed its opponents.

Professor Queener has reason to feel very well satisfied with the work of his teams so far. He recently stated that this was the best squad Maryville has ever sent out. The prospects for next year are high, too, for only one member of the whole squad is graduating.

R. W. Post Expresses Gratitude To College

Several months ago an alumnus, the Reverend R. W. Post, Class of 1899, who is a missionary in Siam, spent a few hours on the campus, speaking at chapel and to the Student Volunteers, while on his furlough in the United States. At that time he spoke of the goal fixed by the conference of Christian workers in his field. This goal looked to the establishment of at least six self-dependent churches within the next ten years. Word has been received from him since his return to Siam saying that there are now three churches, two of which are on better financial bases than before his furlough, and that the membership of these churches has been increased. He expressed gratitude for our interest in his work. He gave up voluntarily a month and a half of his furlough because he felt that his work was suffering, and that other people were being burdened because of his absence.

Maryville Mentioned In D. A. R. Magazine

Work Of Maid Shop Explained To D. A. R.

In the current issue of the Daughters of the American Revolution Magazine there appears a report of an extensive tour over the country by Mrs. Russell William Magna, President General of the National Society of the D. A. R. Mrs. Magna spoke here at the chapel service on November 3. Her report in the magazine includes several paragraphs concerning her visit to Maryville.

It will be remembered that because of bad weather conditions the speaker was unavoidably delayed in reaching the college. In the report Mrs. Magna says, "Dr. Lloyd, with his rare tact and effervescing personality had kept them awaiting our arrival. And when I at last walked down the aisle and onto the platform, a little breathless, and begged Dr. Lloyd for a minute before I spoke, some eight hundred boys and girls entered into the spirit of the thing; three lusty cheer leaders jumped to the platform, and I listened to the rah, rah, rahs of a real, rousing how-do-you-do. With such a cordial welcome, I am free to confess, giving them an address in an informal manner was a perfect delight."

There is also in the article an explanation to D. A. R. members of the work of the College Maid Shop.

Vocational Guidance Literature Available

Pamphlets May Be Obtained From Dean's Office

Dean Hunter has had placed in his office a collection of literature on vocational guidance. The purpose of these bulletins is not to help students choose their professions, but merely to give information as to opportunities in the field and training required.

Detailed information as to opportunities, expenses, compensation, training, and recommended schools for graduate work can be found with reference to the following vocations: architecture, business administration, dentistry, engineering (chemcial, civil, electrical, and mechanical), foreign service, forestry, journalism, law, librarianship, medicine (also veterinary), ministry, music, nursing, pharmacy, physical education, playground work, psychiatry, recreation, social work, Y. M. C. A. or Y. W. C. A. secretaryship.

Students may have access to this material in Dean Hunter's office any week-day afternoon from 1:00 to 5:30 with the exception of Saturday. Already a large number of students have availed themselves of this opportunity.

As You Like It Is Postponed Until Later

The Social Committee regrets to announce that it became necessary to postpone the As-You-Like-It program which was arranged for this evening. The postponement was made because of a misunderstanding with the Dean's offices and because of objections to the proposed activities of the "Just-for-Fun" Dating Bureau.

Another As-You-Like-It will be held in the near future. It is probable that in connection with it a modified form of Dating Bureau will function.

There will be no HIGHLAND ECHO during the spring holidays. As has been the custom in former years the Junior Associates will edit the Echo during the month of April. Violet Webb will be in charge April 7, Dorothy Nethery, April 14, and Grace Proffitt, April 21.

Director Of T. V. A. Work Gives Address

Rieves Speaks On Aims And Projects

On Wednesday, March 14, during the regular chapel service, Lloyd W. Rieves, Ph. D., presented to the student body a most interesting and instructive explanation of "The Personnel and Social Development Program of the T.V.A." Dr. Rieves is Director of Personnel of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and has had wide experience in modern educational institutions and personnel work. His address contained a discussion of the many phases of the work of the T.V.A., the method of employment, health and medical program, safety program, labor relations, training program, records and social studies.

"The general objective of the Social Development Division", said Dr. Rieves, "is to promote and co-ordinate a program of general economic and social betterment for the citizens of the Tennessee River drainage basin. To accomplish this purpose, plans have been set up for training adults, for promoting health, and making social and economic studies in cooperation with existing federal, state and local agencies.

"The latest report on the total number employed on all T.V.A. projects is somewhat over 5500. This does not include the people paid by the C.W.A. funds who are working on projects under the supervision of the T. V. A., nor does it include the men in the 25,000 camps, working on reforestation and soil erosion projects which have been planned and are being supervised by the T. V. A. Forestry Division.

Vesper Choir Will Give Cantata "Olivet"

Easter Program Includes Only Choral Work

On Sunday night, the Vesper Choir will sing a Lenten Cantata, OLIVET, by Daniel Pratherae. The cantata will be under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, and will be accompanied by Mrs. Lois Huber. Dr. Stevenson is to preach a short pre-Easter message on "Jesus at The Tomb".

The cantata opens with the solemn scene in Gethsemane, followed by a woman's chorus, "And There Appeared an Angel." One of the loveliest of the choruses is, "He Shall Give His Angels Charge Over Thee" which is to be sung A capella. There is also an excellent men's chorus, "They Led Him Away". This leads into a chorus which has its climax in the words, "Crucify Him! We have no King bu Caesar!" The cantata ends with a beautiful chorus "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."

Instead of the usual recessional the choir will sing the final number in the cantata, "Jesus, Our Only Joy Be Thou", as a choral response after the benediction. There are to be no solos in the cantata, only choral work.

Debate Teams Continue With Heavy Schedule

First and Second Places Won By Debaters

The results of the trip made by two debate teams into North and South Carolina earlier in the month have proved most satisfactory. A tabulation of the debates follows.

March 6—Two debates at Asheville, N. C.—Non-decision

March 6—Two debates at Wake Forest—Non-decision

March 8, 9, 10—Convention at Greensboro, N. C.

March 10—One debate at Salisbury N. C.—Lost

March 12—One debate at Clinton, S. C.—Non-decision

March 13—Two debates at Due West, S. C.—Won both

The pre-conference tournament held at Greensboro, on March 8, 9, and 10 was most successful, and Maryville was ably represented. Maria Wynn and Florence Hyde, composing the only team which did not lose a debate, were unofficially judged the winners of first place in debate. A representation of two teams was required, consequently the girls' team could not officially win first place.

Maria Wynn won first place in women's oratory. Second place in extemporaneous speech was awarded to Earle Crawford. Altogether there was a total of eighty debates.

Thirteen schools were represented, covering three states. Maryville was ranked second with an average of eighty percent, which was only two points lower than that of the school which ranked first.

Maryville debaters ranked high at the pre-convention tournament held in Lexington. Twenty-eight teams took part. Maryville won both divisions, having one team entered in each division.

Clifford Morgan and James Smith were against the University of Kentucky, Transylvania College, and Centre College. The women's team, Roberta Howie and Mary Gladys Brown defeated the first, second, and third teams of Transylvania College.

Theta Is Awarded Theta Alpha Trophy

"Little Women" Rates Highest Among Midwinters

Theta Epsilon has again been awarded the Theta Alpha Phi dramatic trophy. Theta Epsilon now stands fair for owning the cup, this being her second successive award. In the case three consecutive awards the cup comes into permanent ownership of the society winning it.

The judges for the season were Dr. E. R. Hunter, Dr. G. A. Knapp, Miss Jessie Johnson, Professor K. I. Lagerstedt, and Professor Harry Gauding of Maryville High School. Their decision was made on the standards of acting, stage managing, casting of characters, and the selection of the play.

The judges also selected the two best characters in each play. From Alpha Sigma's "Gentle Rogue" they chose Newman Smith and Glover Leitch. In Theta's "Little Women" Eleanor Denslow and Eccles Huff were designated. The honors of Athenian's "Importance of Being Earnest" were given to Cecelia Conover and Herr Wissler. Lois Wallace and Violet Webb were accorded the most outstanding characters of Bainonian's "Torch Bearers".

The competition this year was strong and one or two other plays ranked favorably. Some plays excelled in respects in which others

Minors Eliminated From The Curriculum

New Definition Given To Major Subjects

It will be the order of the day about May 1st for Freshmen to indicate their choice of a major subject. Since the Executive Council of the Faculty has recently taken action affecting the major subject and its relation to the curriculum, a word here as to the new regulations as to the major may be of value.

The term minor and what it connotes is dropped from our curricular organization.

The major is redefined as at least eighteen and not more than twenty-four hours in a department above courses in the "100" group, with the addition of such related courses in other departments as may be generally prescribed by the department and such related courses as may, in individual cases, be prescribed by the major professor.

An illustration of this is the practice that has already been set up by the departments of Ancient Languages and Psychology. The student majoring in Latin has been required to take History 208, Roman History, and the Department of Psychology has specified fourteen hours of Biology, not including Botany as an accompaniment of the department major. A similar system is being worked out for the other departments.

The reasons back of this change are centered chiefly in the fact that after meeting the general graduation requirements for the degree, taking a major of twenty-four to thirty hours, and two minors of twelve to eighteen hours each, the student has had very little margin of time left for electives. The reasonable expectation is that the average schedule, even when eighteen hours of Education is included, will afford fifteen to twenty hours more of free electives than was possible under the old plan.

The present Senior class will be held to the former system of a major and two minors; present juniors and sophomores will be given whatever advantages may accrue under the changed policy. Present freshmen will come fully under the provision of the change.

Preparatory to the selection of major subjects the Freshmen will be offered two platform discussions for the purpose of guiding them in planning their program of courses. The first of these will be on Wednesday morning, March 28, after the Chapel service. The second will come on the following Wednesday, April 4. Dean Hunter will be in charge of these discussions.

Maryville Represented At S. V. Convention

The Annual Convention of the Tennessee Student Volunteer Union is being held this week-end at Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tennessee. The convention began yesterday afternoon and will close tomorrow.

Mr. Jesse R. Wilson, General Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement will be the principal speaker and will lead in the discussion of the convention theme, "Christian Students and New Life for the World". Other prominent Student Volunteer leaders will be present to help in determining the Movement's policy towards the projected United Student Christian Movement, and towards broadening the basis for Student Volunteer membership.

Maryville is being represented by twenty-three delegates.

Two Debate Teams Are To Attend Convention

The bi-annual convention of the national society of Pi Kappa Delta is to be held at Transylvania College in Lexington, Kentucky from April 2 to April 6. Approximately 544 delegates will represent 116 schools.

Maryville College will send two debate teams, composed of Maria Wynn, Florence Hyde, Archibald Pieper, and Earle Crawford. The extemporaneous speakers from the College will be Grace Proffitt and Louis Krainock. Grace Proffitt and Newman Smith will be the orators. Dr. Hunter and Professor Queener will accompany the representatives.

SOUTHERN MOUNTAIN WORKERS ASSEMBLE

The twenty-second annual conference of Southern Mountain Workers, assembling prominent educational, social, and religious leaders, was held in Knoxville March 20-22. Every year workers with southern mountain people convene to study problems of mountain life.

Discussions and lectures included agricultural, economic, religious, social, and family problems. In addition to these, this year with the entrance of the Tennessee Valley Authority into the regions, there is a new question as to how this movement will affect the situation. One of the questions discussed was: "Has Federal Relief tended to break down rugged individualism in Mountain family life?"

Representatives were present from Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, and Baptist denominations, American Red Cross, Community Chest, National Recreation Association, and Tennessee Valley Authority.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

For many years they lived on different continents. For many years they were continents, seas, and oceans apart in interests and environment. Then they came to the United States and ultimately to Maryville; one from Costa Rica, the other from Korea and Hawaii. It was here on this campus that they discovered such a similarity of ability and interests as to make the gulf normally made by dissimilar surroundings almost negligible.

Dorothy Casseres was born in Costa Rica, where her mother, a former Maryville student, had gone as an American missionary. Her father is a Columbian. She received her preparatory training in New Jersey, and after a return to her home for a year, she came to Maryville. Here, with a delightful mixture of quietness, competence, and friendliness, she has been able to make a very definite contribution to her college. Outstanding has been her work with the Student Volunteer organization. She served one year as program secretary. Instead of one year, the regular term of office, she has been president of the group for the last two years, a somewhat unusual situation, indicative of the respect which its members hold for her capability. She has been active also in Y.W.C.A. work, having served as a Nu Gamma leader and twice as a Cabinet member.

Like Dorothy, Elizabeth Gillis came of a missionary folk. As a tiny baby she went with her parents to Korea, where she lived until she was six years old. Then they moved again, this time to Hawaii. After Elizabeth had finished high school in Hawaii, she came to Northfield, Massachusetts, which we mention for this reason: in Northfield the appellation "Aesop", as applied to that particular member of the Gillis family, came into being as a consequence of the numerous, highly colored, fables told by her. When she came to Maryville, Aesop also found her thoughts turning in the direction of the Student Volunteer movement. She has taken her part in the work of the local organization as a program secretary, and later as president. For the last year she has worked very difficiently as president of the Tennessee Union of the Student Volunteer Movement. She, too, has been interested in the Y. W. C. A.; she, too, was a Nu Gamma leader for two years.

Both Dorothy and Aesop have been loyal members and officers of Bainonian. Aesop is now president of the society. Both have had a share in the dramatic activities of the college. Dorothy is in charge of plans for the coming Y. W. C. A. benefit play, "The Wasp's Nest". Elizabeth was decidedly successful in the recent Bainonian midwinter, "The Torch Bearers" Both have deferred a large part of their college expenses by their own efforts. Dorothy has held numerous positions on the campus. Last year she was one of the assistant librarians. Aesop, for the last two years, has been post-mistress. Both have had experience with college publications. Dorotohy has served on the Highland Echo staff and the Chilhowean staff; and Aesop, on the Chilhowean staff.

Maryville has a right to feel proud of her Superior Scotties, especially of those, who, like Dorothy Casseres and Elizabeth Gillis, stand for all that is high in character and ideals.

The members of the Bainonian Trio wish to express their appreciation for the corsages sent them on the evening of the last formal dinner.

sonnel management, is to give men an opportunity to work into the particular position where they can be most effective. All avenues of promotion are wide open within the Authority. A system of transfers, promotions, and demotions has been set up to facilitate changes from one section to another or within sections.

"The Public Health aspect is more far reaching, in that its field of activity includes the entire Tennessee Valley area. A comprehensive safety program is receiving full consideration although a separate safety section is still in the process of development. Here the Authority is not only interested in safety measures in connection with construction activities, but also in cooperating with state and local agencies in the development of a general safety program in areas outside these in the immediate vicinity of construction activities.

"I have attempted to picture for you the activities of two of the Divisions of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and to show how the work of the one dovetailed with the work of the other. I have further attempted to show how essential it is in undertakings such as these that full cooperation of national, state, and local agencies be assured. It is through the interest and combined efforts of these agencies that the social development program will fail or succeed."

SPRING SPORTS OCCUPY ATHLETIC SPOTLIGHT

Track Prospects Brighter As Newcomers Improve With Practice; Loss of Russell's Mighty Arm Causes Concern

With three weeks of steady practice behind them, Coach Bob Thrower's cinderpath men are speedily getting into condition for the coming season, and should eventually develop into a competent though somewhat inexperienced squad.

Quite a few of the newcomers have shown remarkable improvement in practice and a number of them may give the veterans a close race for regular positions.

Loessberg and Captain Byar, both lettermen, will figure in the 100 yard and 200 yard dashes along with Vaughn, Smyrll, Rich, and Dowell, freshmen.

In the quarter-mile and half-mile races, Snedecker, who last year broke the college record in the half mile event, will probably be joined by Campbell, a newcomer.

Although there are no veterans in the mile run, Meares and Allen will be counted upon to fill the gap, while the veteran Paul, along with Saint and Staley, should easily take care of the two-mile situation.

Atkins, Teague, and Lavender have been working out in the high hurdles division, and Byar, Hallam, and Grebas are looking best in the low hurdles event.

In the shot-put division are Little and Woodling, lettermen, who will be assisted by Mose Gamble and Kayrukstis. Woodling also participates in the discus throw along with Gamble, who will possibly develop into an important fixture in that corner.

The pole vault event will be left to Lavender and Bunch, both of whom were members of last year's squad.

Gray and Toms will be back in the high-jump division. Toms holds the college record in this event, and Gray, although not a letterman, always turns in a good performance. Gray also figures in the board jump along with Loessberg.

Probably the most difficult problem Coach Thrower faces in the building of the 1934 track machine is the one of finding a prospect to fill the vacancy left by Russell in the javelin tossing department. Unless some outstanding material is soon unearthed, Snedecker will be assigned that position.

Tennis Season To Begin Next Week

Five Letter Men Form Nucleus For Strong 1934 Squad

If ideal weather holds out the spring tournament, officially opening the 1934 net season, will get underway next week.

With a field composed of five letter men, all of whom have had at least two years experience, the tourney entries total nearly thirty five, a good many of which are yearlings.

After the graduation of Coach Fischbach, number one man of last year, that post was thrown wide open for oncoming play. Among the likelier prospects to garner that position are Talmage, Karnell, Phay and Gillingham, the four seeded men in the tourney.

Ed Hurst, letter man of two years ago, is back in the ranks and bids fair to hover near the top before the season opens, while Warman and Alexander, squadmen of last year, are also back, along with Bill Quigley, who is showing a greatly improved game over that of last year.

Among the yearlings who must not be overlooked are Embry Esbach, Wilkerson Meeks, and Wendell Donald, all of whom play a fair brand of tennis.

Although dates have not been definitely settled an extensive schedule has been planned for the netmen by Coach Fischbach. Four meets will be held on the local courts, with a possibility of one or two more. The visitors will be the University of Tennessee, E. Tennessee Teachers, Tusculum, and Mars Hill.

A return meet will be held at U. T., after which the team will hit the road for a week's trip into North Carolina and Virginia. On this trip the netmen will meet Mars Hill College, Livingston College at Salisbury, N. C., U.N.C. at Chapel Hill, Virginia Tech, with E. Tennessee Teachers slated for the return hop.

Sophomore Claim Interclass Trophy As Freshmen Lose

Track Meet, Last Interclass Event, Scheduled For Middle Of May

Defeating the freshman basketball team by one point in the final game last week, the sophomores won their third first place in the interclass athletic contests, and are now entitled to the Y. M. C. A. athletic cup.

The other two sophomore victories were in tennis and football, while the freshmen captured the swimming meet. The fifth and last of the interclass series will be a track meet held the middle of May. Ribbons will be offered as individual awards in this meet.

Atchison, Loessberg, Graf, And Corns Likely Battery Material As Baseball Practice Advances

With three weeks of practice already behind it, the Highlander baseball squad faces two more weeks of intensive training before meeting the Lenoir City Independents in the opening game of the season. Theh Scots will play one or two games with the Independents, between the fourth and seventh of April.

Batting practice, infield and outfield work, and sliding practice, followed by a three inning scrimmage Thursday afternoon, was the general order of the drills for the past week. Various combinations have been tried in the infield, with Blazer and Mark Andrews showing up well at third, Kizer and Lehr at shortstop, Gillespie at second, Kalman and Corns at first, and Graf and Corns behind the bat.

Gillespie, Kizer, and Graf, lettermen, continued their steady work in their respective positions, Gillespie, fast throws to first and home being especially noticeable. Of the new men, Corns, Hand, and Mark Andrews have done the most consistent work, and should have a good chance to break into the opening line-up. Corns handles himself well either as a catcher or as a first baseman, and Hand is trying his luck as a pitcher and an outfielder. Andrews will have a hard fight on his hands in trying to take the third base post from "Toots" Blazer.

The pitchers have begun using a few fast balls and curves in their workouts and will be ready to show what they can do next week. Atchison and Loessberg will probably do most of the pitching for the Scotties. The batters will have to hit at curve and fast ball pitching for the first time next week.

Mermen Defeated In Atlanta Meets

Display Excellent Form With Emory; Others Were 'Too Tough'

The Maryville swimming team closed its season with a four day stay in Atlanta last week, during which it met three of the strongest teams in the south, Georgia Tech, Auburn and Emory University. The closest competition the Highlanders gave their opponents was at Emory where the final score was tallied at 44-40. In the triangular meet which Tech took easily and Auburn trailed a slow second, the Scot swimmers gained only 17 points to 32 and 53 for their opponents. Meeks, Obert and Esbach were the only Maryville men to secure places against the Intercollegiate champions of the south. In spite of the defeat, the swimming of the Georgia sharks has proved a strong incentive for the Scots.

At Emory University, the going was closer and Esbach carried off the honors with two first places and a third. The meet was not decided until after the final medley relay.

The trip, as a whole, was considered a success. The team did better than was expected against such rigid competition, and the value of the experience gained is finestimable.

While at Emory, the team was quartered in the various fraternity houses on the campus, and at the Tech, the team stayed at the Atlanta Athletic Club in the heart of the city. Gracious Georgian hospitality was the rule of both institutions.

OBSERVATIONS

We've just returned from the place of supreme inhibitions. We've come from the dining hall, and from sitting down the table just a little from the end seat occupied by Mr. Albert Cacy, the man wtih the bassoon voice which reverberates from floor four to the basement in Carnegie. Mr. Cacy has a right to be proud of his voice. . . no one has one anything like it.

One more board payment. . . one more biology examination (after the next one, probably), one more month of school (after April), and one more river to cross (after going into Knoxville for one more time). That's the program.

Miss Lightfoot, our table mate, the woman who placed third in attaining scholarship in the college, suggested that the first of these processes BORED her anyhow, and she'd be glad to dispose of that ::standing in line" business.

—0—

Miss Massey, of the Alabama drawl suggests that there's to be just one adjustment. That is, that the board collectors rather than the board money dispensers are going to be the ones standing in line.

—0—

Mr. Warman, who sits up at the end of the table eats out of one side of his mouth listening with the other getting ready to fill in with a wisecrack or a correction of someone's English (if he beats us to it).

—0—

Miss Carpenter puts in small slices of sly statements between the thick, "bready" remarks of the others; Miss Geraldine Smith is never there until the fun is over because she's running around after Mr. Queener and his debaters; Miss Dorsey makes it a point to miss everything, and Miss Hast hastu do the same thing because she's a friend of Miss Dorsey. This is merely a description of the procedure among the senior members o. table number 17 in the college Dining Hall.

—0—

Observers note: Did we say college seniors?

—0—

It looks like some of us are agoing to be turning Confucianists before so very long. The Prexy tells us that the leader of that religion spent twelve years looking for a job.

—0—

It looks a little more like some of us are going to avent the inevitable as long as possible by going to graduate school. Or, as one man says, if you don't have enough money to go to university, and not enough to go to work, you might go to Seminary. Understand we're not getting personal in this.

—0—

We had another of those unsigned letters last week or so. They will come. We wish often that this paper would become like the Chattanooga University publication just long enough for us to be allowed to say what we think of people who don't sign their written notes. It looks to us like the height, or should we say depth of cowardice. It is interesting to note that the letter was on yellow paper, possibly giving some insight into the writer's character.

It all goes to show that writing Observations like doing everything else has its ups and downes.

We're still enjoying the business of noting who puts what where in the ranking of our poems. You know, the poetry test that seems to trouble some of our friends, and those that were our friends before they took it. But you can take it. As we've said before, there's only one prerequisite to taking it. You've got to be able to take it.

It seems like we've said that before, but that's all right; maybe you've taken a poetry test before.

There are only two people in the college who haven't taken the aptitude examination. Strangely enough they are one senior and one freshman. Mr. Bob Beyer and Mr. Richard Battaglia are those guilty. But they're going to get it. We'll give it to them Orrally.

We've gone into the lower regions of Carnegie to pass the rest of our college days (and just incidentally to get something of a refund). We happened in with a pretty good roommate too. We like Crump because his head's so near the ground making it possible for both of us to comb our hair before the same mirror at the same time.

were weak, thus making the decision difficult. Bainonian Society was especially commended for the stage setting, which was original and appropriate.

Theta's play was one which, in itself, is generally well liked. Its human interest, its mixed pathos and humor, makes a strong appeal to any audience. Theta's cast was well chosen, each of the four "Little Women" doing excellent work.

"Little Women", because it offered opportunities for four major roles, instead of the usual one or two, and beacuse it has figured this year in the film world, was concluded to be the most suitable play for college dramatics.

Maryville Represented Semi-Finals National Debate Convention

Representatives From One Hundred Twenty-one Colleges Compete In Debate

Maryville representatives to the National Pi Kappa Delta Convention held at Lexington, made an excellent showing.

The men's debate team was represented by Earle Crawford and Archibald Pieper. Maria Wynn and Florence Hyde entered the girls' contests. The orators were Grace Proffitt and Newman Smith. Miss Proffitt also competed in the extempore speeches. Louis Krainock was the other delegate participating in that contest.

Representatives were present from one hundred twenty-one colleges throughout the country. In the men's debates alone, there were one hundred fifty-one teams entered. In all the events it was necessary to perform five times before any results were made known. Any team losing two out of the first five rounds was eliminated.

Both of Maryville's debate teams won three debates out of their first five rounds. Among the teams they debated were the men's teams from the University of Toledo, Central College of Missouri; State Teacher's College of Kiarney, Nebraska. The girls debated against Southwestern College of Winfield, Kansas and Culver-Stockton College of Missouri and three other colleges.

Grace Proffitt was our most successful entrant. Forty-two girls entered the oration preliminaries. Miss Proffitt was still in the contest Thursday evening and was booked to speak in the semi-finals on Friday. She was equally successful in extempore speaking.

Dr. E. R. Hunter, who was at Lexington during the first part of the week, returned to Maryville on Thursday night. The other delegates are expected to return today.

Interracial Conference Held In Morristown

Six Colleges Represented At Interesting Meetings

The Y. M.-Y.W. Interracial Conference held last week-end in the Morristown Normal Industrial College, was attended by representatives from Maryville College, Morristown College, Swift Memorial College, University of Tennessee and Knoxville College. Among the speakers and leaders were: Dr. E. C. Paustian, President of Morristown College; Professor Howard Kester, Socialist leader; Mr. J. H. Daves, Professor of Sociology, Knoxville College; Dean Foster of Tusculum College; Rev. Mr. C. Clayton of Knoxville.

"The Changing South", used as the theme of the Conference, was presented in all its aspects: economic, political, educational, religious, and racial. The present forces and experiments at work in the country were also discussed as these topics were enlarged upon.

Using a quotation from Fosdick, Dr. Paustian very definitely presented a challenge to the Christian world as it faces the interracial problem today: "A Christian is a forward looker, one who sees a better world and works for it." He stated in the course of his conclud-

Douglas Woods

The students and faculty of the college were shocked to hear, last Tuesday morning, the announcement of the sudden death of Douglas Woods of Greenback, Tennessee, who was a freshman in Maryville.

Mr. Woods had been ill at his home for a week with a mild case of measles, and was apparently on the way to recovery when on Friday he contracted pneumonia in both lungs and grew steadily worse until his death at two o'clock on Tuesday morning.

Naomi and Edith Woods, both members of the senior class at the college, Ruth, a younger sister, Mrs. Weldon Hina, an older sister, and both of the young man's parents survive him.

In his first year in college, Mr. Woods had been an active and popular student. He was on the basketball squad, a member of the college Glee Singers and a freshman apprentice on the HIGHLAND ECHO staff.

SUNDAY VESPERS

Dr. Stevenson's theme for vesper service on April 8 will be "Men and the Bible". The choir will present the anthem, "When I Survey The Wondrous Cross" by Protheroe.

The cast, selected from the College Players, members of the Expression Department, is now rehearsing the mystery drama, which is being coached by Miss Wilhelmina Holland, of the Expression Department. The play was produced originally at Wallack's Theatre in New York, and was an outstanding success of the season.

Senior Class Play Is Chosen By Committee

Tryouts To Be Held Next Week

The Senior Class Play has been chosen by a committee composed of Michael Testa, chairman, Viola Lightfoot and Lois Walace. After reading a number of plays that have been successfully produced the committee finally decided upon the production of Martin Flavin's "Children of the Moon", a romance-comedy. This play should rival last year's production of "Death Takes a Holiday".

Tryouts will be held sometime next week, probably in Mrs. West's classroom. The exact time will be announced at a later date.

Miss Geraldine Smith Elected Queen Of May

The senior class met this morning in the theism class room and selected Miss Geraldine Smith, auburn haired senior to serve as May Queen in the 1934 festival.

Four senior students were nominated from the floor. The ballot count showed a decided majority count for Miss Smith over her three opponents.

Dr. Robert Bartlett Is Visitor On Campus

Former Maryville Student Leads Chapel Service

Dr. Robert Merrill Bartlett, Pastor of a Congregational Church in Springfield, Massachusetts, addressed the college chapel service on Friday morning, April 6. Dr. Bartlett was a student at Mayville College from the year 1917 to the year 1919. He taught at a college in China before he was called to a church near Boston, Mass., where he preached for several years before accepting his present charge. "Builders of a New World"", a book written by Dr. Bartlett, is being used as a study guide by the local missionary societies of the Presbyterian Church.

In his address, Dr. Bartlett presented the viewpoints of the eminent men of today's leading nations regarding the future relationship of the nations of the world.

"H. G. Wells represented England. 'A new mind for a new age,' Wells says, "The three fundamental things necessary to change the world are

1. A universal view of history
2. An understanding of how we are made biologically to get rid of prejudices and hatreds in order to live like normal people.
3. A reconstruction of the social and economic life of the world.'

Wells believes that science and the enlightened mind can change the old, outworn traditions of the world that keep us enslaved to narrow patriotism and war.

"Stefan Zweig represented Germany. 'A New Religion for a New Age'. As a German Jew, Zweig through his study and travel has found a new religion which transcends the limitations of creeds, nations, and races. Zweig represents the thinking people of Germany. He went through the war as Hitler did, but he came out a very different type of man, believing in internationalism and peace.

"The unrest in Germany today is due to the Versailles Treaty. The German youth are demanding free-

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

"God's Gentleness" will be the subject of Dr. Stevenson's sermon for the chapel service on Wednesday, April 11. The Vesper Choir will sing "Now Let All the Heavens Adore Thee", from Bach's cantata, "Sleepers, Awake."

College Orchestra To Present Annual Concert

Solos By Miss Frances Henry Will Be A Feature Of The Program

The College Orchestra will present its Annual Concert next Monday evening at 8:15 in Voorhees Chapel. The members have worked hard under Miss Mildred Butcher's direction to produce a concert that will be the equal of any of those given in former years.

An outstanding feature of the program will be two solos by Miss Frances Henry. The piece from Haydn's Creation is well-known in music circles for its beauty and simplicity. The Hero Song from The Chocolate Soldier is a widely-known melody. Miss Henry is accompanied in these solos by the orchestra and this makes a very pleasing arrangement.

The program consists of the following numbers:

Bohemian Girl ---------- Balfe
Flower Song ---------- Lange
Orchestra
Recitative and Air
With Verdure Clad (The Creation) ---------- Haydn
Mary Frances Henry
Highland Laddies (Scotch Selections) ---- ------ Seredy
Orchestra
Valse Caprice ------ Smith-Holmes

Monday morning the Glee Club will sing at the Alcoa High School at the chapel service. Several numbers will be repeated from the concert in February.

New Botanical Garden In College Woods To Harbor National Plants

Site Located Near Amphitheatre

(By Miss Bonnie Hudson)

Within the next few weeks we shall see the realization of a desire long felt by those most deeply interested in the botany courses offered here. The Botanical Garden is now assured, and work on it has begun.

About fifteen years ago the College Woods were a veritable wilderness that harbored an unbelievable variety of beautiful wild plants, flowering plants, mosses, ferns, lichens, algae and fungi in abundance, so that, although trips off the campus were valuable for botany students, the plants collected in the College Woods, less than half a mile from Science Hall, could compete favorably in number and variety with those collected in an extended trip to more distant places. Then it was truly an adventure to botanize in the College Woods.

Within the past eight years it has been necessary for obvious reasons to clear the woods considerably and to pasture the pigs in rather an extended area of it. This clearing has lent to the woods an unmistakeable air that would never have been gained by leaving it in its wild state, but it also has removed some fine plants and has exposed others that needed the brush covering so much that they have disappeared. Needless to say, the pigs devoured the bulbs of Shooting Stars, Ladies Slippers and other plants that we were fortunate to find so near us, so that these became more rare each year, and some are now extinct.

As these changes were coming rapidly and inevitably, a plan for a plant preserve of some sort began to be evolved. It was hoped that a small plot of ground in the College Woods which had a variety of hab-

Faculty Members Attend Psychology Convention

Dr. Fields and Miss Gamble At Birmingham

On Friday and Saturday, March 30 and 31, the convention of the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology was held at Birmingham, Alabama, Birmingham Southern College acting as host for the delegates. Dr. Fields, Miss Gamble, and Mrs. Fields made up the party which was in attendance from Maryville.

This society is devoted to the development of Psychology and Philosophy, and has as its members most of the foremost colleges and universities of the South and Southeast. At the convention this year, there were lectures and discussion groups in both Psychology and Philosophy held during the first day, with the two departments working separately so that more could be taken up in discussion and more papers could be read. On Saturday, there were papers read to both groups, assembled together. The subjects of most of these lectures were some particular fields of research in either Philosophy or Psychology, varying from one extreme to the other.

On Friday night, the president of JUSTICE

Almost two years after the shocking crash of the Insull Companies, the voluntary exile in Greece of the notorious embezzler, and the continual attempts of the United States to secure his arrest, Samuel Insull is to be brought into American custody and will be returned to Chicago for trial.

The one-time $5-a-week London clerk came across the sea to become the master of a vast industrial empire. "The assets of his companies were estimated at four billion dollars, and his investors numbered 600,000," wrote the Chicago Tribune. He was a colossal civic figure, for bankers, politicians, brokers, and business men courted his favor. He was also a patron of the Civic Opera of Chicago. Then came the crash leaving in its wake more than a half million victims. Samuel Insull went to Greece, one of the few places where the authorities of the United States could not seize him.

Embezzlement is the legal term for which Insull is wanted, based on the fact that checks for $66,000 and $104,000 were taken from the accounts of Insull companies and were approved by Insull for payment to the brokers of Martin Insull, his brother.

The half million victims will, no doubt, hope that the American Government will rectify its mistake in allowing this man to escape his criminal charges, and will hope for a speedy trial. The bankers and politicians who bowed to Insull's whims, however, may not view with anticipation the return of the former master fearing an exposure of their own policies.

No matter how the return of Insull may be considered there are two facts that cannot escape the American citizen who is at all interested in the enforcement of law. One is the expenditure of money involved in the arrest of a swindler; the other is the amount of time wasted in bringing a thief to judgment. The case of Insull is only another instance of the unfairness of American justice.

The Coming of Christ—John Masefield, New York, Macmillan Company 1928

When John Masefield chooses to take the familiar story of the shepherds and wisemen and read into it a new significance it is well not to overlook the result. In a simple dramatic form the birth of Christ is related, not in strictly Biblical fashion, however.

The Anima Christi is first presented on the threshold of earthly life, attended by four angels, the Sword, the Power, the Mercy, the Light. Each one represents to Christ the difficulties of the task in which He is about to engage. At this point the spirits of Peter and Paul, foretelling what Christ wil achieve through them, impel the Anima Christi to enter life, saying,

"O brother Man, I come; hate me not always."

Throughout the remainder of the piece the human actors in the story occupy the center of the stage. In fact, the Anima Christi is at no point the dominating character in Masefield's treatment. It is rather the wisemen and shepherds, who are given a deft touch of reality.

Each of the three wisemen have succeeded in one area of human endeavor, but as they approach Death they are appalled to find that success is fleeting. To find the King who will not fail as they have is their goal. Baltasar, "wielder of a million men", has the world within his grasp, yet he is aware of a lack in himself. Gaspar is the great schemer who see that "half of my threads are unspun".

And the presence of Death at my side is a terror and pain."

Melchior is a seeker too, for

"truth in things and dreams
In wise men's myths and old wives' tales."

His plea is:

"O marvellous master, let me find
Some link that will forever bind
Our minds to an eternal mind."

The scene shifts to the three shepherds, Rocky, Earthy, and Sandy, watching on a hillside and squabbling among themselves. Each is a distinct person. Rochy says of God:

"His hand has been upon me many a time", while Earthy trembles at

"The ghost of old Grim-one" and Sandy grumbles that the many are served by the few. On this very human scene the angels with the message of Christ's birth appear. Then follows the manger scene where the wisemen and shepherds offer their traditional gifts and carry Mary and the babe to the home of one of the shepherds.

Masefield's purpose was not to retell the Christmas story. Nor does it seem that his treatment was greatly concerned with the figure of Christ. The Chief excellence of this volume is the fine portrayal of the persons who witnessed His birth. As poetry THE COMING OF CHRIST is not of especial merit but the treatment of the theme is highly commendable.

Change In Requirements For Entrance Admission

The Faculty of Maryville College recently announced one modification in the requirements for admission to the freshman class.

Two years ago the following requirements were set up: "The freshman class is limited to three hundred students selected from the graduates of accredited four-year high schools who for their high school course have ranked in the upper two-thirds of their classes."

This rule is now modified to provide that those who rank in the lowest one-third of their high school classes may be admitted to the freshman class upon passing satisfactorily a comprehensive examination and a scholastic aptitude examination given by the College.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

The first feverish freshman days become in the minds of many of us little more than a confused recollection of standing in line; waiting for delayed trunks; going to a class in one building, only to find that it meets in a hall on the opposite side of the campus; and wondering, generally, just why people come to college, anyway. From the vague picture we have of that time, however, a few persons are rather clearly outstanding. One of these—she stood behind us in line for several hours on a hot autumn day—was Kay Carpenter. In the course of the conversation which naturally tok place we learned, among other things, that she had graduated from Tennessee Wesleyan Junior College before she came to Maryville. What we did not discover was that her real name is Kathaleen.

Kay, moreover, did not give us a hint of the splendid record she had made at Tennessee Wesleyan. A glimpse at that record reveals a number of interesting facts. We find that she was an active Y. W. C. A. worker. She was an officer of the Knightonian Literary Society. She appeared in dramatic productions sponsored by the college. She was a talented student and graduate of the department of music. She was editor of the Tennessee Wesleyan publication, the "Nocatula", and was valedictorian of her class. She was voted the best all round girl in her graduating class, a vote cast by the faculty in consideration both of her scholarship and of her participation in college activities.

Since she came to Maryville, she has continued her work in those fields in which she was interested at Tennessee Wesleyan. For the past two years she has been a member of the Girls Glee Club and of the Vesper Choir. She is director of the junior choir at the First Methodist Church.

Kay is best known here for her literary achievements. She is a member of the Writers' Workshop. She was a junior associate editor of the Highland Echo last year; she is Editor-in-Chief this year. Recently she was awarded the Alexander English prize, a prize awarded her for making the best four-year record in English in the senior class. Besides being a capable writer, journalist, and student of English, she is a poet of no mean ability.

She is now president of Theta Epsilon society. Previously she served as secretary of the society.

Friends here who have come to know her, have found in her a delightful combination of capability and unusual persnality; a combination, which makes her an altogether interesting and worthwhile sort of person.

This edition of the HIGHLAND ECHO is in charge of Violet Webb. Dorothy Nethery will edit next week's paper.

CHEMISTRY AND PHYSICS CLUB

The Chemistry and Physics Club met March 27th in Science Hall. The program consisted of a paper on "The Production of Sulfuric Acid" by Thomas Kidd and a talk on "Histerisis" by John Phay.

April 10 George Deebel will give a talk on "Luminol", which is a newly discovered chemiluminescence substance. An interesting program is being planned. All members are urged to be present.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

The Home Economics Club met Wednesday, March 28, in the Home Eco. room. The newly installed freshmen, who were eligible for membership by having an average of C had charge of the program. The Baldwin girls presented some skits which were very amusing. The girls of Memorial held a comic debate.

Student Volunteer Group Holds Annual Convention

Two Maryville Representatives Elected Officers of State Group

The Student Volunteers of Tennessee met for the Annual State Conference at Lebanon from March 23 to 25, the general business and discussion meetings being held in the Presbyterian Church there. The Life Service Groups of Cumberland University were the hosts for the convention and had made extensive arrangements for the entertainment of the seventy delegates. Many of them were entertained in private homes.

Maryville had by far the largest representation of the twelve schools present with twenty-five registered delegates, five of whom hitch-hiked the 175 miles.

The theme of the convention was Christian Students and New Life for the World. This theme was developed in talks by Mr. Jesse R. Wilson, General Secretary of the National Student Volunteer Movement. Mr. Wilson also led the group in its discussion of the projected United Student Christian Movement. From the tone of the meeting and the report from the general secretary it was apparent that such a movement, a combination of all present Christian organizations, would not soon come into being. Prominent place was also given in discussion to a proposed alternative basis for Student Volunteer membership. At present membership in the national organization of Student Volunteers is open only to those definitely committed to Christian missionary service abroad. The proposed change would admit to active membership all students vitally interested in Christian missions. While no formal vote could be taken it can be reported that a majority of the delegates were against such a change in membership basis.

In the annual election two Maryville students were selected to serve as officers for the year 1934-35. Elizabeth Peterson was elected vice president, and Stuart Gillis, treasurer. The other officers are president, Vernon Pettit of Southwestern University; secretary, Ada Hereford, of Cumberland; and editor, Dorothy Neiser of Milligan.

Y. M. Elects Officers For The Coming Year

The regular election of officers for the Y.M.C.A. was held Tuesday, April 3rd. The new officers are:

President—Earle W. Crawford
Vice President—Hugh Crawford
Secretary—Glover A. Leitch
Treasurer—Samuel Waid
Advisory Board Member—Class of 1937—Richard Schlafer

Choir Entertained At Dr. Stevenson's Home

The members of the choir had a very delightful evening Wednesday, March 28th, at a party held at the home of Dr. Stevenson in the college woods. Games of all sorts were played. Delicious refreshments, consisting of pistachio ice cream, salad, coffee, and cake were served. The party ended very pleasantly with a walk back to the dormitories.

Scot Trackmen Open Season Today With U. T. Performers

Highlanders Hopeful of Making Strong Showing In First Meet of Year; Elimination Tryouts Show Scots As Strong In Dashes, Weak In Weights

Coach Thrower's cinder pounders have slowly rounded into shape for the meet with U. T. today, and little can be predicted about the outcome, this being the opener of the season for both schools.

The boys have been pushed at a stiff pace for the past two weeks, the older men getting the greater part of the work. Although there seems to be a glimmer or two of hope in the green material, the veterans are bearing the heaviest burden by far.

Thrower hasn't had too much time this spring for limbering those winter-stiffened muscles and oiling up creaky joints, but the weather man has given him a break with warm sunshiny afternoons and just the right amount of spring in the air to make running a pleasure. He has worked his men hard these past two weeks and all he can do today is sit tight on the side lines and watch the effects of his rigid training on them.

The results of the tryouts last week were only mildly encouraging, last year's letter men pushing out in front all the way. Captain Beyar eked out four first in the 440, the 220, the 100, and the low hurdles. Graydon Paul stepped high to take the mile and the two mile, and his running this year is a pretty sight for sore eyes. Snedeker lost a close 440 to Beyar but he cinched the half mile in a breeze. Atkins did the high hurdles well.

The list also inlcudes Lehr, the javelin throw; Hunt, discus throw; Little, shot; Lavender, pole vault; and Loessberg, broad jump.

UNION COLLEGE BEATEN BY LOCAL NETTERS

Local Netmen Impressive In Their First Win

Showing form indicative of a winning team this season the Scot tennis team last Monday captured a close decision from the Union College tennismen, of Barbourville, Ky. by a 3 to 2 count.

The visitors presented stiff competition and forced the Scots to the limit to win, despite the fact that one of their number played in three matches. The Union team captured one single match and one double to earn their points.

In an exhibition match to the main attraction Coach Gibson of the visiting team met Phay in a match that required three sets before Phay lost out by scores of 8-6, 4-6, 3-6.

Results: Karnell (M) beat Simpson, 6-4, 6-3; Captain Talmadge (M) bested Davis, 7-5, 6-0 and Ericson (U) beat Gillingham, 6-4, 6-4. Karnell and Talmadge beat Davis and Simpson, 6-4, 6-3, and Ericson and Simpson (U) beat Gillingham and Warman, 6-4, 6-2.

DIAMONDEERS TO PLAY THRICE NEXT WEEK

Next week the Highlander baseball nine will engage two foes on the diamond, one game being played on foreign soil while a couple of contests are carded for the local backyard.

Monday afternoon the Scotties will journey to Lenoir City for a return game with the Lenoir City Independents. Fans will remember that the Independents this week helped the Highlanders usher in the baseball season by giving them a 4 to 3 trimming. You just watch the Scots next week and see if they don't turn the tables.

Tennis Team Whips Tennessee Netmen

Fischbach's Men Capture All But Two Matches

Coach Fischbach's Highlander tennis team continued its winning ways last Thursday when it turned back the University of Tennessee netmen, dropping but two matches out of the seven macthes played.

VanHee dropped the only singles match while Phay and VanHee were defeated by Earnest and Bean in the doubles, the match requiring three sets to determine the winner. After capturing the first set the Maryville doubles team dropped two straight sets, giving the match to the University netmen by scores of 6-4, 5-7, 2-6.

The best match of the day found Karnell trimming his opponent in three sets, Karnell winning out by a 4-6, 6-3, 6-1 count. Talmadge had a difficult time winning the first set of his match but took the second in easy fashion.

Next Wednesday afternoon on the local courts the Scotties will meet the Vols in a return engagement, hoping to make it two in a row over the Knoxvillians.

Results:

Singles— Talmadge (M) beat Fitts, 8-6, 6-1. Karnell (M) beat Earnest, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1. Phay (M) bested Hodges, 6-1, 7-5. Gillingham (M) beat Claxton 6-0, 6-2 and Bean (T) trimmed VanHee, 6-3, 6-3.

GIRLS' BASEBALL TEAMS BREAK EVEN IN SERIES

Two of the three games scheduled for the girls' Indoor Baseball tournament have been played. The first game, held Tuesday, April 3rd, was won by the junior-seniors, the score being 30-9. The freshmen-sophomore team climbed in the second game, and after a close game they defeated the juniors-seniors with the score 18-16. The deciding game of the tournament will be played Tuesday, April 10.

The two Baseball teams are organized as follows:

Junior-Senior
Captain—Vanaman
Manager—Conover
Freshman-Sophomore—
Captain—Worth
Manager—Smith

Track practice will start Thursday, April 12th. All Point System girls are urged to come out to the first practice.

Next Wednesday and Thursday afternoons the Scotties will play hosts to a strong outfit from Mars Hill, being idle for the remainder of the week. It is expected that the Highlanders will have reached their form by that time and make it plenty troublesome for the visitors, as well as all future opponents.

Manager Huffstetler is still working on the schedule for this year and expects to complete it within the near future. As it now stands the Scotties will play a twenty game schedule, mostly with conference opposition.

Triumphed for Tiger

An excellent action photo of William Bonthron, Princeton track star, who scored a triumph for the Tiger by prancing to victory in the Baxter Mile in the New York A. C. indoor meet at New York. Bonthron handed Glenn Cunningham, Kansas star, his first defeat of the year in thrilling race.

Tournaments In Closing Rounds

Inter-Class Track Meet Slated For Next Week

The various tournaments now underway on the Hill are progressing rapidly and are expected to be completed within the near future. Thus far two tournaments are being played off, with another to be held next week.

The handball tournament for boys got under way this week with a large number of entries taking part in the affair. The first round matches have been played off and in all probability will be brought to a close the earlier part of next week.

The tennis tournament has just about been concluded with the semi-final round expected to be finished today or Monday. Talmadge is slated to meet Phay in the upper bracket of the semi-finals while Karnell and Gillingham will battle it out in the lower bracket. All these men are members of the tennis team and their matches will undoubtedly prove interesting and closely-fought.

Next Saturday afternoon, April 14, the interclass track meet will be held, the winners of the first three places in each event to be awarded with ribbons.

No one who is a member of the present track squad is eligible to compete nor are those who have lettered before. The classes have been asked to organize their teams as soon as possible so that workouts may be held next week. A large number of men have signified their intentions of entering and the meet should prove successful.

NO SPRING FOOTBALL

Coach Honaker anounced this week that there would be no spring football practice as has been the case in former years.

Since most of the football candidates are engaging either in baseball or track and can not take part in the workouts Coach Honaker thought it best to eliminate this part f the athletic program.

Baseballers Beat Hiwassee With Ninth Inning Attack

Honaker's Men Win First Collegiate Contest Of The Season; Singles By Graf and Kizer In Final Frame Enables Gillespie To Score

Scotties Lose To Lenoir City Nine

Baseball Team Defeated In Season's Opener

Looking the part of anything but a baseball combination the Highlanders dropped their first baseball game of the year when they bowed to the Lenoir City Independents here last Tuesday afternoon. The final score was 4 to 3.

With three Scot hurlers seeing service during the course of the game the Highlanders allowed the visitors to roll up a three run lead before the Scot nine could break into the scoring column. The Lenoir City outfit pushed across a marker in the third frame and added two more in the fourth inning. The visitors put the game on ice in the eighth frame when they managed to tally a run after two men were out.

The Highlander crew scored their first marker in the fifth inning, aided by a walk and an error on the part of the visiting team. They added a run in each of the two following frames but were unable to muster enough strength to put across the winning runs in the final innings.

The game was a listless sort of affair, with erratic ball being displayed by both teams. The Scotties committed four miscues while the Lenoir City baseballers had three errors chalked against them. The pposing hurlers, Lynch and Ryan, alowed the Scotties but three hits.

Coach Honaker started Atchison on the mound but sent in Cochran later in the game to relieve him. Gabbard went in for the last two frames and allowed one hit. These three hurlers held the visiting team to seven hits but errors on the part of the Scotties proved their downfall.

Loessberg connected for two singles to feature the Scotties' batting attack while Corns added the other hit. For the Lenoir City crew Foster led the attack with a couple of singles.

Score by innings:

Maryville—	0	0	0	0	1	1	1	0	0	3	3	4
Lenoir C.—	0	0	1	2	0	0	0	1	0	4	7	3

Pushing over a run after two were out in the last half of the ninth inning, the Highlander baseball team nosed out the Hiwassee nine 2 to 1 last Thursday afternoon in the first college game of the season.

With the score tied at one-all, and two out, in the last inning, Gillespie knocked a fly which the Hiwassee right-fielder dropped. Graf, coming up as a pinch hitter, hit to right field for one base, putting Gillespie on third. Kizer then sent a clean single to left, scoring Gillespie and ending the game.

The Scots scored first in the fifth inning. Kalman reached first base on an error to open the inning, was advanced to second on a sacrifice by Lehr, and went to third on an infield out. Loessberg followed with a grounder and Kalman scored when the Hiwassee second-baseman fumbled the ball. The inning was ended when Loessberg was put out on an attempted steal.

Hiwassee tied the score in the seventh on an error and two hits. The run was made when Frost singled with men on first and third.

The Highlanders filled the bases with none out in the third inning, but were unable to score. Lehr and Atchison got on base with singles and Loessberg was safe on an error, but the next man hit a line drive to the pitcher, who doubled Lehr off third. A grounder to the second baseman ended the Scots' chance of scoring.

Atchison pitched eight innings for Maryville, giving up only three hits and one base on balls, while striking out four batters. Loessberg pitched the final frame and retired the last man on strikes. Only two of the Scotties struck out, each of them being put out on a called third strike.

Both teams showed early season weak spots in fielding, being charged with four errors each, but the Scots showed improvement over the Lenoir City performance earlier in the week.

Maryville's five hits were registered by Lehr, Atchison, Loessberg, Graf, and Kizer.

Score by innings:

Hiwassee	000	000	100—	1	6	4
Maryville	000	010	001—	2	5	4

OBSERVATIONS

Introducing on the other side of another sheet an editorial by little Violet Webb the "editor for a day" of the Highland Echo. Read it. . . . and tell us what it's about on account of we don't have time.

—0—

That leaves Miss Nethery, and Miss Proffitt as paper girls before Miss Carpenter ends her vacation. My, what a feminine group to represent a college in its journalistic endeavors. Shamey, men, whatsamot, whatsamot!

—0—

That begins to sound like Krainock, so we'll cut it out. You know it seems very queer that we've not had occasion to mention Krainock this year. We've mentioned about all the other male bovine tossers on the hill, including Howard Kipp (sorry Friday Neff, we just had to do it), Alexander Christie, Professor Queener, Dr. Hunter, Dr. Stevenson (you readers must realize that after Christie and before Queener we're encountering thoroughbred bovines), and some of the rerst . . . . oh, yes, Dr. Lloyd.

—0—

Well, that's some of them, but Krainock belongs right in the rank and file with the rest of them. Only one is from the actual rank and file of the United States (Ohio being the center, according to the Prexy).

—0—

You'll wonder why the Dean of the college rates such a calling. Well, there has to be some one in the the crowd to help Kipp spell his words and tell him where to make the paragiraffes.

Dr. Hunter is the college authority, member of the Advisory Board of the Y. M. C. A., who had a personal announcement given to him about two weeks ago. He read it, and liked it so well that he got up in chapel and read it to all of the students. That made some of the rest of the members of the Advisory Board sore because they didn't get to read their announcements before chapel.

This Observation column amounts to the first 1-3 of a big favor to Miss Kathaleen Carpenter. We've been handicapped all year, not being able to write what we know on account of Kay's the slasher, but for three weeks we're prepared to open fire on the semi-retired editor. If anyone knows anything particularly entertaining concerning Kay, might he see us and it will be seriously considered as material for the printed page.

It looks just a little like some kind of convention with this outfit of alumni coming back. Several inquiries were put to us, the inquirers wondering if there was some kind of reunion.

—0—

We could take it for quite a spell, but when Groves and Quenelle walked in on us all at once, the camel broke his back. We don't mean to disparage Mr. Groves, of the city of the rank and file of America (Cincinnati), but all in all of the oldcomers, we guess George Osborne looks the most prosperous.

We might be letting the cigar influence us too much.

Ah, what peace we had last week when the tintinnabulator in the dining hall took a nose dive right at the head of the faculty table. We watched the entire process and hoped that the bell system might be done away with, but our hopes were sent astray by the repair work of some kind student helper.

—0—

Found . . . an interesting chapel speaker. Don't think we're getting sarcastic or even particular in choice of chapel speakers, but we're just happy that one man has received practically unanimous approval from the Maryville student listeners, and if we're not badly haywire, that's doing something.

APRIL FOOL—By Phyllis Dexter

Our recent first-of-April Easter Sunday was the most pleasant All Fools' Day experience of the three years of our college residence. We spent Saturday persuading ourself that the morrow would be cold and rainy, though Saturday itself was as lamb-like a last day of March as one could have wished for. We were fully prepared to paddle to church in the detested accouterments of the rainy season. Though we positively refuse to carry an umbrella, we do consent, on very rainy days, to wear raincoat, boots and tam. On Saturday night before retiring we were tempted to lay out said raincoat, boots, and tam to prevent a frantic, last minute scramble for them in the morning. However, the little ray of youthful hope and optimism that, in spite of all, still stirred within our breast forbade such a procedure. It is true that we did hope, though we knew vainly, that Sunday would be as nice as Saturday.

With that hope contending with the fatal certainty that it was raining, we lay on the top deck Sunday morning holding our breath and not daring to open an eye, fearing to see the dismal downpour A very sleepy voice from the bottom deck piped up, "Is it raining?" We screwed up our nerve, opened our eyes, and—behold! The weather man fairly shouted, "April Fool!" Through glistening clean windows, the result of vacation labor, sunlight was shining gloriously on shimmering yellow and white curtains, also clean, spilling itself all over a bowl of forsythia, oozing softly into every corner of the room. It was a spring day—beautiful, yellow and green, sweet-smelling spring at last. We wriggled our toes in sheer delight.

It makes us give a reminiscent wriggle even now just to think of those three spring holidays. Now that everything is back to normal—except, at the time of writing, for the missing members of our institution who are dispersing bits of the Maryville spirit at Lexington—it is a joy to look back on those days.

We are not at all reticent about admitting that we went to town every single night, because it was all perfectly legal— permission, signed out in the regular way, etc. The bell, which rang as usual at six and seven in the morning, went unheeded. Even the excellent Sunday morning plan of a seven-thirty breakfast could not, I think, have lured us from the dreamy, semi-conscious sleep which was just enough not sleep to make us appreciate the fact that we were asleep. (Get it?) We opened an eye occasionally, we squirmed, we admitted into our consciousness the monotonous chirp of a bird, we thought of pancakes we were going to have for breakfast just whenever we got good and ready for them.

And all through these days, spring became more and more so. The big forsythia bush by the Post Office became yellower. Every time we went out on the campus we had to re-orient ourself amid the new trees and shrubbery that had sprung up.

Trees began to show green buds and yellow tassels. When vacation ended Tuesday morning, the April Fool weather had the grace to remain, but the atmosphere is different from that of those three spring holidays when one's conscience could be easy in idleness. We shall have to wait until May Day for another unalloyed enjoyment of spring. Then it may rain.

BOTANICAL GARDEN

itat could be fenced and kept as it was solely for those interested in plants. Not only were the plants already growing there to be left undisturbed, but it was planned that plants in other parts of the woods and in other parts of the country near Maryville could be transplanted to this garden and in this way increase its value.

During the past year plans for a garden have gradually taken form in the Nature Study Club and botany classes. A petition to the authorities for such a garden was drawn up by the Nature Study Club during its last meetings. It was to be presented in the Fall, and the Club hoped to begin definite work on the project at that time if the petition was granted.

One day early last Fall when Mrs. Walker was creating a thing of beauty out of the red clay bank behind Carnegie, she discussed her plans for a rock garden there with a botany student. In turn he told her of our own plans for a botanical garden.

She became interested in the project and later promised to give us all the wire and posts left from the fence she had donated for enclosing the College Woods last year. This was almost too good to be true. At last some constructive work had actually been done, and the impetus from this first move began the activity which soon was to mold the plans and finish the work.

As our plans developed she became more interested. She made special trips down into the woods and selected as the general site for the garden, a part of the region East of the amphitheatre which has been used for May Day festivals. This garden of the future will have rocky damp crevices, swampy rich soil, a spring, a woodland and some drained rocky soil. It affords a surprisingly varied habitat in an area which is comparatively small.

Now Mrs. Walker plans to extend the path that has been made from her home to the May Day amphitheatre on through the garden. She intends also to span the forked stream with two rustic bridges and to furnish the two gates necessary.

When the tract was measured it was found to contain almost two and one half acres. The left over fence was inadequate for this so Mrs. Walker donated the necessary amount of fence, which cost forty five dollars. The unsought financial aid which she has tnedered us in this project is very gratefully acknowledged, and the inspiration of her contagious enthusiasm is speeding the plans to more definite form.

Any college offering botany courses worth the name has an herbaria, which are collections of pressed dried plants that are correctly classified and filed. Most universities provide greenhouses in which many of the plants for ordinary class use are grown, and in which the more unusual plants are kept for exhibition. Some of the best universities own, in addition to the herbaria and greenhouses, botanical gardens in which plants from all over the world are grown. In these gardens all possible species and varieties of every genus are assembled, and can be studied as they develop. This of course is an ideal way in which to study plants and some of these gardens are priceless. Kew garden in England and the one at Harvard are known all over the world. Such gardens require constant attention and large sums of money for their upkeep.

Since plants which are natives in the garden are to be encouraged to continue living there, and since our field trips to collect new plants for it of necessity will be short and comparatively few, it will be, possibly, a few years before a great difference in the appearance of the garden can be noted. The growth will be a joy to those interested in it to see it develop. Although it is not to be developed with any hope or intention of furnishing specimens for collection it will offer the opportunity of observing the plants in their natural state, not dried and glued to a sheet of paper, nor limp and wilted as a result of their being dragged from their natural hobitats far away.

It is hoped that in less time than it took to render the College Woods practically barren soil for botanical collections, the new garden will be able to replace the specimens now destoyed.r

dom from the restrictions in which they are placed because of the war.

"The Christian church failed to reconstruct Europe, because it is so nationalistic and reactionary. The only person who could be happy or be a leader is one who gets in the midst of the struggle for human progress and takes the burden of the world upon him.

"Romain Rolland represented France. 'A New Daring for a New Age'. Rolland dared to face a system of war and prejudices of men and tried to change humanity. He pleads for every one to have a passion for light to open the windows of the world's darkness and to let in the light of truth. Mind should be a slave to no one; we exist to bear the light, to defend the light, to gather around us the strayed sheep of mankind. Rolland said, 'My religion is summed up in three words—tolerance, light, and love'. Rolland has paid the price of suffering, because he dared to summon mankind on to better ways and so meet we all if we would become citizens of the new day and builders of the new world.

"The same daring was shown by James Yen of China who through mass education and village reconstruction has changed the lives of five million people.

"Kagawa of Japan shows the same daring as he battles against the exploitation of human life in the slums, combats communism and armed force with his program for the Christian international.

"Likewise Albert Schweitzer turns from the concert halls and universities of Europe and goes to work among the black brothers in the African jungle demonstrating what love can do when we dare to follow it. He cries in this day of confusion, 'Let me fling my faith in a new humanity like a firebrand into the gathering darkness of our times."

Dr. Bartlett addressed a group of the students on Thursday night, April 5, on the subject "America's Quest for Reality."

In this speech, Dr. Bartlett said, "American people today have lost faith in the promises of science and material wealth and are seeking for new foundations on which to build a world of justice and brotherhood. We turn with a new appreciation to the people of our time who know this reality like Mahatama Gandhi of India and Muriel Luster of England. They make clear the moral law that runs through the universe about which we can organize our lives and show how through obedience to that law, we can achieve inner satisfaction and become centers of the worlds uplift."

Maryville Honored At National Convention Of Pi Kappa Delta

Grace Proffitt Finishes In Fourth Place In Extempore Finals

The climax of a successful season was reached last week by the speakers of Maryville when they returned with honors from the Pi Kappa Delta convention at Lexington, Kentucky. They competed there with representatives of 132 colleges, coming from 38 states.

Grace Proffitt, extempore speaker and orator, went to the finals and won fourth place in extempore speaking. In oratory she reached the semi-finals. Newman Smith and Louis Krainock, orator and extempore speaker respectively, were eliminated. Later, in the election of national officers for the council of Pi Kappa Delta, Miss Proffitt was made girl's student representative. This is the first time that Maryville has had a representative on the council.

Although all but one of the teams that were engaged by our men debaters in the try-outs went to the semi-finals, the debating teams of Maryville were eliminated, along with teams from one hundred other colleges. Each of Maryville's two teams lost two debates out of five, which barely disqualified them. The girls' debating team consisted of Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn, and the boys' team of Archibald Pieper and Earle Crawford.

During the past season Maryville engaged in forty-five decision debates and won thirty-seven. This gives her the highly commendable average of 82 percent for the season, which betters the record for other years. Twelve debates were on the local schedule. Eleven ofo these were victories.

Professor Queener, debate coach is well pleased with the work of his squad. He predicts a better season next year since all of this

Honors Students For Next Year Selected By Faculty Committee

Seven Students To Work In Four Departments

The Committee on Honors Work, consisting of Dr. Hunter, Professors Davis, Howell, McMurray, and Orr, met Tuesday afternoon to consider the applications for Honors Work in 1934-35.

The Committee has announced that the following students will do honors work during the next school year; although definite decision as to the particular scope of each student has not yet been reached: Walter Cloud, Psychology under Dr. Fields; Mary Gillingham, Biology under Miss Hudson; Donald Harris, Psychology under Miss Gamble; Fern Metzger, English under Dr. Shine; Dorothy Nethery, English with Dean Hunter; Maria Wynn, History with Professor Queener; Leland Shanor, working particularly with Mr. John A. Sharp of the Botany Department of the University of Tennessee, and under the general supervision of Miss Hudson.

This is the third year in which Honors Work has been open to seniors. The success of tihs plan can ben partially measured by the increased number of applications.

Dr. John Timothy Stone of the Chicago Theological Seminary will be the speaker at the Sunday morning service of the Presbyterian Church and at the college vesper service tomorrow night. The choir will sing "Now Let The Heavens Adore Thee" from "Sleepers, Wake" by Bach.

Dr. Lloyd Reads Paper Before Knoxville Club

President Reads On Browning And The Dramatic Monologue

"Robert Browning and his Dramatic Monolgues" was the title of the paper read by Dr. Lloyd to the Round Table Club of Knoxville on Monday, April 9th.

In his paper Dr. Lloyd stated that Browning "played on the emotions, motives, beliefs, doubts, and works of men and society" and that the particular form of expression which is most characteristic of his work is the dramatic monolgue.

Dr. Lloyd discussed the early life of Browning whose parents were lovers of literature and art and could provide Browning with "all the ease and comfort that a literary man needs." Few learned men of modern times have had less formal education. He was encouraged to study what and when he wished,—but he became a truly educated man.

Browning was most influenced

Orchestra Pleases In Well Chosen Program

Aria From Haydn's Creation Sung By Miss Henry

The College Orchestra presented its Annual Concert in Voorhees Chapel last Monday night before a very appreciative audience. At times the playing seemed as if deadened and muffled by heavy curtains, but on the whole the concert was rendered with a smoothness and precision that showed the results of careful training and direction by Miss Butcher, the conductor.

Miss Frances Henry's solo from Haydn's Creation was particularly well received by the audience, and was one of the most successful numbers on the program. The orchestra entered well into the playing of Highland Laddies, a pleasing arrangement of Scotch melodies by Seredy, and made that, with the selection from Wagner's Tannhauser, its best contribution to the program. John Phay and Harold Truebger played a trumpet duet, Valse Caprice, to add to the variety of the performance.

Taken as a whole, the program was well selected, and deserved the hearty appreciation given it by the audience.

Dr. John T. Stone Of Chicago Speaks As Guest Of College

Mystery Drama To Be Y.W. Benefit April 20

"The Wasp's Nest" Given By College Players Under Miss Holland's Direction

An intriguing plot and baffling mystery are elements in the Y. W. C A. benefit play, "The Wasp's Nest", to be given April 20.

The setting, in a supposedly haunted house gives an opportunity for effective lighting, and is a means of quickening interest. The house is the rendez-vous for two train robbers and an embezzler with his accomplice, together with other chance characters.

The plot concerns the events on Hallowe'en night when the heir to the house visits it, together with a possible purchaser. What he actually finds constitutes the exciting action of the play, including sudden disappearances, random shots, and scuffles in the dark. The whole promises to afford an evening of entertaining drama.

Miss Anna J. Jones College Registrar Is Taken By Death

Vesper Memorial Service Held In Chapel Wednesday

The student body and staff were shocked and deeply grieved when announcement was made of the death of Miss Anna Jones, Administrative Secretary and Registrar, on April 10, at Fort Sanders Hospital in Knoxville. She had been absent from her office for three weeks with influenza, but had been critically ill for only three days. Her sudden death was caused by an infection of the ears, resulting in a severe case of mastoiditis.

As a tribute to her splendid service to the college a short memorial service was held in Voorhees chapel on Wednesday, April 11, at 4:30.

The order of worship was:

Three Women Students Submit Orations For Coming Bates Contest

Subjects Chosen By Executive Council of Faculty

It has been decided that the Bates Oratorical Contest will be held in spite of the fact that there are only three entrants, Maria Wynn, Florence Hyde, and Fern Metzger. The rules of the contest necessitate the submission of at least six orations unless the quality of a smaller number warrants the holding of the contest.

The subjects for the contest are selected by an Executive Council of the Faculty which is composed this year of Miss Jessie Johnson and Dean Hunter. The compositions are original, and the manuscripts are to be read by a committee of four members of the faculty.

Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn have chosen "Government by the People" as their subject, while Fern Metzger's oration is "The Iron Man".

The final contest is to be held betwween May 1 and 15; the exact date, however has not yet been setled upon.

Next year the Bates Oratorical Contest will be open to the young men of the junior and senior class.

My dear Miss Dix:

I am a rather good-looking young man, married to a pretty girl. We graduated from —— College this June, and were married soon after graduation. I love her and I think she loves me—but, Miss Dix, I am so worried I must consult some one. It's my wife's behavior patterns—which I fear are not exactly as they should be.

The first of her unusual actions is connected with electricity. She never remembers to turn the lights out even when she leaves the apartment. Last night when I came home the door was locked and when I knocked she shrieked "Password!" Password, indeed—she was ironing, and after letting me in, she went back to stand in front of the iron —attempting to conceal it from me. I had noticed before that she always ironed at night. Of course, she could not know how much this simple little act distressed me—but am I to blame? The other night when I came home and just to tease her switched the lights off and on, she leapt at me, gurgling "Four years I've wanted to choke somebody for that—you—." Now that I think of such things, I remember once riding on the bus with her when the lights flashed she laughed, "Stay out of the aisle after the lights flash."

Another thing that seemed queer to me was the way she keeps looking back, wanting to go down backstreets and acting worried when we go to the show at night.

Each night she says wake her up in time to get breakfast, and each morning she mutters, "When you go to the restaurant bring me home a biscuit with jam— and please, darling, put it on the radiator and don't wake me." She also insists that she'll know what to say when someone calls.

One thing at least we agree on—that is to eat something about 9:30 every night.

Queer woman—this one I love—she was very interested, I knew in psychology— but imagine my feelings when, going home one afternoon, I found her in the kitchen with a box of cockroaches—a maze —and some data sheets—she spoke at length about "Learning In The Cockroach—"

If we have guests after 10:30 she laughs, explains it's just habit, and locks the door.

Miss Dix, I beg you to tell me what exactly I should do about all this—Is our moonshining thus to end in estrangement? Yes, I fear so, if she ever throws my pipe out the window again when guests are knocking on the door. If you can help me, answer very soon— I believe there is yet time enough to save us.

—A Worried Husband.

ANNA JONES—

It is extremely difficult to visualize Maryville College without the figure of its registrar. Throughout recent college years Miss Jones has guided perplexed students so wisely that they had come to rely deservedly on her judgment. Her wide acquaintance with the students was prompted by an interest in them as individuals. Campus problems, too, were as much her concern as the details of her own work and one had only to visit her office to find evidence of how many duties were continually making claims on her time and energy. Yet to the minuetest detail she was capable and students have respected her for it.

In all her dealings she evidenced a directness and a quick grasp of any situation which we have recognized and valued. Students of other years, remembering their associations with her, will share our feeling of loss.

To those who have had the privilege of knowing Miss Jones relieved from the cares of office duties her death will close days of valued friendship. The students who have worked for and with her are only a few of the larger group of students who have admired her and who look back with pleasure at their contacts with her.

Therefore, Miss Jones will be missed, not simply because she was invaluable as a part of the college administration, but because she had won for herself, in addition, the devotion of the many with whom she was connected in her years of service to the college.

Grace Proffitt, the last of the Junior Associate Editors will edit the ECHO next week.

On Wednesday mrning, April 11, the sophomore class elected Alexander Christie as the editor of the 1935 Chilhowean with Bryan Payne as the Business Manager. Both of them served as sophomore assistants on the present staff.

He who laughs last seldom gets the point anyway.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

He had visions of becoming a big business man. Accordingly, he went to work in a nationally known manufacturing company in Illinois. But the notorious days of 1929 forced big business to assume not only a smaller role than it had taken before, but one that was full of uncertainties. In the midst of the upheaval following the deluge, our potential business man changed his mind, as wise people do sometimes, and decided to come to college before he took any decided vocational steps.

In due time, Richard Kenneth Orr, (or Dick, or Rich, or what have you?) came to Maryville College. In the four years that have elapsed since he first entered here he has become known, among other things, as a librarian; as a journalist; and, recently, as a giver of poetry tests.

Dick's reputation as a journalist and writer deserves further mention. He has been a member of the HIGHLAND ECHO staf for four years; holding the position of Editor-in-Chief last year. For the last two years he has been a member of Writers' Workshop and at present he serves as chairman of the governing board of that organization.

In addition, various responsibilities and honors have fallen to him in the course of his college career. He was a debater when he was a freshman, and a member of the 1930-31 freshman debate team. As a sophomore, he was chosen to represent his class in the Student Council. Later he served on the Student-Faculty Contact Committee in the Council. He has served also on the Advisory Board of the Y.M. C.A. Cabinet. For four years he has been a supporter of the Athenian society. He played a major role in the recent Athenian midwinter, "The Importance of Being Earnest", and is now president of the society.

Two of his chief interests have been studies of poetry, studies carried out in connection with work for a major in English; and certain phases of psychology. His efforts in both fields, as well as work in which the two were correlated, have won for him both the respec and admiration of his instructors.

Dick has not been inclined to seek honors and distinctions. The results of his efforts and enthusiasm in those things in which he is interested are, however, fair proofs of a distinct ability which places him high within the ranks o Maryville's Superior Scotties.

Of interest to the musically minded is the distress exhibited both by the Metropolitan Opera and the New York Philharmonic Symphony. The former was rescued by a guarantee of $300,000 last spring, a fund which will be exhausted by the end of the current season. The latter is making an appeal for a $500,000 guaranty fund, to which the response of the public, especially the radio public, is very gratifying. It would be a reflection on the American public should such institutions have to come to an end.

The amount of money expended on this orchestra's concerts might be of interest. The cost is approximately $800,000 for a twenty-nine weeks season of 117 concerts. Even if every seat in the house were sold for every one of the concerts therre would still be a deficit.

Collegiate Swaps

602 Alumnae of 47 classes returned to State Teachers College at Farmville, Va., to celebrate the Golden Anniversary of the College. Only three of the 50 classes from 1885 to 1934 lacked a registration card. Many events of interest took place as students and alumnae participated in the celebration. The town was decorated for Founder's Day. A costume parade, the academic procession, dances, a musical program, special programs, and gifts to the college were all part of the Fiftieth Anniversary.

The "Kentucky Kernel" tells of the Floating University which will set sail on October 4, for the college year 1934-35. The whole world will be the campus of this group of undergraduates from all parts of the country as they visit sixty ports in thirty-four countries. The faculty will be composed of professors from colleges and universities throughout the country.

Sports hold the attention of students at Duke as the 1934 Baseball Season opened on March 27 with Michigan State. Twenty-nine games are scheduled for the present season. The annual northern trip will start April 30 as the team visits Georgetown, Maryland, Princeton, Fordham, West Chester Teachers, and Temple.

MISS ANNA JONES

a few miles north of Louisville, Kentucky. Her parents were Dr. and Mrs. Cadwallader Jones of Charleston. Before coming to Maryville she had received business training in the business house of the Belknaps in Louisville and was consequently wwell qualified to work in the college offices in order to earn her college expenses. Those under whom she worked soon recognized her rare capacities as a secretary. In scholastic standing she stood high, graduating with the Cum Laude honor.

Following her graduation she served as secretary of the president, Dr. Wilson, in 1917 and 1918. In 1919 she was given the position of Assistant Registrar and Secretary to the president from 1920-1922. From 1925-1928 she was granted a leave of absence which she spent in Florida in search of health. The following year she was made Administrative Secretary. It was in 1932, continuing to the present, that she held the offices of Administrative Secretary and Registrar. In carrying out the duties of this work she has been in constant touch with both teachers and students. At the time o this recent illness she was engaged in preparing the college catalogue to go to press. She has likewise been instrumental in raising the standing and scholarship of the college, and was responsible in a large measure for the matriculation system that has been adopted.

Recently Miss Jones had purchased a home whwere she and her sister planned to live upon their retirement. During the present school year Miss Kellar and Miss McCampbell have been living with her.

Her loss will be very keenly felt as we are all aware. In the words of Dr. Wilson, "The college received from her willing service an unstinted devotion that can never be forgotten so long as the annals of Maryville are read by Maryville people."

Jose Iturbi, who appeared here last year, made his debut as conductor in a New York musical season as guest leader of the Philadelphia Orchestra. The performance was given in Carnegie Hall. Olin Downes, well-known music critic, complimented him highly on his ability as a conductor.

Scottie Scanties Defeated By U. T.

Weights, Relay, and High-Jump Cause Trouble In First Meet

Allan and Paul swept the mile, Snedeker won the 440, Byar took a close second in the 100, Atkins won the high hurdles, Allan broke the tape in the 880 with Snedeker a close second, Byar took second in the 220, and first in the 220 low hurdles with Hollam second, Paul hit the tape in the 2 mile with a justified smile on his mobile face, Loessberg took second in the broad jump, Toms second in the high jump, and Lavender second in the pole vault—all 'ole Maryville needed wus to win the relay and the long dreamed of BEAT U. T. would have been a seded reality. Byar, Allan, Vaughn, and Snedeker all ran fast laps but two of Tennessee's men ran better ones, and though the score "might have been" 59 to 59 the final total said T.—63; M.—54.

Again Tennessee's "made to order weight men" as Coach Thrower likes so well to call them had beaten Maryville's "track team". A Tennessee freshman addressed a Scottie something like this, "What do you guys do over there, run rabbits all the time?" He thought that he was dubbing the too often assumed rural aspect of dear 'ole Maryville, but the proper answer was soon heard, "No, we run on circles."

Maryville's track division showed good balance, speed, and endurance. Tennessee's strength as usual was in the field events but they had one real track man, who by copping three first places and running a fast lap in the relay, which incidentally gave Tennessee an easy margin in that event, he really won the meet. Anderson though not a pretty runner is a good fast man with a pounding stride of nine feet.

Pounders and Lippe are worthy of the colors they wear for Tennessee and did beautiful work in the shot and discus.

Coach Thrower seems to have the facility to make a runner out of almost any kind of an animal a freshman happens to be, if he acts like he wants to run. Few of Maryville's men are ever very good runners when they come here. Snedeker of last year's crop and Allan of this year's generation may be exceptions but they distinctly show Coach Thrower's polish.

Little exceeded 40 feet in the short, for the first time, but was unable to equal the Herculean heaves of Pounders and Lippe.

Maryville will meet Tusculum later this season in the State College meet. If some other Tennessee colleges are thoughtful enough to enter men who can take points in the field events, Maryville's score should not be the least on the card.

The next meet is here at Maryville with Centre College Saturday, April 21. The story of that fray will likely "listen differently". Maryville's men really take their training and running seriously and

Indoor Tourney

Is Won By Freshmen-Sophomore Team After Hard Battle

The girls' Indoor Baseball Tournament, which was begun the week of April 2, ended Tuesday, April 10, with a victory for the freshman-sophomore team. The close competition made the deciding game very thrilling. The final score was 20-19 in favor of the freshman-sophomores. Mary Gamble refereed the tournament.

Thursday, April 12, the Point System girls started practicing for track. The test will be given about the last of April.

Interclass Track Meet To Be Staged Today

All the gems that were born to blush unseen will strut their stuff at the annual interclass track meet this afternoon. Little is known about what we have in store outside of the varsity, so this little party should be a complete surprise.

The lordly sophs have talked up their chances of victory to the shy, but then, sophs will be sophs. The frosh are foolish enough to argue with them, while the lordly upper classmen calmly await the gun and keep us all guessing.

This meet will not decide who gets the athletic cup this year. The sophomores already have captured it—(no wonder they're blowing).

Diamondeers Lose Lenoir City Game

Opponents Rally Late In Sixth Inning To Defeat Highlanders

The Highlander baseballers were given their second set-back at the hands of the Lenoir City Independents Tuesday afternoon by the score of 12 to 7.

Maryville held a 7-0 lead going into the last half of the sixth inning, only to see it dwindle to 7-5 at the end of the seventh, and be taken over by the enemy on a seven-run uprising in the eighth. A triple, walk, sacrifice, single, error, two home runs, outfield fly, walk, double, and strike-out came in order in the Lenoir City spree. Clark hit a triple and a double in two appearances at the plate during the inning, and Summitt and Lee hit home runs in succession.

The Scots made eleven safeties, whwile Lenoir City was making thirteen. Loessberg hit a home run in the sixth inning, with Blazer on base, for the feature Scot blow. He had previously made a single. Blazer, Kizer, Corns, and Coker also had two hits apiece, and Atchison one. One of Blazer's hits was a two-bagger; Kizer got on a base n third time in four trials on a walk; and Coker was safe by errors on his other two times up.

Atchison began on the mound for Maryville and was relieved by Gabbard at the end of the sixth. Atchison allowed only five hits and three runs in his six innings of work. Gabbard finished the game.

Score by innings:

Herries Is Captain

At a meeting of the swimming team in Atlanta after the meet with Georgia Tech and Auburn on March 17, Arthur Herries was elected to captain the team during the 1934-35 season. Herries swims the breast stroke for the Scotties and has been a valuable member of the squad for the past two years. As a junior next year, he should be better still, and hopes to lead the Scots through a successful season.

Scot Nine Meets Three Opponents Next Week

The Scottie baseball nine is scheduled for three games next week all away from home. This afternoon on the home field the squad plays an independent team, probably Woodruff's from Knoxville.

Next Monday the Scots will play Hiwassee in a return game, after having defeated them here two weeks ago by the slim margin of 2 to 1. The following Friday the Scots will go to Harrogate for a two game series with L. M. U. on Friday and Saturday. The game Friday will be the first conference game of the season.

Only four members of the Smoky Mountain Conference are represented by baseball teams this year, L. M. U., Carson-Newman, East Tennessee Teachers, and Maryville, and these teams are playing several games with each opponent. The Scots have four games scheduled with each of the other teams.

Talmage—Karnell

After losing the first set 6-3, John Talmage blasted his way through the remaining three sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, to defeat Gordon Karnell in the finals of the spring tennis tourney.

Because of this victory, Talmage will play number one position on the tennis team.

A Boston man, hearing of a position open in Chicago, wired the following message, direct and collect: "Am on my way to accept stop deduct cost of this telegram from my first week's salary". He got the job.

3rd Inning Costs Scots Mars Hill Go

Wild Slugging Spree And Scot Errors Aid In Carolina Victory

A wild third inning, in which the Maryville defense weakened and aloed four runs on only one hit, resulted in a 6-2 lose to the Mars Hill baseball team Thursday afternoon on the local diamond.

The Highlanders out-hit their foe nine to seven, but were able to bunch their hits in only one inning, the eighth. In this frame, the Scots collected three hits and their only runs. With two men out, Blazer singled on a grounder which was too hot for the shortstop to handle, and scored on a double by Loessburg. Kizer followed with a single, sending Loessberg home, but was left on base when Gillespie grounded out to end the inning.

Mars Hill jumped to an early lead when their lead-off man hit the third ball pitched far down the left field foul line for a triple and scored after the catch of a fly to left field.

The lead was increased to 5-0 against the Scots in the third. The first man up was thrown out, but the next was safe on Gillespie's error, went to second on a wide throw to first base, and scored on Blazer's error. With one man on, the fourth batter to face Loessberg in the inning lashed a home run to deep left-center. The last run wwas made when Coker let the ball slip by him in left-center, allowing the runner to circle the bases. The Scotties committed four of their six errors in this inning.

A single, a sacrifice, and another single in the ninth accounted for the final Mars Hill tally.

With the exception of the third inning, the Scots played good defensive ball, making several good stops in the infield. Mars Hill played a very steady game afield, executing four double plays and making only one error.

Loessberg and Blazer led the Highlanders at bat, with three and two hits, respectively, in four attempts. Kizer, Gillespie, Hand, and Corns each hit safely once. Fox, with a home run and a single, and Nettles, with a three-base hit and a single, did the best hitting for the visitors.

A cold wind and sleet during the early innings hindered the play of both teams.

Score by innings:

Mars Hill— 104 000 001—6	7	1
Maryville— 000 000 020—2	9	6

'SPORT TALK' FORESEES DRY WEATHER

By BRYAN PAYNE

The time is rapidly approaching when we shall be forced to admit that the ole sports well is dry. Some of our readers have somewhat graciously brought that condition to our attention for the last five or six weeks, but since this triple-jointed tongue of ours habitually babbles till everybody has turned out his light and gone to bed, we have been reluctant to see the impending drouth. Two or three distractions have collaborated very thoroughly to bring this end closer, among which have been a lengthly absence from the bull pen (sports desk, to you) and a new job, plus salesmen who take us to see ball games. But we promised the linotypist at least one good column before the year's jouralism is over, So, you see, the linotypist is contracted with to be the last one to lose faith in us.

Babe Hits a Pop-fly

This salesman, which we mentioned only a moment ago, carted us over to the Smoky City to watch Babe Herman Ruth clut a couple of horsehides over Uncle Gilhooley's back fence. Well, the Babe, to our kiddish disappointment, got only a couple of singles, the last of which was a little pop-fly to shortstop, but with a spin that sent it askewing from shorty's glove. The Babe trundled over to the bag, then signaled for his legs-double to replace him, and walking over to the dugout called it a day, all except posing for a picture with the kiddies. No, he isn't grey-haired or long, white bearded yet, but his legs are mere remnants of an ancient decade. Be that as it may, however, he is still the main act in the diamond show and will continue to be as long as he travels. Along with 'Manassa' Dempsey, Big Bill Tilden, and the rest of the past noble grands, he pulls the crowds and thrills the galleries, where youngsters, better perhaps, perform before comparative handfuls.

Long-leafed Pines Golf . . Pinehurst

Over in Pinehurst, North Carolina, the warm breezes blow up from the flat sand stretches of the coast, swishing the long leaves of the pines. The sports fan is never idle in Pinehurst, because that is what Pinehurst is made of . . . sports fans and a lack of idleness. That's logical even if the hotel rates are not. We played only the role of spectator, however, and so have little brass to chew. The average golfer, that is the 18-hole per day man, can settle down in the resort for a week of golf and play on a different course every day, some of them are laid out so that he could mix his holes to hs hearts desire; thus, you see, he could start all over and never become stale because of the 'danged ole course'. If your golfer is 'resting to get back on my game' he can play polo, or if affected seriously by swaying hossbacks he can pay a nigger two dollars and a half an hour to lead him around a little pony ring on a chestnut colt that whinies in exact accord with the social standards set by the society highlights of Gotham and points north. Pinehurst is a winter playground. . . the kind in which silly old ladies play drop-the-handkerchief behind a dark screen of heavy hedge or long pines, and where apopletic bachelors play with wax dolls

OBSERVATIONS

John McQueen had a few interesting experiences in connection with his experiment in psychology with verbal reaction time, His set-up is like this. He says a word and the subject responds quickly with an associated word. That's what made two samples just a little funny.

—0—

One of the words was 'kiss', a perfectly unassailable word out of its created situation. The word was given to Wilma Dorsey and the answer was immediately 'you'. The next person for McQueen to give the word to was the fellow laboring over this typewriter. McQueen says 'Kiss'; Orr answers 'you', just like that. They say McQueen left the laboratory that night with a guilty conscience, or something very much resembling that.

—0—

We don't know whether the joke's on McQueen or this week's editor on this one. He was giving Miss Nethery the test, going right down the line until he came to mutton. 'Mutton', McQueen spoke into the machine. 'Jeff', Miss Nethery retaliated.

—0—

It looks like the night watchman got a little off center the other night or something. Still it is a pretty hard job for one man to watch over the entire campus, the dormitories, the Y.M.C.A., and all those things. What this college needs is not better night watchmen exactly, but simply more of them. This might even be a petition for the beginning of this movement. Students may make known their backing of this petition by signing in the blank space just below.

—0—

The fact remains, nightwatchman or no nightwatchman, that the community candy chest got robbed. and Mr. Ernie Caldwell is a sufferer. From now on may we patronize Mr. Caldwell and his fellow candy sellers.

—0—

Some of the stories which come floating back to Maryville from the Lexington conventioon make us wonder. We like the one about Looie Krainock going into a restaurant and parking himself while wearing a convention badge bearing his name. The waitress looked peeringly at the badge before Krainock spoke, "I'll give you fifty cents if you pronounce that." "Krainock", the woman said, in perfect English and walked off with the half dollar.

—0—

Then there was the story about the hotel man not being able to read the Maryville handwriting, but we've heard that story told in so many ways that we don't want to enter a version of our own.

—0—

Miss Carpenter opens her three weeks season one week late. Last week Kay had a letter from the Omnibus College wanting to take our editor for a ride, it seemed. The letter was addressed to Miss Kattie Carpenter, Maryville, Tennessee". And here Kay's been telling us her name is Kathaleen. But now the cat's out of the gunny sack, and from now on, fellow fellowmen, it's Kathaleen to Kay, and Kattie to us. My, it must be fun to have so many pretty names.

—0—

We sit next to Katie in the dining hall. We made the statement the other day that the authors of our eggs should have been fed more lime so that the shells would be harder. She didn't believe that, but she believed it when we told her that at home we feed our long eared horses lime so that their hind hoofs will be made more efficient for kicking purposes.

—0—

Miss Geraldine Smith's face has come down to a faint pink now, after remaining crimson for several days after the May Queen election. Jerry says she didn't know how to behave, since she had never been a May Queen in Maryville before. She talked some with Nathalia Wright long enough to learn the technique.

—0—

It seems just a little strange to see a red-headed Queen. It reminds us of the days whwen we wondered why they didn't make red headed angels occasionally instead of only the blonds and brunettes. Of course we know the answer to that now.

—0—

We hope the senior class as a whole, probably led by Mr. Beale, wasn't trying to get punny in electing Professor Queener's assistant to that position.

—0—

We have stayed in Maryville long enough to see a baseball game played in the snow. That's something that doesn't happen everywhere every April. We observed that the Court Street attendance wasn't nearly up to par. We should be more considerate of the spectators.

—0—

While the seniors might be thinking of a memorial for the college, we'd suggest a very practical thing from the viewpoint of him who can't bear hearing footsteps. We'd recommend at least the beginning of a fund that when completed, with the possible help of another department of the college, would give the library a relaitvely sound proof floor.

—0—

Miss Gamble's suggestion that this would be taken care of if the librarian's would wear rubber heels leaks, because we happen to know that some of the librarians don't have a choice between pairs of shoes.

Browning Paper

by Byron, Shelley, and Keats. However, one of the most powerful influences on his life resulted from his marriage. "The case of the Browning", the paper points out, "is the only one in which two notable poets have married each other."

Because of Browning's unusual style his poems are often baffling. He was only understood during his life by the literary fraternity. Gradually people became educated to his style. "He sought to portray and interpret life, its motive, its passions, its tragedies, its successes, and its meanings. He is the supreme dramatic poet of the 19th century. But he developed his own form of dramatic expression— the dramatic monologue."

Browning's mesages contained a depth and universality far greater than the poets like Tennyson and Longfellow, Dr. Lloyd goes on to say. A central structural idea often expressed by Browning, is that the divine is in the spirit of man. Man's life in the world is part of an eternal process. His views have made Browning a poet of religion and idealism. In his religious poems he reasons toward divine love through the beauty and power of human love.

Prof. Verton Queener Speaks At Faculty Club Dinner

Subject of Paper "Unionism In Tennessee"

At the Faculty Club dinner, Tuesday evening, April 7, Prof. Verton M. Queener read a paper in which he discussed, "Unionism in East Tennessee."

Prof. Queener first discussed Unionism in East Tennessee as compared with Unionism in the mountain regions of other Southern states. When the mountain people were forced to choose between secession and slavery they chose the latter, and stood by that choice unalterably. The Southern mountaineer is today and always has been more Northern than Southern in his economic life, his social outlook, and his political actions as well as philosophy.

East Tennessee did not agree with either the Southern or Northern wings of the Democratic party, and they "abhorred the Republican paty." It is interesting that in 1860 Lincoln didn't receive one vote from Tennessee. The Tennesseans thought of the Republicans as "Black Republicans", and, therefore, there was no Republican ticket. At this time the people kept hoping that some solution other than secession might be found. After the election of 1860, the Union party men of the state and especially in East Tennessee began to call for a fair trial for Lincoln and to cry out against secession.

When a "state-wide vote on secession" was held, it was found that a majority of the 64,000 voters were opposed to disunion. Public opinion in the state was not molded but in a process of rapid change, and opinion in Tennessee was continually changing toward the Southern cause.

he governor now called the legislature into the second special session of the year and together they

Freshman Debaters Win Three Decisions

Girls Met Carson-Newman; Boys University of Tennessee

The freshman debate squad added three more victories to Maryville's 1934 record by winning three out of four debates last week-end. The girls won two from Carson-Neman College, and the boys won one frm The University of Tennessee.

On Friday, April 13, the girls' affirmative team of Virginia Pennington, Elizabeth Carlisle, and Alma Whiffen went to Carson-Newman where they won by a critic judge decision. On the same evening Ruth Bartels, Blanche Webb, and Marcella Arden met the Carson-Newman affirmative here. The debate was judged by Mr. J. B. Emperor of the University of Tennessee who awarded the decision to Maryville. In giving the decision Mr. Emperor pointed out the superiority of the Maryville girls in debating. What little evidence and authority there is on the question is in favor of the affirmative, yet Maryville by their superiority in debating were able to take the decision.

On Monday, April 16, the freshman boys won one debate and lost one to the University of Tennessee.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 24, at 4:15 the Chilhowee Club invites all college students who are interested in music and who enjoy an intelligent interpretation of it to attend the Twilight Concert in the college chapel. The program has been planned by the music department of the college.

The Chilhowee Club has requested Miss Hale, as a member of the organization to give the concert, using her students to illustrate certain types of music. The program will be interspersed with comments by Miss Hale which will add much to the musical appreciation of the audience.

Dr. William R. Dawson Dies At Age Of 77

Was Former Director of College and Chairman of Board

Dr. William R. Dawson, who had long been a director of the college and was chairman of the board for a number of years, died at his home in Knoxville on Wednesday, April 18. Ever since his graduation from the college in 1884 he had been deeply interested in the work of the school and had given many hours of service to it. The student body, faculty and directors feel the loss of a friend and loyal supporter in the death of Dr. Dawson.

He attended Union Theological Seminary, and after finishing his theological training did special work under the Sunday School and Home Mission Boards of the Presbyterian Church in New York and North Dakota.

He had been pastor of the Graystone Presbyterian Church for thirty-seven years and pastor of the Fort Sanders Presbyterian Church since 1927. He also was a member of the Judicial Committee of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. for ten years. He had served as Moderator of the Synod of Tennessee, and also was chairman for the Presbytery of the National and Foreign Mission Boards of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. He retired from active church work in May, 1933, because of failing health. When Dr. Dawson retired as pastor of the Fort Sanders Church he had been serving forty three years continuously as a Presbyterian minister.

Funeral services were conducted Friday afternoon at two o'clock at the Graystone Presbyterian Church. Dr. Lloyd officiated assisted by Dr. Clifford E. Barbour, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. B. B. Lavender, pastor of Graystone Presbyterian Church. Dr. Dawson is survived by five children, one brother, two sisters and eight grandchildren.

All of his five children attended Maryville College. Charles is a prominent attorney in Knoxville; Horace is also a lawyer, practicing in Chicago; the eldest daughter,

Mystery Play Is Well Executed

Maryville College Players Present Thriller

The first mystery drama to be produced this year played to a fairly large and responsive house last night when the Maryville College Players presented as the annual Y. W. C. A. Benefit number "The Wasp's Nest".

As a play the three acts contained many contradictions, discrepancies, and absurdities. The title was not sufficiently justified. There were too many separate groups to be well managed. The way in which each group seemed to elude the other was artificial. The ending appeared forced. There were several occurences which were not explained in the outcome of the play. We are also skeptical whether a man is so distraught as Roger McDowell would be able to collect himself at intervals sufficiently to woo and win a woman. Yet in spite of these flaws, the play did carry a good element of mystery which the cast successfully imparted to the audience.

Outstanding work was done by Herr Wissler and Mary Gladys Brown. This was Miss Brown's

Dr. H. A. Morgan And George Irving Speak At Chapel Services

Representatives of T V A And Y.M.C.A. Give Talks

On Friday morning, April 20, one of the most interesting chapel talks of the year was given by Mr. George Irving, Secretary of the Department of Evangelistic Emphesis for the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. The talk on "Slogans" was characterized by originality, bits of humor and sincerity.

Mr. Irving said that our age had been predicted as one that would be called the "dirty decade", but he believed it should be called a decade characterized by slogans. He spoke first of the slogan "Do it now", and showed that there were many impulses which should not be followed, and that the one major thing to secure from college was the ability to run an ordered life.

The second slogan was "Save the surface and you save all". Mr. Irving said that teachers, pastors and parents may be fooled, but the facts of life cannot. By using the slogan "Safety First", he showed the necessity of courage to face life steadily, make life decisions sanely and turn away from the cheap things that are used in an effort to make life comfortable. By means of two striking illustrations he showed that the real purpose of life was to throw it away for the sake of others.

The chapel service on Wednesday morning was conducted at 11:15, instead of the regular time, in order that the members of the student body and faculty might hear Dr. H. A. Morgan, one of the three directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, in an explanation of the huge project now being carried on by the federal government. Dr. Morgan, President of the University of Tennessee, spoke again in FEATURE—L. F. K.

Dear Miss Dix:

Your advise seems to have aided so many people that I must avail myself of your help. It's my husband. He is the fondest, kindest and best man I know, but there is something wrong with his reactions and reflexes. Maybe its his neurones, but I can't locate the trouble. We have been married four months, but he hasn't gotten over certain peculiar actions. For instance when he smokes he always takes a single cigarette with him, and goes down to the curb, where he often begs a match to light it. I have never forbidden him to smoke in the house. Worse yet, on rainy days he doesn't go out to smoke. I went into his room the other day and found him standing on his desk and blowing the smoke from his cigarette out the window, the blinds partly drawn. He refuses to explain why.

When we sit down to eat he immediately stacks four or five slices of bread near his plate. Even when we have visitors he goes to the table first, and loads all empty plates with food. You know, Miss Dix, this is embarrassing. He refuses to eat breakfast toast; but after ten o'clock at night he is always eager to make toast or sandwiches. He insists on blocking the transom with paper and opening the windows wide when he does this.

He even has an inordinate love of hamburgers. When a visitor comes late in the evening he will borrow a dime and go downtown to eat hamburgers. When he comes back he insists on lighting a kerosene lamp before going to bed. All this is not the worst. I could love him even if he ate brain sandwiches, but he grows cold toward me very suddenly at times. The other night we were walking arm and arm through the park when a short, stocky man came out from behind a shrub, headed toward us. My husband jerked his arm out of mine and actually sidled away two or three feet, doing all this with an air of abstraction and nonchalance. At other times, especially when we are in our parlor, he is very attentive.

In the matter of going to church he is a positive maniac. He insisted all through our honeymoon on attending Sunday School, Church and evening services. Is there any real need for all this? He isn't so religious as all that. On Sunday mornings he takes me down to the drug store, and strangely enough, always offers me a cigarette; at home, he never does.

One last thing, and you have my poor— shall I call him neuratic, husband. When he sweeps his own room, as he insists on doing, he sweeps the trash out into the hall and leaves it there. What can I do with a man like that?

Dear Miss Dix, I need your help so badly, won't you please tell me what to do? How can I avert the impending breaking of our home and the loss of the man I love unless I can find out why he does these things, and how I can remedy the situation? In agitated expectancy for an early reply, I am,

Mrs. Newlywed.

KNOW EAST TENNESSEE

Maryville is situated directly between the Great Smoky Mountains National Park and the part of the Tennessee River Valley to be rehabilitated by the Tennessee Valley Authority. At present these are two of the most important and unique projects of the government, and because of our strategic position it is necessary that we become familiar with definite facts concerning them, not only for our own information, but because we will be asked questins concerning them when we leave this section.

Four Maryville highways lead directly into the park which is sixty-five miles long and about twenty-five miles wide. The cost of the land, highways and improvements will be about ten million dollars, and an additional amount allotted by President Roosevelt is paid to several thousand C C C men who are building miles of trails and secondary roads. The Smokies are so rough and rugged that no road has ever been built over them, until now. Tennessee has built the Scenic Loop Highway of one hundred miles which runs through Maryville and from it runs the Indian Gap Road to the Newfound Gap at the top of the Smokies. Another highway from Maryville goes to Tallassee and along the western edge of the park to Deal's Gap and across to Robbinsville, North Carolina. The National Park Service estimated that three hundred and seventy-five thousand tourists visited the Great Smokies during the past year, and a majority of them entered from Knoxville or Maryville.

About sixty miles north of Maryville is the town of Norris, Tennessee and the Norris Dam which is one of the major power units of the Tennessee Valley Authority. The territory affected is seven hundred miles long and fifty miles wide, and over one million people of the valley are directly affected by the project. Besides observing the construction of the dam, which is to be one-third of a mile in length, it is interesting to watch the work on the first fifty small houses which will be completed by the middle of June or the first of July. These houses, which are set irregularly among the hills, have four rooms, a bath, laundry and a large screened porch. The homes are heated by elctricity and electric equipment of every kind is used. Dr. Harcourt A. Morgan and Dr. Floyd W. Reeves who have spoken at chapel on the work of the T. V. A. have shown that nothing comparable to this plan has ever before been undertaken by a national cabinet, and when completed it will be the first example in the United States of what genuine, coordinated planning can accomplish.

Many students come to college and go home after nine months without having had an opportunity to visit these sites. Because Maryville is so near to them it is very desirable that we show an interest in the work being done, and that during the spring sight-seeing trips be arranged to both of them.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Brawn and brain, body and mind, athlete and student, Byar and Kipp. Opposite in interests, they are alike in sympathies; separated by activities, they are bound by friendship. Four years together here at Maryville have served to blend the concentrated purposes of each enough to give both men a liberal, well-rounded purpose, characteristic of Maryville's Superior Scotties.

T. (T stands for Thomas) Madison Byar's outstanding achievements have been in the field of athletics. His record, an enviable one, on the track team shows that he has been high score man every year since he was a freshman. This year he is captain of the team. As a sophomore, he was chosen to represent his class as Student Athletic Director. The reputation he has won as a wrestler is a creditable one. He has been a member of the wrestling team for two years, and in that time he has not lost a single inter-collegiate match. His interests, however, have not been confined entirely to athletics. He was Art Editor on the 1933 Chilhowean staff.

The accomplishments of Howard Kipp (the middle name is William) have been chiefly scholastic. He will graduate with Cum Laude honors; his grades, with perhaps one exception, having been of honor roll rank every semester since he came to Maryville. At present he is doing Honors Work in Sociology, with special attentioon given to a survey of Blount County. He has been an assistant librarian for three years. He was business manager of the 1933 Chilhowean, and Editor of the 1934 Handbook. That he is by no means uninterested in athletics is apparent, however, when one considers that he has at various times been a member of the track squad, and of the tumbling and wrestling teams.

Unlike as they have been in interests and achievements, there is, withal, a peculiar similarity in their characters. The intenseness with which they pursue their chosen activities; their opinions, which are arrived at as a result of serious, thorough thought; their sincerity; and their faithfulness to an ideal—all these culminate in a unity of effort toward a fine and genuine use of life.

On his twenty-first annual tour of the U. S., Edgar C. Raine will lecture at Waynesburg College, Waynesburg, Pa. He is said to be the world's best authority on "Alaska" and will present a travelogue, augmented by pictures in natural colors. One of the topics which his lecture includes is the colorful phenomoena of the midnight sun and the northern lights.

1934 CHILHOWEAN TO APPEAR MAY FIRST

The latest thing in Chihoweans is slated to make its debut on or about May first. The editor and other members of the staff deign to disclose very little definite information about this year's issue, so the coming out is somewhat shrouded in mystery.

The size of the volume will be approximately that of last year's issue but the arrangement will be slightly different. There will be four-hundred copies rolled off the press and those who have not ordered books may be able to secure an extra copy if they desire. Instead of the etchings of last year's issue, photographs of the campus will appear on the front page.

Meanwhile the subscribers can only wait and wonder about the feature section, and the general appearance of the year book.

Interesting bits may be found concerning the production of Shakespeare in foreign countries. In Japan the part of Hamlet is taken by a girl. The production of "Twelfth Night" in Moscow is mentioned for its artistry.

The Highland Echo:

Words are inadequate to express the gratitude I feel to the Faculty, the Student Body, the various organizations and individuals of the College for the anxious interest during the illness of my sister; for the evident grief her passing brought and for the manifold and tender touches of love during the last hours in her home and on the Hill.

As it is impossible to express my thanks individually, I am reaching you through your College paper.

I sincerely thank you all.

CHAPEL SPEAKERS

evening at the Court House in Maryville.

Dr. Morgan, a quiet, yet commanding personality, emphasized most strongly the national aspect of the project. Since the Tennessee River and its watershed touch seven states, the project is not primarily one for Tennessee alone, but is nation-wide in its aspects.

In discussing the necessity of the project, Dr. Morgan said, "The balancing of our population between urban and rural people is the big problem of America today." He closed his talk with an explanation of charts showing the problems with which the TVA must cope.

May Day Program

Musical features, which are under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, will be solos, duets, and choruses. Several types of music will be used, among them Indian negro and world war songs.

The pageant is under the direction of Elizabeth Kunkle and Eleanor Johnson and is the work of the pageantry class of the expression department. These projects will make up a part of their course, and are being carried out under the supervision of Mrs. Nita West and Miss Wilhemina Holland.

For the past three years, May Day has been celebrated at the ampitheatre in college woods. This year work is being done there which will better adapt the grounds for dramatic productions, both in stage and seating arrangemens. With such facilities available for a picturesque seting, the drama promises to be a beautiful one.

As a fitting finale for May Day the Maryville College Glee Singers will present their annual concert on May 1, in Voorhees Chapel at 8 p. m. The club has been working hard on the preparation of the various numbers of this program and it should be one of the best concerts that they have ever presented.

Freshman Debate

The affirmative team of Edward Thom, Richard Schlafer, and Boyce Jarman went over to Knoxville where they won a two to one decision over U. T. The negative team of Thomas Bryan, John Gilmore and John McIntire lost in the debate held here. This debate was before Mr. Barr Miller of Knoxville College as critic judge. He gave the decision to the University of Tennessee, but at the same time he complimented the Maryille debaters for their skill in debating and ability in speaking. Maryville's third speaker, Mr. McIntire, he said, was the best on the platform.

Both the freshman debates which were held here were attended by a large, enthusiastic audience who showed a deep interest in the question: Resolved that the State of Tennessee should be reorganized ino not more than twenty-four counties. The freshman debaters were coached by Mr. James R. Smith, president of the Maryville Chapter, Pi Kappa Delta, and the debates revealed that next year's varsity squad will have plenty of good material to draw upon.

Next Friday will see the freshman debaters in action again against King College.

FRENCH CLUB

Miss Merle Beebe, at the meeting of the French Club on Wednesday evening, discussed the turbulent conditions of France today. She presented an interesting background of history in connection with her talk. Two vocal solos by Elizabeth Kunkle, and trumpet numbers by Ruth Flint completed the program.

BY BRYAN PAYNE

We are not making light of the fact that we got our biggest thrill the other day when Mr. William Tilden played Mr. Ellsworth Vines on the U. T. courts in Knoxville. What either of them does not have, we fail to see the possibility of anyone having, in the way of speed and consistency. The manner in which those boys flog tennis balls across the net is something to save for future reference during grandfathership, when small boys pull ones ear and "tweak" ones nose for a bedtime story.

Wide Range of Appeal

The variety of the crowd which watched the internationally famous team's troupe perform goes to prove that no matter what one's station in life is, he is going to see those perform who are the best in their particular occupation. In Monday's matches the grandstands were filled with spectators ranging from college presidents, on down the line to small boys who would not be able to define 'baseline'. We should not say small boys, however, with reference to those technicalities, for we understand that someone in Coach Fischbach's tennis class can not yet discriminate between 'baseline' and 'net'. To most of us the net is a base line. . . yeh, very base. We are still wondering what Prof. Smith's reaction was when Dr. Lloyd caught him cutting a Spanish class to see the stars perform.

Temperamental Willie

There was a good bit of talk circulating about Big Bill's funny temperament. According to Bob Murphy, Mr. Tilden during his last appearance here groaned in agony when somebody's mother yelled "Yoo hoo" and that it was time to go home and chop the evening's kindling. In our way of thinking all that goes with the show. Every big shot must carry something funny around with him for people to talk about, and it might as well be temperament as anything else.

'Finklestein' Russell Is Coaching Track

This corner was very happy to find a letter in the mail box the other day from none other than Ray Russell, former Maryville football, baseball, and track star. Russell has a contract with the Piedmont League, a branch of the St. Louis Cardinals, over in Greensboro, N. C. A good town, that Greensboro. During the present season, however, he has been coaching track at High Point, having received leave of absence from baseball until the first of June. It is with a great deal of interest that we intend to follow up the progress he will make in his new career. He is a heavy hitter and a good outfielder, and he is destined to go to the top unless something unforseen happens. He writes that the chest injury which he got in the game with U. K. last year is still giving him trouble, but that he hopes it will clear up soon. This corner has the same wish.

Russell's Good Arm

Everytime we think of Russell we think of the mighty throw which he made last year to set a college record for the javelin toss. The University of Tennessee was the opposition. Throughtout the first two or three trials the competition had been close, everybody toying around a hundred twenty-five or fifty feet. On the last trial Russell slapped that shoulder of his, set Raqueteers Vie With Tusculum Today at 2 P.M.

Experience Stands Behind Scot Machine As Schedule Gets Underway; Talmage Will Play Number One Position.

Mr. Weatherman permitting, and the white flannel boys in the usual fine fettle, Coach Fischbach's netmen will encounter a squad from Tusculum College on the Varsity Courts this afternoon at 2:00 p. m.

Great things are to be expected from the tennis squad this season. Not only are Fischbach's men making a good show in practice, but they are backed by experience, each one having played at least a season for Maryville.

With the exception of Coach Fischbach and Carl Haub, the line up will be practically unchanged from last year. John Talmage, a veteran of four years of experience, will occupy the number one berth, and Gordon Karnell, an equally good performer, will play second position. Phay and Gillingham will play singles in third and fourth positions.

A strong doubles team will function when Red Woodling and Karnell take the court. Karnell's slashing drives supported by Red's net game will carry them in good stead. Talmage and Gillingham will probably pair for the other doubles.

One more home meet is scheduled before the team leaves for a week's road trip through North Carolina and Virginia.

Because of profuse rain, the meet, which was scheduled with U. T., has been cancelled. There is a possibility that it will be held at a later date.

Track Schedule Is Cut To Four Meets

Center College Colonels Default; A.A.U. Cracks For Want of Funds; Scanties Meet L.M.U. There Next.

Due to a default of the Center College Colonels and the calling off of the State A.A.U. meet by the Bemberg Co. of Elizabethton, Tenn. the track schedule has been reduced from six to four meets this season. Lack of funds is the cause of the discontinuance of the A.A.U. meet, and no reasons were given for the Center default.

The squad has been having light workouts this week due to the inclemency of the weather. Heavy duty begins next week in preparation for the trip to Emory and Henry.

The remaining two meets are with L.M.U. here on May 5th and the State meet at Knoxville on May 12th.

Baseballers Play Four Conference Tilts Next Week

The baseball card for the coming week finds the Highlanders facing L. M. U. and Carson-Newman in four conference tilts.

This afternoon the Scotties will play L. M. U. in the second of a two-game series at Harrogate, the first game having been played yesterday. Monday, the Eagles from Carson-Newman will come here to play the Scots, and Wednesday the two teams will play in Johnson City. The third game of the week with Carson-Newman is scheduled for Friday on the local field.

Give Them a Chance!

AN EDITORIAL

Although the Memorial varsity tennis courts have seen a season come and go, and have been beaten and packed by rains, they are by no means impervious to the pressure of heavy leather heels, and will not be, for at least another season. However, this does not mean that heeled shoes should ever be worn by one using the courts. Much to the contrary.

On this same page last year this condition was brought to light, but it seems that some persons need to be reminded at frequent intervals. It is a thoughtless act which one commits when he attempts to play on the varsity courts, or any other courts, in street shoes. As was said before, certain benefactors went to considerable pains in order that the varsity courts could be more centralized and better equipped than the old ones have been, and because of that it is up to us, and particularly to those who offend, to show appreciation for those added improvements.

Since it is the individual that offends, this problem is one for the consideration of the individual rather than of the group. It would be petty for the administration to have to appoint a commission for that purpose, with offices located on the edge of the courts. This question of a sense of honor, even duty, is not so petty.

Baseballers Lose To Knoxville Team, 4-2

Walker of Goodall Holds Scots To Five Scattered Hits; Scot Tossers Show Good Form, Fanning Nine.

The Scot baseball team was unable to solve the pitching of Walker, of the Goodall Manufacturing Company, last Saturday afternoon, and lost a 4-2 decision to the Knoxville City League team on the home diamond.

Walker held the Scotties to five scattered hits and struck out ten batters, six of them in a row. Three Scot tossers also pitched well, allowing only one earned run and striking out nine men. The other three Goodall scores were the results of four errors.

Hand, who pitched the first five innings for Maryville, yielded only two hits and two unearned runs and fanned three. Cochrane, who relieved Hand at the beginning of the sixth, was touched for four hits and one run, and Gabbard, who pitched the ninth round, did not alow a hit and struck out the last two men up.

Goodall scored once in the first inning on a single, a sacrifice, and an error, and again in the third on a single and two errors. Maryville made two runs in the last half of the third to tie the score. In this inning, Coker received a pass and Kalman and Andrews were safe on errors, filling the bases. Blazer's fly to centerfield scored Coker and put Kalman on third and Andrews on second. Kalman was put out at home when the signals were missed, and Andrews made the last Maryville score on a single over second by Loesserg.

Goodall scored the winning run in the eighth on three singles and added another in the ninth on an error by the centerfielder.

Blazer made two of the Scotties' hits and Loessberg, Gillespie, and Mark Andrews made one each.

Score by innings:

Goodall—	101 000 011	4	6	3
Maryville—	002 000 000	2	5	4

Batteries— Goodall: Walker and Palmer; Maryville: Hand, Cochrane, Gabbard, and Corns.

Highlanders Lose First League Tilt To L. M. U., 6-3; Atchison Hurls Victory Against Hiwassee Highlanders Show Improved Fielding; Atchison's Pinch-Pitching Is Margin Of Victory in Monday's Game.

Seven Errors And a Wet Infield Contribute to Highlanders' Defeat; Tennessee Teachers Lead Conference.

The Highlander diamond squad made hits when hits counted last Monday afternoon and won a clean cut victory over Hiwassee, on the latter's own home field, by the score of 5 to 3.

Each team collected eight safeties, but "Butter" Atchison pitched better in the pinches than did Youell, of Hiwassee. Beginning in the second, Atchison struck out at least one batter in each of the remaining innings and two in the seventh and eighth, a total of ten strike outs in the nine innings. Only two of the Scotties whiffed.

Gillespie hit safely twice, a double and a single, in five trips to the plate to set the pace for the Scot batters. Loessberg, Blazer, Kizer, Hand, Graf, and Acthison each reached first once on base-hits, while Gillespie, Blazer, Kizer, Kalman and Atchison did the scoring.

Jesse, with two hits out of five times up, and Westberg, with a home run with one man on base, led the Hiwassee attack. The remaining hits were spread out among the other players, nobody else making more than one. Hiwassee bunched three hits in the second frame to make their first run and three more in the eighth for the other two.

Maryville scored twice in the third inning on only one hit, gaining an advantage which was never lost, and added one run in the fourth on two hits, another in the sixth on one safe blow, and the last on two hits in the seventh.

The Scotties displayed a better brand of fielding in this game than in the former ones this season, and were charged with only two errors, the same number that Hiwassee made.

Score by innings:

Maryville—	002 101 100	5	8	2
Hiassee—	010 000 020	3	8	2

Batteries: Maryville— Atchison and Corns, Graf; Hiwassee—Youell and Wright.

The Highlander baseball combine was defeated by Lincoln Memorial University yesterday afternoon in Harrogate by a 6 to 3 verdict. This was the first conference game of the season for the Scotties.

Although Maryville was out-hit by L. M. U., eight to six, seven errors on the part of the Scotties had a share in the defeat. The Railsplitters committed three miscues. A wet infield may have been the cause of so many errors on the part of both teams.

Gillespie and Loessberg, together, made all but one of the Scot hits. The latter hit a home run, his second of the season, and a single, and Gillespie made three singles. Each was at bat four times. For L. M. U., Kennedy hit two out of five and Bowling two out of four for the best averages.

This victory for L. M. U. marked their fourth in five games against Smoky Mountain Conference teams. Coach Murray's squad is at present leading the conference.

Summary:

Maryville	3	6	7
L. M. U.	6	8	3

Batteries— Maryville: Atchison and Corns; L. M. U.—Bowling and Slover.

OBSERVATIONS

Harry Walrond has been telling us about his afferent neurones and their activities. We just thought it must be fun to have so many little bodies working in a person, trying to get some cooperation out of the coordinating neurones, etc. You see, Walrond is describing his method of getting up in the morning.

—O—

The alarm rings, the pleasant notes are picked up by the then latent afferents which fetch the word along to the coordinaters, but the coordinaters are sleepy—no, snooty, and won't pay any attention, thereby allowing the big Mr. Walrond, boss of all the little neurones, to go back to sleep.

—O—

But the other, that is the afferent, just keep pestering until one coordinater opens the door to give the air and by doing that lets five afferents into the Palace, or something, and the fat's in the fire, the games up, and the afferent neurones have gained admission.

—O—

From there on it's just too bad. This extra internal procedure takes place just before Walrond begins to roll and toss. First they go to the left side and Walrond turns over with his right side high; and then they go to the right side and Walrond obliges.

—O—

It isn't long then until the coordinaters are conquered and the word gets along to the efferents. These are the ones that fetch the bad news to the effectors, and the efferents are more cooperative. They carry messages and carry messages and finally the game's up, and not only that, but Walrond's up, and the early morning Bed Time story is ended for another day.

—O—

We just thought that a few unscientific persons, unlike ourselves, would be interested to know how the process of getting up took place. It took plenty of nerve for us to tell you.

—O—

My, what a bunch of nasty remarks were made at our little old Highland Echo last week. . . . and where do you think? It took place in Dr Hunter's Sunday School class. Kipp, the man that always goes to Sunday School be it rain or shine, sort of stepped on our little crowd of people who consider ourselves budding journalists and called us all the names that he could call us (in Sunday School).

—O—

As a result, of course, being the kind of wise person who always takes Kipp seriously, we feel terribly degenerated already for writing for such a down right lowlifer of a paper.

—O—

Krainock still tells stories about the National Convention in Lexington. Very naturally, they get better with age, as Krainock does (starting at the top and going down).

—O—

This is this: There was a fire in Lexington on one of the nights that the team were there. It was at about 2 a. m.; everyone got up and rushed to the windows in whatever he slept in to see the fire. We might mention that the buildings were all rather close together in this locality. Anyhow, the other debaters in Prof. Queener's room were watching the blaze which was out in a Southerly direction when all of a sudden a feminine voice cries out to Newman Smith from a northeasterly direction, saying, "Hey guy, the fire's over there!"

—O—

The aforementioned Krainock asked the aforementioned myself if he could write the Observations this week which fitted in well with myself's plans for the week, but Miss Proffitt raised something in the way of a howl. We rather suppose that the complaint was a matter of the content, rather than the form, of Mr. Krainock's embryonic Observations.

—O—

We forgot to say that we hope our science teachers are all satisfied with our Scientific Attitude and Procedure in the description in the first of these here.

Prof. Queener's Paper

proceeded to form a military alliance with the Southern Confederacy and to lay plans for withdrawing from the Union. This work of the legislature was submitted to the people for a vote of approval or disapproval on June 8, 1861. East Tennessee was the only section which opposed separation.

The first activities of the Unionists of East Tennessee was a mass meeting which was held in Knoxville. The meeting was adjourned, because it was thought that the Unionist's measures might be defeated. At the second meeting Mr. Fleming's resolution to the effect that Tennessee was still loyal to the Union was passed. At a convention held on June 17, 1861, Mr. Nelson's resolution that the action taken by the State legislature was illegal because the consent of the people hadn't been obtained was accepted. The opportunity for a separate State, however, was lost when the resolution was dropped.

The Unionists now proceed to help slaves escape. Later they helped many prisoners of war to escape, and all the time they were going or helping others on their way to join the Northern army. The "most famous act of war" which the Unionists attempted to perform was that of burning the bridges on the Virginia and East Tennessee Railroad. They succeeded in burning five of the nine bridges. After this the Unionists of East Tennessee waited until 1863 for the Northern army to arrive.

Mr. Queener then discussed why the people of Middle and West Tennessee changed from pro-Unionists to Secessionists between February 9 and June 8, 1861 while the people of East Tennessee remained loyal. The following are a few of the reasons which he gave: "The people of East Tennessee had always ben different in politics from the rest of the state." One of the reasons for their difference was because of the difference of their soil and climate. "The people of East Tennessee for many years, in fact throughout the history of the area, have looked to the federal government to improve and make navigable the Tennessee river". Economic factors were also important, especially when they were so closely connected with men like Andrew Johnson, William G. Brownlow, Thomas A. R. Nelson, John Netherland, Horace Maynard, O. P. Temple, and others. Andrew Johnson influenced the people very greatly in their decision to stand by the Union. The people of East Tennessee" were men who neither dreaded nor feared civil war but who had no driving reasons to cause them to sacrifice lives and property for either side."

first long role. She brought a certain naturalness to her interpretation which gave charm to her character.

Eight members of the twelve in the cast were playing their first role on the Maryville College stage. Individually they did better than most who interpret for the first time.

The staging was improved by connecting the stage lights with the current. The steps, which were difficult to construct, were a bit awkward.

The devices for producing the mystery in "The Wasp's Nest" were handled skilfully. The mirror-door, the sliding panel, the trap door, the reflected profile on the chimney, and the women's screams were well executed.

The action of the play was convincing and swift, but some of the dialogue dragged. In the first act the men with flashlights were not convincing in their search of the old house. The general uncertainty of the characters as to action may be laid to the cause of an underlying mystery which was disturbing them all.

The success of a mystery play depends upon the cast's ability to make the spirit of the drama triumph in the audience. "The Wasp's Nest" did put over scenes effectively.

Only once or twice was a device for heightening the mystery lost in its effect on the audience. Some of the devices were not adequately accounted for, which is the fault of the playwright, but all of them retained their dramatic effectiveness as the cast exploited them.

Conference Tilts

The old Eagle-Scottie rivalry should make next week's games lively affairs. The Highlanders have not forgotten that football game last fall and that baskeball game which ruined their chances of staying in the running for the Smoky Conference championship.

With a final grunt and a mighty heave he let fly. It was a beautiful heave, soaring straight down Shields-Watkins Field, a hundred, fifty, seventy-five, pinning itself in the turf after traveling a hundred niney-two feet. Nobody in this section has yet touched it. Russell had hopes of breaking his own record this year, but he concluded that a baseball would do just as well. We'll bet he is showing those youngsters over in High Point a thing or two about track.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION HAS UNIQUE BANQUET

The annual banquet of the Ministerial Association was held on Thursday night in the Presbyterian Church with an attendance of seventy-seven.

The banquet was planned on a light theme with the following program:

Talk on Joe Purvis by Alex Christie
Humorous reading by Lorena May Dunlap
Vocal solos by the Tot trio, Talmage, Orner, and Talmage
Skit by Blizzard and Garrett
Talk on toothbrushes by Al Herries
Violin solos by Glover Leitch

Dean Hunter was toastmaster and added greatly to the success of the evening's enjoyment. The principal speaker was Dean F. M. Massey, Dean of Men of the University of Tennessee. He spoke to the group on the essential qualities of the minister and the essentials of the Christian ministry.

One Lewis Gannett states that Sinclair Lewis is more like Dickens than any other novelist of our day—in his fertile imagination, his crusading passion, his love for the world of men, his teeming vitality.' Such a statement offers wide, wide scope for disagreement.

Echo Announcements

The HIGHLAND ECHO wishes to call the attention of all students to the advertisement of the Continental Teacher's Agency which has appeared in the Echo columns for some weeks. It has recently come to our notice that this agency is carrrying on a business condemned as fraudulent by postal authorities. We take this opportunity to warn all sudents against communicating with the agency. One Maryville student very narrowly escaped the loss of a sum of money from such communication. Business between the ECHO and the agency will, of course, immediately be cut off.

The ECHO also wishes to call the attention of students to the article appearing this week concerning the amendments to the HIGHLAND ECHO constitution. Such amendments cannot go into effect without the approval of student body and faculty. The matter will be submitted to vote in chapel next Wednesday morning. A thorough reading will hasten matters.

Next week's ECHO will carry announcements concerning the personnel of the 1934-35 ECHO staff and editor.

Student Conference Proves Of Interest

Number of Maryville Delegates Attend Profitable Convention

The first state conference of the Student Christian Organizations in Tennessee met at Cookeville, April 20, 21 and 22. The conference was attended by nearly eighty delegates, representing the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Student Volunteers, The Student Division of the Methodist Church, South, and other campus groups. Six delegates went from Maryville. The sessions of the conference were held on the campus of the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, a college of about seven hundred students.

The leader of the conference was Mr. Richard Edwards who heads the United Religious Work on Cornell campus in Ithaca, New York. He opened the first session with a discussion problem of "Organizing Myself". The conference theme was stated as "Organizing for Higher Levels of Living."

Miss Meares, secretary of the southern region of the Y. W. C. A. surveyed the national student Christian movement raising questions as to the purpose of such a movement. Mrs. Henry Hart from Vanderbilt spoke on the World's Student Christian Association at the banquet in the evening.

A profitable hour was spent in comparing notes on projects sponsored by the religious organizations and in discussing problems that are pertinent on the separate campuses. The Maryville organizations compare most favorably with others throughout the state, the delegates reported.

Among the colleges and universities represented were Vanderbilt, Southwestern, U. T., Teacher's College, Scarritt, and Maryville.

The closing session was held in the Methodist Church, where Dr. Kesler of the Vanderbilt School of Religion spoke.

Plans are under way for holding another conference next fall at the University of Tennessee Junior College in Martin. It is probable that it will be an interracial conference such as are common in surrounding states.

The Writer's Workshop meeting will be held on Wednesday instead of Tuesday of next week, because of the May Day activities.

Nathalia Wright and Fred Kirchner will read. After the reading of the papers, the election of new members will be held. Twelve vacancies will be left by graduating members. The meeting will be at 4:00 o'clock.

Honor Students Organize Scholarship Society

Constitution Is Drawn Up For Honor Society

A long-felt need on the campus has at last been supplied by the creation at Maryville of an honorary scholarship society. The full name of the new society is Alpha Gamma Sigma Honor Scholarship Society of Maryville College; its purpose the promotion of scholarship. The letters, Alpha Gamma Sigma are the initial letters of the Greek words for Truth, Knowledge and Wisdom.

The origin of the society goes back to a meeting of the student-faculty committee last winter, at which time Dr. Lloyd appointed a committee of Drs. Hunter and Fields, and Fred Kirchner to investigate the feasibility of forming such a society. The committee reported favorably to the Executive committee of the faculty and the Student Council, both of which approved the report. The report recommended the formation of a larger committee and Dr. Lloyd added Miss Hudson to the committee and authorized Mr. Kirchner to select two more students. Janet Warren and Dorothy Nachery were then appointed. After extended deliberations the committee set up standards of eligibility for membership. In order to be eligible for membership a student must be in the upper ten percent of the graduating class, and also have maintained for the previous seven semesters an average point hour ratio of 6.5. Under the present grading sytsem that means an average of between B and B plus. Faculty members who are members of Phi Beta Kappa (national scholarship society) automatically become associate members of the Maryville society, Alpha Gamma Sigma. Other faculty members may also be elected to associate membership. These standards were sub-

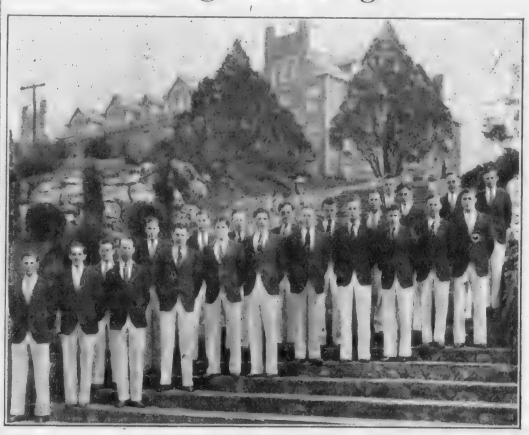
Talent Is Displayed At Twilight Concert

Ensemble Numbers Especially Well Received

On last Tuesday afternoon under the auspices of the Chilhowee Club the Music Department of the College presented its annual Twilight Concert. A large and appreciative audience gave evidence of a thorough enjoyment of the excellent program.



This year the program consisted entirely of piano numbers, variety being obtained through contrast of various types of music played, and the use of two, four, and seven piano numbers. Interersting appreciation comments were supplied before each number by the director of the piano department, Miss Laura Hale.

A boys' quartet offered an arrangement of "Country Gardens" by Percy Grainger. A piano ensemble group of seven girls presented three well done numbers, "March Mignonne" by Poldini, "May Night" by Palmgren, and "Etude Fantastique" by Friml. Misses Sullivan and Manges played the always charming Arensky Waltz, and Chaminade's "Au Matin".

The outstanding work of the concert was done by Opal Johnson who played "Harmonies de Sou" by Pachulski, and "Pavane" by Ravel, FRAUDULENT ! ! ! !

Within the last week two striking examples of uncontrolled advertising have come to the very doorstep of Maryville College in the experiences of two students, one the perpetrator of it, the other a near victim of it. Not only has this advertising been uncontrolled, but has been fraudulent as well. There is scarcely a student who is not aware of the little scheme devised by a late member of the freshman class whereby he received a considerable sum of money thru advertisement of a fake silver polish, a fake contest, and a fake offer of prizes to the winners of this contest. It developed that his little scheme had reached people all over the United States, and that these victims had sent the operator money for the "Plato" polish, which they had to buy in order to enter the contest.

The second example of which we speak is in connection with the advertisement of the Continental Teachers Agency, which has been running in the Highland Echo for the last ten or fifteen weeks. One student, seeking to benefit by this organization, wrote this agency for the full particulars. Immediately she received a letter stating that she must remit a fee of ten dollars to cover "tuition" charges. She did so. Some few days later her letter was returned marked "fraudulent" and with the information that no more mail is being delivered to that address by order of the postal authorities.

We do not know just what these two examples of fraudulent advertising prove to you, but to us they prove only one thing, that advertising, if continued on the same untrustworthy basis, will lead to drastic results and previously unknown corners of chaos. Already this competitive trend in the ballyhooing of untried products has lead us to the point at which we can not know what we are investing in.

Fraudulence such as this is gaining ground rapidly thru lack of control and censorship of advertising. It must be stopped and it can be stopped by government control. Creation of a national board of control and censorship would bring about a thorough investigation of petty and fraudulent ballyhoo, the like of which we have contacted during the past week. At present, the government is the only organization which is capable of taking over this control. These frauds are not the the fault of the newspapers or magazines which carry their "bait", they are not the fault of radio stations which broadcast them, but they do exist because there is no organization with the authority to weed out the good from the bad.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Hers is the type of southern womanhood that poets and writers have delighted in. The smoothness of her ivory skin against the ebony of her hair, her southern charm. . Thus would the poets describe her. We, being no poet, would describe her thus also; but we would add that Veta May Stephens is much more real, much more alive, much more interesting than any figurative characterization can make her.

Her life at Maryville for the last four years has given sufficient proof of her genuine reality. A combination of talent and dependability discovered in her have made her valuable in certain circles here. She has been outstanding in the activities of the dramatic department. She represented thhe expression department last year in its part on the annual commencement week program. She is a member of Theta Alpha Phi, national honorary dramatic fraternity, and she willbe a graduate in expression this year. In addition, she had important roles recently in the College Player's production, "Berkeley Square", and in the Bainonian midwinter, "The Torch Bearer".

She is an actively interested member of the Y.W.C.A. Last year she was vice-president of the Maryville chapter. She was also stage manager of the Y. W. C. A. benefit play, "Within the Law" She is a leader in Bainonian Society. She served very capably as program secretary during Bainonian's 1933 opening week, and later as president of the society.

Veta May's quiet, inherent charm has taught her the secret of meeting all situations with dignity and poise; a secret which, we should say, is that of happy, successful living.

THE TWILIGHT HOUR

A calm and peaceful hush enfolds
The world in silent rest,
Just as the sun's last gleam shines o'er
The vista of the West.

The birds on high are homeward bound
And winging their last flight,
As slowly fades the light of day
And blends with shades of night.

A time when man from Labor's grasp
Is free to rest and love;
A time when weary though he be,
He knows that God's above.

To go serene with tranquil heart,
Which heavenward does tower
In conscious love of God, is to Enjoy the twilight hour.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

The Home Economics Club met April 25th in the Home Ec room to plan either an open party or a camping trip. A majority of the members were in favor of a camping trip, so the president appointed a committee consisting of Pauline Throne, Marie Bailey, and Marjorie Fleming to loook into the possibilities of such a trip. This committee is to report at a called meeting Wednesday, May 2nd. The men's class is to have charge of the regular meeting May 10th.

Lorena May Dunlap gave a reading, "Mary Terry".

CHEMISTRY-PHYSICS CLUB

Tuesday evening, April 24th, the Chemistry-Physics Club met in the chemistry lecture room in Science Hall. Bob Brown gave an interesting talk on chemical substances and in connection with this he demonstrated powdered aluminus and sodium peroxide. Another demonstration showed the formation of smokings of phosgine. The next meeting will be held May 8th.

Lawrence Tibbett, famous American baritone, was a dominating figure in the opera this season. He was most outstanding, perhaps in the "Emperor Jones".

Netmen Leave For Trip; Meet Mars Hill Today

Talmage, Karnell, Phay, and Gillingham Will Make Trip; Schedule Calls For Six Matches Within Week

One more home match, with Mars Hill College here on the varsity courts this afternoon, remains to be played before Coach Fischbach and his netmen take to the road Monday for a week's trip through North Carolina and Virginia.

Coach Fischbach and four players, Talmage, Karnell, Phay and Gillingham will make the trip. Leaving Monday morning the team will encounter Mars Hill in a return match that aftenoon. From there the racqueteers journey on to Hickory, N. C. where they will meet the strong Lenoir-Rhyne outfit on May 1. On the following four days they meet the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Virginia Tech, Emory-Henry, and cut back thru Tennessee where they meet Tusculum in a return match on the 5th. The next home match will be played against Tennessee Teachers on May 9th.

Little is known about the majority of the teams which will be met. Coach Fischbach is confident of winning at least four cut of the six scheduled matches, but remains in doubt as to Virginia Tech. Although the match with U.N.C. is virtually considered as lost, the Scotties will put up a strong fight in an attempt to make as good a showing as possible. When asked for a statement for the Echo, he replied, "Just tell them that we'll win most, if not all, of the matches. We have got a good team, with plenty of experience and possibilities."

Defeat Tusculum, 5-2

The netmen hit a steady mid-season stride last Saturday to defeat the Tusculum racquetmen, 5-2, on the varsity courts, losing only two matches, a singles and doubles.

Talmage, Karnell, Phay, and Warman triumphed in the singles, and Woodling paired with VanHee won the second position doubles. Gillingham lost in singles, and Karnell paired with Price lost first position doubles.

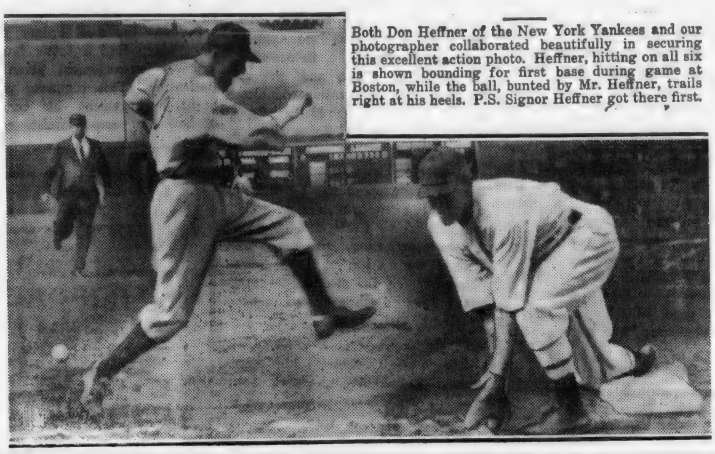
Lose, 5-2, To Strong Tennessee Team

Aided by the addition of Polk Crumbliss at number one position, the University of Tennessee netmen revenged their previous defeat at the hands of the Scotties by defeating Fischbach's men, 5-2, on the home courts Wednesday.

Earlier in the season the Scotties gave them a thorough trouncing in Knoxville by the same score, but at that time the veteran Crumbliss was ineligible. With Crumbliss at number one position the remainder of the team was moved down one position, thus forming a doubly strong team.

Talmage defeated Hodges, and Talmage paired with Karnell defeated Crumbliss and Hodges in three sets to win the two matches for the Maryvillians. Karnell, Gillingham, Phay, and Warman lost in singles, while Woodling and Van Hee paired to lose the other doubles match.

Faculty Tie Varsity, 2-All, In Thriller



The long disputed question of superiority between faculty and varsity tennis teams remained unsettled as the two factions scored even honors in their first open warfare of the season Thursday.

Karnell defeated the veteran Dr. Lloyd in singles, and Phay outclassed Professor Smith, former tennis coach and mentor to Phay, to win the other singles in two straight sets.

Fischbach, faculty, outclassed his former rival, Talmage, to win, also in straight sets. Fischbach and Lloyd, faculty, paired to defeat Karnell and Talmage in the doubles.

It is expected that the next encounter between the two teams will find a stronger faculty team with the addition of Professor Queener and Herr Hussey.

Laymon Pulls Mound Freak, Striking Out Four In One Inning; Good Fielding, Poor Hitting is Scot Reputation

By Dick Meadows

The Highlander diamondeers unleashed a terrific batting attack against Carson-Newman in Jefferson City last Thursday afternoon, only to lose one of the most thrilling games of the season in the thirteenth inning. The score was 8 to 7.

After being held to two hits by Laymon on Monday, the Scotties snapped out of their batting lethargy and pounded the ball all over the field for sixteen safe blows. Kizer led the offense with four hits, a base on balls, a sacrifice, and an outfield fly in seven times up. Coker, Blazer, Loessberg, Corns and Kalman each connected safely twice, and Andrews and Hand once apiece. Blazer made three runs, Kizer two, Loessberg one, and Coker one. Loessberg and Coker doubled for the Scots' only extra base hits.

Carson-Newman scored once in the first by means of a single, a sacrifice, and an error, and once in the second on an error, a sacrifice, and a single. Maryville made its first marker in the fourth. Kizer walked, Blazer forced Kizer at second but was safe at first, and Corns singled, sending Blazer home.

The Scots took the lead in the sixth on three hits and two runs. Kizer and Blazer singled to begin with, and both scored on Loessberg's double. Loessberg was put out, however, and two more outs followed.

Carson-Newman forged ahead again in the seventh. Carter tripled, Bible walked, and Smith drove both of them home with a single. The score was tied at four-all in the eighth when Coker doubled, Kizer bunted, and Blazer hit a long fly to centerfield. Coker scored after the catch.

Neither side tallied in the ninth, but the Scots made three hits good for three runs in the tenth, seemingly enough to win the game. Carson-Newman duplicated the feat in its half of the inning, however, and, after two scoreless rounds, pushed across a run in the thirteenth to win the game. In this frame Ward led off with a double and was sacrificed to third. Smith followed with a fly to left field and Ward scored the winning run after the catch.

Hand started on the mound for the Scots and pitched well before being removed in the tenth. He allowed only four runs in the regular nine innings and the score was tied when Atchison went in at the beginning of the eleventh. Atchison allowed only two hits in the last three innings, although the winning run was scored off him.

Lose To C.-N., 7-4

Four Scotties struck out in one inning and only two hit safely during the entire game last Monday afternoon as Maryville lost to Carson-Newman 7 to 4 on the local diamond.

The Scotties fielded well, but good fielding did not off-set the poor hitting. One of the two hits was a bunt which was beat out by Loessberg and the other a short fly by Kizer which the centerfielder could not quite reach. An error by Coker in centerfield on the first play of the game was the only miscue made by the Scots, who fielded much better than in the L. M. U. series.

While Laymon was holding the Scot batters in check, his mates found Atchison and Gabbard for nine hits and six earned runs. In the first inning, with Ward and Bible on base as the result of an error and a single, Dowling, ace of the Eagle sluggers, walloped and ball to the bank in left field, enabling him to round the bases with ease. After this blow, Atchison held Carson-Newman scoreless for the next three innings.

Maryville scored its first two runs in the fourth, even though Laymon did his strike-out stunt in this inning. Loessberg, leading of, missed his third strike, but reached first when the catcher threw wild in an attempt to put him out after dropping the ball on the last strike. Corns then walked and Kizer was safe on another error. With the bases full, Andrews and Graf struck out, but Atchison went to first on an error which let in two runs. Coker ended the scoring by being the fourth man to strike out.

Carson-Newman scored twice in the fifth on a single, a fielder's choice, in which both runners were safe, and a long double to left. Another score was added in the sixth on a single, a walk, a sacrifice, and an outfield fly.

The Scotties pulled up to within two runs of the Eagles in the sixth inning. With one down, Atchison, Coker, and Hand walked in succession, and the first two scored on an error.

Carson-Newman made the last run in the eighth, when Hutchins walked and scored on a single to right field.

Poor fielding by the Eagles robbed Laymon of a shut-out victory over the Scots. A home run and two singles by Dowling featured the Carson-Newman attack.

Lose to L. M. U., 12-6

Although the Scottie baseball team did its best hitting of the season, up to that time, last Saturday afternoon, it was defeated by the Lincoln Memorial University squad 12 to 6 in the second of a two-game series at Harrogate.

Maryville hit two opposing pitchers for nine safe blows, but the Railsplitterrs collected twelve safeties off the delivery of three Scott hurlers. Corns, with a triple and a single, and Loessberg, with a double and a single, hit best for the Highlanders. Blazer and Coker each singled twice and Kalman once, for the remainder of the local's hits. Loessberg made three scores and Corns, Kalman, and Gillespie made one each.

Maryville got at least one safe hit in all but the second and fifth innings, and scored in each except the first, second, and fifth. L. M. U. hit safely in the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth, six hits and as many runs being made in the sixth inning.

In losing their second straight game to L. M. U., the Scots had another bad day afield, making four errors. The Railsplitters were only a little better, however, for they erred three times.

Scot Scanties Off For Meet With Em-Henry

Tough Workouts of The Past Week Have Strengthened Scot Machine; Byar, Paul, Atkins, Allen Good

Coach Thrower's cinder pounders are off on a two day trip to Emory-Henry to meet the Wasp greyhounds on their own territory Victory is not only hoped for, but expected. The past week has been a long tough one for the squad, good weather favoring hard, sweaty, daily workouts.

The team as a whole is in ship shape condition. The long vacation from competition has afforded Thrower the opportunity to work the men up to a peak gradually, and they're all raring to tear up the home stretch for more victories.

Big things are expected of Byar, Paul and Atkins, while the yearlings have high hopes in Allen. As far as enemy strength is concerned, little is known. Reports from the north say that Robert's alma mater is no slouch when it comes to showing its heels, so all we have to count on is the strength of the stalwart Scots.

OBSERVATIONS

"There are other ways to achieve fame", said Dr. Hunter at 10:22 Thursday morning. The reason the above apothegm fell from his lips is this: Somehow or other Orr has learned the dark secret of our life When we pleaded to write Observations, in order to repay the panning we had received, Orr consented. (Note that the Mr. is omitted). When ink was splashing on the paper and on the roommate's sox, Orr makes the statement that we had better give the Dean a much needed something or other, or else the secret is out. Then the Dean says that either we keep the mouth shut and the hands in the pockets, or the secret is out. Only three of us know the secret now. Since we'd rather get hung for doing something than for not doing anything, Dr. Hunter is due for the truth—such as it is.

—O—

Si Portrum was baking a cake in Home Ec class the other day—and succeeded in doing it. The only drawback, rather, flat note, was that Si forgot the baking powder, one of the minor ingredients. The cake came out of the oven smoking hot, but as flat as a senior's purse. Si gazed upon his handiwork. "Shucks, I must have forgotten something," said he. "Oh, well, I was making pancakes anyhow." It's a good thing Si wasn't an artillery-man when muzzle-loaders were in use.

Toms is in the hospital these days, languishing from love and measles, but rumor has it that he doesn't lack the former so much as the latter. The aforesaid rumor maintained that Toms had rigged up a telephone whereby his Frau could pour her mellifluous accents into his yearning ears,—without danger of violating college rules and those of propriety. We Winchelled around the hospital several times in order to find the instrument, but were unsuccesssful.

—O—

Anyhow, all we wanted to tell Toms was that Kipp is having a big time arguing in the Philosophy of Education class conducted by Miss Gamble. Toms is the rock of dogma in the class, hence Kipp and he have a brotherly love for each other—you know how Kipp is. Since Toms is so versatile we cannot omit the diatribe addressed to his absence by the Kipp:

"Toms may be shock-proof, but he's no Elgin."

—O—

Harry Walrond presented the class in Advanced Composition with another brain-child. This time it was on Euphues, the same as a classic, by that name, only different. Mr. Walrond looks rugged, and he-mannish, but we wonder where he gets his Lyly-like ideas?

—O—

Before we forget we wish to dose Mr. Orr. After the things he has said about us we determined to say nothing about him. The best way we can do it is to say that he isn't worth the conception of the ink that it would take to write back words about him. And that's that.

—O—

Dr. Fields went fishing the other day, leaving his beloved class in Personality in the hands of Miss Gamble and in the grip of a mean examination. On his return we asked why he hadn't taken us along.

"I'm sorry", said the Man of Rodents, "but there were six others in the car besides myself." Shucks! All he had to do was to give the test beforehand, then jack the entire class comfortably into his creel. It was that kind of a test.

—O—

As a parting shot at someone—we have heard this statement going the rounds, and we are perplexed as to whom it refers. "Hiero is the name, I'm one of the Glyphic boys." Tut, tut, that sounds Egyptian!

—O—

Mr. Archibald Pieper, noted debater, authority on women, and connoiseur of dill-pickles, addressed the Hi-Trail Club on the subject "The Value and Place of Women in Modern Life." His speech ran as follows:

—— — —— — — — — —
—— — —— — — — — —
—— — —— — — — — —
—— — —— — — — — —

Very good, Mr. Pieper. Slightly Schopenhaverian, but more concise.

—O—

Mr. Earle Crawford, also a debater and pickle-lover, took issue to the speech. We can't figure out why he did, but the real reason may be that he is being tolerated by one of the Hunter people at present.

On Friday afternoon, April 28, Miss Susan Allen Green and Miss Bonnie Hudson attended a meeting of the Tennessee Academy of Science which was held at the University of Tennessee. In the afternoon Miss Hudson read a paper on the "Asters of Tennessee" before the Botany section of the academy.

Fred Kirchner was empowered to call together the students who are eligible for membership so that the society could be organized and a constitution adopted. The first meeting of the group was held April 16 and was devoted to a discussion of the proposed society and the appointing of a constitution committee of Dr. Knapp, Fred Kirchner, Harry Walrond, and Janet Warren.

On approval of the constitution by the executive committee the group met again, adopted the constitution and became an organization. That was on April 21. After adoption of the constitution, Drs. Lloyd and Hunter were taken in as Associate Members. At the election of officers Fred Kirchner was elected president, and Janet Warren, vice president.

The charter members of Alpha Gamma Sigma are, Kenneth Kidd, Howard Kipp, Fred Kirchner, Viola Lightfoot, Frances Massey, Burton Toms, Edith Vanaman, Harry Walrond, Janet Warren, Mary Sloane Welsh, Dr. Hussey, Dr. Knapp, and Mr. Lagerstedt.

Perhaps the most unique number was "Mary Had a Little Lamb", in a clever arrangement given it by Ballentine. Many Well Known Speakers To Gather at Convention Word has been received by the ECHO this week of a Conference of especial interest to college men and women. The announcement was accompanied by a request to print the particulars in this paper. On the assumption that the material will be of interest to some Maryville students the details are printed below.

"One of the greatest galaxies of "Who's Who" men and women ever assembled in an educational cause will come together next June when 31 Americans of world-known achievement gather to form the "faculty" of the first "Choosing-a-Career Conference for college men and women, to be held in Newark, June 26, 27 an 28, it was announced today by George Bijur, director of the conference and member of the Administrative Board of L. Expression Graduates Presented In Recital

Variety of Numbers Entertain Audience

The Graduate Recital in Expression was presented in Voorhees Chapel last evening to an appreciative audience.

A beautifully decorated stage made a fitting background for the entertainers. Bouquets of iris and dogwood, tulips, roses, and snapdragons added color to the platform.

Miss Lucille Swafford, with one of Booth Tarkington's short stories, opened the program with pleasing humor, and portrayed especially well her juvenile characters.

"A Chinese Water-Wheel", the one-act play given by Miss Frances Massey, was tinged with dreamy idealism which Miss Massey dramatized well. The play also exhibited her ability in different character interpretations.

Miss Nine Gamble, in two "improbable comedies", again brought humor into the recital. Miss Gamble's vivacious manner was particularly adapted to these light pieces. Her voice control was excellent, staying in character through her entire performance.

A cutting from Peter Pan by James Barrie was Miss Marian Falkner's reading. Its fantastic imagery was vividly depicted by Miss Falkner.

Miss Veta Mae Stephens recited three poems. The first two, "The Echo and the Ferry" and "The Bobolink" called for difficult voice work which was admirably executed. In her third number, "Silver Poplars" by Grace Noll Crowell, Miss Stephens was accompanied by Mr. Glover Leitch, violinist, and Miss Joyce Fields at the piano.

The recital was closed with a second number by Miss Swafford. She dedicated to the mothers of the audience the reading of Temple Bailey's tribute to Mothers.

For centuries the Passion Play has been produced. They know that it was given in 1246 before the Cathedral. During the Middle Ages in Europe nothing could compare with it. History and legend credited it with being the outstanding example of medieval magnificance.

Highland Echo Staff Elected; Violet Webb New Editor-in-Chief

Amendments To Constitution Fail To Go Through

At a meeting of the Student-Faculty committee on student publications yesterday the HIGHLAND ECHO staff for the coming year was selected. Since the proposed amendments to the Echo constitution had failed to pass the executive council of the faculty the election was held under the rules which have governed in former years, the staff comprising, in that instance, of four Staff Editors, three Junior Associates, and six Sophomore Cubs.

Those elected were as follows: Staff Editors, Dorothy Nethery, Grace Proffitt, Violet Webb, and Bryan Payne; Junior Associates, Elizabeth Kunkel, Katherine Orr, Alexander Christie, and Sophomore Cubs, Helen Chambers, Bernice Gaines, Ann McCambridge, Boyce Jarman, Edward Thom, and Richard Meadows. The new staff as a unit will begin its work by issuing the final edition of the 1933-34 ECHO on June 2.

Following this election the new staff met to elect an editor for the coming year. Violet Webb, who has filled an important position on the paper this year as Managing Editor, a position that entails a good deal of responsibility and work, was elected by a majority vote. Miss Webb has served on the ECHO since her freshman year, proving a loyal and capable member of the staff. Her writing ability is well recognized.

Miss Webb has chosen to serve in the capacity of Managing Editor Elizabeth Kunkel, also a very capable staff member.

The editorial and business staff of the HIGHLAND ECHO will hold its annual banquet on Thursday night, May 10, at 6:30 o'clock. The dinner will be served at the Presbyterian Church by one of the Circles of the Women's League.

An interesting and novel program is being planned. Dr. Hunter will be the toastmaster. Tickets should be secured from Grace Proffitt before Monday night.

College Glee Singers' Concert Well Attended

Annual Program Features Novelty Numbers

May Day festivities were brought to a successful close with the evening concert given by the Glee Singers. A reasonably large audience attended, and the listeners proved very responsive to the well presented and variegated program.

The numbers sung lent themselves particularly well to men's voices. There was a recurrent martial tone in "The Hundred Pipers" and "Drums", balanced by the lighter and more sentimental "Rose of Tralee" and "A Night in May".

The most popular chorus numbers were "The Bells of Shandon" and the short humorous selections. "Student Logic" particularly delighted the audience.

The Vagabond Quartet received the most applause, being enthusiastically encored on both appearances.

Also enthusiastically received was the clever chalk talk by Glover Leitch, a novelty entertainment for the Maryville platform.

The Glee Singers were assisted by the Women's Glee Club in two numbers, comprising a chorus of nearly fifty voices.

The program was as follows:

The Road is Open Again ---- N.R.A. Song
Out of The Night ----- Ellis-Nash
Old King Cole --- ------ Forsyth
The Hundred Pipers ---Scotch Air
The Rose of Tralee --------Glover
Pantomime—Leone Ann Brown, Carl Fisher

Natural Amphitheatre Scene Of Historical Pageantry May Day

May Queen and Court View March of History

The amphithehater in the college woods was beautifully decorated in a color scheme of green and yellow for the annual May Day program witnessed by several hundred people.

The queen, preceded by her flower girls, the maid of honor, and the crown bearer approached the throne from the path at the left side of the stage while the orchestra played, "Bells of the Sea", by Pietre. The queen, Geraldine Smith, wore a gown simply made of white taffeta, a white veil, and white slippers. Her bouquet was yellow roses. As maid of honor, Kathaleen Carpenter was dressed in a gown of white lace over yellow and carried a mixed bouquet of white roses, snapdragons, and lilies of the valley. Louise Lloyd and Betty Crawford, the flower girls, wore green and yellow. Since George Queener was ill, Freddy Waggoner took his place as crown-bearer. The class attendants wore gowns alike in style, but of different pastel colors. Their bouquets carried out the color scheme, and each junior flower girl wore a dress matching in color that of a class attendant.

The episodes presented in pageantry "America Through The Ages", under capable direction, they gave evidence of careful preparation.

The first episode, opening with the "Indian Love Call" sung by Calista Palmer and Andrew Alexander, depicted an Indian betrothal celebration and the landing of Columbus. The costuming and make up were particularly effective in these scenes.

The second episode sketched the landing of the Pilgrims, and the marriage of Priscilla and John Alden.

The third episode was an illus-

Ancient Chinese Idol Received By Museum

There wa recently received from China very interesting old idol sent by William Kelly, M. D., who has been for many years a medical missionary in the interior of China. The idol has been placed in the College Museum and bears the following card of explanation suggested by Dr. Kelly:

"I was made in the T'ang Dynasty (618-907) and therefore have been worshipped over 1,000 years. How can I help YOU?

"During the T'ang Dynasty China was probably the most highly civilized country on earth; the darkest days of the West when Europe was wrapped in ignorance and degradation of the Middle Ages, formed the brighest era of the East."

Dr. Kelly is not a Maryville graduate but was a friend for many years of Rev. Dr. W. T. Rodgers, late pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Harriman, Tennessee, and formerly pastor in Nashville and Illinois. He has been represented in Maryville by his children. Dr. Kelly went to China years ago under the Cumberland Presbyterian Church but has more recently been connected with the work of the China Inland Mission. He has done a most effective and responsible work in the remote places of China.

Consider The Mushroom—By O. Home Dumme

If anyone comes to wonder why I should choose to choose such a topic as mushrooms for a dissertation, if indeed anyone comes to read said dissertation, I should not be surprised. For I am not entirely certain myself. Perhaps it can be explained by the presence on my desk of a beautifully bound green volume on MUSHROOMS. Or maybe not. Don't you think? No?

At any rate, mushrooms is a very interesting study. Not that I have ever studied mushrooms, but if I didn't tell you here at the outset that mushrooms is a interesting study, you'd very probably never make the discovery. Because, you see (or do you?), I have a very wide reputation among connoisseurs of terrible writing. In fact, I am known far and wide as one of the very worst of a very bad and very long and very tedious and very tiresome, etc. line of terrible writers. And so, I tell you again, mush rooms is a very interesting study.

The first thing that one has to learn about mushrooms (not that I would resort to intimidation or overbearing force. You really don't have to learn one gosh-darned thing if you don't want to. What I mean is, the first thing one has to learn if one wishes to become intimately acquainted with one's mushrooms) is how to tell the poisonous mushroom from its very harmless and exceptionally edible brother, the non-poisonous.

I really don't know how this is done, so you'd better get the book yourself if you want to learn this intricate step. I plan to return it not later than May 3, because you see it will cost me the very insignificent but just as irritating sum of five cents (5c) if I don't. Therefore, if you wish to know the difference between a poisonous mushroom and one which is deliciously and wholesomely edible, apply at the Maryville College library after May 3. Perhaps a good suggestion would be that you make an advance reservation. The book is always in demand.

Once having become initiated into the knowledge of the safe and the unsafe mushrooms, you have made a long step. In fact, you have practically mastered the whole field pertaining to these cute little denizens of the deep (I know they don't grow in wa'er. But I've always wanted to write, "denizens of the deep". One sounds so erudite, don't you think?) Because, and I now refer back to the second sentence in this rather unruly paragraph, as I see it, one would have, perforce and per se, to be a connoisseur of toadstools, I mean mushrooms, in order to be able to distinguish between non and poisonous mushrooms, since there are some several hundred of each variety known to the scientific world, and even amateurs have been known to become attached to over one hundred. I hope I make myself clear.

If one wishes to grow one's own mushrooms, no more lovely place could be found than in the cellar. Select a portion of the cellar which is neither damp, dry, cold, hot, or drafty (of course, if you can find no such spot in your cellar, you might try the neighbor's.

A good library can be one of chief assets of a good college. This is probably true at Maryville. The Maryville library is a just credit to the rest of the institution, being a well equipped department under competent direction. The fact that it is good, that it has been improved considerably in the last few years, urges us to suggest other adjustments that might come, or that might receive proper consideration by those who might have some power to direct needed corrections and additions.

In the first place there is the need of satisfactory lighting system. The present system, which has presided over a period of years, has not proved, and can not prove to be sufficient lighting for the reading which must be done in the library. A department which demands the amount of reading that any library does, must consider the lighting one of the prime questions, and one that should not go neglected.

One of the most inefficient processes in the work of the assistants on the hill is in the matter of dealing with what are called reserve books and those books not on reserve. Mistakes are continually being made because there is no absolute way of knowing what a reserve book is except by its position in the library. There are two inevitable results about a system as lax as this. Books which should remain in the library are allowed to be taken by mistake; and other books, not in demand, are kept on the shelf and from the hands of would-be interested readers.

The third problem is one that has grown perceptibly in the last few years since the stack privilege has been greatly extended. This is in the matter of misplaced books, and in the matter of lost books. No regular user of the library needs to be told that this is a regular occurring fault which can not and should not be laid at the hands of the librarians alone. It is the result largely, of carelessness, thoughtlessness, and perhaps just a slight lack of moral responsibility on the part of the frequenters of the stacks.

The solution to the first of these problems looks to be relatively simple. This would involve a lowering of all lights in the library and possibly the establishment of table lamps. From the financial point of view, this is a considerable problem, but it is likewise, as has been pointed out, an urgent need.

The second deficiency of the library system suggests a more intricate examination. We might suggest a complete reorganization of the stacks in the library which would provide for, among other desirable things, the doing away entirely with such things as reserved and unreserved shelves. This might almost necessitate the disposal of some of the older and more useful, aged books. It would further necessitate a system whereby the department heads and professors would supervise the library reading, being responsible for books being on reserve. A small library slip, correctly marker, placed in the pocket of each book, would nicely take care of this small item.

The matter of misplaced boks is one that troubles librarians each passing day. Books will continue to be misplaced so long as students are left to roam in the stacks, and so long as inexperienced librarians make errors. There is less excuse for books being lost from the library entirely. The only suggestion for an improvement from this present condition is that penalties for this violation, when it is discovered, should be made more severe.

Writer's Work Shop Selects New Members

At the last weekly meeting of the Writer's Workshop the following people were selected to fill the twelve vacancies which will occur as a result of graduation of senior members:

Edwin Best, Donald Harris, Grace Hast, Roberta Howie, Elizabeth Kunkel, Glover Leitch, Martha Martin, Dorothy Nethery, Katharine Orr, Bryan Payne, Frank Thornhill and Jane White. Of this group six will be seniors and six juniors.

Initiation of the new members will take place at the Workshop picnic, to be held sometime in May, the date to be announced later.

Theta Alpha Phi Is To Initiate Pledges

Five new members were recently pledged to the Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatic society. The pledges are Mary Gladys Brown, Clifford Withers, Nina Gamble, Herr Wissler, and Newman Smith. The formal initiation of these will be held during the last week of May.

Election of officers for the coming year will take place on Saturday, May 12. With these activities the Theta Alpha Phi calendar will come to a close. The society has enjoyed an unusually successful and profitable year, especially in matters of receiving recognition from the national headquarters.

At the next faculty banquet, which is to be held on Tuesday evening, May 8, Miss Zoe Carroll will speak on "An Adequate Control of the Environment." This is a research problem in which Miss Carroll has been interested for the last five years. She has been experimenting with marine amoebae because they are simple, single cells.

Every human heart is human.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Warren Walton Warren has been a city man from Philadelphia for a good many years; Robert Woods Tripp comes from a big farm in Ohio. It is likely that the one will sooner or later find himself in some sort of religious work; the other plans someday to be a lawyer. Both in background and in prospect for the future their lives are by no means alike. In the transitional period of their years in college, however, they have found certain similar interests and occupations.

Both have been active members of the Y.M.C.A. Warren has served three years on the YMCA cabinet, and is now president of the local association. Robert, or Bob, has worked on various committees and was a delegate to the East Tennnessee Student Conference held at Tusculum. Both have edited the YMCA publication, the "M" Handbook. Both have been active in the work of the Student Council and the Student-Faculty Committee, each having acted as president pro tempore of the Council. Both were staff editors of the 1933 Chilhowean.

Warren has been especially interested in the work of the Ministerial Association and of the Student Volunteer organization. He has served as program secretary and as vice-president of the Ministerial Association, and for the last two years he has been managing editor of the Student Volunteer World News Buletin Board. He is also interested in athletics and has been a member of the tennis squad for two years.

Bob has made a name for himself as a debater and debate coach, not only at Maryville but at Capitol University, in Columbus, Ohio, where he went as a freshman. He was a member of the Varsity Debate Team when he was a sophomore here, and is eligible to be a member of Pi Kappa Delta, honorary debate fraternity, which he is expected to join this year. This year he has been one of the debate coaches of the Maryville High School debate team, a winning team in the contest held recently at the University of Tennessee. He is president of his class and he received another laurel when he was chosen to be king in the recent May Day celebration.

Warren and Bob have been vitally concerned with student life here on the campus and have contributed largely of their time and efforts toward making it wholesome and acceptable.

tration of Colonial days which presented George and Martha Washington at tea. The minuet of this scene was done gracefully and with dignity. Following the Colonial period, the Civil War days were presented. An incidental dance by Violet Webb and Joan Dexter added charm and a touch of color to the picture.

The story of the World War told in episode five included group dances from the countries of Germany, France, and England. The sixth and last episode was a vision of the future, represented by the spirits of industry, agriculture, prosperity, education, religion, and peace.

The program was planned and arranged by the chairmen, Eleanor Johnson, and Elizabeth Kunkel, assisted by Mrs. West and members of the pageantry class.

Ohio State University has provided equipment for coed golfers who are eager to improve their drive. While at the State Teachers College at Eau Claire, Wisconsin, skiing is the popular sport. Bicycling affords amusement at James Millikin University.

Stevensons Return From Western Tour

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson have returned with some most interesting stories of their 3888-mile trip through the southern United States and the Carlsbad Caverns. They left on Monday, April 16, going via Atlanta, Mobile, New Orleans, Houston, and San Antonio to the caverns.

The Carlsbad Caverns, said Dr. Stevenson, are the "King of Caverns", comparing favorably with the Grand Canyons of Colorado. No one can describe their superiority in size and coloring. One room, 4000 feet long, would hold without touching it the capitol building at Washington, D. C.

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson spent Sunday in El Paso, making a short excursion into Mexico. Dr. Stevenson assures everyone vehemently that they did not visit a bull fight during their short stay there, However. on Monday morning they began their journey home, visiting Fort Worth, Dallas, Hot Springs, returning from El Paso in four days.

Dr. Stevenson's description of the Evangeline Country in Louisiana is most vivid. Much rice and cotton is grown there. Dr. Stevenson seems to have lost much of his sympathy for the Arcadians, because of the beauty of the country to which they were exiled. The travellers spent an interesting forenoon in San Antonio, viewing the Alamo, the anceint fortress.

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson returned on Thursday, April 16, and Dr. Stevenson conducted the vesper services on Sunday evening as usual.

Frosh Close Debate Season Against King

The closing debates of the season were held here last week when the freshman affirmative and negative teams of Maryville met those of King College in no decision contests. The negative team of King College offered two plans—state control and county manager—as substitutes for reorganization of counties in Tennessee. The affirmative team said that reorganization of counties would make for more efficiency and more economy. Because Mr. Tyler and his squad were delayed, the debate scheduled for the afternoon took place in the evening.

The annual banquet and initiation of Pi Kappa Delta will be held on May 18th. Fourteen debaters are to be initiated.

For next year Professor Queener is planning a schedule less full than this year's with fewer home debates. The annual convention of Pi Kappa Delta will be held at Franklin, Indiana.

The library of Dartmouth college is being decorated by the Mexican artist, Orozco. The panels depict the gods of the modern and ancient worlds as Orozco interprets them.

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

In the extensive program going forward under the direction of the Tennessee Valley Authority the provisions for further development of athletics have not been slighted. Plans were laid about a month ago for the forming of high school athletic associations which would encompass all of both town and country high schools in the Tennessee Valley area, one of these associations being centered in this very section, including Maryville, Alcoa, Everett, Karns, Chilhowee Institute and other small schools located in this vicinity. Full agreement as to how these associations shall proceed with their programs has not yet been reached, but some points which have been worked out in the plan really look good, not only to the high schools concerned, but to the various colleges outlying in this vicinity.

* * * *

Plan Calls For Invitational Meets

The high schols which are included in this program would work out schedules with each other in basketball, football, and track, much the same as they have done in previous years, only they would be bound together in a conference unit, such as our own Smoky Mountain Conference. Instead of competing for the county or community championships as they have in the past, each team would be working on a percentage basis for the conference championship. This would increase not only the interest of local fans, but also would build up the situation financially. At various intervals during the year, invitational meets, such as the State Track Meet to be held in Knoxville May 12 will be, will be held on he fields of the many colleges scattered around, in which all teams in this association would participate. This will undoubtedly mean some form of financial remuneration for the colleges concerned, in which Maryville College will play a large part.

* * * *

Would Aid Search For New Material

Some of these high schools which have not previously had track teams, of which Maryville is one, are going to begin a search for new material which they can enter in these invitational meets. Several new 'finds' have already been made during this period of preliminary interest in the organization. Coach Lewis Veech of Maryville High School, to whom we are indebted for this information, has reported that during the recent high school track meet held on the campus he discovered a high jumper, previously unknown in athletic circles, and who, with a little training, is capable of going places. The discovery came about this way. Coach Veech was going the rounds picking out boys here and there to compete in certain events. Having no entry for the high jump he accosted one boy who was not even dressed for the occasion, but who entered just the same. Wearing both long pants and street shoes this lad cleared five feet easily, and would have gone much higher in the proper regalia. Coaches can not afford to let such fertile ground as this stay uncultivated, and they will not if this association can get on its feet.

Maryville Athletics Will Profit

When this Tennessee Valley Association gets into full swing it is going to mean a lot more than just possibly a financial return to Maryville College. For one reason or

Highlanders, Teachers Split Double Header

Hand, Yearling Moundman, Loessberg Star As Scotties Score First Conference Victory, 8-3, Over Conference Leaders

(By Dick Meadows)

The longest hit of the season, a sizzling drive by Loessberg straight over centerfield for a home run, coupled with air-tight pitching by Hand and good defensive and offensive play in general, gave the Scottie baseball forces a well earned 8 to 3 victory over East Tennessee Teachers last Tuesday afternoon on the home field. This was the first conference win of the season for the Highlanders.

Loessberg's clout came in the third inning with Coker on base and Teachers leading 3-2. The ball sailed over the centerfielder's head and rolled almost to Court Street in the furthermost corner of the field.

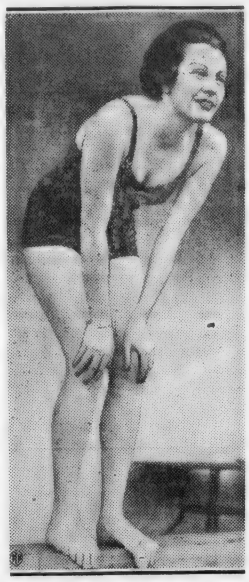
Hand allowed three hits and three runs in the first three innings, but after being given a one-run lead in the third, he settled down and pitched a steady game to the end, yielding only three hits in the last six innings. His control was best with men in scoring position, as may be seen by the fact that Teachers had eight runners stranded on the bags.

Tuesday was the first time the Highlanders have received good fielding, timely hitting, and effective pitching all in one day. Only one error was charged against the locals, and a fast double play was pulled with one on base and nobody out in the eighth. At bat, six hits were good for six earned runs, three Teachers errors being responsible for the other two scores.

All but one of both team's markers were made in the first four innings, after which Hand and Sams staged a pretty pitching duel.

Byrd opened the game with a single to left field, went to second on the Scots' only error, was sacrificed to third, and scored on an infield out, giving Teachers a short-lived lead.

Maryville took command in its first turn at the plate, when, with one out, Coker reached first base on an error, Blazer walked, and Corns smashed a hard grounder between first and second to score both runners.



The second innng was scoreless, but a single, a triple to the bank in left center, and a sacrifice gave Teachers the lead again in the third. This frame marked the end of the Teachers' scoring.

Coker led off for the Scots in the last half of the third and was hit by a pitched ball. He went to third on a grounder by Blazer, and Loessberg followed with his four-bagger, bringing in the tying and what proved to be the winning runs.

The Highlanders put the game on ice in the fourth with three runs. Lehr walked and stole second, Kalman beat out a bunt, sending Lehr to third, and then stole second, and Hand singled between first and second, scoring Lehr and Kalman. Andrews went safe on a fumbled bunt, and Coker walked to fill the bases. Blazer grounded out and Hand scored on the play. Seaton, Teachers pitcher, was replaced by Sams, who retired the side without further scoring.

The eighth and final run was made in the sixth inning. After one out Coker walked, Blazer singled, and Loessberg beat out an infield hit, bringing Coker in from third.

Ambitious Champion

Not content to rest on the laurels she won when she defeated Jean Fuller for the junior national 500-yard free style championship, Miss Doris McLeod is training at San Francisco for her march to further glory. Experts say she has a brilliant future.

Scotties Lose Second Tilt, 11-9

In spite of a hard up-hill fight, which tied the score with four runs in the eighth inning, the Highlanders dropped a ten-inning baseball game to East Tennessee Teachers by an 11-9 score last Wednesday afternoon in the second of a two-game series.

McCall, Teachers pitcher, played a large part in his team's triumph, although his wildness and loose play by his teammates in the field nearly gave Maryville the game. McCall struck out twelve batters and yielded only four hits, to offset his six hit batsmen and five bases on balls.

The Teachers gathered seventeen safe swats, including three triples, off the services of Renfro and Atchison. Byrd had a three-bagger and three singles for the best hitting, and Chambers and Bailey each connected for a three-bagger and two singles.

Corns made two of the Scots' four hits and Coker and Atchison collected the others. Corns' second single came with the bases loaded in the eighth, and brought in the tying run.

Maryville scored first in the second inning on a single, a walk, an infield out, and an error. Teachers came back in the third to score five runs on a triple, four singles, a base on balls, and an infield. Atchison relieved Renfro in the pitcher's box after five runs were across and one out, and ended the slaughter by forcing the next two batters to ground out.

The Scotties scored once again in the third on a walk, an error, and two passed balls. Teachers made it 7-2 in the fourth frame by means of two singles, a passed ball, and two errors.

A single, an error, a base on balls, and a hit batsman forced in a run for Maryville in the fifth, and a hit batter, a single, and two passed balls brought in two more in the sixth, bringing the score up

Netmen Defeat Mars Hill, Emory-Henry; Lose To Lenoir-Rhyne, Va. Tech, U. N. C.; Meet Tusculum Today

Victory Today Will Even Count For Trip At Three-All; Team Will Return Late Sunday Meet Teachers Wednesday

Special to The Echo

Greeneville, May 4—Coach Fischbach and his Highlander netmen were resting here tonight preparatory to meeting the racqueteers from the Pioneer College in a return engagement here tomorrow afternoon. Of the five matches played to date, the Scotties have won two and lost three, and are confident of eveninng the total with a victory tomorrow.

Leaving Monday morning the net men encountered the squad from Mars Hill, defeating t five matches to one that afternoon. The following three meets resulted in severe losses for the local squad, with losses to Lenoir-Rhyne, University of North Carolina, and V. P. I., 5-1, 5-1, 4-2, respectively.

Moving on to Emory, Va., the netmen severely trounced a team from Emory-Henry University 5-1, this afternoon, and then journeyed to Greeneville for the last meet scheduled for the trip.

Coach Fischbach had little to say other than that his proteges had not quite lived up to expectations in spite of some noteworthy matches. He is confident of defeating the Tusculum crew tomorrow to even the count at three-all for the trip.

The team will return to Maryville College late Sunday afternoon, and will meet a squad from East Tennessee Teachers College on the home courts Wednesday afternoon at 2.

Thin-Clads Defeat E-H Wasps, 76-50

Captain Byar Floats Into Mongrel on 220, But Escapes Unhurt To Lose Race By Seconds

(By George Greiner)

Coach Thrower's Flying Scots breezed around the Emory and Henry cinders last week and brought home the victory bacon to the tune of 76-50. It was a great meet and the Emory boys did as well as they have ever done. Our boys were hampered by the long tiresome trip and the cold weather. Coach Bob managed to shiver himself into an hour's sleep the night before the meet and it wasn't nervousness that he was shivering for either.

The events were somewhat marred by a fluke start which puzzled our men and clipped valuable seconds off the times. The dash men especially were caught flat-footed on the strange get-off. And then there was Captain Byar's unlucky and unusual accident. While leading the field in the 220, he ran into a stray dog which had got onto the track somehow or other. The spill was a bad one and Byar picked himself up with about a pound of cinders buried in the hide of his back, shoulders and legs. What does the old veteran do after that but burn up those very same cinders to take the 220 low hurdles in a breeze. Call it Scot spirit if you like; we're proud of it—mighty darned proud.

Then there was that old fence jumper, Atkins. He did more credit for his school and the class of '34 by smoking the high-hurdles and tying the college record. Paul had an easy go of it taking the mile and two mile at a fairly fast pace.

All in all, the trip was a success. The boys pulled in Saturday night, tired, and hungry, but happy, with lots of big satisfied smiles. Most of them hit Turner's and raved about their swell trip and their swell coach, over coffee and succulent hamburgers. Well, we all think that the team and the coach have done right by Old Maryville and we're with them all the way—win or lose.

OBSERVATIONS

Take it anyway you want to; decide on your own arrangements; make any precautions you please. . and brother Louis Krainock is going to get the worst end of any raw deal. Louis thought it was all in the bag last week. At least he was going to place a well prepared crack at a deserving one.

—O—

And so. . . and so Louis wrote two observations, the first an introductory one which led to the point, and the second, the one that encompassed the point, but the slashing editor (and we might suggest just a little carelessness on her part) did away with number two of the "Observations" leaving Mr. Krainock's introduction standing very much alone.

—O—

The fire was a success. Kipp was there with his little ladder and his little hatchet, but they wouldn't let the semi-dignified senior of Maryville do his stuff. And so (you must be liking this by this time. . . this being this) Kipp turned on his heel and came home. . . . when the fire was out.

—O—

Mr. Bryan Payne, a fire chaser of note slept peacefully on. He thinks he might have smelled it, but he thinks that if he smelled it he must have thought that his grandmother thought, or happened to think to get up and throw another log on the fireplace. That was Bryan's condition on the night and morning respectively of the fire.

—O—

We're thinking today of a possible situation on our Echo this next year. We elect an editor tonight, and we don't know who it's going to be, but we think we should get a picture of the business manager and the new editor together if certain possibilities become more than possibilties. We rather think that it would be nothing short of keeute if we could have the Webb for editor and the big burly Eddie Friar for Business Manager.

—O—

Webb (this is Violet) is getting in trim for something. That might be t, or perhaps Spring causes people to spring, but be that as it might. Webb has had a passionate desire to leap and to soar, and the recent additions of miniature bushes on the campus makes this possible. She finds an eligible bush, places her books on the grass and prepares for the hop. Then she withdraws, pacing the distance, and carefully, she starts the long run, comes near, nearer, and then with a mighty output of strength and power she leaps.

—O—

These are supposed to be private performances, but spectators are allowed to look on if they promise not to tell the teacher. We knew Violet was real old, but we hardly thought she was old enough to experience second childhood, which, we understand precedes infirmity.

—O—

This year we have eavesdropped on more than the ordinary number of conversations where the subject was the beauty of the Maryville Campus. We've heard it said by what we know to be unbiased judges that this is the prettiest campus they've seen in a right long spell. The thing that a senior notices particularly is the remarkable improvement which has taken place i only three and a half years. We don't mind being slightly saddened about leaving college for good (o for what the future has in store) but we do hate to have it rubbe in.

—O—

This is the time of year when we begin to see pictures of various student members as being the most popular, the most successful, the most beautiful and all that thing. We don't have the picture. Only the information is ours.

—O—

And so (what'd we tell you Oscar) we put Mr. Glover Leitch up as having accomplished two things, the first of which is the honor of being a well-behaved, successful sophomore of no minimized amount of talent and the second which isn't so complimentary, of apparently becoming noticeably aloof from his very kind friends. These conditions are not parallel, you understand, but we have seen them go hand in hand. We hope Glover doesn't outgrow his class. In the vernacular, we hope that good old Glover will be able to take it.

Choosing a Vocation Conf.

McMein, who will talk on the career possibilites of commercial art; Roy Chapman Andrews, acting managing director of the Museum of Natural History, who will tell how to enter exploring as a career; James P. Warburg, vice-chairman, Bank of the Manhattan Company, who was appointed by President Roosevelt as financial adviser to the American delegation to the London Economic Conference of 1933 and who will talk on careers in finance; Elizabeth Hawes, who will describe fashion styling as a life work; and Nancy McClelland, whose address to students will be on interior decorating. Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jesey will open the Conference.

Nine talks will be held each of the first two days of the series; four in the morning and five in the afternoon. Following each address personal conferences will be arranged between the speaker and interested students. It is believed to be the first time in history that colle. gians have ever had an opportunity of meeting the heads of industry and the professions.

"The first two days will be turned over to men speakers, and the third day will be for women. On the third, there will be twelve speakers. All sessions will be opened to both men and women.

"Among the other career fields to be discussed on the first two days will be advertising, automotive, industry, building, government, insurance, journalism, publishing, shipping and steel; and on the third day, beauty culture, secretarial work, literature, magazine photography, radio broadcasting, restaurant management, social service and the theatre.

"Law, medicine, and other fields which require three or four years of specialized training, have been purposely omitted from the Conference as it was felt by the Advisory Board that students contemplating entering any of these professions, had already made up their minds quite definitely, and that the greatest benefit to undergraduates as a whole, would be derived by concentrating on those fields which the graduating students could enter at once, without any considerable additional schooling.

Presidents, Deans and other high officials of twenty Eastern colleges are members of the Advisory Board which has worked out the plans for the Conference.

This series will enable college men and women who are in doubt which field to enter, to obtain clearer, more definite conceptions of the leading industries and professions and to see and hear business and professional leaders at a time when it is imperative—following the close of the college season.

"A further aim is to eliminate the floundering of the student starting out in business. University officials believe that if the business brains of the country can hold open forum with those seeking a career, many years of man power wasted in a misfit field can be eliminated, and the paths to success will be arrived upon more speedily. This first Conference is frankly an experiment. It is hoped that it will stimulate young men and women to think beyond merely getting a job, and to consider the career possibilities five or ten years hence in the fields they are entering. If successful, the Conference may become an annual event.

The Advisory Board includes: Frank Aydelotte, president, Swarthmore College; Robert C. Clothier, president, Rutgers University; Magaret T. Cowin, dean, New Jersey College for Women; Albert Beecher Crawford, Director of the Department of Personnel Study, Yale University; George B. Cutten, president, Colgate University; Harvey N. Davis, president, Stevens Institute of Technology; Livingston Farrand, president, Cornell University; Christian Gauss, dean, Princeton University; Herbert E. Hawkes, dean of the college, Columbia University; Henry N. McCracken, president of Vassar College; William A. Neilson, president, Smith College; Marion Edwards Park, president, Bryn Mawr College; Ellen Fitz Pendleton, president, Wellesley College; Josiah H. Penniman, provost, University of Pennsylvania; Rufus D. Smith, provost, New York University; Mary E. Woolley, president, Mt. Holyoke College; Karl T. Compton, president, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Daniel L. Marsh, president, Boston Univerity.

Because it is expected that the attendance will be extremely large, admission will be by ticket only. A limited number of tickets has been assigned to each college which will then distribute the tickets to interested undergraduates.

The Highlanders and Rockford Independent baseball teams played to a 10-inning 4-4 draw here yesterday afternoon in a listless practice game.

The Scots made only three hits and committed three errors, while Rockford made seven hits and seven errors. Gabbard, Cochrane, and Renfro pitched for Maryville.

Consider The Mushroom

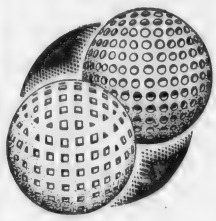
That is, if you are at least six feet tall.) After finding such a spot, the next step is to construct a bed for the mushrooms. Personally, I cannot see the sense in going to all the trouble to make a bed for them, but that's what the book said, so you pamper 'em and like it.

Another difficulty arises at times. I refer to the sad case of the unfortunates who have no cellar in which to grow the mushrooms. If you belong in this category, accept my most heartfelt sympathy. You are indeed a person to be pitied (Editor's Note: So is everyone else who has been foolish enough to read this far). But your wants can be overcame. You can do one of two things: (1) go to the neighbor who refused to allow you to grow mushrooms in his cellar, and threaten him with something if he does not lend you a shovel with which to dig a cozy little cellar of your own; (2) give up the idea of mushrooms altogether and, since I am practically certain that you have read everything else in this issue before attempting this article, drop the paper to the floor with a triumphant, "Heh, heh, heh!"

Having selectetd a suitable spot and made your bed, you lie in it—no, I mean you plant your mushroom seed, a commodity which we experts call spawn. Then go back upstairs and take up your borrowed copy of Anthony Adverse. Read it through without stopping, then go back to the cellar. If you haven't a perfectly thriving crop of mushrooms then, you're either a fast reader, an awful liar, or a poor mushroom grower.



In event of failure, which cannot possibly occur should one follow faithfully the rules herein laid down, I offer only one suggestion. If you have not already lost your desire fr mushrooms, hop into your auto and dash down to the corner grocery. Take from your pocket, in the event you have one, a quarter (in the event you have a quarter, I mean, not in the event you have a pocket. Everyone knows that very few people are without some kind of a pocket). I say, take from your pocket, a quarter and lay it on the counter. In a strong, clear, but not offensive, voice, say, "I want a can of mushrooms."

another these new 'finds' are going to be influenced into attending college, and if they are they will mean a steady supply of athletic material from which Maryville Coaches can draw winning teams in nearly every sport. Just think what a track man Coach Thrower could make from a boy, untrained and improperly uniformed, who can clear easily the five-foot mark in the high jump The talents of many of these lads lie dormant because they have not been trained. On the other hand some people will say that the fellows will get the wrong conception of college, in that they will attend for the glory alone which they might achieve in athletics. That is not the case. A few of these boys to whom we have talked personally are looking forward to this association, realizing that it may go a long way toward securing for them not only the athletic glory but an education as well. All in all this association is a big thing, which deserves not only a careful investigation as to its possibilities, but also a larger backing by thoes men with influence and an eye toward future college athletics.

VOLUME 19 MARYVILLE, TENNESSEE MAY 12, 1934 NUMBER TWENTY-SEVEN

Annual Subscription For Fred Hope Fund Totals Five Hundred

Pledges May Still Be Turned In At Student Help Office

The annual appeal for the Fred Hope fund was made Thursday morning by Dr. Ralph W. Lloyd. This was contrary to the usual custom of having representatives of the work in Africa visit the campus Last year Dr. Hope himself made the appeal.

Dr. Lloyd said that Maryville is essentially a missionary-minded college, being founded through the missionary motive. Throughout its history one hundred and thirteen graduates and former students have become missionaries. Dr. Samuel T. Wilson is now completing a report on the activities of these missionaries.

Fred Hope graduated from Maryville in 1906, Dr. Lloyd said. In college, his was one of the most constructive influences on the campus. Mr. Hope was more than once president of the Y.M.C.A., and it was through his efforts that what is now known as the Artists Series was first brought to Maryville. His special talent was in business management and organization, which is the type of work he is now doing in Africa.

It was in 1907 that Mr. Hope went to Africa. In the twenty-seven years of his tremendous service there he has taken comparatively few furloughs. Although in later years he has suffered ill health, he has continually refused offers of positions in America.

He is stationed at Elat, Cameron in West Africa. In this territory the Presbyterian Church has its oldest project, founded 101 years ago. The work at Elat was begun in 1895.

The whole organization in Airica has developed extensively. It now consists of eighty-eight missionaries, fifteen hundred native teachers, nurses and preachers, with 123 churches at 1,113 different places. Though the total membership is about 33,000, the average attendance is 114,000. There are 32,000 in daily attendance at schools and 295,000 treated in hospitals and dispensaries.

D Hope's special work is in the Frank James Industrial School at Elat. It is there that the contributions from Maryville are used. In the past four years the sums have ranged from $932. to $630. The pledges received in the Student Help Office up to Friday noon have amounted to a little more than four hundred dollars. Announcement has been made from that office that other pledges will be gratefully accepted.

Expression Department Plays Well Received

The second in a series of Graduate Recitals was presented last evening by the Expression Department. The program consisted of three one-act plays. The second act of Knoblock's "My Lady's Dress" was given by the first group. "The Lord's Prayer" by Francois Coppie was the second play, and "My Lady Dreams" by Eugene Pillot was the last play.

The story of the first play was concerned with Mynheer Cornelis, a Dutch lace-seller, who was forcing

Dr. Oscar Voorhees Heard By Students

Lives of Donors of College Chapel Sketched Briefly

Dr. Oscar M. Voorhees, nephew and biographer of Ralph Voorhees and his wife Elizabeth R. Voorhees, benefactors of the college, addressed the chapel service on Friday morning, May 11. Dr. Voorhees is the national Historian of Phi Beta Kappa, the organization for which he was formerly the secretary for thirty years.

In his address, Dr. Voorhees sketched briefly the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees who twenty-seven years ago gave to the college the chapel which bears the name of Elizabeth R. Voorhees. The ancestors of Ralph Voorhees and Elizabeth Voorhees came to this country from Holland about the year 1660 and settled in Brooklyn. It was in a church in Somerset, New Jersey, however, that the two met and were later married. Mr. Voorhees was blind, and since he was unable to work, he devoted his time and efforts to the interests of the church.

Shortly after their marriage, an uncle of Mrs. Voorhees died and left her the legatee of his will. All their accumulations, Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees distributed for educational and religious purposes. They built a college and a home for the blind in India, a church in China, a school in South Carolina, and a home in connection with the Indian Institute in Kansas.

Dr. Voorhees pointed out that if others had faith in education, then we, the beneficiary should have a similar faith in looking toward and preparing for the future. Dr. Voorhees said, also that many think that Christianity is passing, but he added most emphatically, "I do not believe it."

SUNDAY VESPERS

For the vesper service on Mother's Day, May 13th. Dr. Stevenson has prepared a sermon on "The Refreshing Fountain of Home Memories". The Vesper Choir will sing a German melody, arranged by William Arms Fisher, "Ye Watchers and Ye Holy Ones."

Lloyd Scheduled To Give Many Addresses

President's Program A Busy One Through Coming Weeks

Among Dr. Lloyd's appointments away from the College in the recent past and near future are the following: preaching at First Presbyterian Church, Knoxville, Park City Church, Knoxville, Dandridge, Shannondale, and First Baptist, Maryville; commencement sermons at Sevierville, Benton, and Alcoa High Schools; commencement addresses at Kingston, Robbinsville, N. C., Tennessee School for the Deaf, and Morristown High School; addresses at Father and Son Dinner of First Baptist, Knoxville, the Optimist Civic Club, Knoxville, the Tennessee College Association, Nashville, and the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Chicago (annual alumni meeting); paper on "Browning" at Round Table Club, Knoxville. He is to give the address at the annual Senior Vespers at the University of Tennessee, June 3; will be Director, and Vesper Speaker, at the Florida Presbyterian Young Peoples Conference for a week in June, the Vesper Speaker at a similar conference at Maryville in June, and has promised to preach in various churches and give other addresses during May and the summer.

Last week in Chicago he spoke at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary Alumni Meeting on "The Demands of the Day upon the Minister as an Educator."

BATES ORATION TO BE HELD ON MONDAY NIGHT

On Monday night at 7:30 the Bates Oratorical Contest will be held in the Philosophy Classroom. There are three contestants only, Miss Maria Wynn who is to speak on "Government by the People"; Miss Florence Hyde whose subject is "Government for the People", and Miss Fern Metzger, who is speaking on "The Iron Man".

These orations will be judged by a group of the faculty, consisting of Miss Brown and Professors Davis, Rogers, Howell, and McMurray. Professor Queener is to preside at the occasion. Music will be furnished by Miss Opal Johnson.

Dr. Wilson To Preach Baccalaureate Sermon

College President To Give Commencement Address

The combination of curcumstances surrounding the 1934 Commencement is rare, and is responsible for a plan for the unusual addresses to be given on Baccalaureate Sunday and Commencement Day. The Class of 1934 matriculated at Maryville College in September, 1930, just a few weeks after Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson had retired from the presidency of the College, and three months before Dr. Lloyd came to Maryville as Dr. Wilson's successor. Thus it was the first class to graduate during the past four years which did not have at least part of its course under Dr. Wilson as President or Professor; and it is the first class to take its full course under Dr. Lloyd's administration.

In view of these facts the class itself expressed the desire that Dr. Lloyd would deliver the Commencement address, and that Dr. Wilson would preach the Baccalaureate sermon, and this gracious ssuggestion of the class was finally accepted.

Dr. Stevenson will be the speaker as usual at the Commencement Vesper Service in the evening of Baccalaureate Sunday.

During the past thirty-five years Dr. Wilson has preached many Baccalaureate sermons at Maryville. His rendering of that service this year will not only be a great privilege for the graduating class, but also a welcome event to the alumni who return. This will be but the third address given by him at the College since his retirement four years ago, the first being at Dr. Lloyd's inauguration in 1931, and the second on Founder's Day in 1933. His physical and nervous strength does not permit him to take part in public affairs except on these rare occasions.

This will be the second time that Dr. Lloyd has delivered the Commencement address at Maryville, the first time having been in 1929, when he was pastor of the Edgewood Church in Pittsburgh. He has preached the Baccalaureate sermon each of the past three years.

Miss Carroll Reads Interesting Paper At Faculty Dinner

Effect of Electric and Magnetic Forces On Animals Subject of Discussion

At the last faculty banquet on Tuesday night, Miss Zoe Carroll of the Biology Department read before the faculty club. Her paper was entitled, "The Relation of Light to Living Things", and dealt with phases of this subject which have grown out of her doctor's work during the past five years. Her doctor's dissertation is on "The Effect of a Controlled Environment on Marine Amoeba." This particular form of amoebae has been chosen because it is simple and because the salt concentration can be kept constant. Special sea water is provided for them. For her experiment it is essential that all factors be under-control.

For her study Miss Carroll has devised a shield, mounted in a leaf which contols the magnetic and electra-static factors along with the environmental. By keeping all other factors constant, the effect of light in particular can be observed. The purpose of this experiment was stated by Miss Carroll as an effort 'to control a living cell to the fullest extent possible by the exact methods of physics and chemistry, and to vary some single factor. By noting the effect on the cell we shall have a measure of the effect of that one factor."

"It is not strange", Miss Carroll continued, "that variable electric and magnetic disturbance should have smashed the efefct of light." This is due to the fact that physicists explain life itself as an electro-magnetic phenomenon.

Formerly there was no realization of the importance of these electric and magnetic forces upon higher animals and man. Now we know that they can be detected in living cells. Electric charges exist in all living cells, whether of plants or animals. The highest potential in man is at the head and the finger-tips. In a tree it is at the tips of branches. Experimentation on grounding babies after the fashion of radios, has proved that human beings gain weight in that situation.

S. O. Mast opened this field of experimentation. Research on amoemae is carried on chiefly at John Hopkins, University, the University of Southern California, Duke University, and at Maryville for the past two years.

At the banquet Miss Meiselwitz was presented with a basket of flowers. It was announced that next year four or five guest speakers will address the club, in addition to members of Maryville's faculty.

HAMBURGEROSIS—By Min C. E. Meat

Suppose a plague of grasshoppers descended upon our campus and stripped it of everything green. Or suppose a young fire burned up the chapel or Carnegie. Awful! Well, there is a danger greater by far than these, greater because it comes more subtly. It is the Hamburger Menace.

Hamburgers are menacing our college life in at least four ways. There's the menace to financial stability. The consumption of Hamburgers is alarming (that is, to all save Mr. Turner) and Hamburgers cannot be consumed without buying them and they cannot be bought without money. And where is the money coming from? It's coming from the students' pockets, undermining financial stability and creating a vicious trade n money-lending. Indeed, if all the nickels spent on Hamburgers in the last month were laid in one pile there would be almost enough to keep the school in Hamburgers for another month. Why have the plays and concerts been poorly attended this year? Because of a lack of money. And why that? Because of the tremendous Hamburger Trade. Can't something be done?

Again consider the Hamburger Menace from a moral standpoint. What are the girls doing for Hamburgers' sake? They're going down town after dark, even on Sundays, to squander their substance on Hamburgers. They're encouraging the fellows to deliver some to them to the dormitories after ten o'clock, and baskets have been lowered from windows. That's only the thin edge of the wedge. Think what could develop from that! If Hamburgers can be smuggled onto our fair campus, why not popcorn, the Sunday newspaper, or dime novels? There is awful danger from a moral point of view in the Hamburger Traffic, and something ought to be done.

Also in the moral realm we must note the effect of the Hamburger Menace on respect. This Menace engenders a feeling of disrespect towards Pearson's. The dining club cannot compete with Hamburger Dealers; it was never intended for that. The more students develop a taste for Hamburgers, the more they will dislike Pearson's, and we cannot have that happen.

Not only is there growing a disrespect for Pearson's, but worse, there is, growing a disrespect for self (you know, the opposite of self respect). Every time you go into a Hamburger Joint you come in contact with the chronic habitues of the place. These frequenters are not of the highest morality and you cannot continue to associate with them and retain your self-respect. Yes, morals are being undermined. Something must be done.

And now give heed to the interference with studies. This Hamburger Menace is serious. We know of an English major who gave up a precious half-hour the night before a test all for the sake of a trip to town for a Hamburger. That cannot continue. Studies cannot continue to be ignored with impunity and without bringing great calamity to the school. And all because of the Hamburger Menace. Something will have to be done.

So far we have been trifling with the subject. Now we come to a matter which is vital. Not to mince

Very Unusual Rainbow Phenomenon Seen Here

Last Sunday afternoon, there was visible at Maryville a very unusual phenomenon. The rainbow Sunday afternoon had, besides the regular bow, five supernumerary, or spurious bows, inside the bright one. This is a rare and unusual occurrence, requiring very special conditions of peculiarly bright sunshine and infiniatesimally small drops of water. At the time of the rainbow, it did not seem to be raining, but there was a very fine mist in the sky.

According to Dr. Knapp, this freak of nature is likely to occur only once or twice in a lifetime.

EXTRA CURRICULAR ACTIVITIES

Nearing the close of a college career one retrospects on the preceding four years not only with an eye to curricular achievements but also to extra-curricular activities.

In a college such as Maryville with numerous opportunities for self-help, the variety of which range from normal labor to soft-collar jobs, there is likely to be unmerited stress laid upon certain enviable positions. These positions, as is the case with all student help work, require the concentrated energy necessary to the culmination of the task.

Many of these self-help opportunities afford practical training for a later career which a student may intend to follow. Student assistants in the various departments of instruction receive valuable experience along such lines. Many of the opportunities bring the student to a realization of the type of work he enjoys or abhors or wishes to continue. Much, both good and bad, could be said to illustrate the dawning of realization on many new students. Many opportunities also bring the student in contact with members of the student body and faculty, with whom, otherwise, he would have no occasion to speak. The newly created jobs of delivering the mail to the dormitory residents must allow the mail carriers ample opportunities to become acquainted with at least one half the student body.

The diversity of interests natural among a student body of eight hundred people is adequately (or inadequately as the opinion may be) taken care of by the many student organizations. The innumerable clubs include as members those people interested in loyalty to the native state, languages, athletics, nature study, science, law, etc. Musical organizations such as the Vesper Choir, Glee Clubs, and the Orchestra find ready supporters among the students. The members of Pi Kappa Delta (Debate), Theta Alpha Phi, (Dramatic), and Sigma Delta Psi (Athletic), the three national honor societies, exhibit much enthusiasm in the work of the fraternities. The wide fields of service covered by the religious associations such as the Young Women's Christian Association. The Student Volunteer Association, and the Ministerial Association, afford many opportunities eagerly seized by willing students.

With all these extra-curricular activities open to the student the desire to take part in some one of them is natural enough. Interest and participation in the field of one activity may often lead with pleasing results to interest and participation in other activities. But when should the development of extra-curricular interests be curtailed? The question is one which every student must answer for himself according to his own standards and capacity for curricular attainments.

The matter of credit for extra curricular activities has been given prominent consideration by many well-known educators. In connection with the opinions expressed, Maryville's method of extending credit, particularly to students participating in debate, seems to be a pleasant medium between "no credit" and "credit for any."

There can be no doubt that although in some cases greater practical benefits are derived from extra-curricular work nevertheless colleges are maintained to present the highly prized sheepskin only to those who have met scholastic requirements.

The Man of the Renaissance, by Ralph Roeder. New York 1933; The Viking Press; $3.25

"The Man of the Renaissance" tells of a man who feared life, of a man who accepted it, of a man who compromised with it, and of a man who succumbed to it. The four men were Savonarola, Machiavelli, Castiglione, and Aretino.

Savonarola, the first of these, was the first preacher in the Christian church to use the style of the revivalist. He fled to a convent when he was twenty-three years old, resolving to devote his life to teaching and meditation. Circumstance forced him back into the world, where he became, after many attempts, a religious power. In his old age, because of the antagonism he aroused by demands for reform, he was executed on trumped-up charges.

Machiavelli, in contrast to Savonarola, was a politician. "His religion was merely the logical creed, developed to its extreme limits, of the sacred egoism and arid virtue of patriotism". Whereas Savonarola lived above reality, Machiavelli lived with it, surrendered to it. He was sincere toward Nature and insincere towards himself. But he died well, true to the principles he had.

Castiglione was a society man of the fifteenth century, a courtier with a refined and convivial spirit. Aretina was possessed of an animal like nature, living for self-satisfaction.

The best thing in this book is the method of the presentation of its four principal characters. They do not stand out glaringly against their backgrounds; their lives are beautifully woven into the strange tapestry of the Renaissance. The men and the age move together from beginning to end.

Ralph Roedius' work is characterized by the drawing of too many fine conclusions. It would, perhaps, be more artistic if the reader were allowed more berth in this respect.

We read in the paper issued by Judson College that Maurice Hindus spoke to the college on Russia. We wonder if he didn't get his countries mixed.

And he said hat trees in the circle grow sometimes over 100 feet high. Rather devastating, eh what?

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

They are southern girls, Tennesseans, in fact, who came to the same college, who found there the same interests and the same friends, and who have become identified often with the same phases of life here on this campus. Their names: Lucille Mae Swafford and Clifford Cecelia Withers.

Lucille was a freshman debater and later a member of the varsity debate team and of Pi Kappa Delta, national debate society. She has been a leader in dramatic activities in the college. She played in Theta Epsilon's 1933 and 1934 midwinter, "The Enchanted April" and "Little Women". She is a member of the national honorary dramatic fraternity, Theta Alpha Phi, and a graduate in expression this year. She is known in musical circles here. For four years she has been a member of the vesper choir and orchestra. She has been active in the work of the Girls Glee Club; this year she serves as president. She has been affiliated with the Theta Epsilon society, having served as program secretary and as president of the organization. In addition, she has at various times been a B.G. president, a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, and a member of the tennis team.

Clifford's record is by no means unlike that of Lucille. She has also been a varsity debater. She too has dramatic talents. She was successful in a role in "The Enchanted April", and she was stage manager of "Little Women". She is a member of Theta Alpha Phi and of the present graduating class of the expression department. Besides assisting capably in the dramatic productions sponsored by Theta Epsilon, she has served efficiently as program secretary in the society. Outstanding among her honors is the fact that she was chosen vice president of the senior class, an office whose duties she has carried out faithfully and well.

Lucille, with her jolly good nature, and Clifford, with her capability and dependability, have had their share in believing in and creating an atmosphere here in the campus that is entirely delightful and desirable.

On Saturday evening, May 19, members of the Bainonian and the Athenian Literary Societies will meet together at "A Southern Garden Party". It is to be held on the second floor of Thaw Hall, and Richard Orr, President of Athenian, and Elizabeth Gillis, president of Bainonian will act as host and hostess.

Readings by Lorena May Dunlap and Herr Wisseler will be a part of the program. There will be soft, southern music by the Bainonian Trio and the Bainonian orchestra. The Athenian Society may stage a minstrel, and there are rumors to the effect that The Dixie Vagabond Quartet will sing.

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, duo pianists who appeared here during this season, were well received at their Town Hall performance which took place shortly before the date of their sailing. The "Municipal Digest" reports that "there is unity between these artists which leaves very little to be desired when they play; highly sensative musicians, what they offer is beautifully balanced." The artists played the "Red Autumn" of Arnold Bax, and a Polka by Lennox Berkeley, numbers which they played to the Maryville audience.

SCOTTIES ADVANCE IN STATE MEET

Sport Talk

By BRYAN PAYNE

KNOXVILLE, May 11—By six o'clock this evening the pick of twenty-eight players coming from six Tennessee colleges had been sifted down to four semi-finalists as the annual Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Association Tennis Meet drew to a close, and Dickey Dunlap, Southwestern University star, was the general favorite to win out in tomorrow's final matches. Polk Crumbliss, U. T. netman and seeded number one in the tournament, is the only survivor from the east, while the other three are Southwestern men and cohorts of Dunlap. None of today's matches was outstanding, all of them being more or less of the ping-pongy type, Dickey Dunlap's included.

* * * *

Dunlap A Star At Thirteen

This Dunlap, a sophomore at the West Tennessee institution, is only a lad of seventeen, but early fame and steady participation in the tennis racket have made him look much older. When he was only thirteen he held the junior singles title of the southern states, but if three additional years of experience should have made any difference in his game he must have had some pretty lean competition in those early years. For two sets Dunlap can drive and chop with the mighty, but as he wears down so does his game, until it resembles the local combination of Blevins and J. Norman Sylar, with all due respects to Blevins. But he's a youngster and a corking good sport, and deserves to win tomorrow if anybody does.

Shelley Pays Phay A Compliment

At every big conclave of this sort the many little stories behind the winning and losing of matches begin to drift in about the close of day. Sometimes they are concerned with the humorous side of court play and also with the tough breaks which are sure to accompany every defeat. And then again they tell a tale of poor sportsmanship. This one was overheard after Johnny Phay's first round match. Paul Shelley, the big houghty-doughty man from Milligan College, and the same person who spewed out all the foul language at the last Scot-Buffalo basketball encounter because he had been disqualified, had just left the court after taking a severe trouncing at Phay's pleasure. Walking up to one of his teammates, who had also lost out in the first round, he delivered the following pert little eulogy. "Aw, guy, I wouldn't mind getting beat by a good player such as you played, but me. . . . gosh!"

Scottie Tracksters Defeat L.M.U 112-14

Two college records were broken and one unofficially tied last Saturday afternoon as an undeniable Scot Track Team swept over a decidedly inferior outfit from Lincoln Memorial Universty, 112-13, in the last home meet of the season.

Big Jack Atkins, bringing into play an immense reserve of top-season speed, gallop down the stretch in one of the greatest races seen this year to clip a full second from the old mark of 16:2 in the high hurdles. At Emory-Henry he was clocked at 16 flat, but the time was not allowed to stand.

Loessberg set a new mark for the broad jump of 21 feet 3 inches, bettering the old mark set by him last year by a half inch. Ed Lavender, in several trials with the bar at record height, cleared 11 feet, 3 inches, but the trial was declared unofficial because the bar was said o have been sagging.

Karnell, Talmage Win First Round Of Doubles Today

Phay Defeats Shelley of Milligan In First Round Singles Yesterday; Karnell, Talmage, Gillingham Lose

KNOXVILLE, May 12—As the doubles division of the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Association tennis meet progressed into the second round of play hre this morning, the local team of Karnell and Talmage is holding its own having de eated a hardy team of Dugger and Curtin from Tusculum to win the first round.

The first set, which was played late yesterday evening went to the Tusculum team, 10-8, but the match was called because of darkness. Talmage and Karnell, refreshed and back into form after the long singles grind yesterday, blasted through the opponents with little trouble this morning. In the last meet with the Tusculum netmen at Greeneville, Karnell and Talmage were defeated by this team. Nothing has been heard at press time from the other Maryville doubles entry, Phay and Gillingham.

In the singles matches, which were run off down to the semi-final mark yesterday evening, Jonn Phay was the only Scot netman to come to the front with a clean victory over first round opposition. He defeated Paul Shelley, Milligan College star, in straight sets, 6-4, 7-5. In the second round Phay encountered Ledsinger, Southwestern star and a semi-finalist, but was defeated after a hard battle, 6-1, 6-3.

Gordon Karnell was eliminated in the first round by Dickey Dunlap, Southwestern ace and settled number two in the tournament, after two fast sets, 6-0, 6-2. The set scores are no accurate indication of the battle, since nearly each game went to deuce, with the exception of several lov-games, wich were divided fairly evenly between the two.

Drawing a bye in the first round, John Talmage, on whom the main hope of the Scotties rested, lost to Polk Crumbliss, U. T. player and seeded number one, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-0, in the second round of play. Talmage was far from his usual game, making several double faults and fluke shots at the net.

Gillingham, receiving a forfeit from a Sewanee player in the first round, met Whitson of T. P. I. in the second, but lost after a hard two-set battle, 7-5, 6-2. Whitson was later defeated in the third round play'off.

Four top-ranking stars were seeded in the tournament. Polk Crumbliss, U. T. was seeded number one, Dunlap two, Hines, also of Southwestern three, and Shipley of T.P.I. four. Six colleges, Maryville, Southwestern, Milligan, Tusculum, T. P. I., and Tennessee entered twenty-eight players for the opening matches. Sewanee entered two singles and a doubles team at the last moment, but failed to show up as playing time arrived.

HIGHLANDER BASEBALLERS LOSE HEAVILY ON TRIP

(By Dick Meadows)

After playing four games on enemie's fields in three days last week, the Highlander baseball team returned to Maryville Thursday night without a single victory to it's credit. Tuesday afternoon the Scots lost both ends of a doubleheader to the Emry and Henry Wasps at Emory, Virginia, by the close margins of 4-3 and 8-7; Wednesday and Thursday afternoons the locals were soundly trounced by East Tennessee Teachers at Johnson City in two wild games, 23-9 and 13-8.

Three runs by Emory and Henry on the three hits and an error in the first inning was all the Wasps needed to tie the Scots in the first of the two seven-inning games, and another run in the third on one hit and an error supplied the winning score.

The Scots outhit their opponents seven to four, but the Wasps turned all of heir hits into runs. Four of the Scottie safeties came in the fourth and were good for only two runs. The other three blows were scattered.

Kizer, with two singles in three times at bat, and Gillespie, with a triple in three trials, hit best for Maryville. Blazer, Corns, Kalman, and Hand each singled once. For Emory and Henry, Latture had a three-bagger and Mackey a pair of singles.

With the Wasps holding a 4-0 ead at the end of the third inning, the Scotties put on a rally which netted two runs. Blazer led off with a single, Loessberg popped out to the catcher. Corns and Kizer singled, and Corns was put out trying to come home. With Kizer on first, Gillespie tripled, but Kalman grounded out with Gillespie still on third base.

The Scots' final run was made in the sixth on an error, not a hit being made in the inning.

Score by innings:

Maryville	000	201	0—3	7	3
Emory-Henry	301	000	x—4	4	1

Batteries— Maryville: Hand and Corns; Emory and Henry: Humphreys and Mackey.

A seventh inning rally, in which the Highlanders scored six times on three walks, three singles, a double, and a triple, fell one run short of tying the score, and Maryville dropped the second game of the doubleheader to Emory and Henry, 8 to 7.

For the second straight game, the Scots were unable to turn a larger number of hits into a larger number of runs. The Scotties collected two base hits, and four singles, a total of eight safe blows, while the Wasps were getting three triples and three singles.

For Maryville, Gillespie hit a three-bagger and two singles, Blazer a triple and a double, Loessberg a double, and Corns and Hand a single each. Corns scored twice and Coker, Blazer, Loessberg, Hand and Gabbard once apiece.

The first Scot tally came in the second, when Corns reached first on an error and Gillespie followed with a triple.

Three of the Emory and Henry scores were made in hitless innings. One run was made in the first on two errors, and two more were made in the fifth on a hit batsmen, a walk, a sacrifice, and an outfield fly.

Score by innings:

Maryville	010	000	6—7	8	3
Emory-Henry	103	022	x—8	6	1

Batteries— Maryville: Atchison, Gabbard, and Corns; Emory and Henry: Flanary, Barker and Mackey.

TEACHERS

A bombardment of base hits, featured by four home runs in the second inning and another in the fifth, brought on the 23 to 9 rout of the Highlanders by the Teachers in the first game of the series Wednesday afternoon.

Four men worked in the pitcher's box for Maryville, but none of them could check the rampaging Teachers sluggers. Loessberg began on the ground for the Scots and was relieved by Kizer at the end of the second inning. Kizer pitched the third frame, Renfro the next three and part of the seventh, and Gabbard the last part of the seventh and eighth.

A home run and a single by Gillespie and a single, a double, and a triple by Blazer made up a large part of the Scotties' thirteen hits. Loessberg, Corns, and Hand each conected safely twice for singles, and Coker and Kizer once. Blazer nd Loessberg scored two runs, and Coker, Corns, Kizer, and Gillespie scored one apiece.

Five runs made on a home run by Corns with two on base and a single by Andrews with two on in the first inning was not enough margin for the Scots to hold safely Thursday afternoon, and for the second straight day Teachers hit hard and often to defeat the leals, 13 to 8.

Eight Teachers hits, including a home run and a double, in the first two innings resulted in six runs, and six hits in the fifth inning were converted into five more tallies. The last two runs were made in the sixth and seventh.

Kizer's three-bagger with Corns on base tied the score at six all in the third, but the five Teachers scores in the fifth were too much for the Scotties. Kalman delivered the second Maryville homer of the game with nobody on in the eighth, and an error and two singles in the same inning brought in the eighth, and final, Scot run.

Score by innings:

Maryville	501	000	020—8	9	2
Teachers	330	051	10x—13	18	3

Captain Byar Wins Own Heat in 10:4 To Place In Finals

No Eliminations Made In High Hurdles or 220; Atkins, Lavendar, Saint Will Compete In Dashes.

KNOXVILLE, May 12— Captain Madison Byar displayed a powerful burst of speed in one of the three century dash heats run off during elimination trials here this morning to win first position in his respective heat and a lane in the final dash this afternoon. He was clocked at 10:4.

This afternoon he will run against Anderson of U. T. and Clark of Sewanee, two fast men who travel the course in ten-flat. Byar was disqualified in the 220 because of two false starts.

There were no eliminations in either the high hurdles or the low hurdles. Atkins and Lavendar will enter the former, while Byar and Saint will run the low hurdles.

All hands on deck are looking forward to the finals of the track events, which were scheduled to begin at 1:30. A great deal of interest as has been aroused over the century dash, and also the 220. Captain Madison Byar glides around the stretch close on to ten-flat, and that is exactly what Newton from Southwestern and Anderson from U. T. are reputed to have done. The best that Byar has done on the local track is 1:1-10, but with stiffer competition better time will be in order.

Jack Atkins, who takes the high hurdles in 16:1 on the home track with lean competition, looms as a promising prospect to carry the Scot colors to victory in that division this afternoon, his main competition lying in a hurdler from Southwestern who runs a steady 16-flat.

With nothing to hope for in the weight division, Coach Thrower is depending on some other team carrying weight honors, and the Scots topping the meet with dash and distance honors. Loessberg in the broad jump, Lavender in the vault, Paul for the distance runs, and Snedecker in the half-mile event, all bid fair to perform on even terms with the highly touted teams from Sewanee and Southwestern.

OBSERVATIONS

Well, it looks as though somebody is stuck. To be specific, you and me. There is at least one thing this substitute would rather do than write Observations—not write 'em.

—O—

One hour and forty-five minutes and thirty-three seconds ago we were asked to write this column. Instantly, the first paragraph leaped into our mind—click—just like that. But now it still stands pensively alone. We don't understand it. Heretofore the first paragraph has been our hardest, and the others have followed like chicks after a mother hen. Maybe when we have two paragraphs we'll do better.

—O—

The morning of the Fred Hope lecture we, fondly expecting to be early, nonchalantly opened the door to Miss Heron's English class. Imagine our red face when we found the classroom full. With a beaten look and a "Pardon me" we walked across the room between Miss Heron and her audience. We don't know the reason for it yet unless the hands of the clock or the sun dial or whatever it is that keeps time on the campus got crossed. Clock hands do cross once in a while, y'know. Of course it's not unusual for us to be late, but we usually know we are before we get to where we're going. That is, we usually know we are.

—O—

A touch of mournfulness. We are remembering those students who found it necessary to quit the college at the end of last semester because of a lack of sufficient funds. We don't think that it would be a bad idea if the more fortunate students would help to keep some of them here. There could be an annual collection conducted in the method of the Fred Hope fund. Many of us could afford a small gift to another good cause.

—O—

Another sugegstion. . . . a tunnel from the chapel to the corduroy.

—O—

Bryan Payne, after many vain resolutions, is finally at work on a lawn in the vicinity of the campus. Or rather, if rumor is to be credited, the lawn is at work on him. On the night of the banquet he appeared slightly tuckered. (Sorry, Brayn, but this wouldn't be an Observations, if you weren't featured. And we've been a little kinder than the Orr.)

—O—

Somebody ought to write something about notebooks. Numerous interesting conversations are carried on in them between students and teachers' assistants. We have heard of one biology student who writes a poem as excuse or punishment, every time his eraser wears a hole in a page of drawing. We've never read any of them, but we've heard that they're pretty good.

—O—

Since Wimpy started the stunt, there has been any number of "boys" drifting into our acquaintance. First, there was Heiro, one of the Glyphic boys. Then came Mr. Friar's two assistants, the Bility boys, Dependa and Capa. We'd like to add ourselves to the list. . Ed, y'know . . . one of the Word boys.

—O—

Whither tends the woozy month? Day by day becomes more heated and more heated. Only an occasional rain, like that we are writing through, prevents a gradual melting.

Fzt. . . zing . . bam! Which, ladies and gentlemen, represents a stroke of lightning that just whizzed past our nose. It is not raining now . . . somebody took his hand out of the dike. And the lights are out.

EXPRESSION RECITAL

his daughter Antje to marry Jankheer Der Borm. Atnije, in a clever trick, displayed Johnheer's fopishness to her father and thus escaped the society life of Paris for which Jonkheer had intended her.

Herr Wissler, as Jonksheer, was the best player of the evening. His role was difficult, calling for over dramatization. Gordon Courtenay gave an amusing interpretation of Cornelis. Clifford Withers played Antje remarkably well and did especially good character work. Dorothy Correll in the role of Moeder Koatje, Antje's nurse, was responsible for much of the humor in the play.

Veta Mae Stephens, in her stage work, had achieved a pleasing setting of a Dutch garden. The first play was undoubtedly the most entertaining one of the evening.

A perfectly adapted stage, managed by Maria Wynn, was the outstanding characteristic of the second play. The severe simplicity of setting produced an effect of prevailing mournfulness.

In this play the wretched days of Paris under the Commune were depicted. Dorothy Correll was given the dramatic leading part, Mme. Rose. Because her brother, was killed by rebels, Mme. Rose lost faith in God and Heaven. At the height of her bitter defrance, she was of her bitter defiance, she was asked for refuge by a rebel. She ors. The religious element in this play was strong.

The third play "My Lady Dreams" was lighter in character and more modern in setting than the second. Marjorie Steffner was "My Lady", a proud, conceited woman too selfish to relinquish her career for a home. In a dream she sees a "Little Old Lady" symbolizing withered womanhood, the "other woman" prophesying the man's faithlessness and the "two adorable children" pleading for a home. These parts were played by Clifford Withers, Maria Wynn, and Carrie Lou Tweed and Marion Falkner.

The one-act play is an innovation in Expression recitals here. It provides a convenient method for displaying dramatic talents and, at the same time, furnishes enjoyable entertainment for the audience. The plays last evening were all well received.

HAMBURGERS

words, the Hamburger Trade is menacing the health of our students. Think of the sleep lost in making an excursion to town at nigth. Think of the sleep lost waiting for the Hamburger to dissolve, or digest, or something in the stomach. And think of the effect on the said stomach from onion, mustard, fixings and whatnots. I. the Hamburger Industry continues to prosper we'll breed a race here with eyes bleary from lack of sleep and stomach unfitted for normal functioning from an over-consumption of Hamburgers. Something shall be done.

We're not panicky by nature, but we do think it our duty to speak out when a malignant growth is gnawing out the very vitals of our beloved institution. We sound the trumpet for action and demand that something be done. But what? We see one sure cure: have a Hamburger Stand opened on the campus. A convenient location is Anderson Hall with its six entrances (not counting windows and a cellar door.) Have Hamburgers dispensed on the campus and all danger would be removed. The inordinate craving for Hamburgers could then be satisfied without the objectional features of the present system. There would not be such a financial strain or menaces—the stand could be operated at cost under the self-help office. And so on and all menace would be removed.

There is a Hamburger Menace and something should be done about it and that something is, erect a Hamburger Stand on the Campus.

Professor Queener To Leave For Year's Study At Indiana U.

Plans To Complete Work For Doctor's Degree

Prof. Verton M. Queener has made formal announcement that he has secured a year's leave of absence from the college, and that during that time he will do graduate work at the University of Indiana. He plans to major in History; American, English and European; his minor subjects will be Economics and Political Science. During the coming summer and winter he will complete the work necessary for a Doctor's degree, and during the following summer will gather material for his thesis.

Professor Queener received his Master's degree from the University of Tennessee in 1930, and since that time has spent every summer in further graduate study either at North Carolina University, or at the University of Indiana.

During his absence the work in public speaking will be carried on by a committee composed of Dr. Hunter, Maria Wynn and Earle Crawford. There will be no public speaking class for upper classmen. The Freshman debate class, however, will continue as usual and will be taught by a member of the debate squad. The debate program will not be as extensive next year as it has been during the past year. The most interesting event of the season will be the Provincial Convention which will be held at Franklin, Indiana. Since Franklin is only eighty miles from the University of Indiana, Prof. Queener will be able to attend the convention.

Louisville Professor Leads Chapel Service

Gives Listeners His Mottoes For Life

Dr. Julian Price Love, Professor of English Bible and Biblical Theology at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Kentucky, addressed the college students during the chapel service on Tuesday morning, May 15.

"It is a marvelous thing", said Dr Love, "to have the privilege of life; yet there is much trick playing with life. Each one might take for his motto, 'Play thee no tricks with thy soul, Oh man, let facts be facts and life be what it can'; for there are many whose lives are not illumined, because they are not ready to face the facts. Fighting shy of facts is to live a life that is darkened as covered with a veil.

"We do not think our lives through. Our thinking is just half baked, and we are content with it. There are, too, a great many of us who fail to see the difference between the veiled face and clearness, because we are failing to act on what we think. We lack the adventuresome spirit.

"Whatever one does in life, the challenge to live up to the best in himself is very real. The world is going to say this to him and to expect it of him. Man can do only one thing with his whole heart and soul. May God, therefore, give each to be what he really feels and is, and so may all face the facts of life."

Dr. Charles Magill Leads Chapel Service

Tells of Varied Experiences In The Philippines

Dr. Charles N. Magill, missionary to the Philippine Islands, spoke at the chapel service on Wednesday morning, May 16. In his address, Dr. Magill explained the problems which face America in dealing with the Philippine Islands.

"When Admiral Dewey destroyed the fleet in Manila Bay on May 1, 1898, hundreds of densely populated islands situated in a region of perpetual summer were thrust upon the United States. It took almost three years to solve the first great problem which faced the U. S. in connection with these Islands, the task of setting up law and order, for a new form of government had to be instituted.

"It was necessary also to clean up the country, because many were dying of tropical diseases, and in 1901 a commission was sent out to begin this work.

"Last of all, there was the task of educating the people, for Spain had kept her subjects in ignorance. There were no teachers, no school houses, no text books, but there were one million children ready to enter school. In 1902, therefore, capable instructors were sent to the Philippines, and now the natives themselves fill a large percentage of the positions held by teachers in the public schools."

ORCHESTRA ASSISTS ON LENOIR CITY PROGRAM

On Thursday night, the Maryville College orchestra went to Lenoir City to play for the high school commencement exercises there. The entire orchestra went on the trip, the group going by bus. Several numbers were played, the "Bohemian Girl" (selections), "Flower Song", selections from "Il Trovatore" and "Tannhauser". These numbers were scattered throughout the Lenoir City program.

The annual orchestra picnic will be held next Saturday afternoon at Sunshine. The party will leave immediately after dinner, intending to have picnic supper at Sunshine. Amusement will be in the form of swimming, tennis, etc. They are to return after supper.

Appropriate Marker Is Placed On Grave Of Anderson Family

Tablet To Be Put In Anderson Later

Maryville College has just completed the placing of an appropriate stone marker at the site of the original graves of Dr Isaac Anderson and his family in the old New Providence Presbyterian Church Cemetery on West Broadway, Maryville.

A stone 48 by 30 feet has been placed in concrete near the center of the lot and a chain fence with metal posts has been put around the lot on the foundation stones which were evidently used for a fence long since removed. The inscription on the stone is as follows:

of
Rev. Isaac Anderson, D. D.
1780-1857
Founder of Maryville College
Second Pastor of New Providence
Presbyterian Church
and
Flora McCampbell Anderson
Samuel E. H. B. Anderson
Isaac F Anderson
Samuel A. Caldwell
Remains removed to Maryville
College Cemetery, Nov. 4, 1933

The remains of Dr. Anderson and his family were removed as indicated on the marker to the Cemetery on the Campus by the College with the permission and cooperation of the Dr. Anderson's family descendants and of The New Providence Church. The stone monument and markers were removed alsso and a new stone added, all of which can now be seen at the beautiful spot occupied by the College Cemetery at the edge of the woods.

The College plans soon to place a tablet in Anderson Hall which was named in memory of Dr. Anderson. This tablet will refer also to the burial place of Dr. Anderson.

These arrangements and memorials together with Dr. Wilson's biography of Dr. Anderson, published in 1932, all seek to give information about and do honor to this great pioneer in the field of education and the church in this part of America.

Oratorical Contest Decision Is Given To Miss Maria Wynn

All Entrants Present Exceptionally Good Material

The Bates Oratorical Contest which took place on Monday night in Thaw Hall, was entered by three contestants. It is customary each year to offer a prize in oratory which has been provided by Dr. W. H. Bates of Greeley, Colorado. Men and women of the junior and senior classes are eligible in alternate years. For some time this contest had been discontinued.

Three women, all of junior rank, competed this year. Florence Hyde, Fern Metzger and Maria Wynn. Miss Metzger spoke first on "The Iron Man", picturing the perils of pioneer days as opposed to the dangers of the present machine age. Her oration was a protest against the worship of the machine, disclaiming its ability to release men. To feel the full implications of the machine was her challenge.

The subject of "Government by the People" was the choice of both Miss Wynn and Miss Hyde. In the case of each speaker the approach was historical. Miss Wynn began with the Glorious Revolution in England and ended with the American revolution. Roman history was the source of Miss Hyde's introduction. A very close analogy to American history was drawn. Miss Wynn attacked the robber barons of American business while Miss Hyde urged upon American voters their responsibility.

The judges were Miss Brown, Professors Davis, Howell, McMurray, and Rogers. Their decision gave Miss Wynn the prize, which was the sum of forty dollars. Miss Jessie Johnson and Dr. Edwin Hunter were the committee in charge.

Miss Opal Johnson assisted with a pleasing piano solo. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Queener.

Graduation Of Piano Students To Be Soon

Opal Johnson and Margaret Sullivan To Receive Diplomas

The graduation recital of the piano department of the college will be given on the evening of May 28 when Miss Laura B. Hale, Head of the Department of Music, presents Opal Johnson and Margaret Sullivan in a joint recital. Both students have appeared in public at various times during the year. Miss Johnson is a student at the college. Mrs. Sullivan is a resident of Greenback, Tennessee.

The program will include numbers by classic and modern composers. Among the selections which Opal Johnson will play are "Harmonies du Soir" by Pachulski, "Intermezzo in E-b minor" by Brahms, "Pavane" by Ravel, and an "Octave Study" by Leschetizky.

Margaret Sullivan is including in her part of the program, Beethoven's ""Sonata Pathetique". Mrs. Sullivan will also play the first piano part in two-piano arrangements of "Au Matin" by Chaminade and a Waltz by Arensky.

Anton Breds, regular carilloneus of the Bok Singing Tower at Mountain Lake, Florida, will give concerts twice a week at Duke during the summer.

FEATURE—By Grace Proffitt

On cold, windy nights, one old cedar back of Thaw always groans and shrieks. To most people he just seems to groan and shriek but to me he told a story.

"Tonight," he said, "I am very sad. I hear that little evergreens, hundreds of them, have been planted on the campus. Soon I will not be needed. No longer will innocent moonshiners sit behind my heavy trunk, and enjoy the beauties of the sunset. But before I die I will tell you my story, and you shall know that I have done my part, and so at my death will make splendid firewood for loyal Democrat's fires.

"Long ago when the campus was covered by a forest the Cherokees lived among us and white men came from Fort Craig to hunt in the woods, but the Indians moved away and the squirrels told us that many men had settled around the fort and some of them had started a school, but we saw very few of them until the Civil War when there was a skirmish between Longstreet's and Hood's men on this very spot. If you'll look on my left side you'll see two bullet holes that I have preserved with great pride through the years.

"Soon after the war things began to happen in our woods. Trees were cut down, buildings were erected, and people came here to school. Through all these years I've watched them come and go. I always heard very interesting and enlightening conversations because there was honeysuckle all around me that made for privacy, but a strong power dictated that it be removed and now this new building, Thaw Hall, cuts off my view.

"But there are advantages of having a view cut off. I rather doubt if these new trunks will be as competent as I in performing the momentous task of acting as a protection and shade to earnest, energetic moonshiners. I've listened attentively to all conversations, but not one couple can accuse me of reporting interesting news.

"Without mentioning any names I can tell you of the different kinds of moonshiners who have lounged under my broad branches. First, there are the "regulars", who, having exhausted all clever topics of conversation, find great pleasure in talking of the weather, and looking soulfully into each other's eyes. Then there are the "new loves", the couples who have just acknowledged to each other that they are really in love. At this stage I've seen a sophomore, formerly considered intelligent, orate for over fifteen minutes on the beauties of his beloved's eyelashes.

"Then there is always a third class of couples who claim to have a "brotherly-sisterly relationship." They discuss sociology and football and end up by getting married the year after they graduate from college. The "irregulars" are the fourth class. Often the same fellow will come to my shade day after day, but he always brings a different girl. He seems to feel as if he is giving the girl a break, and she probably has the same attitude because they both laugh a lot and seem to have a good time.

OBSERVATIONS

Well, it looks as though somebody is stuck. To be specific, you and me. There is at least one thing this substitute would rather do than write Observations—not write 'em.

—O—

One hour and forty-five minutes and thirty-three seconds ago we were asked to write this column. Instantly, the first paragraph leaped into our mind—click—just like that. But now it still stands pensively alone. We don't understand it. Heretofore the first paragraph has been our hardest, and the others have followed like chicks after a mother hen. Maybe when we have two paragraphs we'll do better.

—O—

The morning of the Fred Hope lecture we, fondly expecting to be early, nonchalantly opened the door to Miss Heron's English class. Imagine our red face when we found the classroom full. With a beaten look and a "Pardon me" we walked across the room between Miss Heron and her audience. We don't know the reason for it yet unless the hands of the clock or the sun dial or whatever it is that keeps time on the campus got crossed. Clock hands do cross once in a while, y'know. Of course it's not unusual for us to be late, but we usually know we are before we get to where we're going. That is, we usually know we are.

—O—

A touch of mournfulness. We are remembering those students who found it necessary to quit the college at the end of last semester because of a lack of sufficient funds. We don't think that it would be a bad idea if the more fortunate students would help to keep some of them here. There could be an annual collection conducted in the method of the Fred Hope fund. Many of us could afford a small gift to another good cause.

—O—

Another sugegstion. . . . a tunnel from the chapel to the corduroy.

—O—

Bryan Payne, after many vain resolutions, is finally at work on a lawn in the vicinity of the campus. Or rather, if rumor is to be credited, the lawn is at work on him. On the night of the banquet he appeared slightly tuckered. (Sorry, Brayn, but this wouldn't be an Observations, if you weren't featured. And we've been a little kinder than the Orr.)

—O—

Somebody ought to write something about notebooks. Numerous interesting conversations are carried on in them between students and teachers' assistants. We have heard of one biology student who writes a poem as excuse or punishment, every time his eraser wears a hole in a page of drawing. We've never read any of them, but we've heard that they're pretty good.

—O—

Since Wimpy started the stunt, there has been any number of "boys" drifting into our acquaintance. First, there was Heiro, one of the Glyphic boys. Then came Mr. Friar's two assistants, the Bility boys, Dependa and Capa. We'd like to add ourselves to the list. . Ed, y'know . . . one of the Word boys.

—O—

Whither tends the woozy month? Day by day becomes more heated and more heated. Only an occasional rain, like that we are writing through, prevents a gradual melting.

Fzt. . . zing . . bam! Which, ladies and gentlemen, represents a stroke of lightning that just whizzed past our nose. It is not raining now . . . somebody took his hand out of the dike. And the lights are out.

his daughter Antje to marry Jankheer Der Borm. Atnije, in a clever trick, displayed Johnheer's fopishness to her father and thus escaped the society life of Paris for which Jonkheer had intended her.

Herr Wissler, as Jonksheer, was the best player of the evening. His role was difficult, calling for over dramatization. Gordon Courtenay gave an amusing interpretation of Cornelis. Clifford Withers played Antje remarkably well and did especially good character work. Dorothy Correll in the role of Moeder Koatje, Antje's nurse, was responsible for much of the humor in the play.

Veta Mae Stephens, in her stage work, had achieved a pleasing setting of a Dutch garden. The first play was undoubtedly the most entertaining one of the evening.

A perfectly adapted stage, managed by Maria Wynn, was the outstanding characteristic of the second play. The severe simplicity of setting produced an effect of prevailing mournfulness.

In this play the wretched days of Paris under the Commune were depicted. Dorothy Correll was given the dramatic leading part, Mme. Rose. Because her brother, was killed by rebels, Mme. Rose lost faith in God and Heaven. At the height of her bitter defrance, she was of her bitter defiance she was asked for refuge by a rebel. She ors. The religious element in this play was strong.

The third play "My Lady Dreams" was lighter in character and more modern in setting than the second. Marjorie Steffner was "My Lady", a proud, conceited woman too selfish to relinquish her career for a home. In a dream she sees a "Little Old Lady" symbolizing withered womanhood, the "other woman" prophesying the man's faithlessness and the "two adorable children" pleading for a home. These parts were played by Clifford Withers, Maria Wynn, and Carrie Lou Tweed and Marion Falkner.

The one-act play is an innovation in Expression recitals here. It provides a convenient method for displaying dramatic talents and, at the same time, furnishes enjoyable entertainment for the audience. The plays last evening were all well received.

words, the Hamburger Trade is menacing the health of our students. Think of the sleep lost in making an excursion to town at nigth. Think of the sleep lost waiting for the Hamburger to dissolve, or digest, or something in the stomach. And think of the effect on the said stomach from onion, mustard, fixings and whatnots. I. the Hamburger Industry continues to prosper we'll breed a race here with eyes bleary from lack of sleep and stomach unfitted for normal functioning from an over-consumption of Hamburgers. Something shall be done.

We're not panicky by nature, but we do think it our duty to speak out when a malignant growth is gnawing out the very vitals of our beloved institution. We sound the trumpet for action and demand that something be done. But what? We see one sure cure: have a Hamburger Stand opened on the campus. A convenient location is Anderson Hall with its six entnances (not counting windows and a cellar door.) Have Hamburgers dispensed on the campus and all danger would be removed. Professor Queener To Leave For Year's Study At Indiana U.

Plans To Complete Work For Doctor's Degree

Prof. Verton M. Queener has made formal announcement that he has secured a year's leave of absence from the college, and that during that time he will do graduate work at the University of Indiana. He plans to major in History; American, English and European; his minor subjects will be Economics and Political Science. During the coming summer and winter he will complete the work necessary for a Doctor's degree, and during the following summer will gather material for his thesis.

Professor Queener received his Master's degree from the University of Tennessee in 1930, and since that time has spent every summer in further graduate study either at North Carolina University, or at the University of Indiana.

During his absence the work in public speaking will be carried on by a committee composed of Dr. Hunter, Maria Wynn and Earle Crawford. There will be no public speaking class for upper classmen. The Freshman debate class, however, will continue as usual and will be taught by a member of the debate squad. The debate program will not be as extensive next year as it has been during the past year. The most interesting event of the season will be the Provincial Convention which will be held at Franklin, Indiana. Since Franklin is only eighty miles from the University of Indiana, Prof. Queener will be able to attend the convention.

Louisville Professor Leads Chapel Service

Gives Listeners His Mottoes For Life

Dr. Julian Price Love, Professor of English Bible and Biblical Theology at the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Kentucky, addressed the college students during the chapel service on Tuesday morning, May 15.

"It is a marvelous thing", said Dr Love, "to have the privilege of life; yet there is much trick playing with life. Each one might take for his motto, 'Play thee no tricks with thy soul, Oh man, let facts be facts and life be what it can'; for there are many whose lives are not illumined, because they are not ready to face the facts. Fighting shy of facts is to live a life that is darkened as covered with a veil.

"We do not think our lives through. Our thinking is just half baked, and we are content with it. There are, too, a great many of us who fail to see the difference between the veiled face and clearness, because we are failing to act on what we think. We lack the adventuresome spirit.

"Whatever one does in life, the challenge to live up to the best in himself is very real. The world is going to say this to him and to expect it of him. Man can do only one thing with his whole heert and soul. May God, therefore, give each to be what he really feels and is, and so may all face the facts of life."

Dr. Charles Magill Leads Chapel Service

Tells of Varied Experiences In The Philippines

Dr. Charles N. Magill, missionary to the Philippine Islands, spoke at the chapel service on Wednesday morning, May 16. In his address, Dr. Magill explained the problems which face America in dealing with the Philippine Islands.

"When Admiral Dewey destroyed the fleet in Manila Bay on May 1, 1898, hundreds of densely populated islands situated in a region of perpetual summer were thrust upon the United States. It took almost three years to solve the first great problem which faced the U. S. in connection with these Islands, the task of setting up law and order, for a new form of government had to be instituted.

"It was necessary also to clean up the country, because many were dying of tropical diseases, and in 1901 a commission was sent out to begin this work.

"Last of all, there was the task of educating the people, for Spain had kept her subjects in ignorance. There were no teachers, no school houses, no text books, but there were one million children ready to enter school. In 1902, therefore, capable instructors were sent to the Philippines, and now the natives themselves fill a large percentage of the positions held by teachers in the public schools."

ORCHESTRA ASSISTS ON LENOIR CITY PROGRAM

On Thursday night, the Maryville College orchestra went to Lenoir City to play for the high school commencement exercises there. The entire orchestra went on the trip, the group going by bus. Several numbers were played, the "Bohemian Girl" (selections), "Flower Song", selections from "Il Trovatore" and "Tannhauser". These numbers were scattered throughout the Lenoir City program.

The annual orchestra picnic will be held next Saturday afternoon at Sunshine. The party will leave immediately after dinner, intending to have picnic supper at Sunshine. Amusement will be in the form of swimming, tennis, etc. They are to return after supper.

Appropriate Marker Is Placed On Grave Of Anderson Family

Tablet To Be Put In Anderson Later

Maryville College has just completed the placing of an appropriate stone marker at the site of the original graves of Dr Isaac Anderson and his family in the old New Providence Presbyterian Church Cemetery on West Broadway, Maryville.

A stone 48 by 30 feet has been placed in concrete near the center of the lot and a chain fence with metal posts has been put around the lot on the foundation stones which were evidently used for a fence long since removed. The inscription on the stone is as follows:

of
Rev. Isaac Anderson, D. D.
1780-1857
Founder of Maryville College
Second Pastor of New Providence
Presbyterian Church
and
Flora McCampbell Anderson
Samuel E. H. B. Anderson
Isaac F Anderson
Samuel A. Caldwell
Remains removed to Maryville
College Cemetery, Nov. 4, 1933

The remains of Dr. Anderson and his family were removed as indicated on the marker to the Cemetery on the Campus by the College with the permission and cooperation of the Dr. Anderson's family descendants and of The New Providence Church. The stone monument and markers were removed alsso and a new stone added, all of which can now be seen at the beautiful spot occupied by the College Cemetery at the edge of the woods.

The College plans soon to place a tablet in Anderson Hall which was named in memory of Dr. Anderson. This tablet will refer also to the burial place of Dr. Anderson.

These arrangements and memorials together with Dr. Wilson's biography of Dr. Anderson, published in 1932, all seek to give information about and do honor to this great pioneer in the field of education and the church in this part of America.

Glee Club Banquet To Be Held Tuesday

Year Comes To Successful Close For Glee Singers

The College Glee Singers will bring their successful season to a close on Tuesday evening at a banquet in the Home Economics rooms. Fifty members and guests of the club are expected to be present.

Professor Kenneth Lagerstedt will be toastmaster. The entertainment will consist of vocal numbers by Miss Frances Henry, Gordon Grooms and the Maryville colored octette. Toasts will be given by James Laing, Jesse Willis, Violet Webb, Michael Testa. Other numbers on the program are a musical reading by Marion Faulkner, and a 'cello solo by Carl Fisher.

Gordon Courtenay, who is leaving the presidency this year, will commit his position to Carl Fisher, next year's president.

During their past season, the Glee Singers have given three concerts, including those presented at Greenback and Byington, Tennessee, and their annual Maryville concert here May first. They have also broadcasted a program over WNOX.

The Glee Singers have asked that the Echo extend for them their thanks to all members of the student body and faculty who have assisted them in any way during the year. Particular thanks is given to those who have provided means of transportation for the several trips made at various times.

PI KAPPA DELTA BANQUET POSTPONED

The annual Pi Kappa Delta banquet has been postponed and will be held on Monday, May 21, at Montvale Springs. Members of the fraternity will go out in the afternoon so that they will have time to climb Look Rock or go in swimming in the Montvale pool. At the banquet, which will be served in the new dining room, Dr. Hunter and Dr. Lloyd will both speak.

The Writer's Workshop picnic has also been postponed, and will be held on Tuesday at 3:15. The picnic will be at Sunset Beach in Walland, and the program will be furnished by the Neophytes. All members are asked to bring a tin cup.

Oratorical Contest Decision Is Given To Miss Maria Wynn

All Entrants Present Exceptionally Good Material

The Bates Oratorical Contest which took place on Monday night in Thaw Hall, was entered by three contestants. It is customary each year to offer a prize in oratory which has been provided by Dr. W. H. Bates of Greeley, Colorado. Men and women of the junior and senior classes are eligible in alternate years. For some time this contest had been discontinued.

Three women, all of junior rank, competed this year. Florence Hyde, Fern Metzger and Maria Wynn. Miss Metzger spoke first on "The Iron Man", picturing the perils of pioneer days as opposed to the dangers of the present machine age. Her oration was a protest against the worship of the machine, disclaiming its ability to release men. To feel the full implications of the machine was her challenge.

The subject of "Government by the People" was the choice of both Miss Wynn and Miss Hyde. In the case of each speaker the approach was historical. Miss Wynn began with the Glorious Revolution in England and ended with the American revolution. Roman history was the source of Miss Hyde's introduction. A very close analogy to American history was drawn. Miss Wynn attacked the robber barons of American business while Miss Hyde urged upon American voters their responsibility.

The judges were Miss Brown, Professors Davis, Howell, McMurray, and Rogers. Their decision gave Miss Wynn the prize, which was the sum of forty dollars. Miss Jessie Johnson and Dr. Edwin Hunter were the committee in charge.

Miss Opal Johnson assisted with a pleasing piano solo. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Queener.

Graduation Of Piano Students To Be Soon

Opal Johnson and Margaret Sullivan To Receive Diplomas

The graduation recital of the piano department of the college will be given on the evening of May 28 when Miss Laura B. Hale, Head of the Department of Music, presents Opal Johnson and Margaret Sullivan in a joint recital. Both students have appeared in public at various times during the year. Miss Johnson is a student at the college. Mrs. Sullivan is a resident of Greenback, Tennessee.

The program will include numbers by classic and modern composers. Among the selections which Opal Johnson will play are "Harmonies du Soir" by Pachulski, "Intermezzo in Eb minor" by Brahms, "Pavane" by Ravel, and an "Octave Study" by Leschetizky.

Margaret Sullivan is including in her part of the program, Beethoven's "Sonata Pathetique". Mrs. Sullivan will also play the first piano part in two-piano arrangements of "Au Matin" by Chaminade and a Waltz by Arensky.

Anton Breds, regular carilloneus of the Bok Singing Tower at Mountain Lake, Florida, will give concerts twice a week at Duke during the summer.

FEATURE—By Grace Proffitt

On cold, windy nights, one old cedar back of Thaw always groans and shrieks. To most people he just seems to groan and shriek but to me he told a story.

"Tonight," he said, "I am very sad. I hear that little evergreens, hundreds of them, have been planted on the campus. Soon I will not be needed. No longer will innocent moonshiners sit behind my heavy trunk, and enjoy the beauties of the sunset. But before I die I will tell you my story, and you shall know that I have done my part, and so at my death will make splendid firewood for loyal Democrat's fires.

"Long ago when the campus was covered by a forest the Cherokees lived among us and white men came from Fort Craig to hunt in the woods, but the Indians moved away and the squirrels told us that many men had settled around the fort and some of them had started a school, but we saw very few of them until the Civil War when there was a skirmish between Longstreet's and Hood's men on this very spot. If you'll look on my left side you'll see two bullet holes that I have preserved with great pride through the years.

"Soon after the war things began to happen in our woods. Trees were cut down, buildings were erected, and people came here to school. Through all these years I've watched them come and go. I always heard very interesting and enlightening conversations because there was honeysuckle all around me that made for privacy, but a strong power dictated that it be removed and now this new building, Thaw Hall, cuts off my view.

"But there are advantages of having a view cut off. I rather doubt if these new trunks will be as competent as I in performing the momentous task of acting as a protection and shade to earnest, energetic moonshiners. I've listened attentively to all conversations, but not one couple can accuse me of reporting interesting news.

"Without mentioning any names I can tell you of the different kinds of moonshiners who have lounged under my broad branches. First, there are the "regulars", who, having exhausted all clever topics of conversation, find great pleasure in talking of the weather, and looking soulfully into each other's eyes. Then there are the "new loves", the couples who have just acknowledged to each other that they are really in love. At this stage I've seen a sophomore, formerly considered intelligent, orate for over fifteen minutes on the beauties of his beloved's eyelashes.

"Then there is always a third class of couples who claim to have a "brotherly-sisterly relationship." They discuss sociology and football and end up by getting married the year after they graduate from college. The "irregulars" are the fourth class. Often the same fellow will come to my shade day after day, but he always brings a different girl. He seems to feel as if he is giving the girl a break, and she probably has the same attitude because they both laugh a lot and seem to have a good time.

On our return to this column after an absence of several weeks does not find us in much more of an editorial like frame of mind than when we left it.

However, the idea occurs to us that we might pass on briefly a few thoughts that have been reiterant with us at the close of this all too ephemeral college life. One cannot come to the end of an experience without feeling that if one had it to do over certain things would be different. We have this feeling about the things mentioned below.

We would make our friendships broader. There is a strong tendency among college students to run in cliques, and while this is natural, and one cannot be everybody's friend, still experiences in this line are not nearly as broad as they might profitably be.

Another thing that occurs to us as necessary is a better balance between curricular and extra curricular activity. An excess of the former and lack of the latter leaves one with a narrow outlook. The reversed situation brings one to the realization that despite his busy hours he is not as well educated as he would wish.

One other major thing—there are many minor points we don't mention—is the avoidance of acquiring of knowledge in a superficial way. This tendency is explained, of ceurse, by the fact that one's college life is so full of various kinds of activity, that one scarcely has time to do anything thoroughly. Complete master is necessarily supplanted by a rather sketchy knowledge of a number of subjects because of limited time. These are the things we should like to change, were it possible to do so, for we believe that, with these alterations, our college years would have been more profitably spent.

A course, "Literature and the Rise of Science", studying the influence of industry and science on English thinking and literature, is to be attempted at DePauw. It will survey, in two semesters, two distinct periods of history, from 1840 to 1890, and from 1890 to 1918.

Book Browsing

Fourteen Stories from One Plot, J. M. Berban, Oxford University Press, New York, 1932

If your respect for short story writers is on the decline pick up Berdan's collection of "Fourteen Stories from One Plot" and be prepared to re-arrange your opinions. For the editor, a professor of English at Yale, has placed before the reader an assortment of stories, al with the same plot and the same characters, but such is the variety that this fact slips into the background.

The plot is stated in this wise:

"A man gets into correspondence with a woman whom he doesn't know and he finds romance in it. Then he sees a girl, falls in love with her in the ordinary way, marries her and drops the academic correspondence. Happiness, then friction. He writes again to the unknown woman and finds consolation till by an acident it is discovered that the married couple are writing to one another."

The wife may be a Lady Brethertion or a butcher's daughter; the husband a pathological study or a cockney clerk. As each of the writers tells his tale, the reader has ample time to judge the relative merits of one type of study against another.

Two stories are direct narratives, yet each is distinct in its effect on the reader. Another is written in the first person and employs the device of a "surprise ending" in which the last sentence unfolds the plot. Dramatic conversations and local color are other methods of approach. In most cases the man is the more prominent, but in a few, events are seen through the wife's eyes. One author writes sympathetically of the husband. A women writer makes him most despicably weak. An English contributor presents only the facts and then trusts to the reader's ingenuity to select the right ending from among the thirty seven morals with which he credits his story.

The plot may be submerged in some large theme, such as race consciousness, mid-victorianism, or the effect of envirconment.

The writers themselves are as varied as their writings. Among them are Sheila Kaye-Smith, Frank Swinnerton, Margaret Kennedy, Rebecca West, G. K. Chesterton.

If this collection does nothing else it at least gives the reader a literary acquaintnce with fourteen astounding married couples.

LITERARY SOCIETIES TO HOLD JOINT MEETINGS

The four literary societies are holding their joint meetings this evening at Thaw Hall and Pearsons lawn respectively.

The Bainonian-Athenian affair is to consist of a garden party with a southern setting. A temporary conservatory is to be erected on the second floor of Thaw. The entertainment and refreshments are to be carried out on the garden party dea, which promises to be interesting.

The Theta Epsilon-Alpha Sigma societies will meet on the lawn between Thaw and Pearsons. The program planned is arranged on a Mother Goose theme as various posters have so interestingly announced.

Readings, music, both vocal and instrumental, novelty dances and skits will make up the program of both entertainments. These are the lasts joint meetings of the year, and attendance should be large.

The DICKSONIAN, Carlisle, Pennsylvania, prints a comparative analysis of grades for the last two years, classifying the student body by classes, by sexes, and by fraternities. It is interesting to note that the women have it all over the stronger sex in all cases, and that fraternities do not improve grades to any great extent.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Northerner and southerner; farmer's son and preacher's son; a Mathematic major and an Englishs major; a potential teacher and a potential preacher. Except for the fact that they are both brunettes, we should be at a loss to find much similarity between them; but even that is a weak comparison, for the dark hair of the one is curly; of the other, straight. Alike ora not, however, each in his own way has won a place among Maryville's Superior Scotties.

Gordon Allen Grooms came south from Seaman, Ohio to Maryville. He was a debater when he was a freshman, but he has won recognition mainly from his interest in the musical organizations on the campus. For four years he has been a member of the Glee Singers, of the Vesper Choir, and of the College Orchestra. This year he has become one of the serenading four, the Dixie Vagabond Quartet. Gordon, however, is not merely musically minded. He is a member of the Student Council this year, and he serves as the capable chairman of the Social Committee. The coming senior play, "Children of the Moon", will give him an opportunity to show his dramatic ability in the role of Dr. Wetherell.

John Christian McQueen came north from Hattiesburg, Mississippi to Maryville. For four years he has been an inter-class football man. This year he is a member of the tennis team. John, we should say, is not rimarily interested in athletics, hough. He is a psychology enthusst, whose grades are more than verage. He played in Theta Epsllon's 1931-1932 midwinter, "Allison's House". He was a member of the Chilhowean staff when he was a junior, and he is a member of the Student Council. This year he has been a leader in the activities of Alpha Sigma, having served both as vice-president and as president of the society.

On more careful investigation we find that there are a number of similarities between these two men. Not the least is a quality characteristic of both, that of having at the same time the good will and the respect of students and faculty alike here at Maryville.

Racqueteers End Season With Win; Top Chattanooga

Gillingham, Only Returning Letterman, Will Captain 1935 Team; Fischbach Ends First Year As Maryville Coach

The Highlander varsity netmen, three of whom leave the ranks this year, finished the season with a clean sweep on the home courts yesterday, defeating a team from the University of Chattanooga, 5-0.

All matches, with the exception of Phay's in singles, and the one doubles match, were won in straight sets. Phay went three sets, and the doubles match was forfeited by the Chattanooga pair.

In the four singles matches, Talmage defeated Crumbliss, 6-4, 6-4, Karnell defeated Wilson, 6-1, 6-4. Phay won from Rodman, 3-6, 9-7, 6-4, and Gillingham defeated Frank 6-3, 6-1. The first set stood at 6-5 with Karnell and Talmage leading when the visitors forfeited.

Yesterday's victory enabled the netmen to finish the season with an enviable record of ten wins as against four losses. The schedule as made out by Manager Beck was a hard one, including meets with some of the outstanding teams in the south.

Coach Fischbach's boys commenced the season in fine form, taking the University of Tennessee squad into tow with little difficulty. In the return meet with the university men, the Scotties met with stiffer opposition, and were retired, but only after putting up a game fight. In the next two home meets with Tusculum and Mars Hill respectively, the local netmen struck top form to win in one-sided fashion 5-2, and 6-1.

On the following Monday Talmage, Karnell, Phay, and Gillingham set out for a return meet with Mars Hill College on the first leg of a week-long road trip, which took them through North Carolina and Virginia. Victorious in the first meet of the trip, defeating Mars Hill, 5-1, the squad moved on to Lenoir-Rhyne College, where it received its first setback at the hands of the Bears, 5-1.

On the following day the Scotties encountered the University of North Carolina netmen, one of the strongest teams in the south, and lost 5-1, Karnell winning the only match of the day.

Turning north into Virginia the squad received another setback at the hands of the V.P.I. crew, 5-1. This meet found the Scotties decidedly off form, for the Techmen are not reputed to have any great strength on the court.

Homeward bound, the local squad met Emory-Henry's team on May 4, and administered a sound beating to the Wasps, 5-1; nor was any difficulty encountered the next day as the Tusculum netmen fell before the superior stroking of the locals, 4-2.

On Wednesday following their return to Maryville they met a team

WINS HANDBALL TOURNEY

Battling through a tough upper bracket, defeating Boretsky and Cliff Williams in his hardest matches before meeting Tripp, winner of the lower bracket, in the finals, K. C. VanHee came out victorious in the recent handball tournament held by the Y. M. C. A. to determine the school champion.

Tripp's fine play kept Van on the run in the finals, but a slightly stronger left hand combined with a hard driving right gave the verdict to VanHee after five close games. A medal will be awarded the winner.

"Steve"

Steve Boretsky Enters Name On Register Of Sigma Delta Psi

Smiling Steve Boretsky, Maryville College's star halfback who never punted a football until he came to College Hill, has recently entered his name on the scroll of Sigma Delta Psi, national honorary athletic fraternity.

During his four years at Maryville College Steve has ridden the wave of athletic glory and achievement, and has come to the end of the grind unhurt by his fame, just the same plain Steve Boretsky.

Most sport fans on the Hill think of Steve as the eel-hipped, charging halfback, whose name appears annually on the Great Smoky Mountain Conference honor team, but football is only a part of his athletic activities. Let's take a look at each individual year.

Coming to Marville in the fall of 1390 Steve went out for football, making the team at quarterback position, and keeping it throughout the season.

After the football season was over, Steve went out for wrestling, and made Coach Thrower's squad in the 135-pound class. This is the year that Coach Thrower began to build his state championship team, the team which has not lost a meet in the last four years.

Came the baseball season and Steve answered Coach Honaker's call to the baseball diamond. It was here that Boretsky proved to be a real find on the mound, hurling a mean assortment of curves and twists. No doubt he would have been in the diamond ranks now had he not been called on to perform in other fields in the following year. This ended his first year, so auspiciously begun in Maryville athletics.

Came the fall of 1931 and Steve was again to be found on Wilson Field calling the plays at quarterback for the Highlanders. Under Coach Honaker's tutelage he came to be known as an outstanding field general in the Smoky Mountain Conference, and at the end of the season he gained honorable mention in the league.

No sooner had he discarded the moleskins of football than he stepped into the shorts of wrestling, this time ten pounds the heavier, as a member of the first Maryville state championship team. Also he become a member of Hi-Trail, exclusive men's club, during this year.

In the following spring he turned thumbs down on baseball, and began a career as a trackster instead. The track season found him figuring heavily in the dashes, but also in other divisions as well. More letters and honors became his as the season came to a close

The following football season found Steve a few pounds the heavier. Coach Honaker moved him to halfback position, and from this time on he developed into one of the most valuable runners and punters the conference has ever seen. At the end of the season he was awarded the position of left halfback on the Smoky Mountain All-Conference eleven, a position which he has not lost since.

The wrestling season found him in the same fine fettle, and back again in the ranks as a 145-pound grappler. During this season Steve won the all-southern title in the 145-pound class from Selser of Chattanooga, and has defended that title successfully since that time.

Aside from his athletic prowess, he displayed ability as an executive while he was president of the athletic board of control during this year. At the same time he served as secretary of the YMCA.

The spring of the year found Steve inactive for the first time since he entered school. An operation for appendicitis forced him to take things easy for the rest of the year so that he would be in condition for the grind of the following fall.

Many are the footballers in the Smoky Conference last season who would be glad to tell you stories of Steve's superior playing and fine

Hand, Atchison Pitch Two Shutouts In Doubleheader With Railsplitters; Loessberg Circuits; Blazer Triples

Highlanders Finish Conference Season Against Lincoln Memorial University, 2-0, And 6-0; Play Double-header With Emory-Henry Nine Next Week; Wasps Defeated Highlanders At Emory, 4-3, And 8-7.

Playing behind the masterful pitching of Ralph Hand and "Butter" Atchison and the heavy hitting of Blazer, Loessberg, Corns, and Gillespie, the Highlander baseball team closed the conference season with a double shut-out victory over the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters Thursday afternoon on the local diamond. The scores were 2-0 and 6-0.

In the opening encounter, Hand turned in the best hurling exhibition of the season, limiting the Railsplitters to two hits, walking only one, and striking out five batters. Atchison imitated Hand's performance in the nightcap by holding the foe to five hits, not issuing a single base on balls, and also putting five men out on strikes.

Blazer led the Scots in runs batted in, with four to his credit. With two on base and two out in the fifth inning of the first game, he slammed a line drive to right centerfield for three bases, bringing in the only two scores of the game. Again in the second game, Blazer connected for another three bagger, to almost the same spot in right center, driving in two more runs. Loessberg was second in runs driven in by virtue of a home run, his fourth of the season, to deep left center with one on base in the second game.

Corns had the best batting average in the two games, getting four hits in six times at bat and scoring twice. Gillespie hit a double and two singles in six appearances at the plate and drove in one run. All together, the Scotties collected sixteen safeties, eight in each game.

In the first game, Bowling, L. I. U. pitcher, kept the Maryville hits scattered in all but the fifth inning, in which the Scots made four hits, half their total for the game, and scored both runs. The Railsplitters played errorless ball in the field, helping keep down the Scot score.

Kalman opened the fifth round with a single and Andrews followed suit, but Kalman was caught off second for the first out. Hand singled, putting Andrews on second, Coker popped out to third, and Blazer came through with his triple to bring in two scores. Loessberg went down on strikes for the third out.

In the second affair, the Highlanders knocked two L. M. U.

Tracksters Second In State Conclave

Captain Byar Scores a First; Second, and Third To Gain Third Honors In The Meet; Paul Has Seven Points

Paced by the stellar performances of Captain Madison Byar in the 220-yard low hurdles and in the 100-yard dash, and of Graydon Paul in the mile and two mile runs, the Scotties track team scored 25 1-2 points in the first annual Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Association meet at Knoxville last Saturday afternoon to carry off second place over the powerful Southwestern University, Sewanee, and University of Chattanooga teams.

Although the University of Tennessee easily led the field with 63 points, the Highlanders made a highly impressive showing in taking two first places, three seconds, two thirds, and three fourths for second in team honors. Southwestern won third place with 20 points. Other scores were Chattanooga 18, Sewanee 15, T. P. I. 11 1-2, Carson-Newman 9 1-2, L. M. U. 2, Milligan 1, and King 0.

Captain Byar won first place in the 220-yard low hurdles in record Maryville time, 25.9 seconds, .1 of a second better than his old mark of 26-flat, was a close second to Anderson of U. T. in the 100-yard dash, and was a member of the mile relay team which came in fourth, making a total of 8 1-4 points, highest for Maryville and third highest in the meet. Close behind Byar was Paul, who won first place in the mile, in 4:37.4, and third in the two mile, for seven points.

Atkins and Snedeker were second in the 120-yard high hurdles and

OBSERVATIONS

After the wordy Mr. Thom comes come I.

—O—

We'd like to revert to the familiar essay form of observation this week, or the letter writing form, which will mean that we'll have to call ourselves I and ourself, and me, and those common egotistical terms in preference to the once dignified designation, the editorial we, As I said with your permission.

—O—

Mr. Thom wasn't so wordy. Some said his dictionary wasn't by, and others said that he didn't have his classical collection of the many muses with their respective positions. Mr. Thom is also good to quote sentences resembling those of supposedly more intelligent people, that we're about to think the young man has outgrown his classification.

—O—

There are two reasons why I laid off the column for some time. Kipp wanted to be left out for a few issues (you know how Kipp is now) and I wanted to be mentioned, and of course, I wouldn't be one to mention myself. And so. . . Mr Thom got the duty just as Mr. Christie, the erstwhile politician did, and Mr. Bryan Payne had done on previous occasions.

—O—

We just happened to run across this one of these days after Mother's day. Florence Hyde was to learn a couple poems for the benefit of the folks in the Baptist Sunday School of the city. She did. She not only learned them, but she recited them.

—O—

The story continues with the report that Herr Rudolf Wissler likewise had to, or was to, learn two poems. He did. He recited them to the Sunday School. As you might have guessed previously, the two poems that Miss Hyde recited, and the two poems that Mr. Wissler recited were the same two poems. The monotony was broken by having Sunday School sandwiched in between. Miss Hyde's two poems were rendered before Sunday School, and Mr. Wissler's followed the meeting.

—O—

The Great Jasper has come on the scene of his spoiled land again. Mr. Clifton Moore, the man who received his nickname in connection with a tale he used to tell, and who later went to Princeton Seminary, was a welcome guest in Maryville last week (because he didn't wait until the last week of school to come). I was in the company of T. M. Byar, the also great, when Moore first came into sight and Byar said what many of us have thought . . . that with Moore, several little track stories might possibly have been different stories this year.

—O—

And Friday is here. Friday is Moore's former roommate. With Friday comes the customary organ recital. For the part of me, I could suggest that the Frosh visit the tabernacle this week and hear the great Neff roll real music out of the insignificant appearing organ in the belfry. It makes music . . . and it sounds like organ music.

—O—

I guess maybe the Writer's Workshop and the Pi Kappa Delta group discovered that they are just very much like the rest of the boys when it comes to running loose around the country. They are both informed very tactfully by the informer concerning such matters that it's still customary to sign on the dotted line a few days early, for outside functions. It's quite a let down for the people who have it in their own little heads that they're pretty big ones. I'm referring only to the students in the organization.

—O—

I listened last week while the Dean of Men made a few suggestions about the proposed social program on the Hill for the future. It sounded good; it sounded desirable. It sounded better than two things (1) what I thought it was going to sound like, and (2) what it has sounded like through the mouths of the less informed.

—O—

The Writer's Workshop is one of the first organizations on the Hill to adopt the revised method of initiations, a fact for which the writer is duly pleased. In fact, I've been in favor of an educated reform for a long spell, beginning with a denunciation of one of the ruthless procedures of a brother organization one year ago, which made me lose one particle of my social standing with, and among the "real men" on the campus.

—O—

This is the first opportunity to publicize the third question on the Theism test last week which was final . . . yes, final for many of us. The question was "Make an outline giving the Divisions and main headings in the course you have studied", or something to that effect. That is something for the coming theism students to beware of. Just don't say I didn't tell you.

—O—

The ECHO'S coming to what? Well, the ECHO is coming to carry feature articles written by unnamed men . . . or possibly women. Wonder why?

sportsmanship during his play this year. His ability as a ball carrier was held in respect and feared by every football coach in the conference. Coaches gunned for Steve Boretsky, and on the field where he had the ball in tow was where the enemy concentrated its strongest forces.

Up at Carson-Newman College in the last game he cut loose and executed some of the prettiest plays of the year. Always putting his whole heart into the game, he asked no quarter, and gave none. Again he won his old position on the all-conference eleven.

During the wrestling seasosn he defended successfully his title of all-southern champ, and aided the Highlanders in winning the state title for the third straight year. On several occasions he grappled in the 155-pound class, tho not of that weight, and met with success in all of his bouts. He was captain of the team during the last season.

Altho Steve did not go out for varsity basketball he participated in most of the interclass games, and could always be found during his spare time down under the basket, shooting fouls and crips. He has not taken some part in nearly all athletics on the Hill, but has taken part seriously and has always tried to win.

Early in the spring he began to work for a place in Sigma Delta Psi, a fitting finish to his many athletic successes here on College Hill, and only recently completed the trials for the swimming requirement.

Accomplishments such as these speak for themselves. There is no need to say that next year Maryville athletics will feel a keen loss because Steve Boretsky will not be out there fighting for the Highlanders.

"Pedestrains are prone to careleessness." Says a magistrate. And after they have been careless they are certainly proane.

Sermonette

"I don't know whether there is a God or not? Why should I be expected to accept Christ? I can't believe in a person I don't know to exist." This is one of the most general of people's excuses for not entering into a transaction with Christ. Doubt about the existence of God is one of the fruits of materialistic interpretation of observed data. An honest doubt is not harmful, but to refuse on the basis of that doubt to accept Christ is both foolish and harmful.

Suppose a man were lost in a wintry forest. Suppose him to be hungry, exhausted, almost frozen, and down-hearted. Just as the wanderer comes to the end of his strength, he sees a cabin a short distance ahead. The hope of refuge spurs him on, but still he cannot quite reach the cabin-door. His only chance for life is in calling for help. Will his doubts as to the presence of a person in the cabin keep him from crying for help? Will the dying man sit down in the snow and try to PROVE there is someone in the cabin before he calls for help? Will he refuse to avail himself of probable salvation, simply because he has doubts as to the existence and character of a person who is likely to be in the cabin?

It is just as foolish for a man to refuse because of doubts to call upon the God that MIGHT be, as it would be for a man in the above desperate situation to refuse because of doubts to call upon the man that might be in the cabin! The Bible, man's nature, and the universe indicate the PROBABILITY of God's existence. On the basis of that probability, a wise and earnest man will not allow his lack of certitude to prevent his taking a chance on the God that might be. Christianity is betting one's life on the existence of Jesus Christ!

In the last analysis, all human activity, whether it be industry, business, agriculture, government, social relations, or even scientific research, is conducted on the basis of probability— not absolute certitude. It is unreasonable, then, for us to demand certitude in the field of religion only. Why not be as sensible about religion as we are about all other fields of human activity?

There is a difference between essential facts and essential beliefs. There are facts about how a potato grows, what it is made of, and how it is digested and assimilated in the human body; but one does not need a creed embodying all these historical and scientific facts, in order to have enough faith in a potato to eat it and live on it. The difference between the saved and the lost is one of intention, attitude, or willingness, rather than one of information.

Many people say, "We won't believe in God until we know He exists." The wise, open-minded, sincere man says, "I'll believe in God until I know He does NOT exist."

Anyone who sincerely repeats the much ridiculed prayer, "'Oh God, if there be a God, save my soul if I have a soul", is saved. Anyone who cries, "God, be merciful to me a sinner", trusts in Jesus Christ. Who is Christ, but the God who is merciful to sinners?

"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God", but "whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

MINISTERIAL ASSN.

Dr. Stevenson was the speaker at the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association last Monday night. He spoke of his recent trip to the South and the famous Carlsbad Caverns. In the business of the evening the following officers were elected for the first semestor of 1934-35:

President—William Talmage
Vice-President—James Wade
Secretary-Treasurer—Robert Downes
Editor—James Shaw

the 440-yard dash, respectively, in what were probably record Maryville times, but which were not clocked, because only firsts count on records. Snedeker also scored with a fourth in the 880-yard run. The Scot mile relay team of Byar, Gray, Saint, and Snedeker captured fourth place, for one team point.

After running as they seldom had before to place in eight out of ten track events, the Scotties faltered in the field events, placing in only two out of six for a total of 2 1-2 points. Lehr tossed himself into third place in the javelin throw and Lavender tied Vaughn, of Sewanee, for fourth in the pole vault.

This first annual state meet was a decided success, and will be held at T. P. I. in Cookeville next year. These annual meets are expected to be a stimulus to interest and a great help in East Tennessee track.

pitchers from the box in making eight hits good for six earned runs. Corns sled off in the second inning with the first Scot hit of the game, was sacrificed to second by Kizer, and scored on Gillespie's single over second.

The Scotties made five runs on five hits and an error in the third inning. With one out, Atchison singled and Coker reached first on an attempted sacrifice, when the pitcher fumbled the ball. For the second time Blazer hit for three bases, bringing runners in from first and second. Loessberg, after having struck out with Blazer on third in the first game, then rifled the ball over left center for a home run, making the fourth score of the inning. With nobody on base and one out, Corns singled on a hard grounder to the second baseman and scored on a double by Kizer. Hickman replaced Grimsley on the mound for L. M. U and retired the side without further coring.

Good fielding by the Scots, in spite of five errors, cut men off at the plate once in each game and helped the pitchers out of holes on one or two other occasions. With two Railsplitters on base and two out in the third inning of the opener, Kizer went back of third base, grabbed a hot grounder, and threw the runner out at home. In the second game, with men on first and second, Bowling singled to rightfield and Hickam tried to score from second when the ball went back of home plate on the throw in. Graf, who was catching for the Scots, got the ball, fell, and threw to Atchison while still on the ground, catching the runner at the plate.

The last two games of the season will be played Tuesday afternoon on the local field when the Highlanders meet Emory and Henry, non-conference team, in a double-header. The Wasps defeated the Scots in a double-header earlier in the season by scores of 4-3 and 8-7.

"After all, I guess I've had a good time, too, during all these years. But my days are numbered. Can't you hear my cracked limbs groaning and my old frame shaking in the icy wind? from East Tennessee Teachers College, and defeated it in three singles matches. Friday and Saturday of the same week Coach Fischbach took Talmage, Karnell, Phay, and Gillingham to Knoxville, where they were entered in the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Association Tennis Meet. in both singles and doubles.

All four lost out in the second round of play in the singles division, but Karnell and Talmage drove their wedge down to the semi-finals in doubles before they were defeated by Dunlap and Ledsinger, winners of the tournament.

Last Monday the Wasps from Emory-Henry Univerity invaded local territory in an attempt to avenge their previous defeat, but were turned back, 6-1. Talmage, Karnell, Price, Gillingham and Warman won in singles, while Talmage and Karnell paired in doubles to win in straight sets. Woodling and Quigley paired in doubles to lose the only match.

This year the tennis squad loses three men who have stroked side by side for the last two years, and two of whom have played their full four years in college. John Talmage played during his first two years here, and after staying out of school for some time, returned to strengthen the team greatly, gradually working up to third position last year. During the last year as captain of the team he defeated Gordon Karnell to gain first position on the squad, a place which he has held for the entire season.

John Phay has played his full four years of tennis at College Hill, playing at either number three or four position throughout. He served as captain of the team in his junior year. Having had ill health over the summer he has been forced to conserve his strength during the recent season, but has aided greatly in Highlander success.

Gordon Karnell came to Maryville from Hanover College, Indiana, where he played at number one position during his one season there. When Gordon is hot he is plenty hard to beat. During his two years at Maryville he has played consistently at number two position.

Next year's team will be built around the only returning letterman, Jonathan Gillingham, who was elected captain of the team at a meeting of the squad yesterday. Gillingham's tennis is not flashy, but is hard to beat, because of his steady returns and brainy play in general.

Coach Fischbach has just passed his first season as tennis coach, and has turned out a winning team from the material he has had to work with. He is looking forward to the next season with considerable optimism, voicing the opinion that Maryville will have as good, if not a better, team.

Tickets Received For "Choosing-A-Career" Conference at Newark

Tickets May Be Secured From Kay Carpenter

Reference was made in a recent issue of the ECHO to the "Choosing A Career Conference" to be held in Newark, New Jersey on June 26, 27 and 28. Tickets for the first of these conferences may be procured from Kay Carpenter after the first of next week.

For the benefit of those people who may not have read the earlier issue of the ECHO regarding the Conference, the following summary might be of interest.

"Nine talks will be held each of the first two days of the series; four in the morning and five in the afternoon. Following each address personal conferences will be arranged between the speaker and interested students. It is believed to be the first time in history that collegians have ever had an opportunity of meeting the heads of industry and the professions.

"The first two days will be turned over to men speakers, and the third day will be for women. On the third, there will be twelve speakers. All sessions will be opened to both men and women.

"This series will enable college men and women who are in doubt which field to enter, to obtain clearer, more definite conceptions of the leading industries and professions and to see and hear business and professional leaders at a time when it is imperative—following the close of the college season.

"A further aim is to eliminate the floundering of the student starting out in business. University officials believe that if the business brains of the country can hold open forum with those seeking a career, in a misfit field can be eliminated, many years of man power wasted and the paths to success will be arrived upon more speedily. This first Conference is frankly an experiment. It is hoped that it will stimulate young men and women to think beyond merely getting a job, and to consider the career possibilities five or ten years hence in the fields they are entering. If successful, the Conference may become an annual event.

"Because it is expected that the attendance will be extremely large, admission will be by ticket only. A limited number of tickets has been assigned to each college which will then distribute the tickets to interested undergraduates."

Dr. Bartlett Speaks At Wednesday Service

Dr. William T. Bartlett addressed the college chapel service on Wednesday morning, May 23. As a text Dr. Bartlett referred to the ninth verse in the sixth chapter of the Gospel of John, "There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes."

In regard to this text, the speaker emphasized the following points:

1. The boy was in the right place, for he was near Christ.
2. The boy had the right thing; he had the thing the Lord needed.
3. The boy had the right spirit, the spirit of giving.
4. The boy received the right reward.

Orchestra Has Its Annual Picnic Today

The members of the orchestra left immediately after dinner this afternoon to spend their annual picnic at Sunshine. Swimming, tennis, and hiking was the order of the program to be followed by a picnic supper. This affair marks the close of a very succesful year for the orchestra, under Miss Butcher's direction.

Kay Carpenter Ill In College Hospital

The Highland Echo staff regrets that Miss Kay Carpenter, former Editor-in-Chief of the paper, has been confined to the hospital for several days, and sincerely hopes that she may be well and able to return to the campus again within the shortest time possible. Miss Carpenter has been a very capable, efficient Editor with whom the staff has enjoyed working during the past year.

Annual Banquet Of Pi Kappa Delta Held At Montvale Springs

Eleven Members Initiated. New Officers Elected

The annual banquet of the Maryville chapter of Pi Kappa Delta, national honorary forensic society, was held last Monday at Montvale Springs. The group of thirty-six was made up of members of Pi Kappa Delta, other varsity debaters, and members of the freshman debate squad.

In the afternoon while some of the debaters climbed Look Rock others went swimming in the Montvale Hotel pool. As the hotel building was destroyed by fire last fall, the banquet itself was served in one of the larger cabins.

A short program of speeches was given with Earle Crawford as toastmaster. James Smith, president of Pi Kappa Delta, gave the address of welcome. Ercelle Hunter, the only graduating active member of the society gave a faremell speech. Marcella Ardern spoke on behalf of the freshman debaters. Mr. Queener's speech was largely one of recalling the achievements of the season just closed. In pointing out that the season was the most successful for many years, Mr. Queener gave a brief summary of the year's debates. In local debates eleven were won out of twelve and in debates outside the local circuit twenty-six debates were won out of the thirty-three engaged in. The concluding speech was made by Dr. Lloyd who related interesting incidents about debating at Maryville in former years.

After the speeches eleven new members were initiated into the society. The new members are: Mary Gladys Brown, Roberta Howie, Eleanore Pflanze, Grace Proffitt, Catheryn Smith, James Badgett, Alex Christie, Clifford Morgan, James Saint, Newman Smith, and Robert Tripp. These additions brought the membership of the Maryville chapter to twenty-one.

Following the intiation the annual election was held. The following officers were elected: President, Earle Crawford; vice president, Florence Hyde; secretary-treasurer, Maria Wynn; editor, Grace Profiitt.

Y. W. MEETING

The Y. W. C. A. will observe Senior day in the regular Sunday afternoon meeting tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock. The program is in charge of Thelma Iles and Mary Sloane Welsh. All the participants are senior members of the organization.

Charles Luminati has been selected as assistant business manager.

Y. W. C. A. Meeting Conducted By Members Of Advisory Committee

Mrs. Lloyd Is Principal Speaker

The Faculty Advisers of the Y. W. C. A. conducted the association's weekly meeting held on Sunday afternoon, May 20.

Mrs. Lloyd, the speaker, was assisted by Mrs. Pflanze, who led the devotions; Miss Johnson, who sang; and Miss Bassett, who closed the service with prayer. The other Advisers, Miss Beebe, Miss Meiselwitz, and Mrs. Wright were unable to be present.

For the basis of her talk, Mrs. Lloyd used an article entitled "Are You Triangular or Round", published some years ago by the Y. W. C. A. Publication Department.

"Did you ever stop to think what is the shape of your personality, and that you have the power to make it any shape you desire?

"Did you ever meet any person whose personality was an acute angle flying about at random and always running into another acute angle causing a spark to fly? Sometimes the atmosphere of a classroom, or an office, or a reception room seems to be almost alive with these acute angles, and everybody around is uncomfortable and discontented. What a maelstrom the world would be if we were all acute angles!

"Add just one side to this acute angle and we have the triangular personality of which our schools and offices are full. The sad part of this is that when triangles of different shapes knock into each other, the points of each scar the other, and even if they don't knock or scar, they never fit.

"Do you remember the proposition that the greater number of sides in a figure, the nearer the figure approaches the circle as its limit? You proved that in geometry; why not prove it by personal experiment? It works out in figures on paper, and it works out in figures in life!

"No one need be an acute angle or triangle. The more sides one adds to the figure, the nearer one approaches the circle of perfection.

"Would you try to increase the number of sides of your polygon if you had never seen a circle? Could you hope to increase the sides of your life towards perfection or all-roundness if you have never seen all roundness? But having once seen it in Christ, we have before us the example of perfection. the goal toward which we are striving."

Dr. McMurray To Head Peace Movement Group

At a meeting on Thursday evening Dr. McMurray spoke to many students interested in forming a branch of the nation-wide peace plan. Next year the group will organize with Dr. McMurray as adviser.

Dr. McMurray, in his talk, proved with figures that in the World War a cost of $22,235 was required to kill one man. 65,000 were enlisted, 8,500,000 killed, 21,000,000 wounded; and the total cost was $189,000,000. "Big business", he said, "received the profit."

Dr. McMurray also enumerated some of the accomplishments of the League of Nations, in settling eight disputes, five of which might have led to war; returning eight thous-

On Getting Up In The Morning—Harry Walrond

I used to envy the dynamic man of the advertisement who every morning gushes forth from his couch like the scurrying mountain brook gushes forth from its abundant spring. I used to wonder if such early morning vigor could really be in reach of a sleepy mortal like me. Often I have been on the verge of sending away for the remarkable tonic to which this vibrant picture-personality so whole-heartedly attributes his euphoria. Even, on a few occasions have I tried this aweome "spring-from-the-bed-act" myself, but never have I experienced the spontaneous vim of the man in the picture.

This early morning incapacity of mine used to trouble me sorely; it used to flood my sensitive soul with gloom, and fill my day with misery. That was before I found out about hearts.

I read in a biology book that the normal heart is sluggish in the early mornings, just as I am; the normal heart is not prepared to participate in any sudden departure from its bed of repose the moment the body senses that day has come, just as I am not; the normal heart is shocked at and injured by any such departure, just as I am.

"So," I thought, "the old boy who jumps out of bed like a stone out of David's sling isn't so wise after all. He's shocking his heart."

From that time on, my longing for the spirit and the energy needed to propel my waking-body from the comfortable bed to the hard floor ceased. In its place there grew up a feeling of extreme caution lest my first post-slumber movements be too sudden, lest my emerging from under the covers be too early. I didn't want to get an "athletic heart".

Not long ago a confidant of mine suggested that my knowledge about hearts might be the prime cause of my disinclination to budge within the first half-hour of my waking, but I assured him that he was

OUR POLICY

With the advent of a new editorial regime the most obvious subject to be discussed in this column should be the policy of the new staff.

The policy of the Echo, as has been the case in preceding years, is to present news. By the term "news" we mean not only news articles of the campus activities, but news items fit to print, which, if read by outsiders will not result in "sneering aspersions" as to Maryville College habits, activities, or language.

By the term "news" we include also various items which should be of interest to those students who believe in being "world-minded" and not "campus-minded".

We realize that in many cases a college is judged by its newspaper. With this fact in mind why should the students expect its representative, for such is the case, to "air dirty linen?" We know that a college weekly should also be a medium through which to present student opinion. If the opinion is a student body feeling it may be presented through the organization provided for that purpose, the Student Council Association. If the opinion is a student's feeling it may be presented in the form of a letter with the signature of the writer of the letter.

The Staff at all times will strive to present unbiased criticisms if any occasion should warrant the procedure. Only too well known, however, is the fact that criticism on the part of the college paper, usually results in harsh adverse comments from the criticised.

"There's always room for improvement" is a well-known saying. In concluding we wish to apply the slogan to our own case, for the Staff would appreciate receiving, at any time, suggestions or helpful criticisms for the improvement of the Highland Echo, the college newspaper, your newspaper.

Everything is relative, of course. An English economist says he wishes his country could undergo a year or two of what America calls depression.

wrong. I never allow my heart more than ten minutes to get up enough "steam" to locomote me to the floor. The remaining of my "sleeping-in" period is the result of disharmony among my neurones.

I learned about neurones at the same time that I learned about hearts. There are three kinds of neurones in the human body: afferent, efferent, and coordinating. All of them are operative through the central nervous system though each kind has different function. The afferent are the in-going messengers; they find out what's going on in the various parts of the body, and then report their findings to the coordinating neurones at the gates of the central nervous system. The coordinating neurones are the only ones permitted inside the central system; they are the private and direct mesengers of King Brain and Queen Spinal Cord. They carry the messages brought to the gates by the afferent messengers to one of the royal pair, who makes a decision in the matter, and then they carry the decision in the matter, and then they carry the decision back to the gates, and deliver it to the efferent neurones who are always waiting there. The efferent neurones are the out-going messengers; they constitute the army of activity. As soon as they learn what has to be done they go and do it, and so complete the response.

In most animals this system of relayed neuronic-messages works very well, but in me, alas, it rubs. It's all because my coordinating neurones are "snooty". They consider themselves above the common neurones who have to stay outside the royal gates, and they hate to associate with them. Especially do they disdain the efferent neurones whom they call "common laborers". In fact, my coordinating neurones, won't even speak to my efferents if they can avoid it. That's where all the trouble arises.

In the morning, after I have awakened, and after I have allowed five or ten minutes for my heart to get back in shape, my a.ferent neurones bring in the message that conditions are satisfactory for getting me up. This is just what King Brain has been waiting for, and he immediately orders that the efferent neurones get me up. But he can't alk directly to the efferent neurnes, and the coordinating neurones won't, so for a time, I am left lying, wondering why I lack the energy to get up. Meanwhile, the afferents are bringing in reports that no progess has been made, and the King finally decides to investigate. He soon discovers wherein the trouble lies, and he wastes no time in decreeing that if I am not out of bed very shortly, the coordinating neurones will get no breakfast. The coordinating neurones are very fond of beakfasts, just as I am, and the prospect of a substantial meal brings them to speaking terms again with the efferents. So it is that the order is extended and I am finally raised from the bed.

You see, I'm not really lazy; I just have a bad case of heart and neurones.

Jack Atkins Completes Work For Membership In Sigma Delta Psi

Jack Atkins, star Highlander end and holder of the college record for the high hurdles, is the second Maryville athlete this season to complete requirements for membership in Sigma Delta Psi, national honorary athletic fraternity.

Jack's four years at Maryville have meant superior team performance for all the sports in which he has participated; namely, football, ball, and track. Let us look at a brief review of an athlete who has topped his college career with the highest honor a college athlete can win.

Coming to College Hill in the fall of 1929, Jack answered the call of the gridiron, and made the Highlander varsity at end, a position which he has kept throughout. His fast breaks down the field and accuracy at pass-receiving branded him as valuable material for the Highlanders during the following years.

Following the football season Atkins reported for baseball practice in the spring, and played thru most of the season at third base.

Came the football season again and Jack was to be found in flanknen's togs, the position which had now unquestionably become his for his superior work during the preceding year.

At the end of the season he played in the interclass basketball ourney with the team which won the championship for that year.

The following year found Atkins out of college, and coaching football at Louisa (Ky.) High School. Putting all his previous experience to the test, he coached the team which won the Eastern Kentucky State championship for that year.

Returning to the campus in the fall of 1932 Jack took up where he eft off on the gridiron, and played thru another successful year, winning end position on the Smoky Mountain Conference honor team at the close of the season. Early in the year he was elected to serve as athletic director for the junior class.

In the spring he again went out for baseball, but after playing in the first game, dropped the glove for the spikes and shorts, thus beginning an outstanding career as a Highlander track man. During the season he ran both the high and low hurdles. Toward the end of the season he, with Ed Green, defeated Platt, Virginia State champion high hurdler, in a meet with Emory-Henry University.

His fourth year found Jack figuring heavily in Highlander athletics. Already a seemingly permanent fixture, and an important one, on the gridiron, he played thru his ast football season at end, and was awarded his old place on the Conference Honor Team for the second consecutive year.

Following the football season he served as a member of the Athletic Board of Control.

Early in the track season Atkins loomed as a Scot hurdler who could always be relied upon to take a first. Up at Emory-Henry he was clocked at 16-flat on the high hurdles, but the time was not allowed to stand because only one watch was used. In the last meet of the season with L. M. U. he clipped a full second off the old college record to set a new one of 16:1.

Outside of his participation in varsity competition he has been an active supporter of interclass activities, playing on both baseball and basketball teamss.

Almost any day one can find him on the local or near-local golf courses, driving away with the accuracy of one who knows how its done, and with only a few clubs

Sport Talk

By BRYAN PAYNE

Well, all I know is what I see on the golf course, and telling about that is a pretty turf job. Toured the campus layout the other day for the first time this year, and all in all this corner turned out a commendable job of griping, a par one to be exact, with the exception of that on two or three holes which got in our way, you know, the kind on which the soul runneth more freely at times, and often into moods which would well be left out of this column for the present itme. But with brrrowed clubs, a borrowed ball, a borrowed tee, and a big bluff, thus toured we the course, and with the Misses Johnston and Henry hurrying us up from behind we got around in excellent time, only after missing half the holes, and came in very much refreshed, um, ahh . . . . yaas, like that. And now for some sport talk. Where is that sport talk, Williams?

The Influence of The Livelier Ball

We got into a rather tedious discussion the other day concerning the advantages of the livelier golf ball. It seems that certain pellet manufacturers have found a way to shoot the ball with a prepared juice, probably some extract of boiled grasshoppers, which will give the pill the added spring and leap, and so will lengthen the golfers' drives by such and such a number of feet. Now, we argued that this is a good plan because it will influence more fans to take up golf, it will cause poor golfers to be better ones, and good ones will have to quit because they will knck the pellets away. To make the argument more convincing we spiced it with a bit of human interest, such as the following.

* * * *

Fol. . .loww, Follow the Dean

For instance, there is Dr. Hunter. A great golfer is he. We have had the pleasure of following him around nine holes, and let us tell you it is a treat. One interesting thing is that we always have to pay close attention because it is often hard to see just where the shot goes after he slays it, and then it is most hard to catch what he says after he slices it. We remember one day in particular, on which the dean had just begun a tour of the local Green Meadow Country Club course. Having tediously placed the pellet upon the small tee, he spit lavishly into his palms and took a mighty stroke. The ball rose majestically in a beautiful left hook, straight toward the setting sun, and finally lit with a splat in a muddy cornfield nearby. Now, since the ball was still in sight of course he was desirous of going after it, even thru the mud. The livelier ball would have sailed out of reach, and so he would have saved a pair of muddy shoes.

Dr. Fields Plays Wood Shots

And then there is Dr. Fields. Now there is a man to whom the question will make little difference either way. He goes right out and plays with some lopsided little wooden balls and has as big a time as anybody, and, probably,

SCOT BASEBALLERS WIN 6, LOSE THIRTEEN, TIE TWO; WIN 3, LOST 7 IN LEAGUE

Atchison, Hand Star on Mound; Loessberg, Corns, Gillespie Have Highest Stick Averages

After getting off to a slow start, winning only three of the first eighteen games, the Scottie baseball team finally hit its stride late in the season and copped the last three contests with shut-out victories, bringing the season's record up to 6 won, 13 lost, and 2 tied.

In Smoky Mountain Conference competition, the Scotties won 3 and lost 7, two of the losses being to Carson-Newman, who did not play enough games to count in the conference standing. A four-game series with L.M.U. was even at two wins nd two defeats, and another with Teachers was dropped, one game to three.

The Scots opened the season April 8 with a 4 to 3 loss to the Lenoir City Independents. Two days later the locals topped Hiwassee 2 to 1, with a ninth inning attack netting the winning run, and the following afternoon tied an independent team rom Alcoa 1-all.

In the first tilt away from home, he Scots lost to Lenoir City a econd time, 12 to 7. Returning to he local field, Maryville dropped a ragged game to Mars Hill 6 to 2, and another to Goodall, of Knoxville, 4 to 2. A return game with Hiwassee two days later resulted in the locals' second triumph of the season, 5 to 3.

Maryville opened its conference schedule with L. M. U. in a two-game series at Harrogate April 20 and 21, and was defeated in both contests, 6-3 and 12-6. In this series the Scots showed signs of awaking at bat, making nine hits in the first game and ten in the second. Fielding, however, was still of form.

The following week Carson-Newman came to Maryville and defeated the Scots 7 to 4 behind the two hit pitching of Lyman. A reversal of form found the locals fielding well but failing to hit. A return game with the Eagless ended, after thirteen hard-fought innings, with the Highlanders on the short end of an 8-7 score. Maryville out-hit Carson-Newman 16 to 13.

The Scotties won their first conference game over Teachers 8 to 3 on May 1. Hand pitched for Maryville and held the visitors to six hits. The following afternoon McCall limited the Scots to four safeties, but the game went ten innings before Teachers evened the series by winning 11 to 9. Another ten-inning affair the same week ended in a 4-4 tie with Rockford Independents.

A disastrous road trip, beginning May 7, ended with four defeats, two by Emory and Henry and two by Teachers. The Wasps took a double-header May 8 by one-point margins, 4-3 and 8-7, and the Teachers clubbed their way to 23-9 and 13-8 triumphs on the two following days.

After a week's rest, the Highlanders met L. M. U. in a double header and blanked the Railsplitters in both games, 2-0 and 6-0. Hand and Atchison turned in excellent pitching performances in these two games. The next afternoon the Scotties took their third straight shutout, this time over Rockford Independents, by an 8-0 score, bringing the number of consecutive scoreless innings for the opposition to twenty two.

The final games scheduled, a twwin-bill with Emory and Henry last Tuesday, were cancelled because rain.

"Butter" Atchison and Ralph Hand carried the majority of the pitching burdens, with Hand winning three games and Atchison two. Loessberg led the batters with 28 hits in 78 times at bat for a .359 average, and Corns was second with an even .300 average. Gillespie hit .292, Blazer 270, and Kizer .246 for the next highest averages. Loessberg was the only Scot to hit more than one home run, his total being four. Gillespie hit five triples and Blazer four, and Loessberg and Blazer were tied for the most doubles with four each.

"Putt-Putt" Champ

Looking tiny by comparison with his huge trophy, C. H. Johnson, amateur racer, of Cranberry Lake, N. J., is pictured after he had won the 132-mile outboard motorboat race from Albany to New York on the Hudson River. Johnson's time was 22 seconds short of three hours.

M Club Initiation

The M Club will initiate its new members this afternoon. The club is to meet at three o'clock and will begin the initiation on the campus.

The new members are to compete in mock sport contests during the afternoon. Part of the program will include a picnic supper in the college woods.

In the evening the club will hold a swimming party in the college pool.

Seniors Top Sophs In Interclass Event

Boretsky, VanHee Carry High Score Honors In Annual Y. M. C. A. Event

With Steve Boretsky playing a leading role for the winners and Kenneth Van Hee for the losers, the senior track team nosed out the sophomore squad 52 to 50 in the interclass meet sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. last Saturday afternoon. The freshmen were third with 20 points and the juniors were last with only 2 pointers

Van Hee was high-point man for the meet, carrying off three first places and one second place for a total of 18 counters. Boretsky was close behind with three firsts and a third for 16 points. Kipp and Springer, seniors, and Downes, sophomore, scored ten points each by taking two first places.

Van Hee almost set a new Maryville record in winning the broad jump. He cleared 21.4 bettering the present mark of 21.3, but fell backward instead of forward, thereby ruining his chances of a record. Van Hee's distance was 20.3 after falling backward.

OBSERVATIONS

Warren Warman says he thinks the faculty thinks Bob Tripp's a radical. Well, that opens the discussion two ways. First, does the faculty think? and second, does the faculty think as a unit? We think that one of these could be answered in the negative. That is the second. And we're sure it's a good thing the faculty in any man's college don't all think the same way; the wrong one might be starting first.

—O—

Fred Kirchner, among others, was waiting for Winn Barr (everyone has done that at least once) before leaving for the Pi Kappa Delta picinc. "If he doesn't hurry, he'll berr our progress", said the punster. Dr. Hunter, who was there, had no answer. Kirchner labored on. "Well", said the lad, "he won't Winn our affection this way." The Dean much troubled, used as his defence, silence.

—O—

The next morning, Kirchner came to the Dean, being one of those persistent individuals. "You know what you should have said last night, Dr. Hunter?" "No", curled the Dean an eyebrow, "what?" "You should have said, 'Tutt, Tutt'," quoth Kirchner. And we used to wonder why Kirchner didn't major in English!

—O—

In our library experience, we've had occasion to tell people of the man type, in the evening, that they were on the wrong side of the library. You know how it is. The boys and girls "choose" sides, all except Lindy and Toots. They sit in the middle. But the other night, we tried to tell an old student of the college that. We tried to tell Herr Wissler, better known to us as 'Algernon' that he was wrong, and the man sat right on. We didn't convince him, either. We don't take any chances.

—O—

The teacher of Shakespeare announced last week that Shakespeare tests would be no more . . . . that is, this year. We were interested in noting some of the verbal reactions to the action taken. Viola Lightfoot said it was the greatest thing that ever happened. Herb Dunning said he'd have to go to school the last week now, since he didn't get a chance to pull his grade up (you know how thick-headed this old Herb is), and Lois Wallace said she'd a run up and hugged the man if it hadn't been for all the others in the class room.

—O—

We thought we were pretty good when we gathered 220 people together in the course of a length of time and talked them into taking our poetry test. But, to see the number of people who write In other people's annuals puts us almost to shame. And then to read some of the messages! We don't know who is the best at this business for conciseness, but for length and gentle flow, the Canada Club has everyone licked.

—O—

The ban's on the lowdown dresses, and the ban's on the business of getting over 45 degrees flat on the ground for our woming folk. This bareback business doean't seem to prove any more popular here than in a riding academy. We don't go wild about these restrictions, but we'd suggest another in the interests of general goodlookingnsss, and that is the ban on the women's socks. We feel so young walking around looking at the little women's little ankles. And we feel mean, too.

—O—

Rumor hath it, or had it, that the seniors had behaved badly at the last senior party and that one hour was to be cut off the allowance this time. If this is so, we taste soap. We have a very bad taste. But we must continue standing by the powers that be . . . whatever 'standing by' means.

The expenses of the World Court are born by the League. It has settled thirty disputes, supervised the government of isolated territories, and helped in the reduction of armaments. It meets every year with representatives of fifty-four nations present.

Only the armament makers, Dr. McMurray said, want war. We, as a people, do not desire it, and should not enter war except in case of invasion. We should stop saying that war is inevitable, and take our individual stand for peace.

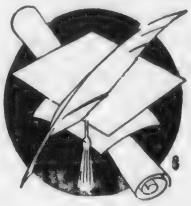
Dr. Shine's Romanticism



Ask Dr. Shine about the new ball! Now, we have never seen Dr. Shine play golf, but we imagine that he would play a dazzling nine holes under such conditions. His uncanny ability to pick out the more minute bits of things would undoubtedly enable him to develop a fine set of strokes. We can just see him out there now. He would pick a spoon out of the bag, scan it to see that there are no English mistakes on he trade mark, then look down at the ball and mumble, "Now, I must be careful not to slice this homogeneous contrivance, for a social tear would be out of place at this point. Really, I should much rather play this circuitous route in the rough and in the seclusion of traps, because that is an outstanding romantic tendency."

Expression Students To Graduate Tonight

Dr. Hunter To Present The Diplomas

The graduation exercises of the Department of Expression will be held at eight o'clock tonight in the chapel. Ten students are to graduate: Veta May Stephens, Maria Wynn, Marian Falkner, Clifford Withers, Nina Gamble, Eleanor Denslow, Dorothy Correll, Lucille Swafford, Marjorie Steffner, and Frances Massey.

Two recitals have been held previous to this graduating exercise. In one recital five of the graduates of the department gave different types of reading. In the second recital the remaining graduates presented several one-act plays.

An excellent program has been prepared by Mrs. West. It is as follows: "The Bishop's Candlesticks", arranged from Les Miserables by McKinnel, read by Eleanor Denslow; "Il est doux, il est bon", from Massenet's Herodiade, sung by Lois Huber; "The Florist Shop", by Hawkbridge, read by Lois Wallace, a 1933 graduate of expression; "Jeanne d'Arc", act one, by Percy Mackaye, read by Maria Wynn; "Vision Fugitive", from Massenet's Herodiade, sung by Francis Huber.

Doctor Hunter will present the diplomas.

Stevensons Return From Virginia Trip

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson made an interesting trip a few days ago. They visited their son, leaving the campus on Monday, the twenty-first, and returning about a week later on Saturday, the twenty-sixth.

Dr. Stevenson's son lives at Middleburg, Va., about thirty-five miles from Washington where he is engaged in business. Each time Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson have gone there in recent years they have taken a different route. This year they first crossed over into North Carolina and spent some time in the attractive mountain district around Asheville. On his part of the trip Dr. Stevenson was particularly impressed with the local industries which still survive in that part of the country. They passed through a hook-rug section and then a basket section. In these places for miles along the highway were cottages whose owners made rugs or baskets and offered them for sale to the traveling public.

Next they crossed over into Virginia and rode up the Shenandoah Valley at a few miles south of Natural Bridge. From there they crossed the West Virginia border at Iron Gate and spent a short time in the hot springs district. They visited White Sulphur Springs, and then, crossing back into Virginia, they passed through Hot Springs and Warm Springs. Though these resorts are well-known, Dr. Stevenson does not consider the springs to be of as good a quality as those in the vicinity of Maryville.

Continuing over the mountains Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson came to Middleburg, Va., where Dr. Stevenson's son has his country home. The district is largely given over to hunting and many clubs have their headquarters there. Dr. Stevenson is proud of the prowess of his fifteen year-old granddaughter who is considered one of the foremost women riders in the state of Virginia. He

Art Department Has Annual Exhibit In Anderson Hall Today

Work of Thirty-five Pupils On Display

The annual exhibit of the Art Department was held this afternoon in the art room, Anderson Hall, between two and four o'clock. Many beautiful paintings and drawings, representing a year's work by thirty-five pupils in the fine arts and free-hand drawing classes, were on display.

The outstanding works of the exhibit were an oil painting, "Paul and Virginia in the Swing", and a tapestry "Paul and Virginia in the Storm", by Miss Isabelle Harrison, who received her certificate in art this morning. Another of Miss Harrison's exhibits was an original portrait of President Lloyd's younger daughter, Louise.

Several original portraits of girls on the campus, made from life by Miss Virginia Worth, also attracted considerable attention. These paintings were characterized by their naturalness and life-like qualities. Among Miss Worth's portraits was one of Miss Ruth Lloyd, President Lloyd's older daughter.

Three screens on velvet by Mrs. Stanley Bird, "Romeo and Juliet" y Miss Rachel Edds, former Maryville College graduate and present Everett High School teacher, and a "Hunting Scene" by Milton Siskin, a Maryville boy, were other outstanding exhibitions. Miss Faye Lequire, another former Maryville College student, displayed several excellent china paintings. Although she specializes in china work, Miss Lequire had a number of good canvas paintings also.

A large variety of landscapes, including views of the Great Smoky Mountains as seen from the art room windows, and real life paintings of such objects as flowers and shrubs, were exhibited.

In the free-hand class, original work from nature, drawn in charcoal, pen and ink, and pencil, was especially well done. Still-life objects composed the remainder of the free-hand drawings, some of which aroused as much interest as the fine arts specimens,

Miss Nan Bird, the instructor of art, reported another successful year of work in the Department, with as much talent being displayed this year as there has been in former years. The beauty of the exhibits this afternoon was more than enough to verify her statement.

Senior Class Play To Be Given Tuesday

The Senior Class play, "Children of the Moon", will be presented on Tuesday evening, June 5, at eight o'clock. "Children of the Moon", an English play by Martin Flavin, is a well-known and widely-used play which has stood the test of repeated productions by eminent artists.

GRADUATION

At this time of year the most fitting subject for an editorial for this, the final issue of the Highland Echo for the college year, 1933-34 should be one which pertains to the departure of the senior class students.

All of us at college are working toward a goal: a goal reached by a great majority after four years of more play than work; a goal attained by others after four years of more work than play; a goal achieved by a small minority after four years of equal work and play.

All of us have graduated from grammar and high school. The business of graduation from grammar school and high school and college is only an outward evidence of arriving at the goal post, of being prepared for something beyond the goal, of pushing forward to another mark. All of us, therefore, at different times, are graduating, graduating from one level to another level of thinking and acting.

While we are in college the tendency is to be on the upgrade, for we have a goal. When we were freshmen our goal was not so much to be found in the likeness of a parchment scroll but in the likeness of some member of the senior class. So it has been the case throughout the years; so it is now. So will it always be. But will the seniors in their turn, now that they have reached a goal important in their lives, set another goal equally as important, equally as valuable as a stepping stone to something fine and good and worthy of their efforts?

There are many who ask the question indicative of a narrow conception, "Why go to College?" Who but the college graduate is properly qualified to answer? How can he attempt to enumerate or describe the experiences, the friendships, the ideals that effect his outlook on life? Years after his graduation, perhaps, he may in some way attempt a rationalization.

We feel that graduation from Maryville College is something more than a goal reached or attained or achieved. We feel that it is not merely a stepping stone to some other goal. Always present and whenever we reach for it will be the guiding rope of something infinitely deep and binding and true, the memory of a Maryville graduation and all that it symbolizes.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

They are southerners, one from Mississippi and the other from North Carolina; they came here from other colleges, one from Whitworth College and the other from Blue Mountain College; they are now roommates, and by no means uncongenial, we hear, in spite of the fact that one finds white rats and psychological mazes altogether interesting while the other considers the study of romance languages worthy of her time and efforts.

Mary Sue Calhoun, of Mount Olive, Mississippi, came to Maryville after she had spent two years at Whitworth College in North Carolina. Since her arrival here, she has turned her interests in more than one direction. She is a Psychology major, having a minor in Sociology. She has taken advantage of the Point System of athletic activities, and for the two years that she has been here she has been a member of the "M" Club. She has been an active member of Theta Epsilon; this year she served as vice-president of the society. She was chosen also by the YWCA to serve as a Nu Gamma leader this year. And like the true Mississippian that she is, she belongs to the Mississippi Club of which she was treasurer last year.

Josephine Ann Woodward, of Hendersonville, North Carolina, came to Maryville as a sophomore from Blue Mountain College, in North Carolina. She has been a good student, with more than ordinary grades. She was a member of the Student Council and a Nu Gamma leader last year. For the past two years she has been an "M" Club member. She has been an interested worker in Theta Epsilon, having served in a number of offices. She was a program secretary last year and secretary this year. This year she played in "Berkeley Square", a production of the College Players, an organization in which she has been a faithful worker and of which she is now business manager. She has been a member and officer of the French Club during the last two years. She is a class officer, having served as secretary of the Senior Class.

Sue's spontaneity and Jo's poise have complimented each other to make an altogether delightful combination of two very charming characters.

Thunderstorms occur on an average of 225 days of the year in Java, which is the most densely populated land mass in the world--21 people to the square mile.

Music Department Has Undergraduate Recital

The Music Department presented an undergraduate recital on Thursday afternoon, May 31, in Voorhees Chapel.

The piano department was represented by Harriet Clark and Ruth Flint in a selection for two pianos. Lillian Armstrong, Evelyn Coddington, Norman Sylar, and Burton Toms, also played.

The department for violin presented Howland Hussey, Erwin Siskin, Lois Martin, and Virgil Lequire in one group number and Glover Leitch, Ballard Quass, and Mary Hollis Carter in a second group for violins.

Representatives from the voice department were Doris Franklin, George Lehr, Naomi Hogan, and Carl Fisher in a quartette of mixed voices. Calista Palmer and Sylvia Epright sang the "Spinning Chorus" from Wagner's "Flying Dutchman".

Book Browsing

Leonard William Ellery, "Two Lives, A Poem". New York, 1933. Viking Press

A somewhat serious, and certainly sincere, student of Greek takes lodging in a roominghouse near the university, and becomes engaged to the daughter of his landlord. Accidentally he learns of an inherited strain of madness in the girl's blood, of several attempted suicides, and of her father's belief that a marriage to a worthy young man would aid her in recovering her health. The two young people love each other with heart and soul, and the lover is torn between duty and instinct. However, the marriage takes place.

During their married life the young author discovers all the baseness of the character of his father-in-law. By petty tricks, by constant querulousness, and by overburdening the young girl with work and cares, he breaks down her resistance and drives her to her inevitable doom. After the father's death, the two attempt a new beginning, but it is too late. Once more the girl attempts to take poison, and is subsequently removed to a sanitorium. Left alone with but his memories and his work, the young author ends his story with his struggles to live a wholesome and serviceable life.

The undertone of this poem is morbid, and yet there are interwoven strains of beauty of description and sentiment. It is best read completely at first, and afterwards taken apart and studied for its simplicity of expression, adaptability of moods, and perfection of rhetoric.

Scottie Tracksters Have Good Season

Coach Thrower Leads Scotties To Two Dual-Meet Victory; Second Place in State Meet

(By Dick Meadows)

The Highlander track squad has completed another successful season under Coach Bob Thrower's guidance, winning two of its three dual meets by wide margins, losing the other on the last event and placing second in the state meet at Knoxville. The regular schedule of six meets was cut to four because of a default by Centre College and the calling off of the State A. A. U. meet in Elizabethton by the Bemberg Company.

In the first meet of the season against the University of Tennessee in Knoxville on April 7, the Scotties were defeated by the Vols 63 to 54. The Maryville runners swept all before them in the track events, scoring 45 points with six first places and five seconds in nine races. The Scots were never in the running in the field, however, and Tennessee piled up 44 points while the locals were making 9. The meet was not decided until the mile relay was run. Tennessee was leading 58 to 54 at the beginning of the relay, but a victory for the Scots would have given Maryville a 59 to 58 decision for the day. The U. T. performers proved a little faster than the Scots and took the five points and the meet.

After three more weeks of hard practice, the Scots journeyed to Emory, Virginia, to oppose the Emory-Henry Wasps on April 28, and returned with a 76 to 50 victory. Again the track events were taken with ease, 49 to 23, and the field events were divided at 27-all. Atkins tied the Maryville record in hte 120-yard high hurdles, having the time of 16.2. He was timed in 16-flat, but the record was not allowed to stand because only one watch was used.

The following Saturday, May 5, the Highlanders played hosts to the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters and overwhelmed the visitors 112 to 14. The Scots carried off every first place and all but one second. Two new college records were established and one was unofficially tied during this meet. Atkins took the 120-yard high hurdles in 16.1, a tenth of a second faster than the record which had held since 1929, and Loessberg made 21 feet 3 inches in the broad jump, a half-inch better than the mark established by him last year. Lavender cleared the bar at 11 feet 3 inches in the pole vault, tying the record, but the mark was unofficial because the bar was sagging.

Then came the state meet in Knoxville May 12, with the Highlanders taking second place with 25 points, far behind U. T., but ahead of Southwestern, Sewanee, Chattanooga, Carson-Newman, and several others. Once again the runners accounted for most of the Maryville scores, making 23 as to 2 for the field entries. Byar and Paul won first places in the 220-yard low hurdles and the mile run, respectively, with the Scot Captain breaking his own hurdle record of 26-flat. His new record is 25.9, and is also a new college mark. Atkins and Snedeker put up hard fights to take seconds in the high hurdles and quarter mile, respectively, in races which bettered the Maryville records.

In the individual events for the year, Byar scored 42 points, Paul 37, and Snedeker 30 for the leaders. Paul won the mile in all four meets, the two-mile in the three dual meets, and was third in the two-mile in the state meet. Byar took six first places in the four meets and four seconds, and Snedeker won the quarter-mile in the three dual meets and was second in the state meet. Atkins won the high hurdles in the dual meets and was second in the state meet.

The time of the year has now come when back slapping and bouquet slinging are in order. Since all is quiet along the athletic front we now have a chance to glance back over the record book to see just what we have accomplished during the past year in the field of athletics.

Looking Back

As we scan the pages we find that fate hasn't been so cruel after all. When the 1933 football season opened, the rail-birds predicted that Maryville would be lucky if she won a single game. However, the Scotties crossed them up by winning four games and losing five to place third in the Smoky Mountain Conference standing.

In basketball it was the same story. With only two letter men to serve as a nucleus, Coach Honaker whipped a team together which won nine straight games before Glen Roberts and his gang from Emory-Henry turned the tables on it. The Highlanders finished the season with eighteen wins and only seven reversals, a record which enabled them to gain third position in the conference rating. The brightest spot of the season was Maryville's 34-29 win over the champion Milligan Buffaloes.

* * * *

Wrestling came into its own at Maryville this year. The Scotties encountered seven opponents, and exactly seven rival teams were on the losing end of the score. Incidentally, the grunt and groan lads haven't tasted defeat since Coach Bob Thrower took them under his wing; all in all, they have won twenty-two meets. Something for other wrestling teams to shoot at, eh?

* * * *

Although our baseball team wasn't anything to write home about, we managed to win—O well, we won't go in to the box scores. Anyway we knocked the loop-leading L. M. U. team into a tie with East Tennessee Teachers by trouncing them soundly in a double-header to end our season in a blaze (small blaze) of glory.

* * * *

The old Tennessee jinx kept us from having an unblemished record in track. The Vols eked out a 63-54 win to mar our track page in the ole record book. The Highlanders ran true to form to take Emory-Henry and L.M.U. into camp with ease. The Scots also took part in the state meet and carried away second place laurels.

* * * *

Tennis and swimming also enjoyed successful seasons under the guiding hand of Coach Fischbach. George has worked wonders with his teams this year and has aided greatly in bringing these teams to the front. With the addition of golf to the physical training schedule, and the growing interest in golf on the Hill, Maryville should blossom forth with a golf team in the near future.

* * * *

There it is in a nutshell. So we see old dame fortune isn't so cruel after all, All in all, we can truthfully say that Maryville enjoyed a successful season in athletics.

* * * *

Maryville's Coaching Staff

Did you ever stop to ponder over the fact that Maryville has one of the best coaching staffs of any school its size in the south? Well, it really has. I believe in giving credit where credit is due. And I believe the Maryville coaches deserve more credit than they ordinarily receive. My hat is off to them and long may they reign. Wha we need more than anything around here is a revival of the old Maryville spirit that you have heard so much about.

Johnson Wins Tourney

Continuing the steady play which carried her safely through the opening rounds of the Girls' Tennis Tournament, Eleanor Johnson defeated Mary Gillingham in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, in the finals last week.

Gillingham advanced through the semi-finals by defeating Martha McSpadden after three hard-fought sets, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2, but was unable to match the strokes of Johnson in the finals. The other semi-finals match was won by Johnson over Margaret Cooley in straight sets by scores of 6-2 and 6-0.

OBSERVATIONS

We'd better let Mr. Newman's speech of last Thursday morning go unspoken of. We sympathize with Newman, you know, standing there before that crowd of impressive looking next year's seniors. Gee, it must have been a thrill to do that.

—O—

We got a thrill too, wearing the traditional cap and gown: Felt like a Big Shot, left like Beck, or some big person like that. Still, however, nevertheless, we agree with Professor Ellis who says this graduating is a lot of supercial hooey, or whatever it was he said. Just the same it is. We mean the pomp. We'll take the diploma, all right. That's good. It's the $2.00 for a cap and gown that we're speaking of. And then, the cap and gown.

—O—

There's talk, we're told, of doing away with The Highland Echo. This idea has both its good and bad sides. Of course, there's always talk about doing away with everything sometime we reckon, but the talk lingers a little longer about the Echo. Perhaps it's a good idea . . and perhaps it isn't. We wouldn't exchange our experience on the paper for a mere song, nor even three hours of the third year of French, but maybe someone would.

—O—

The third year french! That makes us think of the second year french and Mr. Lagerstedt. . and that makes us think of the first year of french and Miss Wilkinson. And that makes us think of the year of High School french that we had. And, of course, that makes us think of the time before we ever had any french.

And so life wandereth.
And passeth
And goeth . . . forsooth!

We can't write that word without thinking of "sorfost".

—O—

What will we do next year without Lathan and the White Rats. There's Lathan . . another senior. We look on him now as he pores over his many volumes of The Journal of Comparative Psychology". Working for the great cause of the furtherance of cultural value of the White Rat. No? Yes. Lathan has been wearing short heels lately, trying to get down to little gittle Gillenwater's size. She's wearing high ones. You know how it is.

—O—

Lathan says that he oughta get to walk with Lona if Mease walks with Mary Hollis Carter. He says that if Mease hadn't squatted down, he'd never have been able to make the grade. Won't Frank Mease look good walking on his knees commencement morning.

—O—

Funny thing about this column. Sometimes it's fair; sometimes it's worse; sometimes it's better. If we think we've done a good job, we never hear it mentioned, but as sure as we know very well we've done a lot of tasteless writing we get told that we did well. That isn't always true; just usually. We think that last week's column was the best one we've written yet . . . and we know, be assured, that this is one that isn't so good.

—O—

This business has been much fun. Thank you, you seniors; you juniors; you sophomores; you freshmen . . . and you—er—special students; for bearing with us. If this has been fun for you, it has been much more fun for us. For the many digs we've given, and are giving, we're terribly sorry. But we had to have the copy. And so. (For Kirchner's benefit we add "and you shall reap").

Many Improvements Made on Campus and College Buildings

Psychology Lab. Moved To Basement of Thaw

Since the departure of the old students last June, our campus has received more general improvement than it has received in several years. Hard work by a large group of student-help boys under the guidance of Mr. Black and Mr. Brown, and ideal weather conditions have brought about a neat appearance both in the buildings and on the grounds.

Nearly all the buildings have been included in the redecoration work. Anderson Hall has been painted on the outside and the vines have been trimmed close to the walls. On the side, new treads have been put on the stairs and general repair work has been completed. Voorhees Chapel also, has been given a new coat of paint, the book store and postoffice have been worked over inside and out, and the stairs in the Science Hall have been retreaded.

A room in the basement of Thaw Hall, directly beneath the Y. W. C. A. rooms, has been made ready for the psychology department to use for raising and experimenting with white rats. Above the Y. W. C. A. rooms, the Home Economiics practice room has been converted into a women's dormitory.

Each of the dormitories has come in for its share of the improvements. All of the rooms in Memorial have been redecorated, with new furniture having been installed in some cases and all the old furniture remodeled. About twenty-five rooms have been redecorated in Baldwin and eighteen or twenty in Pearsons. The Y. W. C. A. store has been moved from the third

Literary Societies Welcome New Studénts

Bainonian

You probably already know how truly welcome you are to Maryville. Now that you are getting settled and beginning to make friends, Bainonian wants to wish you all the happiness that college can hold in store for you.

You came to Maryville with ambitions and dreams to be realized. Bainonian will help you to attain them whether in the field of music, art, dramatics, literature, sports, or in just good fellowship. Above all, we offer you—friends.

Sincerely,
Lorena May Dunlap.

Athenian

Geetings, old and new men!

We hope you have had a pleasant summer, and that you are ready to join us in our weekly conclaves. One of Athenian's foremost objectives for this year is the building up of an excellent attendance record. Let every old member resolve that he will help us to strive for this objective.

New men, we do not mean to force Athenian membership upon you. We suggest that you attend the meetings of both societies, select the one that more nearly expresses your idea of fellowship and purpose in college, and apply for membership.

Wishing you the best of success for the coming year, I remain

Bryan Payne,
President of Athenian.

To Those Who Have Come

My! You have descended upon us in overwhelming numbers! We have hardly known where to find sleeping quarters for so many. And yet we have wished to have you stay. Some of you already possess our friendship and confidence; others have come for the first time, but we have examined your credentials and your statements of purpose with interest and care and have been persuaded of your ability, character, and sincerity.

May every one of us who takes part in the life and work of Maryville College during her one hundred and sixteenth year be glad we chose Maryville and that Maryville chose us. Hearty, unselfish co-operation will make it so.

RALPH WALDO LLOYD

Faculty Reception To Be Held Monday

The Faculty Reception this year will be on Monday night at 8:00 o'clock on the lawn between Pearson's and Thaw except that in case of inclement weather it will be in the Alumni Gymnasium. All new and old students alike are cordially invited to be present not only to meet the Faculty but also to become acquainted with one another.

Y. W. C. A.

Dear New Girls:

Now that you are actually here you are yourself a part of Maryville and we hope you will increasingly make Maryville a part of you. We do not claim that you have reached paradise but you can make it the scene of many happy days.

Our Y. W. C. A. is yours now too. You will find that it is one of the organizations on the campus that seeks to add to the beauty and usefulness of your life by touching every part of campus life with the Christian spirit. The sharing of this experience is what we invite you to try with us.

We're glad you're here and you can know we mean that because we are equally glad to be here with you!

Sincerely,
Dottie Nethery.

Y. Cabinets Sponsor Welcome Program

Following the Retreat, the Y. W. and Y. M. have been busily engaged in an extensive welcome program for Maryville's newcomers. At the early part of the week, representatives from the Y. W. and from the Y. M. were stationed at the transportation buildings to greet the new students and to advise them regarding the college. Similar information desks were to be found at places accessible and advantageous for those arriving in automobiles.

Also through the "big sister" movement, in which each new girl is given into the care of an older student, the Y. W. has endeavored to create a friendly atmosphere and to offer assistance to the "little sisters" in becoming accustomed to college life.

On Tuesday evening, September 11, the big sisters sponsored a progressive party for their little sistets.

DR. HUNTER'S GREETING

It's a strange sort of sensation to have prowled about a practically deserted campus for three months and then suddenly one morning to find it teeming with eight hundred very lively representatives of the species: COLLEGE STUDENT. It's a strange sensation and, in some respects, a bewildering one, but altogether a most gratifying one. From the point of view of the Dean's office, which will get lazy students if they don't watch out, and will reward good students by expecting them to be better, and will be generally troublesome by the imposing of sundry scholastic checks and balances, it's good to see the old students back, for the Dean knows enough about them to know they're worthy prey, and as for having 325 nice tender young freshmen to feed upon, what Dean would not bid them welcome?

Edwin R. Hunter, Dean.

Annual Y. Retreat Held At Montvale Sept. 8, 9, and 10

Fifty Students Attend Conference

Returning to the original scene of joint Y. M.-Y. W. Retreats, the two groups convened at Montvale Springs, September 8, 9, 10, for the annual conference. It has been a practice since 1922 to set aside the week-end preceding the opening of school for inspiration and consideration of the year's work. Members from the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. cabinets and many Nu Gamma leaders made up the group.

The theme for the Retreat was stated in the words, "Seek Christ for in Him we live", which is also the year's motto of the Y. M. C. A. All the meetings turned about that central point and were directed toward the bettering of the two organizations and their individual members.

The opening devotional service, led by the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, was concerned with the seeking of Christ and the means of finding Him. Grace Proffitt, Eleanor Johnson, and Fern Metzger spoke on three phases of that subject. The stress was on the all-importance of making the search for Christ an experience in the lives of every person concerned in the Y program. The evening was closed with a social hour and group singing.

A sunrise service began the pro-

Mother-Goose Party For New Girls Tonight

The plans for the opening week of the Y.W.C.A. will culminate in a Mother Goose kid party to be held on Pearsons' lawn on Saturday evening at eight o'clock.

The grounds will be decorated to take the guests back to their childhood and to the romantic land of Mother Goose. The girls are invited to attend dressed either as children or as favorite fairytale characters.

Y. M. C. A.

Dear Friends:

The Y. is glad to welcome all the old students back to the Hill, and hopes that the Y. will mean more to each of you this year than ever before.

To the new students, the Y. welcomes you and pomises to help you to enjoy good clean fellowship on our campus.

The Y. at Maryville is a live-wire organization and seeks to serve you in every way possible, not limiting its activities to strictly religious matters. The Y. invites you to enter whole-heartedly into its activities. Meet with us each Sunday afternoon in Bartlett Hall.

The Y. asks your cooperation in helping every person on College Hill to live a clean life in Christ Jesus.

Sincerely,
Earle W. Crawford.

Y.M.C.A. Pow-Wow In College Wood Tonight

The College Woods will be the scene of the Annual YMCA Pow-Wow tonight. The Pow-Wow is intended for both old and new students so every fellow on the Hill is urged to attend.

A short, snappy program has been arranged by the Y. M. Fellowship Directors. There will be skits, and vocal and instrumental music. Athletic team captains and some faculty members will be introduced to the new men. The Pow-Wow will close with school songs and yells, and, of course, watermelon. And there's enough for all.

All those attending will meet in front of Bartlett Hall, the Y. Building at 7:30.

VESPERS

At the first regular vesper service of the school year Dr. Stevenson will preach on "The Life that is Strong".

Changes on Faculty And Administrative Staff Made For Year

Death of Miss Clemens Shocks Old Students

President Lloyd reports the following changes in the faculty and staff.

The position of Registrar, made vacant by the death of Miss Anna J. Jones last spring has not yet been permanently filled, but Mrs. Ruth Weese Marston, who was Miss Jones' assistant for several years, has been serving in that office and will continue for a short time this fall.

During the summer the faculty suffered another loss through the death of Miss Alice Isabella Clemens who graduated from Maryville College in 1908, was Associate Professor of English in the College for eleven years, and a teacher of college and preparatory subjects for fourteen years, making her total teaching service at Maryville twenty five years.

Mrs. Jane Bancroft Smith Alexander, for thirty-three years a teacher at Maryville retired from active teaching at last commencement time when public recognition was given to her remarkable career.

Miss Edith E. Hunt, who served as manager and dietitian of the dining-hall from last January to June, was married on June 16 to Mr. L. O. Colebank and is making her residence in Jackson, Tennessee.

Three members of the faculty are on leave of absence for graduate study; V. M. Queener, Associate Professor of History, is to study at the University of Indiana; Miss Meiselwitz, Associate Professor of Home Economics, is at the University of Wisconsin; and Miss Car-

Theta Epsilon

Happy New Year! That hardly sounds apropos, you may think, but if you do not count the years from fall to fall, or perhaps more exactly from fall to spring, you soon will. Theta Epsilon is very anxious for you to have a successful year, whether you are an old girl or a new one. She can be a real help to you and takes this opporunity of extending her greetings to you. I am wishing you much luck on Theta's behalf.

Alpha Sigma

To the incoming student body we of Alpha Sigma extend greeting; to you new men on the Hill we open our ranks and invite you to become our comrades and friends. Ours is an organization in which you may make good friends of your school fellows while you enjoy the weekly programs. Moreover, we offer the quasi-Bohemian atmosphere of a group which enjoys the music, literature and other entertainment presented by fellow and sister students. We invite you to visit us, take part in our programs, and become with us, Alpha Sigma men.

Sincerely,
Louis Krainoock, President.

THE STAFF

The Highland Echo has as its two main purposes, the publishing of events and items of particular interest that occur on the Hill and the expressing or exchanging of student opinion.

The Highland Echo Staff is composed of students interested in journalism and capable in the art of newspaper writing. Selection of the ten or twelve freshmen apprentices is made on a competitive basis. Of these apprentices six, having proved their ability and dependability, remain as sophomore cubs. From these cubs only three or four serve as junior associate editors or staff editors. The objective of the careful method employed in selecting the members of the Highland Echo Staff is to secure the best to be obtained along journalistic lines.

The Staff endeavors to express student opinion. Anyone not a member of the staff, however, may express himself on campus problems through the medium of the Echo provided that his letter to the Echo's Forum bear his own and not a fictitious signature. In view of the fact that a college is often judged by its publications and that the Highland Echo is exchanged with other college publications airing of "dirty linen" will not e encouraged.

floor of Pearsons to the first floor, opposite the lobby, a much better location. Six tables have been added in the dining room, making a total of forty-six.

Approximately thirty-five rooms have been redecorated in Carnegie, and the stairs have been retreaded where necessary. New fixtures have been installed in the basement baths and a private bath has been added to the guest room. The suite occupied by Professor Howell last year is now occupied by students.

The interior and the exterior of Lamar Hospital have been painted and the top floor has been made into a temporary men's dormitory. Several rooms in Bartlett Hall have been turned over to other students as well as to the "Y" officers.

The grounds have been kept in good condition by the exceptionally good season and by constant care. The grass on the lawns has been kept down with a new horse-drawn lawn mower, and the golf course and football field are in the best condition in several years. The varsity tennis courts behind Memorial Hall have been well-kept.

The botanical gardens have been completed in the college woods, and the amphitheater has been enlarged and beautified with rustic bridges and walks.

An effort is being made to get a dairy barn on the college farm for the herd of Holstein cows.

In addition to the large amount of work done on the campus, seven residences owned by the college were painted and repaired by the boys employed in the student-help department.

gram of Sunday activities. The Y. M. C. A. cabinet was in charge. The president, Earle Crawford, gave a challenging and vigorous speech in the interests of a more Christian Maryville College, pointing out particular opportunities for increasing the Christian emphasis. Following breakfast the two cabinets and the Nu Gamma leaders convened for separate meetings. The Y. W. C. A. and the Nu Gamma leaders meeting together for a period heard reports from the Blue Ridge conference given by our two delegates, Eleanor Johnson and Grace Proffitt. One of the other high points of the morning session was a talk by Miss Bassett on the history of the Maryville Y. W. Association from its founding in 1888 to the present. The origin of many of the present Y. activities such as May Day, worship services in the dormitories, Nu Gamma, and the Big Sister movement were of especial interest. Since no record has ever been made before, Miss Bassett's notes are valuable. Miss Jessie Johnson, assisted in the Nu Gamma plans and met with the leaders on Sunday morning.

At the Sunday afternoon meeting Dr. Lloyd spoke on "The Sacredness of Personality", suggesting that Jesus had a high regard for the inherent worth of every person.

Miss Clemmie Henry addressed the group at the vesper service on the words, "Seek Christ, live". Seeking Him earnestly and not half-heartedly was one of the thoughts expressed. Christ's attractiveness received a strong emphasis and His fitness for guiding us in right living. Oudoor singing of old familiar hymns concluded the day. Mr. Black and Mr. Sam Franklin spent Sunday afternoon and evening at the Retreat.

On Monday morning definite plans were made for welcoming the new students. The last service was at one o'clock, an impressive outdoor meeting planned by the Nu Gamma chairman, Tess Frey, and her leaders. To the very last the keyote was "Seek Christ".

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Hello. This is National Beginning Week. All of the worrying kind, most of whom never go near the striped field, are beginning to talk about that empty fullback position, and the fact that there are no kickers. Also, this is about the time when all the college football teams in the country are beginning to look like sure conference champs. Too, practically all of last year's frosh who weren't coming back are actually beginning to like the place. And so it must be time for your scribe to cast his lot with the rest of the commoners, lay down his life of ease, rake the summer dust off the typewriter with one fell sweep, and do a 'Bob Murphy'.

* * * *

A Murphy Without The Weeps

But in order to do a Bob Murphy one must have some sort of periodical rendezvous with pathos, must be able to sense sadness in a flicker's twitter, and above all, must be of an apologetic nature. After all, we think this will not be a Bob Murphy, for where is there any crying to be done about Highlander grid prospects for this year? With a probable line-average of 180 pounds to the man, the gridders, not to mention Coaches Honaker and Thrower and hundreds of other backers in the city, are carrying high hopes for one of those Highlander years.

GAMBLE WRESTLES

To Ten-Minute Draw

Mose Gamble, Highlander heavyweight grappler, unofficially began his celebrated pachydermic tactics in Maryville at the fair last Thursday night when he fought to a draw with one of the 'circus strong men' in a ten minute, few-holds barred match.

Buck Millsaps, another Scot wrestler, was scheduled to grapple with a 'house man', but, because of slight injuries received in football practice earlier in the day, was unable to be present for the match.

It Aint What It Used To Be

Whatever it is, this season's edition of the Highlander football team will show an almost complete reversal of the weak spots. Last year the machine presented a powerful, tho not so heavy, backfield behind a line-average fully 12 pounds less than that which this season will probably bring forth. At present, the prospective backfield is even lighter, but with lots of drive and speed. And all that talk about there being no made-to-order fullback seems to be true.

* * * *

Odds'n Ends

Someone was saying the other day that John Henry, the Henry of Highlander basketball fame, is carrying his old pass-catching tactics over into football practice, and that he's fast, etc. Sounds like good flank-material to this corner. .

Archie Pieper, who needs no introduction, has no place on his diet for those energizing ovals called eggs. As a matter of fact, he has not eaten an egg for seven years. .

This little competition going on between Bailey and a freshman by the name of Johnson for first string center is becoming more interesting every day. We suspect that Bailey has the inside track. . .

The Talmages have a way of coming to the rescue when it comes to a lack of prospects for a tennis team. John no sooner leaves than he sends his young brother, who has some very nice strokes indeed. .

George Fischbach has hopes of introducing Maryville's new golf team some time next spring. . . .

Big Jack Atkins, one of the greatest ends the local gridiron has ever seen, will be coaching all athletics at the high school in Louisa, Kentucky this year. . .

Steve Boretsky, of the Scottdale Boretsky's, can be found practically every day out on the practice field, dressed in the usual moleskins, punting or passing as of old. Boretsky had never punted a football until he came to Maryville five years ago. . . .

If you want to be in on the latest angles of the local athletic situation, stick around the Y. M. C. A. store in Bartlett. And incidentally, Maggie Magee has about everything to make you feel at home. . .

ROSTER REVEALS TWELVE LETTERMEN

Atchison, Millsaps Injured In Scrimmage Thursday

With Coaches Honaker and Thrower, assisted by Steve Boretsky, former Scot halfback, sending the squad thru stiff daily paces, the Highlanders are fast rounding into shape for their opening battle with Chet Wynn's Kentucky Wildcats next Saturday at Lexington.

A check of Manager Huffstetler's roster reveals that there are twelve lettermen in the fold. Lettermen returning are: Gamble, Holloway, Millsaps, and Richardson, tackles; Atchison, Holiday, and Pieper, guards; Bailey, center; Kalman, end; Blazer, Krainock, and Loessberg, backs.

The return of two lettermen, Jim Holloway and "Smiley" Richardson, who were not in school last year, has added greatly to the strength of the Highlanders. Richardson, who has made two letters at end, is likely to be shifted to tackle this year. Holloway, who can play either guard or tackle, reported with an injured back, and it has not been determined whether he will be able to play or not.

The first scrimmage of the season was dished out to the team Thursday, and with it came the old injury jinx. "Butter" Atchison and "Buck" Millsaps were the victims, but their injuries being only slight, both will be back in the thick of the fight soon.

One line was composed of Gray and Kalman, ends; Gamble and Proffitt, tackles; Pieper and Holiday, guards; and Johnson, T.M.I. boy at center. The backfield of this team was composed of Blazer at quarter; Coker and Loessberg at halves; and Henry running at full back. The other team had Alexander and Coulter at ends; Cochrane and Richardson at tackles; Scull and Marinaro at the guard posts; and Bailey at center. The backfield being Shields, quarter; Krainock and Overly, halves; and Renfro, full.

Another backfield which functioned well was composed of Cross, quarter; Crawford and Savitski, halves, and Tippins, full. Hullette, Brittain, C. Evers, also saw service in the backfield, while Kosloski, Corns, Ross, Atchison, and Millsaps came in for their share of the work in the line.

OFF TO SCHOOL

What an important occasion—this start of a new year

And we wish to take this opportunity to welcome you to Maryville and to wish you a full measure of the neighborly good will and friendship we know you will find here. Personally we like to know the students in our College and would appreciate the pleasure of meeting you. Come in and make yourself at home. We are just folks.

AN IMPORTANT DEPARTMENT—

Knowing that good "eats" are dear to the heart of the collegian, we are still living up to our reputation of serving the best Sandwiches in town. Big ones, plenty of filling, no skimping on lettuce and mayonaise.

We have also improved our Soda Department by installing an ANDIS SPEED WHIP mixer—and if you ever try a SPEED WHIP MALTED MILK you'll never again be satisfied with the ordinary kind.

And that delicious FRUIT SALAD—when they tell us that they remember us all summer by our fruit salad it is SOME salad— always tastes like more.

"WOMAN'S SKIN

today is 75 percent of her good looks", says a student of beauty culture. Personally we think the percent is just a bit high—60 percent being nearer the mark.

However, our Cosmetic Department is fully equipped to supply your needs. Such friends as Max Factor, Yardley, Jean Nolan, Garden Court and others are stocked and the department is in charge of Mrs. Martha Tarvin, an expert cosmetician. Consult Mrs. Tarvin at any time as to your cosmetic needs.

We have a good Drug Store—

WE KNOW IT—

WE WANT YOU TO KNOW IT—

We stock everything sold by a modern, up-to-date drug store, space here not permitting us to enumerate specific items. Frankly we want you to make the CITY your drug store home in Maryville and you can bet we'll do our best to make you feel at home.

roll, Associate Professor of Biology, is at Duke University. It is likely that Mr. Queener and Miss Meiselwitz will be absent all this year; Miss Carroll hopes to complete her work for the doctorate by mid-year.

Mrs. Lois Davis Huber, teacher of Piano in the Music Department, gave up her work at the end of last year.

Miss Josephine R. Hunter of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, who was Head of Baldwin Hall two years ago but was on leave of absence last year, has returned and is serving as Head of Memorial Hall. Miss Hunter received the degrees of B. A. from Cornell University and M.A. from the University of Pittsburgh.

The position of Associate Professor of Economics, created some time ago by the Directors of the College, has been filled by the appointment of Dr. Claude A. Campbell. Dr. Campbell is a native of West Tennessee and holds the B.S. degree from the Middle Tennessee State Teachers College, the M.A. degree from George Peabody College for Teachers, and the Ph. D. degree from Vanderbilt Uuniversity. Mrs. Campbell also holds the master's degree from Vanderbilt University. Dr. Campbell's special work has been in Economics, Political Science, and History. Prior to entering upon college teaching he had four years' experience as elementary and high-school principal; he held a teaching fellowship at Vanderbilt University for two years, and for the past four years has been instructor at the University of Alabama and had been reappointed to this position for the coming year.

During Professor Queener's absence his work is to be carried by Dr. W. Neil Franklin. Dr. Franklin holds the degree of B. A. from the University of Tennessee, and the degrees of M.A. and Ph.D. from Princeton University. He was for four years Associate Professor at the Southern Methodist University and has taught several years at the University of Tennessee Summer School.

During Miss Meiselwitz's absence her work in Home Economics is to be carried by Miss Mary Rachel Armstrong of Knoxville, Tennessee. Miss Armstrong received her B.S. and M.S. degrees from the University of Tennessee. Miss Armstrong comes to Maryville from the Austin Peay Teachers College at Clarksville, Tennessee, where she taught until the close of the summer school this year. She was formerly a teacher at Washington College, Tennessee. In addition to her work as Associate Professor in Home Economics Miss Armstrong is to serve as Assistant to the Head of Memorial Hall.

Mrs. Bessie Henry Olin of Maryville, who for several years prior to 1932 was Associate Professor of Biology, is serving in that same capacity during the absence of Miss Carroll. Mrs. Olin holds the degrees of B.A. from Maryville College and M. A. from the University of Illinois.

Miss Margaret Suzanna Ware of Forest City, North Carolina, has been appointed manager and dietitian of the dining-hall to fill the vacacy caused by the resignation of Miss Hunt. Miss Ware is a graduate of the Asheville Normal School, Asheville, North Carolina, specializing in dietetics and has done graduate work in dietetics and dining-room management at the University of New York. For the past eight years she has been dietitian at the Dorland-Bell School, Hot Springs, North Carolina, and has served also as dietitian at the large summer session of the Asheville Normal School.

Miss Viola Mae Lightfoot of the Class of 1934 who has been a student assistant in the Registrar's Office for several years has been appointed to a permanent position in that office.

Mrs. Marguerite Sullinger Walker of Maryville, former teacher of Piano in the College, is assisting in that same capacity again this year. She is a graduate of Maryville College and of the Music Department of the College and continued her professional training at the American Conservatory of Music, Chicago.

Two recent Maryville graduates are to serve as part-time assistants; Miss Mabel Nathalia Wright of Maryville, who graduated in the Class of 1933, is to teach two classes in English; Mrs. Ruby Miller Griffitts of Maryville, of the Class of 1932, is to teach one class in Mathematics.

Death Of Director Occurs During Summer

Sudden Death of Judge Gamble Shocks Community

The College suffered a severe loss during the summer in the death of one of its Directors, Judge Moses Houston Gamble, at Maryville on August 18. This is the fourth death in the Directorate during the past two years, the other losses being Rev. Dr. Frank H. Marston of Cincinnati, Rev. Dr. Calvin A. Duncan of Arizona, Rev. Dr. W. R. Dawson of Knoxville.

Judge Gamble died suddenly from a heart attack when sitting on his front porch. He had been ill for some months, but was improved and his death came as a great shock.

Judge Gamble was the father of Miss Helen R. Gamble of our Faculty, and of Moses H. Gamble, Jr., of the junior class. Others of his children have graduated in previous years. He was one of the most valued Directors of the College, having served on the Board for twenty-four years. He received three degrees at the hands of the College: the B.A. degree in 1905, the M.A. dgree in 1908, and the LL.D. degree in 1934.

The Highland Echo Staff wishes to announce that competitive try-outs for freshman aprentices to serve on the Editorial Staff of the Echo will be carried out during the next three or four weeks in conjunction with the English Department.

Competitive try-outs for the vacancy occurring on the Sophomore Cub section of the Echo Staff will be the same in every respect as those held for freshman. Applications, however, should be handed in to the Editor.

Bainonian Closes Its Rush Week With Lawn Party Tonight

Tea And Informal Party Included In Rush Week Program

Tonight at 8:30 on Pearson's Lawn the Bainonian Society will present its Opening Night Program. This is the third function that has been planned for the new girls, and continues the theme of entertainment on an old southern plantation.

On Tuesday afternoon nearly two hundred girls attended the Colonial Travel Tea which began at "Stage Coach Inn" in Baldwin parlors. From there the girls of each group were directed to the shop of "Mademoiselle Modiste" in the Y. W. C. A. reading rooms where Elizabeth Peterson and Dorothy Nethery presented a number of Bainonian girls as models in an old-fashioned style shop. Some of the dresses modelled were over one hundred years old, and all of them were interesting because of the period they represented and their unusual designing.

The second part of the tea was at the home of Lois Brown, and represented a scene on a southern plantation. Lois Brown and Ruth Proffitt had charge of the negro program which included a negro reading by Ruth Clopton, tap dancing by Violet Webb accompanied by Kathryn Simmons, and three negro songs by Sam Waid, Robert Lodwick, David McArthur and Donnell McArthur. The people on the program were dressed as negroes and negro dolls were presented as favor-

The last stop of the tea, called the "Bainonian Manor", was at the home of Grace Proffitt. Lorena May Dunlap and Grace Proffitt presented Marie Carlson who sang two songs accompanied by Joyce Fields, a reading by Ellen Hitch, and a tea dance by Florine Stephens, Mary Earl Walker, Doris Waldrep, and

SEPTEMBER SKETCHES

September 13, 1934!

Arkansas—

A young woman fumbled among papers, sorting them and arranging them in neat piles beside her typewriter. What time was it? 8:10—Only ten minutes of the long day gone. 8:10. September 13.

Her fingers raced over the typewriter keys. The staccato noise of the machine faded away and in the girl's ears there was the sound of many voices singing. Before her eyes rose stained glass windows. Someone nudged her elbow—her room mate whispering, "Miriam's got a new haircut, and isn't that a darling suit Louise has on?"

The head stenographer was touching her elbow. Those letters must be done by noon, Miss ——.

Bare white walls, dusty desks, small squares of gray light let in unwillingly by dirty window panes, rasping voice of a man in the next room dictating, steady click of machines.—

8:15. Only five minutes more gone! Had it only been three months since she graduated from college?

Florida—

A boy with skin so bronze the gods might envy him stepped cautiously over the newly scrubbed and still dangerously wet tile floors of a small and unpretentious drug store. Mechanically his fingers concocted two 'dopes' for the early morning customers.

"Whena ya leavin?"

"T'night."

"Classes still several days off, arent they?"

"Yes, but football practice starts earlier. Gotta get in trim."

They drifted out. The boy ducked their glasses in the murky cleansing water, dried them indifferently. September 13. Honaker's men must be well started by now. Wonder what new material would be in.

"Coc with lime, please."

He jerked shiny knobs. Hang! Well, college couldn't go on forever.

: : : : :

Michigan—

A girl stood at a sink, swishing a dish rag about lukewarm soapless dishwater. Her forehead was drawn into that kind of knot that sometimes controls the stinging sensation in one's eyes. Her mother was reading gay bits from a letter.

"I think it's great here. Everyone is so nice to the new people. I didn't know this was what being a freshman was like. And why don't we have mountains in Michigan! I think it's a shame sister had to graduate just before I came."

The gril's shoulders drooped perceptibly. Today there would be classes, next week society openings.—To think that four years ago she had gone with impatience, hoping the four years would fly so she could be free to do those important things she planned to do with her life. They had flown!

She went on washing dishes.

: : : : :

Tennessee—

Behind the desk of a classroom a girl stood, frowning. Her gaze, unseeing, was directed toward distant mountains wrapped in clouds.

The week had been a steady crescendo of irritability. To teach these whose adolescence fairly screamed at one that words were things of beauty to be used with utmost

SPARE TIME

A very vivid remembrance from freshman days is the gist of an Orientation speech by the Dean of the College. "Use the fringes of time" was the Dean's main point. "Don't waste the ten or fifteen minutes that elapse between breakfast and chapel; don't waste the other odd intervals that occur during the course of a day; make use of your spare time", were some reiterated statements.

The aptness of the remarks becomes apparent when we consider that during these opening days of school many fringes have been left untouched. Many still may be left untouched if one develops undesirable habits so early as this in the school year.

To use the fringes of time does not mean, however, that one should always be occupied. The habit may develop into preoccupation, a state which does not lend itself to the rounding out of college life which includes the making and keeping of friends.

Many conflicting ideas have arisen as to the use of spare time. To read a newspaper, or some other instructive literature is the most beneficial and quickest method of occupation while traveling from one to another section of a city. In order to observe humanity, or to rest the eyes, one should journey without referring to some periodical assert some writers on this same subject.

A woman I know emphatically derides one of her acquaintances who brings her crocheting or knitting to bridge club in order that she may not be idle while she is "dummy". "I just hate to waste time," smiles the "dummy" complacently. "She can't be still a moment," snorts my friend disgustedly.

The old adage, "a time and place for everything", proves useful in the discrimination of when and where to make use of the fringes of time. The use of spare time can determine the success or failure of a college education.

Our Southern Highlanders by Horace Kephart. Macmillan Co., 1926

With the Great Smokies practically here at our doorstep there may be more than a few Maryville students who would welcome the chance to acquaint themselves, at second hand, at least, with this part of the country. For their benefit the library has to offer Our Southern Highlanders, written by a man named Kephart, an outdoor man who spent eighteen years among the mountaineers of chiefly North Carolina and Tennessee.

A hasty glance at the contents makes clear to the reader that Our Southern Highlanders is not a consecutive account of Mr. Kephart's experiences, which are adventuresome without being hair-raising. His book embraces such illuminating subjects as moonshining, bear-hunting, feuds, mountain dialect, and much about the mountain people themselves. One can scarcely imagine a discussion of these interesting topics being anything but readable, especially when enlivened by genuinely funny anecdotes and true stories about the killing of Hal Rose and The Snake-Stick Man. Mr. Kephart had the knack of making himself agreeable to even moonshiners' wives, which is another way of saying that he knew how to tend to his own business without resenting the curiosity of one and all as to his own affairs.

The ordinary reader cannot help but feel that he might well have omitted a rather tedious chapter dealing with the whiskey tax in early times and the subsequent rise of moonshining, even though one can applaud his desire to be fair to the moonshiner. As history it is very acceptable, but hardly entertaining.

However, if Mr. Kephart's phrases describing the Smokies as "an Eden still unpeopled and unspoiled" with their "undulations like ocean swells" have any powers of suggestion for you, you will enjoy making the acquaintance of Our Southern Highlanders.

care! To erase those bared looks when one mentioned the classics great men through the ages had loved.

Her eyes, wandering to her desk, fel on a descriptive theme "Incadent out of the Silvar War". Incredibitable, but there it was!

"Backward, turn backward, time in thy flight," squeaked a facetious high school voice in the hall. A year ago, two years ago, three, four! Dear, she was getting sentimental.

A racious bell released bedlam in the halls. Soon there were people before her, staring blankly, disinterestedly. Not so many miles distant classrooms were filling. Shakespeare, Contemporary Drama, American Lit.—

She bit her lip. "Today," she said, in a monotonous voice, "we take up the subject substantive," Maryville!

Several hundred voices raised in song. New faces looked a trifle awed. One freshman whispered to another. "That's the Alma Mater, isn't it?"

"Yes. My dad told me things happened to you even the first time you heard your Alma Mater, and they do."

An instant later it was over and the chatter of many voices mingled with the invigorating strains of martial music. Soon the chapel was empty and the campus was gay with bright colors. Cheery greetings filled the air.

A girl rushed toward Pearsons. She just couldn't remember everything.

The editor tried to listen to the conversation about her and at the same time come to a conclusion as to whether that feature from last year's grad would arrive in time to be printed.

One senior remarked to another, "Only nine more months of this for us."

"Hush. I hate to think of it."

"Well", as they parted, "at least it will be nine months of maximums."

"Agreed!"

Mary Wilson. Light refreshments were served and each girl was given a miniturre grandfather clock as a favor.

On Thursday afternoon in the College Woods Violet Webb and Tess Frey had charge of an informal party for all old Bainonians who were called mammies and the new girls who were their pickaninnies. A cotton-picking contest was a novel feature of the afternoon's program.

The setting of tonight's program is in an old southern garden where Cecelia Conover as a grandmother shows the pictures in an old album to her granddaughter, Jean Thompson. Each picture is posed by girls in a large frame and each one represents scenes in the older woman's life. The last picture is of Bainonian's president, Lorena May Dunlap. During the posing of the pictures an appropriate song will be sung by Marie Carlson, Calista Palmer or the Bainonian Trio. Elizabeth Kunkel has charge of the program.

The entire week's program of novel entertainments has been directed and planned by Lillian Crawford and Mildred Harris, the program secretaries.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

We, the officers of the Maryville College Young Men's Christian Association, hereby notify all concerned that no one will have the authority to charge goods, service rendered, or the like, to the organization without a written order which must be signed by at least three of the our executive officers; namely,
Earle W. Crawford, Pres.
Hugh Crawford,
Glover Leitch,
Sam Waid.

MARRIAGES

Several marriages of Maryville alumni have been reported during the summer. Arta Grace Hope and Randolph Shields, both of the Class of 1934, were married during the vacation time. Randolph is to attend seminary. Herbert Fuller, of the Class of '34, and Kathleen Turner of Maryville, were married soon after Commencement. On September 11 Elizabeth Duncan and Andrew Newcoer, both of the Class of 1933, were married. Nell Jo Knight of the Class of '34, and George Hoglan, of the Class of '35, were married on the campus on September 8. Elvira Ressler and Soloman A. Bass both of the Class of '35 were married on September 9th.

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

To quote a recent and popular expression: The World Do Move. Things have come to the point where one, who may be attempting to putt a white pellet, golf ball to the golfer, across one of the Maryville Campus Course greens, will no longer need a driver with which to advance to the pin. One may now do it with a mid-iron. The reason for this is that the Bermuda-grass tops of the greens have been shaved off, and a mixture of sand and clay has been added. Hereafter, those great hosts of us who have heretofore stood by the hour beside some magnetic sand trap, thrashing away with a venom and spitting out our vexation in such a manner that the grass never more grows where we have spat, will know at least one comfort emanating from the sand contrivance, and that is that the ball will stick . .. . if it hits.

* * * *

Yeh, We've Heard That One

And while we are on the subject of golf, we have in mind a small story. It seems that a yokel had been to the city, and in the course of his travels had visited the golf links. Upon his return home he voiced his somewhat befuddled conception of the game.

"All I know about it," says he, "are just the words, 'Heck, Tough Luck, Charlie!'"

Of course, this meant nothing to the curious listeners.

Asked to explain further, he continued, "Yeh, that's all. You see, one man would stand out on the grass, put down a little white ball, and hit it with a stick. Then he would say, "Heck". The other fellows would say, "Tough Luck, Charlie."

Comment: Wethinks such a one would be an extraordinarily mild tempered golfer.

On Wilson Field

The addition of Steve Boretsky to the coaching staff of Maryville is a strong one not only because of Steve's wide knowledge of football, but also because of his ability to put a spirit of fight into the team. And this because he has played side by side with most of them, and is idolized by all. . . .

Someone of those men who thought Maryville didn't give them enough reward for their football labor should reconsider, now that plans have been made for the Cincinnati trip. Lee Callaway, speaking at the Pow-Wow, voiced the right spirit when he said, "Maryville men play for the glory" . . . .

This Tippins, who bids fair to become a second 'Steve Boretsky', is a 'not-so-large-but-tough' hombre. The other day, while making a hard end run, he was brought down heavily in his tracks. As the heap of arms and legs loosened a bit, he stuck his head out from under and chattered, "Nice work, boys, nice work.". . . .

It is rumored that Kentucky's backfield will outweigh that of the Highlanders by twenty pounds to the man, but that 180 pound-per line of ours still sounds mighty good to this corner. . . .

Maggie Says

James Herman Magee thinks that this corner has put him on the spot, so much so, in fact, that this corner has just about decided that Maggie is trying to make a liar out of it. Last week we made the suggestion that all those who wanted to be in on the latest sport dope should

BEGIN SCHEDULE TODAY WITH CATS

Blazer, Loessberg, Krainock, Crawford Comprise Starting Backfield; 25 Make Trip

Placing their hopes on one of the most powerful lines and fastest backfields in recent years, the Maryville College Highlanders, twenty-five strong, left yesterday at noon for Lexington, Ketucky, where they will battle Chet Wynne's Kentucky Wildcats this afternoon on Stoll Field in the opening game of the season for both teams.

While the Kentucky Cats, always rated among the best teams in the South, connsider the Scots warm-up opponents, they have not forgotten the bitter scraps of a few years past. Coach Wynne will do all in his power to make an impressive debut as head coach before a large crowd of home-town followers.

Although well aware of the difficult task confronting them, the Scot gridders left in high spirits, glad to be past the first three weeks of drilling, and eager to get into the actual combat. With all but one or two men in top condition, the Scot machine will be able to throw practically its full force into the affray.

Four ends, four tackles, five guards, three centers, three quarterbacks, four halfbacks, and two full backs made the trip. Kalman and Gray, two light, fast men, each weighing about 160 pounds, will take care of the flanks, with Ross, a freshman, and Coulter in reserve. The four tackles stack up with the best to be found anywhere, and should give the Wildcat backs plenty of trouble. Mose Gamble, 202 pounds of cool steadiness, and Cochran, largest man on the squad at 220 pounds, have a slight edge over Buck Millsaps, who will probably see most of the game from the sidelines becuse of a leg injury received last week, and Smiley Richardson, who returned to the Scottie ranks this year after staying out of college a season.

The veteran Butter Atchison, who made the All-Smoky Mountain Conference honor team last fall, will start at one of the guard posts, but may be taken out to keep a knee injury, received in the first scrimmage of the season, from being aggravated. Atchison's running nate will probably be Louis Marinaro, a senior, who has shown steady improvemeent in the scrimmages of ast week. Holaday, Holloway, and Pieper, all lettermen, will share the guard duties with the starters.

Steve Boretsky Joins Coaching Staff

Will Assist In Backfield

An addition of no little strength was made to the Highlander concourse recently when Steve Boretsky, who to old students needs no introduction whatsoever, was retained by the college in the official capacity of assistant backfield coach.

When Steve was graduated from the college last June he took his place in Maryville's football Valhalla as one of the greatest halfbacks ever seen in the local conference, having won that position twice on the Smoky Mountain All-Conference Eleven.

Aside from his expert knowledge of football, Steve is well equipped to assist in the coaching of Basketball, Track and minor sports. However, it is not known whether he will remain here after the football season is over.

HONAKER PLANS CINCINNATI TRIP

Scots Were To Meet Milligan College Buffalos November 3rd.

Final negotiations have been completed between the athletic departments of Maryville College and St. Xavier University, of Cincinnati, Ohio, for the Highlanders to meet the St. X. gridders there on November 3, according to Coach Honaker.

This new contract, which takes the place occupied by the tentative meet with Milligan College on that date, will give the Highlanders two long trips from the fold, the other one being today with the Kentucky Wildcats in Lexington.

Meet Tennessee Wesleyan Friday

The Highlander gridders will open the home season next Friday night when they meet Coach Rube McCray's Tennessee-Wesleyan Bulldogs on Wilson Field at eight o'clock. The Bulldogs boast of one of the strongest teams in years, and are pointing for the Highlanders in what is Wesleyan's opener.

The two teams seem to be about evenly matched, with lines averaging above 180 pounds and with fast backfields. Each year finds the outfits fighting to close scores, with last season's scrap ending before either team could pierce the other's defense.

Stroud Gwynn At Watertown High

Schedule Calls For Meet With Team of Former High School Rival

Maryvillians who remember Stroud Gwynn, former Highlander end, will be interested to know that he is now coaching athletics at Watertown High School, Tenn.

He began his football career at Lebanon, Tenn., a bitter athletic rival of Watertown.

A recent edition of the Knoxville News-Sentinel carried an interesting story, part of which is quoted here.

"Watertown was, and still is, Lebanon's bitterest rival. Gwynn led Lebanon High against Watertown in 1929 and caught a pass early in the game to give his team a 7-to-0 lead. Elvin (Wink) Midgett, then captain of the Watertown team, later broke loose on a long run, tieing Gwynn's one-touchdown lead. The game ended in a tie.

"Lebanon and Watertown meet again this year on Thanksgiving eve.

"On the Watertown bench, directing the destinies of the team, will be Stroud Gwynn, former Lebanon hero. But that's not all.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Dr. Stevenson's Sunday night historical recital of the Stuart kings was the most elaborate, most prolix, most euphuistic bit of conciseness we have heard in a long time. It's ingenuity almost rivaled the Wednesday morning dissertation on vegetables and flowers. Particularly if he had in mind Phil Cory and Cecelia Conover who were sitting side by side on the front row.

KINGS

—:—:—

Small wonder that the weather has been a little chilly at times. A Cloud, a Freeze, a Winter, and a Blizzard have descended upon us all at once.

BRRR!

—:—:—

Our friend Lilliquist, (the freshman who is seeing that things are run right now that he has come) made one mistake the other day. He mistook two junior girls for freshmen, and in his breezy way asked them how they liked their dates. Miss Kunkel had her answer all ready and replied quite non-chalantly, "With sugar on them."

SUGAR

—:—:—

Making curtains, mending shirts and sheets our specialty. Special rates to occupants of Carnegie Hall. No cash payment. Payment may be applied on Lyceum numbers and other colleeg functions. For further information see Evlyn Ann Thomas. Adv.

RATES

Jeanne Greer and Mickie McAlister, that pair who make dormirtory life worth living have turned missionaries, after having enlisted the help of some other sophomore Baldwinites. They were careful to inform all freshmen in the building that cuts were given for failure to attend the morning prayer meetings held in Baldwin parlor. Next morning, doubtless for the first time in history, the parlor rooms wert so crowded that standing room was at a premium. Everyone in the dormitry was there, in fact, except Jeanne and Mickie.

CUTS

For two long years we've wanted a fling at this column. Our predecessor succeeded in airing a goodly number of our short-comings, and our reaction naturally was to indulge in a little backfiring. Not that we felt any malice toward our predecessor, realizing that short-comings are a peculiar but not uncommon phenomenon in the human race; but backfiring, according to our notion, is an interesting pastime. The whole trouble now is that we've forgotten what we wanted to say—and besides, said predecessor has left these parts, anyway.

BACK-FIRING

—:—:—

Now that we have the opportunity, with the usual cussedness of human nature, we aren't so sure we want it. Such columns in college newspapers are notorious, we find, for a number of things, but the general opinion, we discover, is that they are somewhat necessary evils. That being the case, we hope you'll bear with us. We promise not to step on anyone's toes knowingly. If we should, come 'round to us and we'll take our medicine like a man; or better, consider the source and situation, remembering that the writer of this column is duty-bound not to say anything, but to fill up space.

CUSSEDNESS

Mr. Krainock got a dose of his own medicine the other day. He walked up to Miss Nick at an information desk and asked her the way to Memorial where he was told he had been assigned a room. Miss Nick, condescendingly informed brother Louis that freshman boys generally roomed in Carnegie. Mr. Krainock didn't mind until he perceived that Miss Nick really didn't recognize him—and he a Senior! The idea of a junior, apparently capable of dispensing information, and not knowing L. Krainock! Well, some things passeth all understanding.

—:—:—

It is customary, we believe, to remark about this time of year that the freshman girls are the fairest yet.

THREE

We've seen a goodly number of feminine faces easy to look upon, but what is a little stranger, we've decided that the ladies have no monopoly on good looks. We've seen at least three right handsome men since we came. Now don't ask us which three.

—:—:—

Perhaps one was the freshman boy who was found wandering around on the second floor of Baldwin Hall Tuesday night in search of the party being given that night. He must have sensed that something was not quite as it should be for he asked if the party was a hen-party.

HEN-PARTY

—:—:—

A number of things happened at the Y Retreat. For instance, Dottie and Hugh took a special course in astronomy. It is hoped that their extensive study of the stars will prove beneficial to both.

(STARS)?

Of general interest, was Miss Bassett's history of the Y. W. C. A. here One digression brought light on a matter: that is, why that dusty, or muddy (depending upon the weather) approach to High Street is called the corduroy. The answer runs in this wise: In the dear dead days of 1900 and thereabout, the matron of Baldwin Hall escorted church-going minded young ladies two by two to church in town, there being no Chapel and evening vesper services then. There was on fill between what is now the railroad and High Street. Futhermore, the mud created something of a problem for those precise young ladies until someone conceived the idea of placing logs down side by side all along the way. The appearance of the walk then made the corduroy a not unnatural consequence.

Have you seen George Deebel's nose? We've heard various and sundry rumors, but George swears that it got mixed up with the glass in a car door and that the glass got broken. Now, the only thing clear about that is the glass and we're not right sure about that. There are yet to be explained, well, several things.

Professor Lagerstedt attended the German School of Middlebury College in Bristol, Vermont. Later on he visited at the seashore.

Professor Smith was in Virginia, Kentucky, Washington, D. C., and Chicago during the summer.

Miss Johnson spent the month of June in Florida; and in August she went on a motor trip with Miss Clemmie Henry and some other teachers.

Mr. Thrower visited at his home in Texas during the first part of vacation.

Mr. Fischbach worked at a Y. M. C. A. boys' camp in Washington, D. C.

Dr. and Mrs. Stevenson took a motor trip through various parts of the country during the summer. They drove along the Atlantic Coast to Newport, Bar Harbor, and New Brunswick. They then went over to Nova Scotia to the Bay of Fundy where they witnessed the Bore tide coming in. This tide is very interesting as it comes in sixty feet and can actually be seen coming in. After they had traveled around the peninsula of Gaspe on the gulf of the St. Lawrence, they traveled to Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, and then across Ontario to Port Huron in The U. S. On their way home they visited Fort Dearborn in Illinois and the Serpent Mound near Hillsboro, Ohio.

Cross-Country Time

The local athletic situation is just about to get around to the point where it can once more award the cross-country cup to Stuart Sneddecker. No definite plans have been made yet as to the manner in which it shall be presented him, but time will find a way. And, too, there is talk of a cross-country team, to say nothing of a proposed triangle meet this fall with the University of Tennessee.

Odds'n Ends

Highlanders who will be in the backfield when the game is called this afternoon are Krainock, Blazer, Loessberg, and Crawford, all light, but fast. . .

Interesting, this business of all the track men getting on the football team. . . .

We'd pay a pretty penny to be sitting on the fifty-yard line at Stoll Field in Lexington today, if only to watch Jim Cochrane smear a couple of Wildcats with his 230 pounds.

Football

Bailey will get the call at center, with Johnson, a rangy 185-pound freshman, and Evers, another first year man who is developing rapidly, ready to step in if necessary.

The starting backfield, which includes three 160 pounders and one 150 pounder, will consist of Blazer at quarter, Loessberg and Krainock at halves, and Crawford at full. Tippins, a very promising yearling, and Hulette will be on hand to relieve Loessberg and Krainock, while Shields and Burris will get a chance at the signal-calling post, and Henry will alternate with Crawford at full.

The Scottie line, which averages 180 pounds, will be outweighed on an average of over ten pounds per man. The Kentucky backs will outweigh the Highlander ball-carriers by approximately twenty pounds to the man. Although not expecting a victory, the Scots will make up what they lack in size with fight.

Student Volunteer Board Reorganized

Representative Staff To Reflect Student Opinion

In keeping with their aim to further world-mindedness among the student body, the Student Volunteer Group will continue to sponsor a Bulletin Board in the library. The staff has been reorganized, and the purpose of the Board, while remaining broadly the same as in former years, has been changed a little to serve the students and faculty better.

The new Board, called the World News Bulletin Board and Open Forum, is located within the library at the left of the entrance doors. It is the hope of the staff that many will read the articles of interest there and use the Board for the expression of their opinion.

The purpose of the Board is to acquaint the student body with items of world-wide significance, and, at times, to give editorial comment on the items. In addition to giving news, The Board offers a means for the expression of public opinion through its Open Forum. Letters by students or faculty on any matter of interest to those attending the College will be received gladly by the editors. Such letters should be addressed to the Board and left at the librarian's desk.

Some of the subjects to be treated on the Board in the coming week are: Smiling Buddha, Who Belongs in Prison, Jefferson Aspects of NRA, Nature's Remover, Alcohol, The Modern Christ in the Ancient World.

Chilhowean Staff Asks Cooperation

The management of the 1935 CHILHOWEAN from the time of its election last Spring has been working quietly behind the scenes. Since the beginning of the Fall term the staff has been completely organized and definite arrangements completed with the photographer, engraver, and printer.

All that is now needed to secure a successful annual is the co-operation of the student body AND faculty. Seniors, especially are asked to watch for a chapel announcement next Thursday morning in chapel.

Selection Of "Pep" Committee Decided

The Faculty has removed the annually recurring uncertainty as to the method of selecting the "pep" committee by deciding that now and in the future this committee shall be chosen by an ex-officio committee consisting of the following officers representing various phases of our college life:

President of the College
Chairman of Faculty Athletic Committee
President of Student Council
President of Athletic Board of Control
President of Y. W. C. A.
President of Y. M. C. A.

The 1934-35 "pep" committee, appointed by the above committee, is as follows:

Dr. C. A. Campbell Author Of September Business News Item

Clarifies Alabama's Highway Taxes

The September issue of "The University of Alabama Business News", a monthly bulletin issued by the School of Commerce of that University is devoted to a concise study of Alabama's automobile and gasoline tax situation. The study was prepared by Dr. Claude A. Campbell who has been added to Maryville's faculty this fall.

The bulletin was warmly commended by the Birmingham News, Age-Herald and is a timely contribution towards a solution of Alabama's complicated highway tax system.

Dr. Campbell traces Alabama's Highway Tax situation from its beginning to the present when "Alabama, a state ranking forty-ninth in motor vehicle registrations in proportion to population in 1933, derived 49.1 percent of her state taxes from motor vehicle taxation."

The history of motor vehicle taxation in Alabama began in 1903 when the state pased an act "To Regulate the running, operating or driving of automobiles, locomobiles and motor vehicles in this state." At that time the fee for registration was twenty-five cents and was in no sense a tax. It was levied solely for the purpose of defraying the cost of registration.

The 1903 act continued in effect until 1911 when a second act was passed regulating the registration of motor vehicles. At that time the state imposed a tax ranging from $7.50 to $20.00 for private cars and from $25.00 to $100.00 for commercial vehicles. The 1932 law

SUNDAY VESPERS

The theme for Dr. Stevenson's talk on Sunday evening, September 30, will be "The Gospel of Good Cheer". A selection from the cantata, "Sleepers, Awake", by Bach, "Now Let All The Heavens Adore Thee", will be the anthem of the Vesper Choir.

Theta Party Tonight In Alumni Gym Is Rush Week Climax

Time Theme Effective In Calendar Tea and Picnic

Theta Epsilon will present its Opening Night Program tonight at 8:30 in the Alumni Gymnasium. This program will climax Theta's rush week, the theme of which was centered around Time.

On Tuesday afternoon, a calendar tea was given for the new girls in the Y. W. reading rooms. About two hundred girls attended. The tea tables were decorated to represent the different months of the year, and were presided over by old Thetas dressed in the month's most representative costume. Charlotte Upp had charge of the first part of the program which included readings by Roberta Howie, and Edwina Lowe; musical numbers by Charlotte Upp, Lynn Ann Brown, Mimi Baez, Lillian Leland, Jane Irwin, and Florence Hyde; a skit by Marjorie Fleming and Mary Emily Franklin, and a feature number by Mary Lawson. After refreshments were served, a fashion show, featuring what the up-to-date Theta is wearing this fall, was presented. Favors for the new girls were Theta calendars.

The second feature of rush week was the picnic held on Thursday afternoon on the lawn of Eleanor Pflanze's home in Maryville. Transportation was provided by the college truck. A scavenger hunt keep the girls busy amidst much hilarity. The country side was scoured and such articles as cows, dogs, fleas, boots, barrel staves, and what not were found and brought to the Pflanze lawn. Gum drop alarm clock, hot dogs, and buns constituted the refreshments.

Tonight Theta is presenting a program contrasting the old and the new. Louise Reichelderfer as Father Time will introduce the numbers which will bring stages of college life from the olden times up to the present. Finally Father Time will present Theta's president Rena Forest Joyner who will join the old with the new. Music for the tab-

Highlanders Drop Last-Second Battle To Tenn.-Wesleyan, 14-12

Hard Line Bucks And Long Runs Feature Scot Backfield Play

KRAINOCK'S PUNTING GOOD

Home Opener Marred By Heavy Downpour And Muddy Field

(By Dick Meadows)

Drenched by a steady downpour of rain which refused to slacken, a fighting Scot eleven, led by the super-drives of such backs as Tippins, Krainock, Blazer, and Loessberg, out-maneuvered, out-fought, out-punted and out-ran for sixty minutes an inferior team from Tennessee Wesleyan, only to lose by the meagre margin of a safety scored by the Bulldogs in the very last second of play.

With the score tied at 12-12 in the last second, and the ball resting on the Maryville five-yard line as the result of an intercepted pass, Tippins, in punt formation, took the pass from center, started around right end, cut back from a tackler, and slipped to one knee a few minutes behind the goal line for a safety, giving Wesleyan 2 points and a 14 to 12 victory.

The breaks went aganst the Highlanders durng most of the game, with the Wesleyan Bullodgs finally receiving one that broke up what apparently would be a tie score for the second straight year.

The sweeping end runs by Kenneth Tippins from punt formation, the off-tackle slants by Wilbur Loessberg, the punt returns and heady generalship by Toots Blazer, and the punting, driving, and vicious tackling by Louis Krainock stamped the Scottie backfield as even better than earlier reports had proclaimed it. The speed and shiftiness off-set the lack of weight which has been so much in evidence.

Three times Tippins broke loose for jaunts that almost ended beyond the double lines, but each time the Wesleyan safety was there to pull the fleet halfback down after everyone else was behind. These three runs netted 25, 35, and 30 yards. Blazer, Krainock, and Loessberg lipped through holes opened by the Work on the Girls' Point System of Athletic Awards will begin October first under the direction of Mrs. Evelyn Queener, Physical Instructor for Women.

In the Point System, about two hundred girls will be able to earn Maryville letters by participating in twelve intra-mural sports, keeping health rules, hiking, and taking part in other similar activities.

A certain number of points is given for each class team made and for every individual test passed in other sports. Extra points are awarded for all A and B averages in any subject but a minimum of twelve hours of college work must be carried by each person seeking the award.

Everyone playing in the first round of the Y.W.C.A. tennis tournament will receive points toward a letter, with additional points for each round advanced.

The honors will be awarded as follows: three hundred points, Maryville monogram, M. C.; four hundred points, Maryville M; five hundred points, Maryille M with a sweater.

All girls interested in earning a letter should report to Mrs. Queener Tuesday afternoon, October second, at three o'clock in the auditorium of Bartlett Hall for the season's first meeting of the group.

Practice sessions and, later, contests will take place every Tuesday and every Thursday afternoon between three and five o'clock from October first to May first.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

At the chapel service on Wednesday morning, October 3, Dr. Stevenson will discuss "The Protecting Powers of a Strong and Live Conviction."

I REMEMBER, I REMEMBER—Don Harris

I may still be able to climb Look Rock without panting like a bull pup, and the physical examiner pronounce me sound as a nut—without specifying what kind of nut; but I am not the lad I once was. The young whippersnappers of today may have their trained dietitians (shades of Miss Darby!), their co-ed chapels, and their knee-action cars, but by Gad, I have my memories!

I can remember when it was as much as your life was worth to penetrate the wilds surrounding Maryville. A hamburger was safer in the clutch of J. W. Wimpy. Witn Tennyson, the Government believed that "there lies more faith in honest drought, believe me, than in all the creeds." The bard, as usual, was wrong. Tennessee mountaineers never lacked the beer necessities of life. while the outside world resigned itself to a precarious hip-to-mouth existence on gin and jitters, these sturdy sons invoked Hebe and Jebe, and throve on pure Mountain Dew.

But moonshiners were not the only perils we braved in the expeditions of our greener years, oh no. Famine stalked abroad in the land. We always consumed our food supply before we hit the foothills, and certain Seniors within a catcall of Voorhees Chapel can bring to mind a week-end spent in dividing thirteen dried prunes three times a day.

Water was scarce, oases few and far between. We each carried a supply, like a St. Bernard in the Alps. In fact one pal, his mind unhinged by a week of this, persuaded himself that he actually was a St. Bernard. He is now in a sanatorium—a nice fellow, too. Whenever he and the moon happened to be full at the same time, he would sit behind Carnegie and howl all night.

On one inauspicious trip two of us hired a prehistoric brute which on inquiry we found to be a mule, I believe the owner said, and he further intimated it bore some relation to a horse. It wasn't much like the horses you see today. Its legs were longer, its backbone sharper, and it lunged from side to side like a camel. No wonder Bob laughed. I did not laugh; I was on the animal. Bob got upon my mount's twin brother, then he stopped laughing.

Tally ho! and away we went, over bank, bush, and scaur, at a moderate speed faster than a mad gallop. Disgusted at finding himself forging rapidly to the rear, my mule suddenly stopped. I did not stop, but executed one of the best swan dives in captivity, with a half gainer thrown in free to make it seem hard. I landed in front of a log cabin, minus our camp equipment and three teeth. Immediately fourteen children ran to the front porch screaming, "Look, look Mummie—it hain't got on overalls!" To which the old harridan replied, "Don't yaawl pay the furriner no min," and belligerently, "What yaawl doin' in these parts?"

Soon after, on the campus, people began to draw me aside and say gently, "I didn't know you were bowlegged before." My reply was invariably "I wasn't—before".

That mule was a great inventon; it had the power, though uncontrolled. Personally I prefer less strenuous transportation, say an old-fashioned creeping rocker. Years

COOPERATION

An adage posted on one of the campus bulletin boards conveys a very suggestive method of conduct. It reads: "If you want to be happy and healthful, cooperate not criticize."

In the selection by the faculty of an ex-officio committee consisting of representatives from college organizations to decide upon the members of the "pep" committee there can be no doubt as to cooperation. The attendance of the student body at the pep meetings and particularly the attendance at football games will be interpreted as an indication of cooperation.

Our cooperation with our football team, however, can be shown not only in number but also in noise. In previous years, and unjustly so it seems, Maryville's moonshiners have been accused of failing to follow the directions of the cheerleaders. Hearsay is a great detriment to cooperation. With the right leadership any crowd will cheer for the efforts of its football team.

Cheering, however, usually attains perfection of cooperation and audibility when performed with a concentration of the subject on hand. When attention is distracted by the passing of dishes, swallowing of food, or other procedures generally associated with dining hall usage, one can readily see that such cheering is ineffective.

A further ineffective and mistaken form of cheering is a type of exclamation familiarly like that emitted from a female bovine animal.

Maryville students can show their cooperation with the football team by cheering in the right place at the right time.

Sweet Stuff

About 9620 B.C. a youth of that period was approached by a bee, which with Scout ceremony stung said youth in the bosom of his knickers.

Chaisng tbe bee to its liar the youth discovered Honey and ever since that time Sweet Stuff has played an important part in the diet of man.

Every nation has it's own particular brand of Sweet Stuff. In Australia it is "Lollies", in Scotland it is "Sweeties", in England it is "Taffies", while over here it is "Candy."

A visitor from Mars was in our store a few days ago and told us some very interesting things about how American candy compared with others. He said: "You Americans have the biggest assortment, the best made, the finest looking, the daintiest sweets in the world. The assortment you have here in your store is the finest I've seen any where."

So after you've read this for there's really no place else you can go when you're Candy hungry.

UNITED STATES—

During the past week, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused of receiving the ransom money in the Lindbergh kidnapping case, was arrested. He will be charged with the kidnapping and murdering of the Lindbergh baby, and even though he may be acquitted of these charges, he will still be subject to severe penalties for holding gold certificates.

Although the general textile strike has been called off, there are still 80,000 of the strikers out of work in the South. These workers found the gates of the mills locked against them when they reported to work. In one instance 400 former strikers were driven away by bayonets in the hands of government militia, even though the mill officials had previously announced that the workers would be reinstated as soon as possible.

Republican Maine, the first state to vote for governor, went Democratic last week, endorsing the New Deal. The voters had been warned by Republicans that a Democrat vote would be regarded as an endorsement of the New Deal by the nation. Nevertheless, there was a majority vote in favor of the Democrats.

GERMANY—

This week Germany refused to join the proposed "Eastern Locarno" pact of security; she made new regulations concerning foreign trade; and she triumphantly closed the fourth national conclave of the National Socialist Party at Nurenberg.

The "Eastern Locarno" pact which Germany rejected comtemplates the "binding together of Soviet Russia, Germany, Poland, Czechoslavakia, and the Baltic Countries in an agreement to aid any signatory attacked. The proposal was presented to Germany by Great Britain and was backed by France and Russia."

Germany's new regulations concerning foreign trade are to the effect that all her foreign trade, imports and exports, are to be put under complete government control.

The first meeting of the Chemistry-Physics Club was held on Tuesday evening, September 25, and about fifty members were present. The discussion for the evening centered about recent developments in fields of chemistry and physics. Eleanor Pflanze and Warren Jones were the speakers.

changed the taxation basis from horsepower to weight.

These tax receipts were divided between the state and the city, town, or county in which the owner of the registered vehicle resided. The basis for the division was at first sixty per cent to the state and forty per cent to the local administration. At present the state receives eighty per cent.

All the funds which the State Highway Department receives from these taxes are legally pledged for road building and maintenance.

The gasoline tax situation has a shorter, though more changeful history. It began in 1923 with a tax of two cents per gallon. The receipts were to go half to the state for general purposes and half to the counties for maintenance of roads.

In 1927 the act was amended to give the entire gasoline tax receipts to the counties for the maintenance of roads and bridges. Also in 1927 another two cents was levied to be used by the state for highway purposes. In 1931 and again in 1932 the tax was revised upwards. On each of these occasions one cent was added. The State of Alabama now has a tax of six cents on each gallon.

At the same time that the legislature was increasing the state tax local officials were becoming aware of the possibilities of revenue from gasoline. Many counties began to tax gasoline and today there are one hundred and forty local taxes in addition to the general state levy. The average local tax is 1.14 cents per gallon.

When the Federal tax of one cent is taken into consideration gasoline taxes in Alabama range from seven to twelve cents depending upon the locality.

The effect of these heavy burdens, as Dr. Campbell very clearly points out with the aid of tables, has been to decrease substantially in the past few years both the number of motor vehicle registrations and the amount of gasoline sold.

Dr. Campbell closes his revealing survey with the hope and confidence that the 1935 legislature will "institute desirable changes and plan with wisdom an adequate policy of highway taxation for the future."

Highlanders Drop Tough Battle To Wesleyan Eleven

forwards and then drove through the secondary for gains of 16, 15, and 10 yards, respectively. Although the slippery ball was hard to hold, Krainock handled the punting duties like a veteran kicker.

The Scottie line made its power felt a number of times by crashing through to stop the Bulldog backs at or behind the scrimmage line. Richardson, Atchison, Kalman, Cochrane, Millsaps, and Alexander played steady all-around games, with Richardson taking a blocked punt over for the first Maryville touchdown.

Tennessee Wesleyan showed two excellent performers in Duncan, half back, and Swiney, end and co-captain, who stood far above the remainder of the Bulldog pack in versatility.

Wesleyan's first touchdown was made soon after the game started. The Bulldogs recovered one of their own punts after it had touched a Scot back on the Maryville 10-yard stripe, and after three line thrusts netted five yards, Duncan dashed around left end on a reverse to score standing up. The try for extra point failed.

Maryville knotted the score toward the end of the first quarter when Richardson and Coulter blocked a Wesleyan punt on the Wesleyan 15 yard line and Richardson recovered and ran across the line. The place-kick for extra point was blocked.

The Highlanders opened the second half with a rush, which put them in the lead three plays after they got the ball. Tippins started the drive from midfield with his third long run of the night, placing the pigskin on the 20-yard marker. Blazer then picked his way for 16 yards on a spin-play, and Loessberg ploughed over right guard the remaining distance to the goal. The try for extra point was fumbled.

The score was tied up again a few minutes later when Farmer took a 20-yard pass on the Maryville 10-yard line and crossed the goal line unmolested. Kalman and Gray smothered the kicker on the extra point attempt.

The Highlanders reached the Bull dog 1-yard line as the third quarter ended, but failed to score on fourth down at the beginning of the last quarter. The two teams then battled on fairly even terms until the fatal last second produced the winning margin for Tennessee Wesleyan.

Lose To Kentucky, 26-0

(By Charlie Lewis)

The Maryville College Highlanders opened their football season by losing to the Kentucky Wildcats 26 to 0 in Lexington last Saturday afternoon.

The Kentucky regulars, with Bert Johnson, Bob Pritchard, Harry Walker, and Ralph McCool carrying the ball, pushed over a touchdown in the first minute of play, and a few minutes later added the second touchdown. Another touchdown was scored in the second quarter when Ayers, the cats' reserve fullback, sprinted 23 yards on a delayed buck over right tackle.

The Highlanders came in to their own as the second half opened and battled the cats on even terms during the third quarter. In this period of play the Wildcats not only failed to score but also failed to make a first down. Rain began to fall shortly after the second half started, and continued throughout the

MEN'S SINGLES

Reach Quarter-finals

Halted temporarily over the week end by heavy rains, the men's singles tournament will go forward next week with quarter-final play.

So far, the tourney has not been characterized by any heavy bidding. One upset was registered yesterday when Bob Steakley defeated Theron Alexander in two sets.

Two other close matches were played when Woodling was forced to three sets to defeat Shanor, and Scott, new student and promising finalist, went three sets with Bill Morgan.

Gillingham, favorite to win, has yet to encounter tough opposition.

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Those tired but gallant Scot eleven trotted grimly out of the huddle and planted themselves on the five-yard line, their backs to the wall. The time was short; only a second was left to play. Tippins dropped back, ready to receive the snap. Skeeter Shields called out an end run. Tippins clutched the ball, began a wide sweep around right end from behind the goal line, tried to cut back but fell as his feet slipped on the wet grass. A Bulldog crashed through the line to hold him there, and the game was over. That, briefly, is the story wrung from the confusion of the last second of play between the Highlanders and the Bulldogs from Athens on Wilson Field last night. Never, in the knowledge of this corner, has there been a tougher game to lose.

* * * *

A Fighting Backfield

Yet, out the red mud of Wilson Field, drenched and beaten by the heavy downpour, ring the echoes of four great backs, who, last night, charged, backed up the line, and tackled as they have never done before. They are Louie Krainock, Wilbur Loessberg, Toots Blazer, and Kenneth Tippins. Hardly a play passed down the gridiron but what Loessburg and Krainock were in the middle of the fight, each grappling and blocking with a savage arm and a tough body. The brainy leadership of Blazer, to say nothing of some long gains, and beautiful running by Tippins, two runs alone netting sixty yards, were enough to help any coach swallow the last second luck which Coach Honaker was forced to swallow last night.

* * * *

A Tough Line

With the exception of a few plays in which the hard-running Tennessee Wesleyan backs slipped around end or thru center, the Scot line was able to repulse the heaviest attacks. Time and again Duncan, halfback, tried to buck the line off right tackle, only to stop, plastered against the 225-pound body of Jim Cochrane, Scot tackle. Again, the alert mind and quick arms of Smiley Richardson, another tackle, were responsible for the first touch down, which came when Smiley blocked a punt and recovered to carry the ball the few remaining yards. Stellar performances by Kalman, Atchison, Gamble, Millsaps and Coulter also proved indispensible to the Scot defense.

* * * *

A Bouquet

It would be folly to pass this game on without praising the work of two Tennessee Wesleyan men, Swiney, end, and Duncan, half back. The Bulldogs owe most of their yardage to the twisted, swivel hipped running of Duncan. Particularly in the last quarter was he able to gain thru center, or around end almost at will. Swiney, a fast end was speeding down under every punt, and succeeded more than once in putting fear into the Scots.

Highlanders Play Tusculum Eleven There Saturday

Tusculum Reports Weak Line, Powerful Backfield; Kmetz Will Play

After encountering Kentucky in Lexington last Saturday and Tennessee Wesleyan at home last night, the Highlander gridders hit the road again next Saturday to take on the Tusculum College Pioneers at Greeneville in the first conference game of the season.

If the Highlanders put up as consistent an attack as they showed against the Pioneers on Wilson Field last year, the chances for a Scot victory are good. In defeating Tusculum 26 to 0 at that time, the locals displayed a more effective running, passing, and punting game than at any othr time during the season.

Reports have been received that Tusculum has a weak line and a strong backfield. Kmetz, at fullback, made the all-conference eleven last fall, and Haskins, at half, is expected by Pioneer followers to make the selection this season. If the Tusculum forward wall is weak, the powerful Scot line should be able to smear the opposing backs close to the line of scrimmage.

A Turning Point

Coach Honaker's talk Thursday night was indicative of a turning point in the destiny of that much discussed feeling, college spirit. In particular, two points in his speech are such that they cannot be stressed too much. They are:

"If you students continue what you have started tonight, we will have more college spirit here this year than ever before." . . .

"The Maryville Spirit is based on loyalty; loyalty to the college, and to the things which it sponsors. That means loyalty to football."

* * * *

Wednesday morning's Knoxville Journal reports that Jack Overly, Highlander reserve fullback, is rapidly recovering from injuries received in the Kentucky game at Lexington on Saturday. Knowing as we did that Jack didn't make the trip, we were not a little surprised. Perhaps, in his excitement over the quarterly reports, he ran amuck in Doc Byrne's drug emporium.

GRAY, PIEPER

Appointed 'Y' Directors

Oneal Gray and Archie Pieper were appointed athletic directors of the Y.M.C.A. for the year 1934-35 by Earle Crawford, president of the Y.M.C.A., shortly before school closed last spring. Gray has served as one of the directors since last January, while Pieper is beginning his first term of office

The directors will begin working on the Y.M.C.A. athletic program immediately, with interclass football likely to start activities around the first of November. The annual cross-country run will probably be held during the Murfreesboro-Maryville football game November 16, followed by other outdoor and by indoor contests later in the season.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Teachers of freshmen English have their troubles, too, we understand. Miss Heron might corroborate that statement. What we have particular reference to, however, is an article we saw in an English journal in the library. A fellow teacher, according to the journal, had bet a certain teacher of freshman English that 9 out of 10 of her students would not be able to define the word, "prodigal". Tests made as a result of the bet proved that not even nine-tenths of the students tested could define the word. The definitions, if not correct, had at least a saving humourous element for they followed in this fashion: "gifted"; "a smart kid"; "a sort of hitch-hiker a long time ago"; "a good-for-nothing"; "one who has strayed away"; "a mild form of sin."

—:—:—

Nina Gamble furnished some diversion in Ethics class simply because she gave a common sense answer in a class where all answers are supposed to be hypothetical, theoretical, and philosophical. There was some discussion as to whether a man who did not believe in war but who was drafted had a right ethically to fire all his shots up in the air or into the ground so that he could be sure he would not kill someone. Nina's answer was that he at least had no right to "waste all that ammunition!"

—:—:—

At least one freshman believes in obeying rules—and that in no halfway manner. One gallant freshman boy found one of the freshman girls uptown and somewhat laden with bundles. Accordingly, the gentleman asked the lady if he might carry her bundles home for her. She informed him that certain regulations in a certain widely known but less widely read rule book prohibited any such gallantry. Then these two ingenious (we almost said ingenuous) young things hit upon this shining idea: One walked on one side of the street; the other kept an equal pace on the other side until they reached the campus where they could in keeping with all regulations, proceed in a more normal manner. Then the lady wondered why the matron, who hard about it, laughed! ed!

—:—:—

That worthy sophomore, Bruce McCampbell, thought he was pretty smart the other night. It was at the faculty reception——you remember, don't you, or perhaps you don't unless you stood in line the better part of two hours. Late in the evening everybody had gone home except a few tired persons who, having been in charge of affairs, rather thought they should stay to clean up the library. Mr. McCampbell very obligingly dropped in to help. He received no small amount of praise for his generous and altruistic assistance until one of the faculty committee came in (everything by that time was clean as a tooth) to say that there really had been no need of so much work in the interest of cleanliness since Mr. Black or Mr. Brown or whoever gives such orders was sending boys over early next morning to clean up. Then Mr. McCampbell slyly remarked: "Yes, he told me to be over here by six o'clock tomorrow morning."

Certain circles here on the campus, heretofore the best of friends, are in grave danger of becoming divided and disrupted on a seemingly minor but really very important matter. The question is "Shall Miss Metzger, (you know her, the Dean's right hand secretary, the Dean being left handed) purchase Oxford glasses or just ordinary spectacles?" The point at issue is "Are Oxford glasses sissy?" Note: Oxford glasses are those you wear on a string around your neck. Personally, we think they are right spiffy.

SISSY

—:—:—

This is no advertising column, though special dispensation or notoriety as you please is sometimes given here, but have you heard of the new educational system installed by Mssrs. Downs, Kent, and Luminati?

P.S.

We hear they teach everything from typing to P.S. To be perfectly honest we don't know what the P. S. stands for. It may be psychology, or it may be "Pshaw". Miss Chambers, who is sitting across the desk from us as we write this, suggests that the aforesaid letters might signify "Public Service".

Got to quit a lot of this golf talk now, because the ed-in-chief is beginning to frequent the, ah, links, Only the other day she reported two unusual phenomena to this corner, one being that she actually took two hours to play the nine holes, the other being that she rolled the ball every inch of the way.

remainder of the game.

Farris, Kentucky sophomore, scored the fourth touchdown of the game in the final quarter, driving over from the two yard line after Kentucky had advanced from Maryville's 47 yard stripe.

The rain enabled Kentucky to garner its safety. Blazer fumbled slippery ball in attempting to punt behind the goal line but recovered for a safety.

Maryville's only threat came in the third quarter when "Corky" Crawford recovered a fumble on his own 20 yard line and raced to Kentucky's 16 yard line where he practically fell from exhaustion. Cochrane, giant tackle, was called to the backfield to carry the ball but failed to make the necessary yardage.

Kentucky registered sixteen first downs while the Scotties were chalking up one.

The line-up and summary:

AUSTRALIA

"By car, bus, tram, and dray Australia's citizens flocked to Australia's polls last week to elect a new parliament." The large turnout did not mean an equally large interest in the election but merely an effort to avoid the $10 fine imposed on Australians entitled to vote who fail to do so.

You can't put things across by getting cross.

Debate Question For Pi Kappa Delta Made

Notification has come from Mr. G. O. Finley, National Secretary of Pi Kappa Delta, that the debate question for the year will be: Resolved, That The Nations Should Agree to Prevent the International Shipment of Arms and Munitions. The second choice is: Resolved, That the Federal Government Should Fix Maximum Limits for Personal Incomes and Inheritances. Since this is the provincial convention year each province will choose its own extempore speaking topic for the year.

The first regular meeting of the local chapter will be held on Tuesday night when Clifford Morgan and Louis Krainock will receive initiation.

In the absence of Professor Queener, a committee working with Dr. Hunter, and the other members of the chapter are planning the Forensic work for the year. A trip into North Carolina has been planned and one to Franklin, Indiana, where the provincial convention will be held. Professor Queener has planned to attend the Province meeting.

College Directors Hold Fall Meeting

Founders' Day Plans Made

The Directors of Maryville College held their annual Fall Meeting in President Lloyd's office, Anderson Hall, on Wednesday, October 3. The annual reports of the President, Treasurer, and other officers and committees were presented, recommendations for the coming school year acted upon, and officers and committees of the Directors elected. The annual Spring Meeting will be held on Commencement Day. Between these two meetings of the entire Board, there are more frequent meetings of the Committee on Administration, and the Committee on Finance.

The College and the Alumni Association are laying plans for Homecoming and Founders' Days on Friday, October 26, and Saturday, 27. On Friday evening there is to be a big barbecue and informal program on the campus for visiting alumni and faculty, followed by the Homecoming football game with East Tennessee Teachers College. Founders' Day will be observed at the regular chapel service on Saturday morning.

The Highland Echo Staff wishes to announce that an ECHO will not not be published next week, October 13th.

The number of issues and the date of their appearance has not yet been determined, but omission of a few during the school year is necessary in order to comply with the Organization's constitution.

JOIN TONIGHT

Tonight in Pearson's Lobby at 6:45 the new girls will have the opportunity of selecting the society to which they wish to belong; the opportunity to drop a slip into the blue or green boxes presided over respectively by Rena Forest Joyner, Theta President, and Lorena May Dunlap, Bainonian President; the opportunity to go Theta or Bainonian.

For the previous two weeks the new girls have been entertained, if not lavishly at least originally, by the two societies, Bainonian and Theta Epsilon. This past week the new girls have been left to themselves in order to make their decisions.

Choose carefully, for although membership is not compulsory nevertheless membership in the society of your choice can play a vital part in this, your "Maryville College Life".

Whatever your choice, of this fact you may be sure,—you will find congenial, worthwhile friends and a keener appreciation of the Maryville spirit.

Assistant Business Managers Selected

Herbert Hunt and James Wade were selected Friday as assistant usiness managers to serve on the Business Staff of the Highland Echo.

The selection was made at a meeting of the Student Council Committee of the Highland Echo and the Faculty Committee on Stu- and three members of the Faculty.

The other assistant business anager, Charles Luminati, was elected last spring.

Selling Restriction

Each year the question is asked s to whether anyone is permitted to sell articles or to take orders for sales in the dormitories or on the campus. A regulation was established by the Faculty some years ago and has recently been eaffirmed as follows: The stores conducted by the YMCA and YWCA are the only sales organizations permitted (other than departments conducted by the College) and they may sell only at the stores themselves. No individuals, either outsiders or students, are permitted to canvass or to sell articles to students. This includes selling or taking orders for clothing, flowers, novelties, candies, or any other articles. It does not include such work as representing services like pressing, laundry, shoe repairing, where no sales are involved.

Experience in the past has shown the wisdom and necessity of this restriction. The obvious reasons include the effort to prevent selling pressure upon the students, unfair competition with students' organizations, and other unpleasant conditions. The "Y" stores are authorized for the convenience of the students and may sell a limited list of articles. The stores in the community are conveniently located and handle other merchandise needed.

Don't put things off. Put them over.

U. T. President Addresses Faculty

"School Days" Is Theme of Banquet

The faculty held its first dinner of the new school year on Monday night. Each month the faculty holds a banquet, following which a speech or paper is given by some member of the faculty.

On Monday night, however, the speaker for the occasion was an out of-town guest, Dr. J. D. Hoskins, of the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. Dr. Hoskins, formerly Dean, has very recently been selected as president of the University to succeed President H. A. Morgan who will be engaged solely with the T.V.A. project in the future. Dr. Hoskins' address dealt with the problems he had encountered in his capacity as a teacher and administrator. The experiences he related were in the realm of discipline and personal contact with students, which has given him a bond of understanding in meeting their problems.

The decorations, place cards, and menus all contributed to a "school days" theme. The place cards were slates, bound with yarn, and the courses of the banquet were described as readin', 'rithmetic, 'ritin', and recess.

Theta Alpha Phi Plans Five Plays For Dramatic Season

Y. and Senior Class Benefit Numbers Omitted

The Maryville College Delta Chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, National Honorary Dramatic Fraternity, has completed plans for one of the most successful dramatic seasons on Maryville campus. The highlight of the season will be a play presented by the Theta Alpha Phi group early in the Spring.

Membership in Theta Alpha Phi is open to upperclassmen who have completed certain technical requirements or else carried certain roles in full length plays. The technical requirements are: stage manager for two plays, business manager for three plays, or writer of one full length play or two one-act plays. The acting requirements are: major art in two plays or minor part in four.

The members of Theta Alpha Phi at present are: Ernest B. Lowe, president; Lorena May Dunlap, secretary; Glover Leitch, Newman Smith, Mary Gladys Brown, Nina Gamble, Maria Wynn, Robert Toms, and Nathalia Wright. Dean Hunter is an honorary member and Mrs. West is Faculty Adviser.

Since the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. and senior class benefit numbers have been eliminated from the college calendar greater emphasis will be placed on the four society plays. Following the custom of recent years Theta Alpha Phi will present a silver loving cup to the soceity presenting the best play. It is expected that the competition will be keener this year since Theta Epsilon has won the cup for the last two years in succession. The cup becomes the permanent possession of the society winning it three successive times.

Three plays will be presented to Maryville audiences before the Christmas vacation. They will be presented by the Maryville College Players, Theta Epsilon, and Athenian Literary Society. The College Players play will be first being scheduled for November. Theta's bid for the cup will be made during the

COLLEGE NEWSPAPERS

An interesting development in the history of the college newspaper is the formation of an organization known as "The Association of College Editors."

The first meeting of this association was held in New York City on September 15th of this year, and was attended by about thirty editors representing, principally, many of the eastern universities.

The purpose of this organization, as set forth by its president, Francis G. Smith, Jr., editor of The Daily Princetonian, is as follows: "It is our belief that the college press, as the organ of this new generation of undergraduates, can arouse, express, and in some measure direct their new ideas. A.C.E. hopes to become in its own field what the press of our elders once was—an interpreter, a guide, a leader."

Two other associations, the Associated Collegiate Press and the National College Press Association will hold their annual conventions jointly in Chicago next week-end, October 11-13. At this convention, the only national college newspaper convention of the year many aspiring editors and business managers will receive helpful pointers regarding editorial and managerial machinations.

From the above facts it can be seen that the college newspaper editor of today is sincerely earnest in his desire to stimulate interest in current events, to point the way towards understanding, to uphold the leadership of the college newspaper as an expression of the voice of youth.

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Fore! This is National Worry Week, this day itself being designated as All-set Day. Coaches thruout the Smoky Mountain Conference have this week begun in earnest to worry about weak backfields and tissue-paper lines, some even being so extravagant as to point out that the Western Carolina Teachers will be a serious threat to conference contenders when they are admitted into the circle next season. Today, designated at All-set Day, naturally brings to light that Carson-Newman is all set for the Milligan Buffaloes, that King is all set for Tennessee Teachers, and that the Scots are all set for the Pioneers, and so it runs.

* * * *

The usual hallyhoo of woe and consternation, always an interesting highlight in pre-season talk, has sounded the gamut in every conference fold by this time, and practically every team will come forth this week, its heavy cloak of ills and weaknesses dissolved in the spotlight of gridiron battle, to make a first bid for Smoky Mountain Conference honors.

* * * *

It is generally conceded at this time that the greatest possibilities for top honors lie in three camps, those of Maryville, King and Tennessee Teachers. Each of these three is scheduled to begin conference play this afternoon. The Highlanders, in spite of two previous defeats suffered at the hands of non-conference foes, are rated high favorites over Coach Sam Doak's outfit in their encounter this afternoon. The only respectable threat boasted by the Pioneers lies in the hard running of two backs, Kmetz and McAmis, their line having been reported weak as usual. The Highlanders, having already displayed a heavy forward wall and a promising set of backs in Loessberg, Krainock, Blazer, and Tippins, have the added advantage of competent reserves in both departments.

* * * *

Carson-Newman, due to the loss of several all-conference men of last year, is rated as the underdog in its tilt with Milligan's dark-horse eleven this afternoon. Coach Steve Lacey is reported to have performed somewhat of a miracle with his Buffaloes, for many years a second-rate squad, and now appears on the conference threshold at the head of a real threat.

* * * *

The most important conference game to be played this afternoon, one which will undoubtedly make or break either team's chances for the title, is the tilt between Tennessee Teachers and King's Tornadoes. The Teachers, guided by a former Maryville quarterback, Coach Gene McMurray, and always a serious threat to the contenders, nevertheless are bewailing a shortage of reserves, and worse than that, a green line. Just how much weight this pre-season cry carries has yet to be determined. King, heralded last season as a sure runner-up, if not a winner, consistently slid down the runway of tough luck as the season advanced, ending its conference schedule halfway down the cellar stairs. However, supported by a large band of sophomores, sprinkled here and there with an upperclassman, the Tornado again looms as a team to be reckoned with.

* * * *

A peculiar accident has befallen the windshield of Coach Bob Thrower's Plymouth. It showed up at chapel the other morning with a neat hole in it, about the size of a fist. Asked how it happened, Coach brought out the big grin and replied, "Aw, a woman kicked that thru."

Highlanders Face Question In Tilt With Tusculum Pioneers Today

Reserve Strength And Superior Line Promise Advantage For Honaker's Men; Starting Lineup Same As Last Week; Muddy Field May Prove Fatal.

A battered but determined Maryville Highlander, nursing its wounded pride after being bitten and clawed into submission by a mighty Kentucky Wildcat and by a not-so-mighty Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldog, squares off against a confident but wary Tusculum Pioneer tihs afternoon at Greeneville in the first conference scrap of the season.

The Pioneer outfit had little trouble scoring two touchdowns in the first period against Mars Hill last week, and then holding the lead throughout the remainder of the game, and it has reached even better form this week. The team is in good physical and mental condition and has hopes of placing high in the conference standing this year.

The Scots, on the other hand, have not come fully up to expectations this week, and a very close score seems inevitable. Coaches Honaker and Thrower put their charges through strenuous workouts every afternoon, with long scrimmages being held through Thursday, not easing up until the day before the conflict.

The Scot backs have been reeling long gains in scrimmage, but the play has been spotty at times, and consistent drives have been too infrequent. The defense has been impregnable sometimes, but its play has been spotty. Several different combinations have been used in the line and in the backfield, resulting in a keen fight for individual positions.

The starting line-up will probably be the same that opened the Tennessee Wesleyan game. Kalman and Gray will be at the ends, Cochrane and Millsaps at tackles, Holloway and Atchison at guards, Johnson at center, Blazer at quarter, Loessberg and Crawford at the halves, and Krainock at fullback. This line averages about 182 pounds and the backfield about 160.

Every position is well fortified with reserve strength and there is little to choose between the opening line-up and one compared of Alexander and Coulter ends, Gamble and Richardson tackles, Pieper and Holaday guards, Bailey center, Shields quarterbaack, Tippins and Rich halfbacks, and Overly fullback. Still others who are capable of filling a post against the Pioneers are Marinaro at guard, Hulette at halfback, and Henry at full-back.

Tusculum has an experienced back field, and lettermen in most of the line positions as well. The backfield and about half the line will be the same that played against Maryville last year. Kmetz, fullback, and Haskins, half-back are two of the best ground-gainers in the conference, and Bob McAmis is a veteran signal caller. Two dangerous linemen are Palinchak, tackle, and Clyde McAmis, all-conference end. As several second-string men showed up well during the last week of practice, there should be plenty of reserve strength to throw in against the Highlanders.

In spite of Tusculum's hard running backs, however, Maryville's heavy forward wall and elusive ball carriers seemingly have a slight advantage in all-round perforomance, if the game is played on a dry field. The Pioneers will be hard to beat in their own camp on a dry field, and if the rainy weather, which marred the first two games for the Scots, continues, anything is likely to happen.

Managers Elected

The Athletic Board of Control met Thursday morning and appointed the following five athletic managers for the year 1934-35:

Swimming—John Elliott
Basketball—Charlie Lewis
Tennis—Bryan Payne
Baseball—Harold Jones
Track—James Chittick

Each of these managers is closely connected with the sport in his charge, having served previously as manager or assistant manager.

Pep Committee Acts

At a meeting of the "Pep" Committee last Wednesday morning after chapel, October 18 was decided upon as the date of the next pep meeting. This pep meeting precedes the Maryville-King football game, which will be played on Wilson Field the following night, October 19.

Maryville College Highlanders, Maryville, Tennessee; Coaches Honaker and Thrower.

Carson-Newman College Eagles, Jefferson City, Tennessee; Coach Frosty Holt.

Tusculum College Pioneers, Greeneville, Tennessee; Coach Sam Doak.

East Tennessee Teachers College, Johnson City, Tennessee; Coach Gene McMurray.

Milligan College Buffaloes, Johnson City, Tennessee; Coach Steve Lacy.

King College Tornado, Bristol, Tennessee; Coach Richardson

Appalachian State Teachers College, Boone, North Carolina; Coach Garbee.

Cumberland University, Lawyers, Lebanon, Tennessee; Coach Morrow.

Lincoln Memorial University Rail-splitters, Harrogate, Tennessee; Coach Alexander.

At the annual meeting last year, Western State Teachers College of Cullowhee, North Carolina, was placed on the preferred list and probably will be admitted to the conference at the meeting this year.

Dr. James H. McMurray, of Maryville is president of the conference; W. O. Lowe, of Knoxville, is commissioner; Professor H. C. Amis, of Tusculum, is vice-president; and Professor Alex Chavis, of Carson-Newman, is secretary-treasurer.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Pep meetings are good for a number of tihngs, it would appear. If for nothing else, it becomes apparent at such functions just what persons have perfected YELLS that locomotive whistle necessary in one of the yells. That tall, dark fellow, wearing glasses, who sat in front of us Thursday night has about the neatest execution of that particular performance we've heard yet.

—:—:—

Dr. Orr used the expression "dam site" in referring to certain phases of the TVA situation a little too often the other day for "DAM" it to keep its original connotation.

—:—:—

There are some rules on this campus which we are supposed to absorb, it seems. No notices are posted about them; ABSORB they are not in the rule book; they are not spoken of in house meetings. One of these regulations concerns the placement of the men and women in the library at night. It's an old Maryville custom for the gentlemen to sit on the side nearest the football field, and for the ladies to sit on the opposite side. Any deviation therefrom results, we have discovered, in a personal invitation from one of the librarians to move. This apparently superfluous explanation we would not have made had we not known that as recently as last week three rather mannerly and well behaved boys were found across the boundary line in the library.

—:—:—

We and Mr. Leitch had a laugh the other morning when Mr. Christie sat down supposedly in the chair where Mr. Leitch KISS had been sitting. The only difficulty lay in the fact that Mr. Leitch had removed the chair when he got up. What really amused us about the whole situation, however, was Christie's asking Glover to kiss his hurt arm to make it well.

—:—:—

The missionaries to Baldwin Hall are keeping up their good work. The latest addition to their corp of workers is Miss Stuart HEATHEN from Alabama. Miss Stuart's special capacity is that of improving living conditions among the poor Baldwin heathen. She made her first round the other morning wearing appropriately a white smock and glasses placed far down upon her nose. Any girls whose rooms she did not find spick and span she promptly referred to Mrs. Worley. Mrs Worley, entering into the spirit of the thing, lectured the culprits, we understand——and then she called the most active of the missionaries in for a conferencee. What went on there has not been disclosed to the press.

—:—:—

Miss Nick and Dr. McMurray gave the Sociology class a rather interesting set of cross questions and crooked answers YEAR the other day. The point up for discussion was that of the citizenship of the children of foreigners in this country. Miss Nick told the story of a foreigner in the United States who had eighteen children, and she wanted to know if they would be eligible for citizenship. Dr. McMurray asked if they were all born here (that is, in this country). Miss Nick, whose hearing at the moment was apparently somewhat confused, answered, "No, they weren't all born in one year!"

—:—:—

The spirits of the seniors were raised at the senior class meeting when Cecelia Conover took the floor and, in the in- BUSHES terest of the approaching senior party in the College Woods and in the interest of the following parties, made a plea for dating couples to stay out of the bushes. The hilarity answering that suggestion was not lessened by a motion to the effect that the couples avoid the bushes. It reached climatic proportions, however, when, in the ensuing discussion about how to meet the problem, if any, Mr. Kaufman suggested that they "cut down the bushes."

Former Maryvillian Dies At Siam Post

Mrs. Wilbur M. Franklin, who before her marriage was known as Alma Schoeller, died in Bangkok, Siam, of paratyphoid. Word of her death was received by her family in Trenton, N. J. on September 26.

While she attended Maryville College only during the year 1930-1931, Mrs. Franklin was active in many college organizations. Through her efforts the Student Volunteer World News Bulletin was founded.

Following her attendance at Maryville, and at Drew University, Madison, New Jersey, Mrs. Franklin left for Berlin, Germany in 1932. In June of this year she travelled to Siam to continue missionary work.

Her husband, the brother of Miss Doris Franklin, a freshman at Maryville last year, and her son, Wilbur M. Franklin, Jr., will remain in Siam. Miss Mildred Schoeller, her sister, is a graduate of the class of '34.

Interracial Group To Meet October 13

The first meeting for this year of the Interracial Commission of East Tennessee will be held during the week-end of October thirteenth.

The Interracial Commission is an organization composed of college students, both colored and white, who are from this section of the state. The purpose of this society is to bring about better feeling between the two races and to improve existing conditions.

At each monthly meeting pertinent problems, social, economic, and religious, are discussed. These meetings offer a good opportunity both for broadening one's outlook and for putting into practice the principles of Christianity.

Those who are interested in hearing more about this commission may see Martina Robison.

Founders' Day and Homecoming To Be Observed Oct. 26-27

Two Associate Founders To Be Commemorated

The College Homecoming Day and Founders' Day will be observed on Friday, October 26, and Saturday, October 27, respectively.

On Friday afternoon visiting alumni will register at the Alumni Gymnasium and at five o'clock, alumni and faculty will celebrate with a barbecue. At 7:30, they will attend the Homecoming football game between Maryville and East Tennessee Teachers College, occupying a reserved section in the east stand. This Homecoming program is being arranged in cooperation with the College, by The Alumni Association, of which Dr. Charles W. Henry ('01) is president.

On Saturday morning the Chapel service will be lengthened somewhat and a Founders' Day ceremony will be held.

It is the plan to select from year to year different persons who have had a part in establishing and expanding the College, and on Founders' Day give special thought and honor to them. Thus, in addition to a short memorial ritual, there will be two biographical sketches presented by two invited speakers. Those Founders to be commemorated this year are Reverend Thomas Brown and Professor John S. Craig, who were associated with Dr. Anderson in the early years of the institution's life. The invited speakers will be Rev. Dr. John S. Eakin ('87) and Rev. Theron Alexander ('08), both of Knoxville.

On November fourth last year, notable services were held in the Chapel and at the College cemetery in commemoration of Dr. Isaac Anderson, to whose efforts the institution's beginning was due and who was for thirty-eight years its first president. The remains of Dr. Anderson and his family were removed from their original resting places in the New Providence Church Cemetery of Maryville to the Maryville College Cemetery on the campus and the College cemetery re-dedicated.

It is hoped that many alumni will attend this year's programs. The particular dates were chosen partly because they are near the anniversary dates of the College's official establishment by the Synod of Tennessee (October 19-29, 1819), and partly to permit alumni attending the East Tennessee Educational Association meetings at Knoxville to come on to Maryville.

The alumni executive committee is undertaking to secure lodging places in private homes for visiting alumni who send their requests in advance through the President's office at the College.

MINISTERIAL MEETS

Dr. Cameron of the American Bible Society is to be the speaker at the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association Monday evening at 6:30 in Athenian Hall.

The message that Dr. Cameron has to give is of interest to all. Every member and prospective member as well as any interested in full time Christian service are urged to attend.

Collection Of Books Donated To Library

From the personal collection of Miss Alice Clemens, teacher of English at the college until her sudden death last summer, the college library has recently received a number of books through the kindness of Miss Ellison Clemens, her sister.

The books cover a range of subjects in the field of English, but include especially textbooks on the writing of essays, short stories, and other forms of composition. These books have been placed in the library stacks and are available to students who wish to avail themselves of them.

This collection is valuable, not only for the worth of the books themselves, but also because of its association with Miss Clemens.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

At the chapel service on October 24, 1934, the address will be delivered by Dr. Lloyd.

Cameron Lectures On Bible Distribution

The Rev. G. Bruce Cameron, representing the American Bible Society, gave an illustrated lecture in Voorhees Chapel last Tuesday evening entitled "The Book Goes Forth". Mr. Cameron is the secretary in charge of the Central Agency of the American Bible Society in Cincinnati which is one of the ten agencies here in the United States.

Maryville has a special interest in Mr. Cameron since he is a friend of Dr. McGill, a Maryville alumnus, and of Dr. G. W. Dunlap, father of one of our senior students. He is also known to Dr. Franklin whose daughters have studied here in recent years.

By means of colored slides Mr. Cameron presented a vivid picture of the work of the society both in this country and abroad. Since its institution in 1816 the Society has placed in circulation over a quarter of a billion copies of Scriptures.

Men who really do things say but little about it.

Closed Senior Party Held In Woods Today

Mock Trial Is Feature Event

The big event for the seniors this week is the class party held this afternoon and evening in the college woods. This is the first party of the year, and is closed. The crowd will leave from Pearsons steps at 4:15 and will return about 9:30. The place chosen for the outing is the picnic grounds beyond the House in the Woods.

Entertainment and arrangements for the party have been in the care of Cecelia Conover, the class vice-president. It is planned that the time before supper will be occupied with a scavenger hunt. A picnic supper will be prepared in outdoor style. Following supper there will be games and a mock-trial, the nature of which is not to be divulged. Group singing will conclude the evening.

Kipp's Honors Work Aids Clarke Graduates

Some graduate students of Clarke University, Worchester, Mass., are in camp at Elkmont making a study of the timber resources of East Tennessee. Being in need of some social data on this region two of them called here for assistance and were referred to Howard Kipp's Honors Work of last yar.

For his Honors Work Mr. Kipp had made a social survey of Blount County and the Clarke University graduates pronounced this survey "exactly what they wanted." Praising it highly they said it "saved them many weary hours of labor."

This demonstration of the practical results from Honors Work is looked upon as further justification for the continuance of this program which "offers to superior students opportunities for study independent of the usual requirements and confinements of the classroom."

Ninety-Seven Enjoy Volunteer Picnic

Ninety-seven Student Volunteers and friends attended the annual Fall picnic of the Group in the college woods last Saturday afternoon. The outing was in the form of an Indian Picnic with the theme carried out by means of appropriate features such as wigwams, feathered headbands, corn stalks, and pumpkin decorations.

The committee headed by Charlotte King had arranged a number of unusual games which kept the group occupied all afternoon. After supper they gathered around an immense teepee fire for a short service consisting of hymn singing and an address by Rev. O. R. Tarwater of the Methodist Church.

The Maryville volunteers entertained as their guests the out-of-town delegates to the Fall Retreat of the officers of the Tennessee Student Volunteer Union. Included among the guests were the president of the Union and Miss Clena McMullin, travelling secretary for the southern region.

Work Of Dining Hall Enlargement Begun

On Wednesday work was begun on the enlargement of the dining room at Pearsons Hall. A one-story and basement addition sixty by fifty feet in size will be built, the new part being used for dining room space and the kitchen remaining in its present location.

This work is made possible by the Dining-Hall Fund which the alumni are now raising.

The architect is Mr. Ben F. McMurray of Knoxville and the construction is being done under direction of the College staff.

SUNDAY VESPERS

At the vesper service on Sunday evening Dr. Stevenson will discuss "Christianity, a Man's Manly Religion." The Vesper Choir will sing "A Prayer of Thanksgiving", a folksong of the Netherlands, arranged by E. Kremser.

MESSIAH PRACTICE

Again this year, Handel's Messiah will be presented at Voorhees Chapel by the college choir augmented by others of the student body. Miss Frances Henry of the music department is undertaking the task of directing the chorus.

About one hundred were present at the first rehearsal, which was held last Sunday afternoon from three to five o'clock. Several more tenors and sopranos are needed.

Y. W. HAS HIKE

To conclude the Nu Gamma program for the year, a breakfast hike was held on Monday morning, October 15. About one hundred and twenty-five met at Pearsons enrance at six o'clock and led by the Nu Gamma leaders, followed the trail through the woods to where Tess Frey and Dottie Nethery greeted them. Everyone enjoyed the bacon and egg sandwiches, cinnamon buns, and coffee.

Dr. Josiah Sibley Addresses Students

Dr. Josiah Sibley addressed the students at the chapel service on Friday morning, October 19. Dr. Sibley is, at present, pastor of a Presbyterian Church in Memphis, Tennessee.

Dr. Sibley brought to our attention the fact that all through the ages the nations of the world have been confronted with the race peril. Yet, the things that bind races are much greater than those which separate them.

"There are two races of men, borrowers and enders", says Lamb. And as there are two races of men, there are two races of nations. All peoples and nations are borrowers and lenders. We have borrowed more than any other nation in government, industry, art, education. We are debtors all through life. We are also moral borrowers. Be a good borrower! Borrow ideals, knowledge, but pay back some finer

Blazer Goes Over For Touchdown In 2nd Quarter Drive

Inspired Scot Play Featured By Vicious Blocking, Tackling, Running

LOESSBERG INJURED

Powerful Scot Line Holds King Tornado Within 10-Yard Stripes

BY DICK MEADOWS

Playing a brand of football reminiscent of tales of former mighty Scot elevens, an invincible Highlander machine rose to the heights last night to conquer the favored King Tornado, one of the strongest contenders for the conference crown.

The Highlanders knocked King's championship hopes to a level with its own by scoring in the second quarter and holding gamely to a 6-0 lead until the final whistle ended the struggle.

The game was one of the hardest fought matches seen on Wilson Field in several years, with the issue in doubt up until the very last minute. Maryville's blocking, tackling, and running was at its best, and King could not match the inspired Scot play when in scoring position.

The whole Maryville team played consistently, with the excellent teamwork playing a large part in the victory. The line opened big holes for the backs, who frequently fought their way for six to fifteen yards through the secondary.

The most improved playing was done by Jack Overly, who plowed for real long gains, backed up the line for real long gains, backed up the line in good sytle, and made the longest run of the game after intercepting a pass on his own three-yard line and returning it, behind a quick forming interference, to the Maryville 45-yard stripe before being pulled down.

Loessberg, Blazer, and Krainock played their usual steady games, both offensively and defensively, while Corky Crawford got away for two runs of eight and twelve yards. Alexander and Coulter kept the ends well guarded, and were down under punts every time. On two occasions Alexander recovered fumbles by the punt-receiver, thereby helping keep the ball in King territory.

In the center of the line, Johnson, Atchison, and Holloway cleared the way for Overly's drives, and Johnson backed up the line well. In addition to hs good work in the line, Cochrane shared the punting duties with Krainock and Gray.

For King, Barnes, fullback, and Davis, quarterback, were the best ground gainers, while Miller and Johnson, ends, and Mazza, tackle, stood out in the line.

Most of the Scot gains were made on straight football, the fakes and reverses failing to click as well as they did against Lenoir-Rhyne last week. King resorted to tricky plays and to several passes, some of which threw scares into the Maryville ranks, but the locals were impregnable behind their own twenty-yard line.

In the second quarter, the Highlanders took advantage of a fumble

Subscription Rates - - - - -

Entered at the Post Office, Maryville, Tenn., as Second Class Matter, November 11, 1915

Saturday, October 20, 1934

The fact that only 25 instead of the usual number of 30 issues of the Highland Echo are to be published this year necessitates some explanations of a mathematical character to the subscribers, the majority of whom belong to the student body.

In the spring of last year, due to the exorbitant N.R.A. prices quoted for the cost of publishing, it was feared that the Highland Echo would not be listed as a current college publication. Fortunately, however, reasonable prices were secured. Below is a summary which reveals the present financial difficulties:

Total Cost of Publishing 1934-35	$1,345.00
Total Gross Income for 1933-34	1,224.85
Cost of 1934-35 over income of 1933-34	120.15
Income from Advertising 1933-34	446.85
Additional Advertising Needed	120.15
Total amount of advertising needed	$567.00

It can readily be seen that not only is additional advertising of $120.15 needed but also the sum indicated as last year's income from advertising. Reduction of the number of issues causes a reduction in the available advertising space, therefore, a loss.

Few realize the complexity of the problems involved in the publication of a newspaper. It is not necessary that many have an interest in a paper other than to read it. At college, however, where a newspaper is interested in the students it is customary to expect a reciprocal interest. This interest may be evinced in various ways. It is peculiarly effective when personally conveyed to our advertising contributors.

Anyone who may be interested in noting the activities of other colleges is permitted access to the Highland Echo Office where such newspapers as are on the exchange list of the Highland Echo are available.

World Today

PALESTINE—

A new milestone in the development of the Near East was reached recently when, for the first time, oil from the rich Mosul fields in Northern Iraq flowed into Raifa through the gigantic 1,200 mile pipe line across the desert wastes from Kirkuk. The oil will be stored in huge reservoirs on Acre Bay between Raifa and Acre. At the end of the month shipments to the markets of the world will begin.

—O—

UNITED STATES—

Giant passenger flying boats soon will span the Pacific, linking California with the Orient. Pan-America has alrady ordered six flying boats capable of carrying thirty-two passengers. One, The Brazilian Clipper, is already flying between Miami and South America.

—O—

GERMANY—

A Nazi Spy system which used transatlantic couriers to keep itself informed of anti-Hitler activities here in this country has been reported. It was also stated that this system punished persons living in Germany for the hostile utterances of their relatives here.

—O—

HUNGARY—

1,000 miners in Hungary stayed down in the coal mines, 1,000 feet under the ground, until their wages were increased. They had been getting a salary of two dollars per week, and they struck for a raise to three dollars and a half. Some of the men died and others went crazy as a result of their voluntary seclusion in the coal mine for over seventy-two hours without light, air or food.

—O—

ARGENTINA—

The thirty-second Eucharistic Congress closed Sunday in an outburst of religious fervor. 1,000,000 knelt in worship while Pope Pius pronounced the benediction. After this another million persons joined the throng, and the whole great mass formed a triumphal procession which required five hours to pass.

—O—

FRANCE—

Thought everywhere in Europe is reaching out to what is going to happen next, following the assassination of King Alexander and Foreign Minister Barthou. Fortunately for Europe neither the Yugoslav nor the French Government is in the mood of those of Austria and Germany after the Sarajevo murder.

—O—

CHINA—

China has undertaken to offset the silver buying policy of the United States with a ten per cent tax on all silver exports from China. The nationalist government decision, effective October 15, followed receipt of the United States' reply to a recent note from China pleading for cooperation in maintaining silver prices and halting the drain of silver from China. The United States answer offering some cooperation and pointing out that the United States' silver program was deemed mandatory by President Roosevelt failed to satisfy the Chinese.

PRE-MED CLUB MEETS

The Pre-Medical Club met for organization on Monday night in the Zoology laboratory. The following officers were elected: President, Edward Lodwick; Secretary-Treasurer, Ruth Perry; Program Secretaries, Annie Mary Donnell, George Greiner. The Sponsor, Miss Green, welcomed the unusually large attendance, and made a short talk stressing the worth of initiative in determining the practical values of a club of this kind.

The Club aims this year to offer a variety of programs which will really prove beneficial to those training for the medical profesion. Aid of local physicians will be enlisted and club members will submit valuable topics of interest. Future meetings will be held on the second and fourth Mondays and are open to all those who are interested in the medical profession.

BY BRYAN PAYNE

A kindly old man in the moon looked out on Wilson Field last night after the smoke of gridiron battle had drifted away, and chuckled. There, only a few hours before, a mighty Highlander football team, a reborn football team, had moved relentlessly down the field, had marched to the beat of those pounding heels of Loessberg, of Overly, and of Krainock, and Toots Blazer, and mightiest of all, had stubbornly held a savage and desperate King Tornado witihn the ten-yard stripes for sixty solid minutes.

* * * *

When, in the second quarter, scrappy little Toots Blazer, in there fighting his hardest in spite of a painful boil on his wrist, and in spite of the fact that he had not been acative in practice nearly all week, went over the double stripes on a quarterback sneak for a touchdown, and the winning touchdown, the awed voice of this scribe could only whisper in solemn tribute, "There is a man". We went around to the dressing room before the game began and asked Toots how he felt. "Fella," he said with the determination that marks him in every game, "if I'm alive out there, you know I'm gonna be in there, don't you."

* * * *

Picking an individual star in last night's victory is as hard as picking a flaw in the Highlander attack and defense—it can't be done. However, for playing the most consistently good football we nomiate Jack Overly to step forward and receive the wreath. Last week at Lenoir-Rhyne Jack duplicated a feat of three years ago when he kicked the point after touchdown, the margin of victory for the Highlanders. Last night Overly reeled off long gains and bucked the line like a veteran. It was Overly's alert mind and arms in the second quarter that pulled the Scoties out of a bad hole. King was deep in home territory. After a Tornado back had thrown a pass straight into his arms on the three yard line he followed a perfect interference down the sideline for a neat 40-yard gain. Ovely is truly a fighting Highlander.

* * * *

Rounding out a backfield that had power, speed, and fight, were Wilbur Loessberg, and Louis Krainock, two backs who were in on nearly every play during their stay in the hostilities. Loessberg was on receiving end of a pass which put the ball on King's 12-yard line just before the touchdown, and harassed the opposing linemen with his smashes until he was carried from the field in the last quarter after a blow on the head rendered him unconscious.

And in front of these backs was a real line. From end to end the Scot forewall took out the opposing forces on offense and stopped the digging King backs on the defense. Alexander, Coulter, Johnson, Atchison and all the rest were in there fighting to the last.

Sickness and the fear of loss are a wonderful threat to most of us.

SCOTT WINS NET MEET

Finalists Delayed In Frosh Tourney

Gillingham and Talmage To Battle It Out In First Dry Weather

Heavy rains the latter part of the week prevented the playing of the final match of the freshman tennis tournament. The opponents, Ed Gillingham and Roy Talmadge, expect to meet as soon as weather permits.

Neither man has yet encountered enough opposition to be forced to three sets. Gillingham has defeated Gillespie, William Myers, and Drake. Talmadge has proceeded to the finals over Reames, Reese and Ross.

The freshman tournament was organized and played under the ponsorship of the Freshman Fellowship Club.

Women's Cup Play Nears Semi-Finals

The women's tennis tournament, sponsored by the Y.W.C.A., is still in the quarter and semi-final matches at the close of this week. Eleanor Johnson and Florence Hyde have reached the semi-finals on opposite sides of the bracket without having been pressed to three sets. Mary Gillingham and Arline Fuller are to play in the quarters, and Martha McSpadden is waiting on the match to be played between Winnie Berst and Dot Coates.

Freshman Dark-Horse Displays Form and Strategy To Defeat Gillingham

Scoring an unusually large percent of his points with placement drives and service aces, Ed Scott, frosh netman, rode his inauspicious dark horse to victory last week when he defeated John Gillingham, senior and team captain, in five sets to win the annual men's fall singles tourney.

At no time during tournament play, excepting in the final match, did Scott look impressive. Forced to go three sets to defeat Morgan early in the bracket, he appeared rather to slip thru on the narrowest of margins, and even in the final match he was forced to the limit at times to overcome a dangerous lead.

Scott reached the finals by defeating Morgan, Woodling and Allen. In the final match Scott led off by taking the first set, 6-3, only to drop the second, 8-6. Scott won the third, 7-5, and dropped the fourth, 6-4. As the score stood 4-all in the fifth set, darkness stopped the match, after Scott had come from behind to overcome almost certain defeat. Begun anew the final set ended in the hands of the Pennsylvanian, 6-2.

With the exception of Scott, the tourney did little in the way of unearthing new material for the tennis team next year. Two other frosh, Gillingham and Talmage, show promise, as does Jewett, sophomore.

Thirty Basketeers Answer First Call

Allen and Crumbaugh Will Conduct Sessions Until Football Season Ends

With a squad numbering more than thirty, including four lettermn and a wealth of material, both new and old, the first basketball practice Wednesday afternoon made prospects for a prosperous season look anything but bad.

At the initial practice the squad drilled lightly under the direction of Allen and Crumbaugh, who, with Hannah and Overly, make up the returning lettermen.

Practice will continue regularly under the leadership of Allen and Crumbaugh until Coach Honaker takes command at the end of the football season.

by King on its own thirty-yard line, a fifteen-yard pass from Blazer to Loessberg, and line plunges by Overly, Loessberg and Crawford to place the ball on King's one-yard line, from where Blazer dove across the goal-line on a quarterback sneak for the touchdown. Overly's try for extra point was blocked.

Maryville played King off its feet in the first half, but the Tornado came back strong in the last half, starting two drives which were beginning to look like scoring threats when finally stopped. The Scots collected six first downs to seven for King.

The starting Maryville line-up consisted of Alexander and Gray, ends; Gamble and Millsaps, tackles; Holloway nd Atchison, guards; Johnson, center; Blazer, quarterback; Loessberg and Krainock, halfbacks, and Overly, fullback. Substitutions were Cochrane, Crawford, Coulter, Richardson, Holaday, Shields, and Tippins.

Campus Sees New Sport In Tumbling

Club Members Work On Bars, Springbroad and Pyramid; To Appear Soon

The formation of the Maryville College Tumbling Club marks the beginning of another popular sport on the Hill. The club has a present membership of twelve men, who, under the direction of Sam Waid, are practicing each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights from 7:30 to 8:30. Membership is still open to those who wish to join.

At present, the members are in practice for a program to be given near the last of November, at which time they will exhibit elementary and advanced mat work, individual work on the springboard and bars, and formation work in pyramids, one of the most interesting is a ten-man pyramid with the well known "Tarzan" King at the point.

The club intends to become a permanent organization on the Hill, and hopes to give a number of exhibitions this year, both at home and away. All men interested in joining are asked to report for practice in the near future.

Something is radically wrong up Carson-Newman way. For the first time in many moons they have a sports editor who actually doesn't think the Orange and Blue gridders will win the Smoky Mountain Conference championship. . . .

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

One of our Student Volunteer visitors last week-end was much impressed when he learned of the "As You Like It" Saturday night. He was gratified he said to know that Maryville supported Shakespearian productions.

A.Y.L.I.

:—:—:

Some freshmen papers which we have been reading recently have revealed some interesting facts. One ingenious lad has it that Maryville College is the Roundtable. Mrs. Marston, he told us, is Guinevere, Dr. Lloyd is King Arthur, Dr. Stevenson is Merlin, and Dr. Hunter is Sir Galahad.

KNIGHTS

:—:—:

Prof. Davis, who has a way of making an important comment without giving the slightest sign of warning, vouchsafed a delightful one the other evening in his characteristic way. Someone in the kitchen broke a dish. In a remark-about-the weather tone of voice Prof. Davis volunteered this information, "I heard this morning that something broke loose in China."

:—:—:

We've been asked to say a good word for the 1935 Chilhowean. Accordingly we report that subscriptions are now on sale and that George Deebel, the first subscriber, paid in full on September 20. This bit of advertising is free both to the Chilhowean and to Mr. Deebel.

FREE

:—:—:

Dr. Hunter's torch-bearing secretaries report what was obvious, that all their performance Sunday night was not on the program. They still insist, though, that they are thorough young ladies, even when it comes to dropping candles from the candelabra they are placing on the stage.

TORCH

:—:—:

Someone found Lee Whetstone entertaining the notion that Tess and Dottie room in Bartlett Hall. When she was asked where she got that erroneous idea, she replied that she thought "all the Y. cabinet members roomed in Bartlett."

NOTION

:—:—:

Our friend and cohort, the Editor of the Chilhowean (more free advertising) brought us some World War-time copies of the Echo which he had unearthed somewhere. While looking through them we discovered that prayer meeting was held at Maryville College every Thursday evening. We learned also that the excessive tuition fee was $6.00 per term. The Palace Theater, about that time, was featuring "Lions Claw No. 11, starring Miss Marie Walcamp, the fearless film star, the greatest lady animal trainer in the world, and the largest number of trained animals in existence." The Senior class, on the other hand, had presented a few months earlier Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

:—:—:

Our little lesson about the library went astray, it would seem. Two freshmen girls, having been dared, strolled nonchalantly over into forbidden territory the other night and were rewarded not only with a little visit from the librarian but also with an appreciative burst of applause from the gentlemen in the immediate vicinity. The freshman boy, who innocently spent the entire evening with the ladies on the same night, was left unmolested and uninformed.

Dear Sir:

Inasmuch as it dealt with our column, or what our column ought to be, our editor has referred your recent letter to us for reply. We regret that you find missing "a column of foolishness of one sort or another, in which students are named and a more personal touch given." We rather thought we were writing, or attempting to write, such a column.

We appreciate your offers of assistance, and find some of your work very good. We regret that we cannot accept your offer unless you should become a regular member of the staff in the manner prescribed in the Highland Echo constitution. If, however, at any time you should like to contribute any material which we may use in this column we should be very grateful.

We are in sympathy with your belief that the identity of the writer of such a column should be absolutely unknown on the campus. We should be doubly grateful if you can suggest a method which we might use. Our manful efforts in that direction have not been entirely successful.

Sincerely yours,
A. NONY MOUS.

Christie's nationality will come to light. He was required with other night to tell the initials of his name. When his reply consisted of only the two initials A. and C., the initial of his middle name was asked for he answered that he could not afford a middle name.

Julia Peterkin, BRIGHT SKIN, Bobbs-Merrill Co., 1932

A "bright skin"—child of two races, acknowledged by neither—this is "Cricket", the heroine of Julia Peterkin's novel. Yet we find here no moralizing, no "never the twain shall meet" theme. As always, Miss Peterkin presents an epic in black—no Caucasion intrudes on the scene, which is laid on a South Carolina plantation.

In this, as in "Black April" and "Scarlet Sister Mary", it is not the plot, nor the characterization, excellently done though they are, which grips and holds the interest. Reading "Bright Skin" one can feel the dark heat rising from rich corn and rice lands, catch the savor of steaming pans of rice and beans, flanked by hunks of "sweeten bread", and almost hear the patting of feet and shrill, gay laughter drifting from a birthright supper or a barbeque.

Quite apart from this sensuous appeal, the author has caught the philosphy, the credo, of these people as only one who has lived close to them can. Their morals, born to the rhythm of revival night music and prayer, which are prone to melt to the vanishing point by Saturday night, their conception of life—work, love, and religion—and their facile passions and emotions—these things Miss Peterkin has reproduced even better than she has depicted action and conversation.

Absorbing almost to the point of being fascinating, "Bright Skin" is typical of Miss Peterkin's best style.

There's something magnificent in the game of golf, other than the smooth rhythm of a practiced swing; for instance, the sight of a white ball cutting a high arc into a background of heavy blue sky.

Hatred is love at low ebb.

Luck is in knowing when your hour strikes.

TUSCULUM GAME

A bad pass from center by Johnson in the closing minutes of the first half, resulting in a safety and two points for Tusculum, was the margin of defeat for Maryville as the Highlanders suffered their second straight 2-point loss, this time by an 8 to 6 score in Greeneville, October 6.

Both teams resorted to a punting game during the first half, with a 65-yard kick by Fithen, of Tusculum, placing the ball in position for the safety. Only three first downs, two of them by Tusculum, were made during the half.

Y. M. SPORTS

The Y. M. C. A. athletic program is scheduled to lead off early in November with interclass touch-football between the four classes.

This will be followed by the annual cross-country race, which will be run Novoember 16 between the halves of the M. C.-Murfreesboro game.

Class athletic directors are warned to have their football teams in readiness.

Impressive Service In Commemoration of Founders Held Today

Many Alumni And Visitors Return To Hill

As the Echo goes to press the second annual Founder's Day service is in progress. The observance of such a day as this was inaugurated last fall when tribute was paid to Dr. Isaac Anderson, the college's founder. This year the service commemorates the lives of two men who were active in the services of the college during Dr. Anderson's presidency, the Rev. Thomas Brown and Professor John S. Craig.

The service is to be opened with an invocation by Dr. Stevenson, followed by Dr. Lloyd's introductory remarks on the honoring of the founders of Maryville College. The Rev. Dr. John S. Eakin will speak on The Rev. Thomas Brown. The address on Professor Craig will be made by The Rev. Theron Alexander. Both speakers are Maryville College graduates. The choir will assist in the service with two anthems, "How Blest Are They" by Tchaikovsky and "Awake, Awake, Utter a Song" by Casee.

The Rev. Thomas Brown is known and remembered for his success in securing funds for the college in ante-bellum days. He was chiefly instrumental in raising the funds for the first two professorship endowments in a day when current expenses were met by the church people of Blount County and East Tennessee with no provision for

Faculty Members At E. T. E. A. Session

The thirtieth annual session of the East Tennessee Education Association was held at the University of Tennessee in Knoxville from October 25 to 27. The outstanding purposes of the meeting are fourfold:

1. Giving the teachers an opportunity to learn first-hand of the great movements in American education by bringing to them a number of leaders in this field.

2. Presenting for their study and consideration pressing state problems and the state program now being launched to meet these problems.

3. Instuctional and cultural contributions in art, music, and the liberal arts.

4. A study of health, physical education, and character building in relation to child welfare.

The teachers were given the privilege of hearing distinguished educators among whom were Dr. Glenn Frank, President of the University of Wisconsin, Director James Edward Rogers, National Physical Education Service, N. Y. C., and Judge Camille Kelley of Memphis, who is nationally known for her distinguished work in juvenile courts and who is a pleasing and captivating speaker.

SUNDAY VESPERS

For the vesper service on Sunday evening, October 28, Dr. Stevenson has selected the theme, "The Value of a Purposeful Zeal." The choir will present a composition of Tschaikowsky, "Forever Worthy is Thy Lamb."

Alpha Sigma Hears Celebrated Poetess

Rebecca Cushman Reads Own Poetry

Alpha Sigma Society enjoyed a very unusual program last Saturday evening. They were fortunate in having as their guest Miss Rebecca Cushman, internationally known journalist, authoress, and poetess. Miss Cushman has spent considerable time in the southeastern part of the United States, collecting information and anecdotes about the southern mountaineer. Her store of folk lore about the Tennessee mountain people is particularly rich.

Miss Cushman read several poems from her latest book, "Swinging Your Mountain Gal", and also gave some information regarding its compilation. She held her audience spell bound with the depth of feeling in her poetry, touching them with pathos or humoor almost at will.

Athenian Literary Society abandoned their meeting for the evening to enjoy this rare privilege with their brother society. Several members of the faculty were also present.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

At the Chapel Service on Wednesday morning, October 31, Dr. Stevenson will discuss "The Advantage in Disadvantage."

"Double Door" To Be Presented By College Players In November

Organization Also Elects Officers

"Double Door", the first dramatic presentation of the year, will be staged by College Players on November 23. "Double Door" is an exceptionally well-written melodrama by Elizabeth McFadden which has only recently been released for amateur production. The play was an outstanding success of 1933. W. J. Farma says in Players' Magazine, "'Double Door' was thrilling for the bitterly intense struggle carried on by Victoria Van Bret to dominate her sister and half-brothers and the Van Bret millions. I have never seen a villain and villainess receive such hearty applause at the end of a play."

The cast for the play is as follows:

Avery—Leola Halsey
Telson—Charles Allen
Louise—Ruth Clopton
William—Zula Trotter
Anne Darrow—Lois Brown
Caroline Van Bret—Jane Irwin
Victoria Van Bret—Ellen Hitch
Mr. Chase—Edmund Opitz
Mortimer Neff—Bernard Boyatt

"As You Like It" Tonight In Library

The Student Body Social Committee of the Student Council has arranged the second As-You-Like-It of the year to be held tonight in Thaw Hall at eight o'clock. The entertainment will be concentrated in the library this time and efforts will be made to make the evening even more successful socially than the one of two weeks ago.

It is expected that many of the alumni who will be on the campus in observation of Homecoming activities will attend the As-You-Like-It and take part in the entertainment.

Y. Joint Meeting Tomorrow In Chapel

The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. organizations will hold a joint meeting in the Chapel tomorrow afternoon at 1:30. Those who attend will be addressed by Dr. C. W. Henry, a man who brings to the platform a forceful personality combined with a wide experience among young people. and is now president of the Maryville in 1901. He was president of King College for several years, and is now president oof the Maryville Alumni Association. His presence here, so soon after the Homecoming program, is appropriate. His theme will be the motto of the Y. M.—"Seek Christ for in Him we Live."

Special music will be provided by a piano duet and a choir of eight girls, in addition to the men's ensemble.

Vienna Boys' Choir First Of Artists' Series, December 4

Robert Casadesus And Albert Spalding To Appear in 1935

The committee on the selection of visiting artists is glad to announce the names of the artists who have been secured to appear upon the Maryville College Artist Series for 1934-1935. The first recital will be on December 4, 1934, when the Vienna Boys' Choir, consisting of boys under fifteen years of age, will sing the Vienna Saengerknaben. On January 25, 1935, Robert Casadesus, the famous French pianist, will play. M. Casadesus has never appeared in America until this year. Albert Spalding, who is one of the most famous violinists in the world, will appear in his recital on March 1, 1935.

For a number of years these series, sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. and the Y. W. C. A. under the advisorship of Professor George Howell, have been enthusiastically received on the campus, and are well known all over East Tennessee because of the famous musicians who have appeared upon them. This year the programs promise unusual variety and artistic perfection. Tickets for $3.00 are now on sale for faculty members and town people who do not have student activity tickets. Reserved seats for the three programs may be secured for $.45. Tickets may be secured from Glover Leitch, Grace Proffitt, or Professor Howell.

THANKS TO F. D. R.—ART HERRIES

One dark and dreary night two tired but happy hitch-hikers entered that metropolis, Cincinnati, just as the murky shades of darkness were falling. As they approached the Y. M. C. A. building they saw through the fog and blackness a titanic figure approaching them on the right. It resolved itself into a man with an oath-encrusted vocabulary. He addressed the two Merry-Villains "Where you guys gonna bunk tonight?" With quaking voice they replied: "We seek refuge from this dark night in the warmth of the Y. M. C. A." Said he, "Why don't you mugs come with me? Youse guys is nuts to pay the 'Y'. I know where you can get it free."

The Merryvillains, seeing a chance for some cheap adventure en route, accepted the invitation. They accompanied the man through back alleys, over fences, and across dark bridges. They could not leave their guide, for now they were lost. Finally they reached a dirty, dismal, one-story building resembling a haunted warehouse on the waterfront. About it were encamped many a bum, some wanted for theft, some for hi-jacking, and some just wanted. Just the dregs of humanity.

The guide addressed some of these in their native dialect and then told the boys to go into the smoke filled room on the other side of the door. Through the blue haze a dim light was discernible in one of the corners. They were directed to this. The shape behind the light spat out some words: "Youse guys what just came in put yer name on dat guy's list over there." After entering the names they were told to await calling.

The two courageous and thoughtless adventurers sought rest from their weary journey on the hospitable boards over in one corner. Around them reposed in sundry positions choice specimens of human derelicts from all ports of the world. None were clean. With no small degree of inward trepidation the would-be heroes opened a conversation with some of the less hardened of the men. Many tales, both weird and enthralling were recounted to the gullible college boys. They heard of fighting in far-off Afghan where the raconteur was the so le survivor of five hundred. After a few such tales their names were called by the chairman of the reception committee.

They entered with him into the private sanctuary from which he had jnst come. "What's youse guys' names? Where' you from? Where' you goin?" These were fired in rapid succession. At last came the question: "How come you gents got here " One answered that he had graduated from college the day before and was on his way home. The other said that he was a ministerial student also on his way home. With these replies the pencil fell

FOUNDERS' DAY—

Today has been set apart as a day on which to observe the memory of the founders of Maryville College.

On November 4, 1933, the first annual observance of Founders' Day was held. At that time the program centered around the life and work of Dr. Isaac Anderson, the founder and first president of Maryville College. This year the program centers around the lives of two associates of Dr. Anderson, namely, Reverend Thomas Brown and Professor John S. Craig.

In reading the book, "A Century of Maryville College", written by Dr. Samuel Tyndale Wilson, President Emeritus of the College, and published in 1919, one cannot fail to be impressed with the heroic endeavors, the complete self-sacrifice, the untiring services of those who have gone before us in establishing Maryville as a unique college, unique in the fact of its pure democracy, its Christian brotherhood.

In our busy life we are too prone to forget the efforts of the past. By just such a ceremony as that in the College Chapel this morning we are reminded that the present is based upon the past.

The German Club held its first meeting of the year in Alpha Sigma Hall last Wednesday night. After it had been decided that the club should meet every two weeks, the members sang German songs accompanied by Dorothy Stadelmann. Plans for a German table in Pearsons were also discussed.

All the old, old things that sold for years practically nude and now you wouldn't think of buying them unless they were all dressed up in cellophane.

That's what we want to do—dress up this column, not necessarily in cellophane, but a new idea once in awhile. You know and we know that we have a good drug store with good service and we are seeking new ways to tell about it.

Alumni Exchange News At Barbecue

Handing out buns and pork, coffee and doughnuts to about two hundred alumni is an entertaining and unusual task because as the procession moves slowly, very slowly forward, much news of old students floats up and down the waiting line.

Lucille Swafford, who is teaching the first gade in Riceville Grammar School, compares notes with Leslie Webb, principal of the Bungalowtown Grammar School. Clifford Withers is doing government social service work in Etowah, and hopes to go to Vanderbilt in February to take additional training in social service.

Fred Kirchner pushes along as usual, but in a brief moment of seiousness reveals the fact that he is working on his M. S. at the University of Tennessee. Veta May Stephens is teaching expression in the Sweetwater High School, and is liking her work a great deal.

Other members of the class of '34 attended the game: Malvern Clopton, insurance salesman of Knoxville, and Carrie Lou Tweed who is teaching in the Greeneville City High School; Mary Elizabeth Harrison is teaching at Washington College; Juanita Law in the Everett Grammar School.

Madison Byar came south for the Homecoming, and reports he is teaching in the City System of Cincinnati. Ruth Peery, '33 is teaching at Walland.

Mlidred Brooks, doing graduate study at the University of Tennessee, Margaret Cooley, Andrew Alexander, Tom Weese and John Springer were also at the game and added atmosphere to the scene that resembled those of 1933-1934.

Mike Testa found time to leave Princeton Seminary for the weekend.

Joe Woodard, former football and baseball star, received his share of doughnuts, and Mildred McKenzie, '32, who is teaching English and Expression in a Chattanooga High School reported that she enjoyed the coffee especially.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Ramsey were present, and Mrs. Ramsey looked exactly like Bill West of the Class of '32. Mr. and Mrs. David Marston came over from Knoxville where Mr. Marston is teaching. Ruth Weese Marston is "just keeping house now".

Teachers Run Wild Over Scots In 1st Half to Win 19-6

Blazer Leads Scot Rally With Touchdown In Last Quater

(By Dick Meadows)

Unloosing a slashing first half offensive resulting in three touchdowns, East Tennessee Teachers left Wilson Field on the long end of a 19-6 score in the Scoots' Homecoming game last night.

The first half was all Teachers, with a 139-pound quarterback named Boyer, and a plunging 180-pound fullback, Captain Hunt, reeling off long gains time and again. A deceptive Teachers shift kept the Highlanders guessing, while magnificent blocking cleared the way for the spectaular runs. Teachers chalked up eleeven first downs during the first half to one for the Scots.

The Highlanders turned the tables on their opponents during the last half, however, and not only held Teachers to one first down, but kept the ball in enemy territory most of the time. The only threatening Scot drive of the game was rewarded in the fourth period when Blazer plunged across the goal from the one-yard line for a touchdown. This drive was featured by a pass from Blazer to Henry netting 25 yards.

In spite of the lamost hopeless task of overtaking the Teachers in the second half, the Scots fought grimly for a victory up until the last. After being brushed aside frequently in the first thalf, the linemen hurled back every thrust after half-way mark, and the backs drove as though victoroy were just ahead.

Outstanding linemen for the night were hard to find, except for O'Neal Gray, who played his best game of the season. His tackling and punting were big helps in holding down and finally stopping the Teachers scoring. Other forwards who stood out, paticularly in the last halt, were Gamble, Atchison, and Johnson, while Blazer, Overly, Loessberg, and Kainock all played well in the back field.

The Teachers attack functioned smoothly throughout the first half, with everything humming when Hunt or Blazer had the ball. Hunt scored all three Teachers touchdowns, and backed up the line with an uncanny ability to plug at the holes opened by the Scot fore ranks. Groves, tackle, Jones, guard, and Anderson, half, also played good defensive football for the Johnson Citians.

The Teachers did not wait long to score, putting over a touchdown on the fifth play of the game. Maryville received the opening kick-off, but fumbled on the first play. Teachers recovered, and Boyer broke off tackle for 30 yards on the next play. Hunt then smashed his way from the 15-yard line across the goal in three drives. The try for extra point was blocked.

Early in the second quarter, however, the Teachers team-roller started down the field on another of its unstopable advances. Four successive plays were good for 15, 20, 20 and 10 yards, respectively, placing the ball on Maryville's 10-yard stripe. Following another gain of 6 yards, Hunt plunged across the remaining distance to the goal. The kick for extra point was low.

The Scots came back in the last quarter to score their touchdown after a pass from Blazer to Henry gained 25 yards, putting the ball on Teachers 15-yard marker. After two or three line plaays, aided by two penalties, had placed the ball on the 1-yard line and first down, Blazer scored on the third line buck. A pass for extra point was knocked down.

'Sport Talk' Saw Cochrane As 4-Letter Man

By BRYAN PAYNE

Coach Honaker, speaking at the pep session the other night, paid Jim Cochrane, Scot tackle who is now recovering successfully from an appendicitis operation, a fine tribute when he said that never had there been a likelier prospect for tackle position on the Highlander eleven since Bob Thrower played at that position. That's a good many years, folks, and fine tackles have come and gone in the meantime, all of which makes it more impressive. Cochrane's misfortune not only knocks down his prospects for lettering in football but also wipes out a fond hope he had been holding for some little time now. Had he been able to finish the football season, he would undoubtedly have lettered in three other sports, thus making the second man ever to letter in four at Maryville. Gene McMurray was the first one. The fact that he is a formidable tackle, a strong and nimble wrestler, a good baseball man, and a valuable weight man on the track team, once lst summer throwing the shot for 43 feet, would have won that distinction for him. But Cochrane is game, and will be back in sports as soon as he is able.

* * * *

These black clouds of sportdom occasionally have a convenient way of whipping around so that the proverbial silver lining shines in full splendor. That is what happened in the case of Maurice Bailey, junior and Highlander center, who was recently disqualified from Conference competition. Having labored from day to day out on Wilson Field for two tough seasons with small recognition because of the hold which Russell had on center position, Bailey was not a little disappointed at seeing his hopes for the varsity regular crumble. And now, word comes that he will be playing football again, this time as captain of the Bulldogs, varsity reserve squad. That is justice, and it now remains only for the Bulldogs to work out a schedule of three or four games to be played on Wilson Field while the varsity squad is away. Teams which have been considered are T. M. I., Porter High, and others in this vicinity. Those faithful Highlanders who play with the Bulldogs somehow escape the glory with which we speak of the varsity, yet they play on for the love of the game, showing a degree of loyalty which few reach. This Bulldog schedule is a good thing. . . . let's talk it up!

Scots Leave Next Week For Battle With St. Xavier

Will Be Out To Avenge 25-0 Defeat of Last Meeting

After playing two consecutive conference games on the local field, the Highlander gridders go on their second long road trip of the season next week to play the St. Xavier University Musketeers Saturday afternoon in Cincinnati.

St. Xavier defeated the Scots 25 to 0 in 1932, the last time the two team met, and are reported to have a better team this year. Last week the Musketeers stopped West Virginia Wesleyan, conquerors of New York University, by a 13-6 score.

In winning four of its five games this year, St. Xavier has relied on speed, passes, and good punting. The team is lighter than usual this year, but has brushed aside opponents having line averages of from 185 to 195 pounds.

WOMEN FINALISTS

Meet Monday Afternoon

For the third straight year, Eleanor Johnson and Mary Gillingham meet in the final match of the women's fall tennis tournament, which will be played Monday afternoon.

Johnson ceded No. 1, reached the finals by eliminating Martha McSpadden, No. 3, 6-0, 12-10, while Gillingham, No. 2, won over Florence Hyde, No. 4, in the other semi-final round by 6-2, 6-2.

GILLINGHAM DEFEATS TALMAGE TO WIN FROSH NET TOURNEY

After being delayed several days by bad weather, Ted Gillingham, promising young netman from Pennsylvania coming, from behind in the second and third sets, defeated Roy Talmage, 2-6, 6-4, 6-0, to win the frosh singles tourney last week.

Neither finalist encountered tough opposition until the final round. The winner defeated Gillespie, Myers and Drake to reach the finals.

Cochrane Rests Well After Operation

May Return For Wrestling

Latest reports from Carson Hospital, where Jim Cochrane, Scot tackle, is recovering from an appendicitis operation performed Wednesday night, say that all is well, and that, although out as far as football is concerned, he may be in fair shape when wrestling practice rolls around the corner.

Asked about the Scot-Teacher tilt, he looked sadly down at the floor, and said, "We oughta beat 'em, but. . . gosh, I wish I could be in there."

There was a meeting of the Nature Club Tuesday night in the Zoology lab. At this meeting Miss Hudson told about her trip through North Carolina. She also showed some pressed specimens which she had obtained there. The club planned to take a trip to Gold Creek Falls sometime soon.

The Ethics professor's statement that one can make a baby angry simply by holding its BABY hand too long elicited some whispered remarks among the members of the class to the effect that in time those babies would grow up and change their minds about such causes for anger. He gave each of them a blue meal ticket with instructions for getting to the White Duck; four blocks ahead, three blocks to the left, turn right at the gas station and straight ahead till you hit the White Duck. The meal was wholesome and good: inevitable bean soup, hamburger and spuds, and a cup of Java.

After the hearty meal they retraced their steps to the building adacent to the "Y" from which they had originally started. It was a government-supported refuge for transients. A one-legged soldier was in charge. He told them to undress and hang all their clothes on one coat-hanger (a nail). Next they had to take a shower which they had been longing for anyway. They were given a towel the size of man's handkerchief. After as thorough a mopping as possible they were given a burlap sack with holes at the corner. This was to serve as a nightshirt. One of the Merryvillains, the shorter, was covered to the knees. The other had covering only to halfway between the knees and the next joint (coming up).

They were shepherded up a winding stairway to a large common sleeping room. Passing rows upon rows of cots they were finally ushered to two cots below the only window in the room. What price sleep?

"Green Bay Tree" Is Alpha Sigma Bid For Midwinter Cup

Three of Five Characters New To Maryville Stage

"The Green Bay Tree". by Mordaunt Sharp is to be presented as the Alpha Sigma mid-winter production early in the spring.

THE STAGE, international theatrical magazine, says of "The Green Bay Tree", "the play is worked out with a scrupulous regard to probability and a faithful respect for character which place it among the best of many seasons." There is Mr. Dulcimer, a wealthy adept in the art of exquisite living, who loves soft lights, white flowers, and good music. He has taste and plenty of money to gratify it.

Dulcimer, however, is no weakling. He knows what he wants and always gets it. To supply a human touch lacking in his life he had adopted the young son of a drunken father. He rears Julian in surroundings as sheltered as money can make them. The play centers around this younger man's vain fight to escape from the ties of luxury which has sapped his moral fibre.

Julian at the beginning of the play has fallen in love with an eminently practical and charming young woman, Leonora. Leonora tries to help Julian to break away from the bondage of his easy life and to find a means to earn his own living. In spite of tremendous

Robinson's Poem "Tristram," Subject of Workshop Meeting

Divergence From Usual Plan Of Procedure

At the weekly meeting of the Writer's Workshop on Tuesday the usual plan of procedure, which is the reading of original papers by the members, was varied. Instead, those who were interested participated in a group discussion of Robinson's "Tristram", led by Miss Nathalia Wright. This particular work was chosen partly on its own merits, and partly because of its familiarity to the group.

Perhaps the liveliest interest was displayed in the character of Gawain who, though not a major character, has been developed by Robinson into a very definite personality. The passages in which he figured were selected for reading aloud.

The re-echoing of images, ideas, and even words received considerable notice. Various striking images were pointed out and comments made on their appropriateness. The contrasts in the two Isolts was another of the interesting aspects in the study of the poem.

Selections of witty phrases and clever playing with words were pointed out and read. Comment on Robinson's style followed as a result, with a difference of opinion as to the conciseness of his diction.

It is planned to devote occasional meetings to similar discussions. Another on Robinson has been planned for November under the leadership of Mr. Harris.

Two new members, Barbara Alter and Calvin Schmidt, were present at this meeting.

Varsity Debate Try-Outs Attract Many

Sixty Freshmen Boys Attend Meeting

All of last year's varsity debaters, and a considerable number of students new to Maryville forensics attended on Tuesday, the first meeting of aspirans to places on the team for the current year. It is still possible for upper classmen interested in positions on the varsity debate team to make arrangements with Maria Wynn for the try-outs which will be held in December. A list of materials for the subject has been posted in the library.

The Committee guiding debate activities for this year, during Professor Queener's absence has planned two trips, one into North Carolina in March, and the other to Franklin, Indiana, in April in order to attend the provincial convention. A schedule of debates for the year follows:

Feb. 1—King-Maryville, single, women
Emory-Henry-Lincoln Memorial University-Maryville, triangle, men
Feb. 2—Virginia-Intermont-Maryville, single, women

Hi Trailers Select Two New Members

The ritual was read by President Archibald Pieper before the entire club and four ex-trailer guests. Herries and Christie, having qualified for entrance, had been voted in at a previous meeting.

Supper, consisting of hamberger, coffee, seasoning, and lesser edibles was served by the neophytes. The men spent the remainder of the evening around the fireplace, telling stories, and reviewing old times. The Club plans to make several hikes after the current football season is ended.

T. V A. Excavators Unearth Valuable Remains Near Here

Nine Different Civilizations Revealed

In connection with the work of the Tennessee Valley Authority in constructing the Norris dam reservoir, only 50 miles from Maryville, many valuable remains of the aborigines have been unearthed. Full details of the archeological work being done may be found in the October issue of the "American Forests".

Near Caryville, Tennessee, a Cherokee village was found built on the site of an earlier prehistoric settlement. Each village possessed a temple, the latter built on the foundations of the earlier. The upper temple measured thirty by forty feet, and had a raised baked clay altar with a fire pit in the center. The walls were thatched and were about ten feet high. The roof was made by bending the tops of the young trees that formed the wall inward, and binding, then thatching them. A semi-public building near the temple was of the same construction but had a flat fire pit rather than a raised altar. Nearby was a private dwelling, eighteen by fifteen feet, constructed of much smaller poles. At the edge of one wall was a raised dais, the seat of the head of the house. In the center was a small fire pit.

The stockade of the village was constructed of tree trunks that were at least ten inches in diameter. This fence took right angle turns occasionally so that the fence of the stockade could be protected by a crossfire of arrows. There was a wall of poles in front of the gateway to prevent direct fire of the enemy on occupants entering or Humanity lives for it. From the sun-baked lands of Gold Coast Africa to the fog-bound, cold, and bleak shores of Newfoundland people prepare themselves for this, the inevitable. Spring, summer, autumn and winter has each in turn, its seasonable effect, but the current issue continues to be. It is used effectively by rich and poor alike from the Bowery to Fifth Avenue. The circus strong man, the most profound weakling, the eminent statesman, the unfortunate, illiterate, the old and experienced, the young and foolish each, in his inimitable way makes its contact. Men kill themselves because of it; women fade from lack of it; countries are revolutionized; kings are deposed, and yet it remains one of the most vital and essential problems of all time.

Atmosphere and peoples are its two most common and still essential factors. We have the atmosphere of the South Seas with its traditional song, moonlight playing on silvery waters, and the love lust heart of the native. Next one can picture the busy home of the working man with wife continually stewing over stove and sink waiting for her mate to come from the dirty and monotonous work of the factory. Still further we follow this certain something until it settles at the threshold of a small but unique little college set back in the hills of East Tennessee.

This phenomena, which we all sense, is generally referred to as "The game of Love in its introductory stages." We refer to courtship or more intimately termed spooning, fussing, and at Maryville "moonshining." In laying my climax of this manly at the door of Maryville I do so because of the very fine and unique way it is handled or shall I say dealt with. Speaking as a stranger at Maryville I can truly say that most young people of other sections, during this so-called modern era, have gotten the idea that associations with the opposite sex are to be accepted as merely a matter of course. Public exhibitions of affection, vulgar dancing, motion pictures of drinking and debauchery of youth and other such examples have spoiled the fineness of this art of the centuries.

At Maryville one absorbs, before long, the idea of a girl in the spirit of an unusual luxury, or something to be treasured a little higher than the commonplace. A boy, new to Maryville, finds himself appreciating talks to young ladies effort on the part of Julian the influence of Dulcimer and luxury are too much for him and he fails.

RED CROSS—

In connection with the annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross which will be held this year from November 11 through November 29, we print the following material received from the National Headquarters of the American Red Cross Association.

"Among the many calls upon college-trained men and women is that of volunteer service in the ranks of the American Red Cross. The qualities of temperament, as well as of mind, which make students and graduates so much in demand in business and in civic organizations fit them ideally for the emergency and regular activities of local Red Cross Chapters, of which there are more than 3,700.

Last year, for instance there were 78 disasters in the United States in which the Red Cross gave relief to sufferers. Although each had the benefit of the experience and general direction of trained Red Cross disaster workers, the bulk of the work was performed by local chapters. The kind of teamwork found in football, basketball and other college sports was necessary to make effective the giving of shelter, food, medical attention, hospitalization and transportation to victims of flood, fire and storm. Disasters are "extra-curricular" so far as communities are concerned. Quick thinking, organization ability, versatility and enthusiasm are important assets of Red Cross workers and volunteers at such times. Chapter officers and committeemen recognize this and everywhere enlist the services of young men and women.

"Depression years have seen the ultilization of many young women volunteers schooled in home economics. Many chapters invite them to supervise food and nutrition projects and in many instances to conduct classes in these subjects. Students and graduates with a knowledge of social work have found their talents much needed where there is "case work" to do. Many who have found it difficult to obtain immediate employment at the end of the college year have entered wholeheartedly into production, office, braille, civilian home service, disaster, Roll Call and other activities of their hoem Chapters. Thousands of these college men and women were once, as pupils in grade or common schools, members of the Junior Red Cross and have never entirely lost contact with the National relief agency.

"This fall a great many college students will join with zest in extending by door-to-door invitation the Red Cross membeship privilege to millions of homes. The Roll Call is from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving November 11 to 29, and supports work of Red Cross chapters in communities and the broad helpful program of the national organization."

BELGIUM—

King Leopold recently addressed several thousand veterans who fought under his father on the Yser twenty years ago and with whom he himself, though only a boy, shared the danger and fatigue of active service. He called for Belgian unity, and confidence in the nation's future. He advocated preparedness to defend the frontier and spare the population the horrors oof a new invasion.

More Science

First man discovered herbs that cured human ills, then germs that caused them. Then he took more herbs to kill more germs.

Then he found that germs in the mouth cause plenty of trouble. Looking around he discovered ANTISEPTINE, which was sudden death to the germs which cause dental trouble.

He mixed this into a toothpaste, made of it a polisher, made it palatable, while maintaining its mean nature where germs are concerned and called it ANTISEPTINE TOOTH PASTE.

And we have it, sell it and recommend it. In large tubes, any one of which we will sob out a farewell to for 25 cents.

Periodically, gift books become a problem for the President, and it is necessary to transfer them by truck to the Library of Congress. The best known book sent to the President is Lincoln Steffen's "Autobiography",— of which Mr. Roosevelt already had a copy.

Edouard Herriot's success with his party at the Radical Socialist congress at Nantes was confirmed this week when the congress closed, but it is generally admitted that the real work has just begun. THREE "I" CLUB

A meeting of the Three "I" Club was held Tuesday evening, at 6:45 p. m. in Theta Hall, with Louis Krainock presiding. It was decided to include in the membership of the club students from Wisconsin and Michigan. A nominating committee was appointed and officers are to be elected at the next regular meeting.

ALABAMA CLUB

The regular meeting o. the Alabama Club was held on Thursday night in Baldwin Parlors. Betty Kent informed the group of the picnic to be held Thursday afternoon of next week as the taking of the club Chilhowean picture on Tuesday noon. An informal debate was held on the question, Resolved that the Moonshine Bell should ring at 6 p. m. instead of 5 p. m. The affirmative side was upheld by Leroy Obert; the negative by Ruth Clopton. Frank Dean acted as chairman, and the judges were Bill Morgan, Carl Richie and Francis Gamble. The judges' decision upheld the arguments of Mr. Obert. Piano selections by Joe Cortez were enjoyed, and the meeting adjourned.

OHIO CLUB

The Ohio Club meeting in Theta Hall on November 1 was opened by the president, Herbert Hunt.

After the secretary's report, the members voted to have half a page in the Chilhowean this year. A party to be held in the woods some time in the near future was planned for and a committee appointed to take charge.

Following a short interval of music the club adjourned after having decided to held regular meetings twice a month on Wednesdays.

It is known to be true that a great many Maryville graduates find their life partners here in school. What better recommendation can be given a school and its life than that it develops as fine a feeling of association between the sexes, as to cumulate its "moonshining" into that something termed Marriage. It is quite improbable for us to follow the way further as human nature controls life after marriage and Reno is still quite some distance from Maryville.

Highlanders To Play Intersectional Game Today

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Tonight, as this column is being written, the pride of Highlander athletics, twenty-four strong, is moving rapidly northward to the Ohio metropolis, where it will meet with a strong St. Xavier eleven at the Cincinnati field tomorrow afternoon, in what might be called the first intersectional game played by the Highlanders for several years. According to all advance reports obtained from Cincinnati sports writers and elsewhere, the Scotties go into the game via the subway, which means in this case that they are not even conceded the honor of a single touchdown. Altho the two teams are even in honors, having met only two times in the past, St. Xavier, it is said, "will probably come thru unscathed". However, the Scotties, having played against the same system once before this season, should unloose the effects of the rigid workouts of the past week without much trouble.

* * * *

And just to show you how the boys themselves are feeling about the game let us reproduce a little of the prattle which ensued not so long ago in a huddle consisting of varsity men, and of course your scribe. It was Toots Blazer, scrappy quarterback and idol of the town, speaking, and for the benefit of the uninitiated, all that remains unsaid after Toots has sounded the gamut of possible conversation topics is not worth its weight in breath. "I'll just tell you boys why we're hitting back for the victory trail. Son, it's because Coach Honaker's got the right spirit. That's why." And he shook his finger in our faces as if he really meant it. Everything was quiet for a few moments as we stood there in the little circle, each one, perhaps, feeling just a tiny thrill run down his spine at the simple, straight-from-the-heart confession made by one who plays the kind of footbaall Toots Blazer plays. Then all of a sudden Butter Atchison chimed in with "That's right", and so did Jack Overly, and everything looked brighter.

* * * *

We know not why, but the longer the trek away from the home field, the greater is the entourage which follows in the wake of the gridmen. Tonight several carloads, and one truck-load, of students rolled off College Hill slated for an all-night drive thru cold cold Kentucky. All of which means that the Highlanders will be greeted by a small, but enthusiastic band of sport fans when they trot out on the field tomorrow afternoon. Not only will students from the campus be there, but also many old grads who live nearby. In a letter recently received by this corner, one person wrote enthusiastically that he would be there on the sidelines, and that he would be glad to relay the particulars as he saw them to this page. Since your scribe is hopelessly wired to his multifarious existence on the Hill, such an offer is gladly accepted.

* * * *

From up Ohio way this week comes some interesting comment on the statement which appeared in this column last week to the effect that Cochrane would not have been the second Maryville man to letter in four sports in one year. The letter is from Bill Marston, alumnus of Maryville College, who is now in Loveland, Ohio. A part of his letter follows:

"I hereby wish to call your attention to the fact that Joe Woodard, while a freshman, made four letters. Joe's track record was due to his heaving the javelin for a new college record at that time, taking a first place in the meet with U. T. For verification of this, see the records of 1929-1930."

According to the records, Bill, what you say is true, and we thank you for your interest.

HONAKER TAKES TWENTY-FOUR ON CINCINNATI TRIP

St. Xavier Uses Strictly Notre Dame System; Starting Lineup Unchanged

The Highlander gridiron warriors left yesterday at noon for Cincinnati, Ohio, where they play the St. Xavier University Musketeers this afternoon at 2:30 p. m., Eastern time, in what apparently will be a hard-fought battle.

Xavier is the favorite to take off the honors, but the Scots are prepared to make the Musketeers fight for everything they gain, and over-confidence on the part of the Xavier players may add to the chances of the locals.

Thus far this season, St. Xavier has lost only once, to Centre by a 7-6 score, has tied St. Louis University, and has defeated West Virginia Wesleyan, Transylvania, and two smaller colleges. The Musketeers use strictly Notre Dame style of play, and the deceptive shift has figured highly in their victories. Good passing and plenty of speed in the backfield has also helped.

The two lines taking the field this afternoon have about the same weight averages, but the light guards used in the Notre Dame system bring down the Musketeer average considerably. The St. Xavier ends, one tackle, and the center are heavier than the Scots at those posts by several pounds, while the Maryville guards, weighing about 187 each, have a weight advantage over the 166 pound opposing guards. The Scot backfield averages a few pounds heavier than the Musketeers.

The Highlanders have shown up well in practice this week, but because of bad weather, were unable to take part in as many scrimmages as Coaches Honaker and Thrower had planned. The Scot "Bulldogs" could not hold the drives of the regulars in scrimmage, and the only way they could advance the ball was on passes. In spite of the good showing made in practice this week, Coach Honakee sees little chance for a Maryville victory, and thinks the Scots will be lucky to hold the Musketeers to two or three touchdowns.

The same team that started against Teachers last week will

Sophs Outclass Seniors, Juniors Top Frosh In Interclass Football

Paul, Dowell, Sophs, Make Long Runs To Cross Double Stripes

A well-organized sophomore touch football team surpassed the senior eleven in all departments of play yesterday afternoon in the interclass series to win a 12-0 victory and the right to meet the juniors Friday, November 9, for the championship.

The sophomores took the lead about the middle of the first quarter when Harry Paul, soph back, intercepted a senior pass on his own 40-yard line and raced 60 yards for a touchdown.

In the second quarter, Wacky Dowell grabbed a pass from Art Allan and outdistanced the senior secondary 40 yards to the goal, giving the sophomores a 12 to 0 advantage and almost assuring a soph victory. Attempts to make the extra points were unsuccessful each time.

The seniors succeeded in stopping the sophomore scoring during the last half but could not muster a scoring punch rf their own. Both teams completed an unusually large number of the numerous passes charaacteristic of touch-football, but the sophomores intercepted more passes than their opponents.

The sophomoore-junior game next Friday looms as the most hotly contested scrap of the series, with the uniors hoping to retain their crown and the sophomores out to avenge the 6-0 defeat by the same team in the final game last year.

Bill Quigley Scores In First Quarter For Juniors; Win 6-0

A lone touchdown, secured by a completed pass from the twenty yard line, enabled the junior class touch-football team to eke out a victory over the frosh in the first of the series of interclass games sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. Bill Quigley scored in the first quarter of the game.

The game was featured largely with long forward passes and wide end runs. The freshmen presented a hard-fighting aggregation that several times fought almost to the junior goal line, only to lose the ball on downs or fumbles. The juniors, using a consistent aerial attack, appeared to be a smooth, well balanced team, capable of giving the sophomores a hard battle in the final game.

Although the type of game prevented any individual playing of note, the work of Reese, Ross, and Talmage for the frosh, and of Shaw, Lavendar, and Fisher for the juniors was best.

JOHNSON BEATS GILLINGHAM TO WIN 6TH CROWN

Johnson, Gillingham Have Fought It Out In Finals For Four Years

Playing the same steady brand of tennis that has characterized her march to six straight tournament championships, Eleanor Johnson turned back the advances of Mary Gillingham in the final round of the women's fall tennis tournament Monday afternoon to win in straight sets, 6-2, 6-0.

Although pushed to win the second set of the semi-finals match against Martha McSpadden 12-10 after winning the first set 6-0, Johnson was never in real trouble throughout the tourney, winning every match without being extended to three sets.

Not since the fall tournament of her freshman year has Johnson failed to win the crown, and each year Gillingham has driven her way to the finals, only to lose the last round.

Was Mr. Thornhill saying anything when he said that Dr. Orr was the only man he NOTHING knew who could talk all day about nothing at all? Perhaps Dr. Orr thinks that some Seniors did that very thing on their Ethics exams.

A certain girl who rooms in 43 Pearsons became very much alarmed about the inertia of her RADIATORS radiator. She immediately invited Mr. Brown to call upon her. Mr. Greiner proved what interests were paramount with him. Some of the Home Economics CAKE students had brought some delectable results of their cooking efforts to Chemistry class. Maryville has played St. Xavier twice before today, losing 25-0 in 1922 and winning 26-6 in 1924. Coach Thrower played in both games for the Highlanders as a star tackle.

The Maryville group will leave Cincinnati tonight at 9 o'clock and reach home early Sunday morning.

GREEN BAY TREE

Another strong chaacter in "The Green Bay Tree" is Owen, the father of Julian. In the play he is a reformed drunkard who has become a preacher, militant in his fight against evil. He unites with Leonora in trying to save Julian from the enervating effects of luxury. Owen considers Dulcimer and everything connected with him evil and in a final effort to free his son he shoots Dulcimer.

The fifth character in the play is Trump, butler to Dulcimer. Trump is an immaculate character who is indispensable for the running of Dulcimer's bachelor establishment. He has been with his employer long enough to anticipate his every wish. In some cases he even thinks for him.

Following the competitive tryouts the following cast was selected:

Mr. Dulcimer—Robert Gillespie
Julian—Glover Leitch
Leonora—Nina Gamble
Owen—Wilson Leathers
Trump—Robert Godfrey

"The Green Bay Tree" will be presented early in the second semester and will be stage-managed by Ernest Lowe, assisted by John Elliott. Alex Christie is Business Manager.

leaving. It is beieved that this may be the fortress that Colonel Montgomery thought too strong to attack during his Colonial campaign.

Forty explorations in the vicinity of the Norris Dam have revealed nine different civilizations. There are hundreds of prehistoric shell heaps and caves in the vicinity of these explorations. Some of the former represent the accumulations of a thousand years and, altogether, contain millions of tons of shell and bones. Copper ceremonial objects of rare design were found in some of the mounds.

Series of open-front caves divulged many artifacts and eight skeletons. The latter rested in ash-filled hollows lined with bark. About the bones were remnants of a roughly woven twine fabric in which the bodies had been wrapped. Other graves revealed the remains of children, trinket bedecked and buried with pipes and other prized possessions of their bereaved parents.

Some skeletons were found whose skulls were entombed in giant conch shells. The lower half of the shell was cut away to accommodate the head and neck of the deceased. Then the upper portion was placed over the face and cemented to the bottom part. The conch shells used are native only to the Gulf of Mexico. They were probably used as a medium of exchange by Indians in long canoe trips from the Gulf.

These TVA probings into the lives and deaths of our American predecessor s are under the full charge of Major W. S. Webb, head of the department of anthropology of the University of Kentucky.

College Requires Auto Permit Plates

Announcement was made in chapel on Wednesday morning that the automobile permit plates were ready for distribution and that all, faculty members and students who possess or regularly use cars at the College should make application for a permit. Each person is to apply to the Business Manager for a permit giving information concerning his car and expressing a preference as to the regular parking space preferred among the spaces which have been provided and numbered on various convenient portions of the campus.

It is believed that it will be helpful to have all the cars belonging to the College group registered; also the appearance and convenience of the campus will be facilitated by the assignment of regular parking places to those who keep cars regularly on the campus. The plan includes not only students who remain on the campus but also those who drive to the campus for classes each day.

Number 52 of the current issue of STANDARDS AND RULES is as follows: "Keeping Automobiles at the College by students is discouraged. Students and Faculty keeping or regularly using cars must secure permits from the College Business Manager who will assign regular parking places. Abuse of this privilege will lead to the withdrawal of a permit at any time. A deposit of $1.00 is required when permit is issued, and will be returned when the student returns the permit tag at the end of the year."

While there are open places along the roads and on the campus which are not assigned for parking purposes they are not to be used except for transient parking. Each member

Drs. E. R. Hunter and Hill Shine are attending today a meeting held at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Cookeville. The meeting has been called for the purpose of organizing a Tennessee Folklore Society.

It is the intention of the group sponsoring the society to collect as much folklore as possible before the work of the TVA has altered the countryside and made such a work too difficult. The folklore will include ballads, linguistic peculiarities, superstitions, and any other local characteristics.

Irene Bewley who presented a program of East Tennessee ballads here two years ago as a YMCA benefit has some connection with the movement.

Home Ec. Department Will Sponsor Art Exhibit Next Week

Paper Deals With Geology of Tennessee

The second week of November is Fine Arts Week! In keeping with this period, the Home Economics Department of the College is presenting an exhibit of unusual worth on the third floor of Science Hall starting on Monday, November 12, and continuing through Friday, November 16.

The exhibit includes one hundred and fifty reproductions of the greatest paintings by famous artists. Such pictures as "The Age of Innocence" by Reynolds, "Blue Boy" by Gainsborough, "The Last Supper" by da-Vinci, and "The Gleaners" by Millet are in the collection.

Miss Clara Brown of the department will lecture, and college students will be present at all times to give information. A nominal cost of five cents is to be charged for student season tickets and for children's season tickets, and ten cents for adult season tickets. All the proceeds will go toward purchasing pictures for the college. Tickets may be procured from Marcella Ardern and Florine Stephens.

The exhibit will be open from three to five every afternoon and on Thursday and Friday evenings from six-thirty to eight-thirty.

It is hoped that the people of Maryville will also make use of the educational advantage during the short time that the exhibit is here.

Dr. McMurray Reads Before Faculty Club

Dr. J. H. McMurray read before the Faculty Club last Monday evening a paper entitled "Our Habitat" in which he presented some very unusual information.

The paper dealt with the geological background of Tennessee and pointed out a remarkable phenomenon in the structural formation of the mountains. Beginning with the mountains in the eastern end of the state and going westward there is found remains of all the geological ages. These successive layers of rock are found in chronological order from the archaeozoic age to the present.

Dr. McMurray also told that the East Tennessee mountains are the oldest in the world, and that they contain many remains showing the age of man. In this connection he cited evidence from the findings made in connection with the Norris Dam operations which have unearthed burial mounds with skeletal remains considerably older than the discovery of America.

One result of Dr. McMurray's talk was to increase the interest of the faculty on geology and to form a sentiment in favor of including a course in geology in the college curriculum.

About fifty-seven members of the faculty and their friends were present at this monthly function held in the Home Economics Department rooms. The dinner was prepared and served by members of one of the home economics classes with a colorful Fall theme. Tasteful decorations of leaves and fruits and other seasonal articles helped in creating the autumn atmosphere.

ARMISTICE DAY—

On November 11, sixteen years ago, was signed a significant document by authorized representatives from many countries. Signature to that document indicated an agreement to end a war, a bloody four year combat among supposedly Christianized nations.

The true significance of November 11 as Armistice Day, Peace Day, cannot be too strongly impressed upon our minds. In these times of political and economic upheaval and unrest we need to be reminded that peace, peace among neighbors, among countrymen, among nations leads to a fruitful realization of the work of each one of us, the joy of living.

At the Home Economics Club meeting on Wednesday night plans for the trip to Norris Dam were completed. The party left for the Dam immediately after lunch today. They expect to visit the classes and to inspect the model homes, which are of special interest to Home Economics students.

Another feature of the meeting was a discussion of the Art Exhibit which the Home Economics Club is to sponsor next week in the Home Economics Rooms.

KENTUCKY CLUB

On Wednesday evening, seventeen students from Kentucky met for the purpose of discussing plans for the organization of a State Club. A committee of three was elected to submit nominations for officers at the next meeting, which will be on November 21.

SCOTTIES FACE CUMBERLAND LAWYERS IN CONFERENCE TILT

Honaker And 24 Hopefuls, Dogged By Injury Jinx, Look For Hard Game

Eager to break into the victory column again after two straight set backs by decisive scores, Coach Honaker and twenty-four Scot hopefuls left yesterday at noon on a trip to Lebanon for a conference game with Cumberland this afternoon at 2:30.

The old injury jinx has succeeded in keeping the Scots below their full strength, but the local gridders will enter the game on even terms with the Lawyers, with the pre-game figures giving neither team much of an edge.

The Lawyers, who do not play enough games to rate in the conference standings, showed that they are fully prepared to knock down the hopes of other conference teams by holding Carson-Newman to a 7-6 win last week. The game this afternoon is the only other conference tilt for Cumberland, and will give the Scots a chance to see how they stack up against the Carson-Newman Eagles.

Not content with depriving the Highlanders of the services of Cochrane, Bailey, and Kosloskic, and causing Kalman's old leg injury to crop up again, Old Man Jinx took John Henry, pass-snagging back, and Louis Krainock, fighting halfback, from the ranks this week by injuries. Henry received a torn ligament in his shoulder while making a tackle in the Xavier game and will be out the remainder of the season, while a bad knee kept Krainock from making the Cumberland trip and may keep him out the rest of the way.

The Scots got in another good week of practice with a dry field helping by making scrimmages possible every afternoon. The varsity continued ripping through the "Bulldogs" and should be ready for the game today.

Tae opening line-up will probably find the usual starters, except for the injured performers, including Alexander and Gray, ends; Gamble and Millsaps, tackles; Atchison and Holloway, guards; Johnson, center; Blazer, quarterback; Loessberg and Crawford, halfbacks; Overly, fullback.

Other players going to Lebanon were Kalman and Coulter, ends; Richardson and Proffitt, tackles; Pieper, Holaday, and Marinaro, guards; Renfro and Glen Evers, center; Shields, quarter; Tippins and Rich, halves; and Hulette, full.

Lose To St. Xavier, 40-6

Encountering the toughest opposition they have faced since meeting Kentucky in the season opener, the Maryville Highlanders dropped a 40-6 decision to St. Xavier University last Saturday afternoon in Cincinnati.

The game was not so one-sided as the score indicates however, and it was a Maryville player, Wilbur Loessberg, who furnished the Cincinnati fans one of the two biggest thrills of the day. Late in the final period, with Xavier leading 34-0, Loessberg intercepted a pass on Maryville"s 20-yard line and raced 80 yards behind good interference for the lone Scoot touchdown.

Following the Maryville touchdown, Leo Sack, St. Xavier quarterback, almost duplicated Loessberg's pretty run by taking the kick-off back 75 yards for the Musketeer's final tally. These sprints by Loessberg and Salcc, a total of 155 yards in two consecutive plays, were two of the most sensational runs seen in Cincinnati this season.

Although the Scots were unble to break up the sweeping Musketeer

MEET MURFREESBORO ELEVEN HERE NEXT WEEK

The last non-conference game, the last game before the final with Carson-Newman, will be played next Friday, November 16, when the Scots engage Murfreesboro on Wilson Field at 2:30 p. m.

The strength of the Murfreesboro outfit this season is not known yet, but last year it was strong enough to trounce the Scots 25-0 on its home field, even though the Scots were doped to win at that time.

Sport Talk

BY BRYAN PAYNE

Junior touch-footballers who lost to a squad of hardy sophomores, 7-6, this week in one of the hardest fought interclass disputes of several years, are protesting the result on the grounds that the pass for point afer was unfairly completed. Here is the tale. .. . . . according to the juniors. The first play of the second quarter found the sophomores in possessioon of the oval somewhere near the end of the field, with fourth down coming up and goal to go. Juniors were defending the east goal. Holding true to interclass technique Paul, soph back, passed to Dowell, who crossed the line for a touchdown. On the point-after Dowell passed to Meeks, who, it is alleged, was forced to run beyond the end-zone in order to receive it.

Score 7-0, sophomores. Later in the quarter, a pass from Lehr, intended for the versatile Quigley's arms, hit a sophomore's back enroute, and only after cutting a few unorthodox capers did it finally reach Quigley, who raced sixty yards for the score. In the try for extra point the pass was intecepted by Art Allan, sophomore. The juniors say that they, charging the west goal, were cramped for space necessary for the completion of the pass for extra point. Referee Laing, apparently the only one to sense that the pass, being intercepted so rudely, could not have been completed had there been a thousand acres of end zone, ruled that the sophomores had rightfully won the game. Well ruled, brawtha Laing, and hereby let it be known that this, the party of the disinterested par, doth feel called upon to voice his aproval of so noble a decision, and dothe feele inspired to saye that the practice field for the Highlanders would make an excellent touch-footballery in the hereafter, being thus so amply supplied with large ares at the ende zones for the completion of such antics that may come their respective wayes.

Cross-Country Friday Will Be Fast Race

Snedeker Is Favorite To Break Tape, With Paul A Close Second

The annual five-mile cross country race sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. will be run next Friday, November 16, during the Maryville-Murfreesboro football game. Although only six men are expected to enter, a close finish between the veterans is anticipated.

The favorite to break the tape is Stuart Snedeker, winner of last year's run, with Graydon Paul, who came in second close behind Snedeker last season, rated about equal. These two runners should finish in first and second places easily, unless one of the two newcomers, Peters and Dmytriw, springs a surprise. The two remaining entries, Rom Meares, who finished fourth last year, and Bob Downes will probably be close behind the leaders to keep the race fast all the way. Snedeker's time last year was less than a minute short of the record.

The run will begin at the end of the first quarter of the game and will end during or near the half on the 50-yard line. The winner will be awarded a medal by the Y. M. C. A.

FROSH GIRLS WIN

Thursday afternoon the Freshman girls' soccer team defeated the sophomores 5-3 in an interesting scuffle.

In the first quarter it soon became evident that a real battle was to be fought when the Freshmen scored a goal, rapidly followed by a Sophomore. The second quarter told the same story and it looked as if it would remain a tie. In the last half the Freshman made the two

SOPHS DEFEAT JUNIORS-SENIORS IN SOCCER 2-1

The sophomores defeated the junior-seniors 2-1 in the opening game o fthe soccer season on Tuesday afternoon.

Leaf scored for the sophomores early in the first quarter of the game. The junior-senior halfbacks put up a strong guard, but the sophomores' line proved to be particularly strong. Clever headwork by Pennington contributed to the success of the sophs.

Because of the failure of three junior-senior substitutes to report to the referee, the sophomores were given three free kicks, one of which resulted in a goal for them.

By use of some clever passing, Smith was able to kick the ball through the goal-posts and score for the junior-seniors.

The line-up for the game was

Dowell Scores On Pass From Paul In Second Quarter; Quigley Scores

In one of the best and hardest fought interclass touch football games ever played on the local field, the sophomore eleven triumphed over the junior squad by a score of 7 to 6 last Wednesday afternoon.

The two teams were very evenly matched, and the sophomores took advantage of the breaks to aid their successful attempt to revenge the 6-0 lacing handed out by the same team last year. The sophs turned the rare tricks of winning by the margin of an extra point, when a long pass from Dowell to Meeks was good after Dowell had scored on a pass from Paul.

Both touchdowns were made in the second quarter, the sophomores going over on the first play of the period. With the all resting on the junior 10-yard line, fourth down, and goal to go, Harry Paul dropped back and sent a pass across the goal to Ralph Dowell for the marker. Dowell then passed to Meeks for what was the winning point.

The juniors scored later in the second quarter on a pass from Lehr to Bill Quigley deep in sophomore territory. A soph back batted the ball up and it was caught by Quigley, who ran across the goal for a touchdown. Art Allan then saved the game for the sophomores by intercepting the juniors pass on the attempted extra point.

After meeting on the gridiron, the football men of Harvard and Princeton had dinner together in the evening. Just one big, happy family.

Highlander football fans returned from Cincinnati where the Scotties lost a hard stand to a superior Xavier eleven last week singing praises of Wilbur Loessberg, Skeeter Shields, Bruce Alexander, and others. In the last quarter, Loessberg intercepted a pass from Xavier and ran eighty yards for a score, executing what most Cincinnati papers called one of the pretteist plays seen there this season. Skeeter, in spite of his small build and light weight, held his own with other men on the field as he always does, and proved his worth by blocking out the safety man who threatened Loessberg on his long dash. According to all reports, top honors for defensive play go to Gid Johnson, Scot center, and Toots Blazer.

Louisa, Ky. High School footballers, coached by Jack Atkins, former Highlander end, after having lost the first two games have come back strongly to win five straight. According to a late report Jack is hobbling about on crutches as a result of a boken ankle received in scrimmage with his boys. In the 1931 season at Louisa, Jack coached an Eastern Kentucky State Championship team.

Injuries to the Highlanders which bode no good in games to come are those of Krainock, out with a knee injury received at Cincinnati last week, Henry, with a torn shoulder ligament also from the Cincinnati game, and Louie Kalman, who is troubled with an old leg injury hanging over from last year. Regular basketball practice, which begins Monday, will proceed without the presence of Henry, who hopes to return within three weeks.

Talk of another water carnival was gaining momoentum rapidly today on the campus. This carnival, it seems, will come sometime during December, and will be a much bigger and a much better carnival than King Neptune's splurge last year was. The affair this year will have a Vienese background, feathered with music from string instruments.

interfeence, they put up a spirited fight to hold down the score, being led on the defense by "Gid" Johnson, center, and Bruce Alexander, end, in the line, and Toots Blazer, quarterback, in the backfield. Blazer also played a good offensive game, being the best Scot ground gainer along with Loessberg.

Xavier opened its driving attack on the first play after the opening kick-off, with Koprowski lugging the ball 15 yards. After the Scots had held twice, the Muskeeteers began a drive from the Maryville 31-yard stripe that required six plays for the first touchdown of the game.

The Musketeers tallied again early in the second period after a series of long runs had put the ball in scoring poosition, and a third time in the same quarter on a pass, after recovering a Scot fumble on the Maryville 22-yard line.

Xavier scored in the third quarter after a pass had made first down on the 2-yard line and again in the fourth quarter on a forward and a lateral pass from the 19-yard line.

The Leonir Rhynean suggests an additional reequired course for fresh men that we feel would be appropriate in a number of cases. Call it "What To Forget About High School and teach some of the grads of the big high schools what they should put aside in their adaptation to new environment.

Program Of Annual Concert Appeals To Many Music Lovers

Various Numbers Enthusiastically Received

The Fall Concert of Music presented by the College Music Department on Friday night, November 16, was one of the most finished and delightful recitals that has been given in several years.

The climactic number of the program was Liszt's Hungarian Rhadsody No. 2, played by Martha Burchfield and accompanied on the second piano by Garnet Manges and Charlotte Upp. Mrs. Burchfield's perfect technique and interpretataion were shown in the playing of this difficult composition, and the second piano added power to the heavier parts of the selection. The same brilliance and perfecetion of technique characterized Mrs. Burchfield's playing of the Polonaise E Major by Liszt. Her pleasing stage appearance made Mrs. Burchfield's numbers especially well received.

Three shsort numbers by Garnet Manges: Musical Snuff-Box by Laidow, The Hurdy-Gurdy by Mattay, and The Harmonica Player by Guion, added lightness and humor to the recital. Miss Manges' unusual ability in conveying ideas to her audience was shown in her playing of all three compositions. The Harmonica Player was especially realistic.

Charlotte Upp played Etude Op. 10, No. 3 and No. 5 by Chopin. Miss Upp's poise and technique make her an increasingly promising musician.

Campbell Attends Economic Conference

Effect of New Deal On South Is Discussed

The Seventh Annual Conference of the Southern Economic Association was held November 9-10 in Chattanooga. Dr. Claude A. Campbell, associate professor of economics, attended several of the sessions.

The Southern Economic Association is a non-partisan organization composed of persons interested in economics and economic problems and includes college and university professors and business men in its membership. The object of the Association is the stimulation of interest in Economics and the encouragement of research.

The program at this year's conference centered largely around the New Deal particularly in its relation to the South. Many papers by men prominent in the economic world were read and discussed. About three-quarters of the papers supported the New Deal with the other quarter denouncing it. One of the most important speeches was given by David E. Lilienthal, member of the TVA board. Leaders of the coal industry are planning "an open attack" on the TVA plan and Lilliethal's speech was an answer to their attack. In effect he pointed out that the coal industry was a poor one even before the TVA entered the field.

Coming as it did at this pertinent time with its frank discussion and criticism of governmental participation in industry the Conference has helped greatly in seeking solutions to the many problems raised by our present economic condition.

Glee Club Quartet To Broadcast Soon

Also To Give Program At Kiwanis Club

As was announced in a previous issue of the ECHO, the combined glee clubs will stage the opera fantasy "Briar Rose" on the evening of November 30. Previews of the opera are to be presented by members of the cast in a radio broadcast from Knoxville and at the Kiwanis Club in Maryville.

The radio broadcast will be heard over station WNOX at 6:45 on the evening of November 28. The program will be as follows:

"Briar Rose"—Calista Palmer and Carl Wells

"Happy Morning Greet You"—

"Sweet May Be Thy Dreaming"—Quartette, composed of Calista Palmer, Bernice Gaines, Carl Wells, Carl Fisher

"Lullaby"—Helen Chambers accompanied by the quartette

At the Kiwanis Club, a garden scene taken from the opera will be played by Carl Wells, Lloyd Wells, George Lehr, and Robert Downes. This will be followed by "The Winding Way" sung by the prince and his attendants. Donpell McArthur will sing the cook's song, "In The Scullery I Reign".

SIGN BOARD ERECTED BY CHILHOWEAN STAFF

The new display cases erected by the side of the post-office nearest Pearsons are an important part of the 1935 CHILHOWEAN business program The CHILHOWEAN management feels that advertisers supporting the yearbook deserve more publicity than an annual usually affords. Accordingly these display cases will be used to acquaint the student body with the merits of the CHILHOWEAN advertisers. Needless to say, support of these advertisers by the students will be appreciated not only by the merchants, but also by the CHILHOWEAN staff.

The whole idea has been developed with the regard to ECHO advertising, and it does not unduly compete with the ECHO revenues.

College Players To Stage "Double Door" Next Friday Night

Ellen Hitch Has Leading Role

The production staff of "Double Door" predicts a successful performance of the play which was one of the outstanding successes of the 1933 New York season. The drama, which has also been played on tour in London, throughout England's principal cities, and in the films, was released to amateurs on October 1, 1934. Its central theme is the age-old battle for domination within a family.

"Elziabeth McFadden, the American author of 'Double Door', knows the value of suggestion", writes the London Chronicle". That mysterious room meant melodrama . . . the audience sighed with anticipation. . . . Besides its melodrama, which might have been written by a Wilkie Collins, the author has painted the character of Victoria, with telling strokes."

The most gripping moments are centered around one character, Victoria VanBret, a true villainess, played skillfully on the Maryville stage by Ellen Hitch. Emphasis has been laid upon her keen craftiness, in human power, and almost supernatural nerve.

The College Players will present "Double Door" on Friday evening, November 22, in Voorhees Chapel.

Athenians To Hear Dr. Fields

"Psychology at Maryville", will be the subject of Dr. Paul E. Fields' talk tonight at Athenian Literary Society.

The program will also include special music by Hartman and Holland, and football scores by Sam Blizzard.

Plans Announced For Annual Barnwarming

King and Queen To Be Elected Tuesday

The annual Barnwarming, given under the sponsorship of the Y. W. C. A., has been scheduled to take place in the Alumni Gym Thanksgiving night, November 29th.

Instead of the usual programs of the four societies, a carnival of events has been scheduled, including among others, the initial performance of the boys' Tumbling Club. The gym will be decorated in season, with booths on the sides for the guests. An attendance of six hundred is expected. Refreshments will be served, and the Alpha Sigma orchestra will play. A straight admission of fifteen cents will be charged.

In addition to the regular custom of electing a Barnwarming queen, it has been decided to elect a king, who will be a member of the senior class. A committee from the other classes have selected four nominees for each position, whose names will be announced later. The election of the king and queen will be held by the student body in chapel Tuesday, November 27.

PLAY ADVERTISING ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Alpha Sigma Society has arranged a program whereby the beauty of the campus will be improved. Next Wednesday morning after chapel an elaborate, ceremonial planting of a Green Bay Tree will take place on the large lawn south of Baldwin Hall.

The four class presidents and the president of the student council, all members of Alpha Sigma, will have part in the ceremony. A prominent part will also be taken by the sponsor for THE GREEN BAY TREE, a member of Theta Epsilon. The sponsor will be elected by Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma at their regular meetings tonight from the list of four nominees prepared by a nominating committee.

The entire stuent body and faculty is cordially invited to attend this brief and colorful ceremony.

Present Activities Of Former Artists Are Highly Acclaimed

Meisle In Opera; Iturbi Conducting

There is no better proof of the high rating of the musicians appearing on the Maryville Artists Series programs than to follow their activities after they have appeared in recitals here.

The Don Cassock Russian Male Chorus, which appeared as the first number of last year's program, completed a very successful tour of this country and spent the summer months abroad. On October 5 they arrived in New York on the S. S. Hamburg for their fifth transcontinental tour. During their four months stay in this country they will make more than one hundred appearances. It is reported that the opening concerts in Canada were sold out, and many turned away. It is also interesting to note that this sason, for the first time, the Don Cassocks will be heard in Mexico.

Since the time that Jose Iturbi appeared here in 1933 he has effected a transformation of his talents, and has won renown here and abroad as a conductor as well as a brilliant concert pianist. Mr. Iturbi conducted the first three weeks of symphony concerts for New York's summer opera season, and showed his ability in another capacity when he responded to the applause with a short speech.

Kathryn Meisle, who appeared here both last year and the year before, is being highly acclaimed by

Students Flock To See Art Exhibit

Works of Americans Evoke Much Comment

The art exhibit held in Science Hall this week attracted large numbers of college students and teachers, as well as visitors, all of whom were generous in praise of the many paintings shown.

No one painting was the universal favorite; but each won admirers. "The Man with the Golden Helmet" by Rembrandt was, it seemed, the best liked by the men, while the feminine tastes seemed to center on paintings in which ships or natural scenery were featured. Biology students liked "The Little Man of the Woods" by Bacon, and many of the visitors clustered around the works of Hoffman.

All of the leading schools of art were represented—the Italian, the Flemish, the English, the Dutch, the German, the Spanish, the French, and the American. Copies of masterpieces from almost every century and every master were shown. Da Vinci was represented by two paintings, "The Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa"; Titian by one, "Lavinia"; Raphael by two; Fra Angelico by one. Of course, Rubens, van Dyck, Gainsborough, Millet, and Murillo and their outstanding contemporaries were represented, as well as the masters of earlier and more recent times. In all, one hundred fifty paintings were shown.

Great interest was evidenced in the works of Americans, particularly those of Inness, Amich, and Guerin. Amich handled the mountains and deserts with a boldly decorative effect. Examples of his art are "The

AS A FRESHMAN SEES IT - Ellen Baker

Dear Mother:

I must tell you about the football game I attended. I had enjoyed the first one immensely for the boys looked so cute in their uniforms.

Seven o'clock came and I timidly crept over to the game. I crept because I wasn't sure that I was allowed out unless I had a date. Suddenly all the boys appeared on the field wearing their cute uniforms and ran about the field for awhile. Then a man all dressed in white told them to stop. I really thought he should have done it before that since they had already wasted much energy.

The teams lined up and of all the stupid things—all the blue shirts got on one side and the orange on the other. They would have harmonized much nicer if they had been mixed. One of the fellows shouted some numbers and then there was a mix-up. No one knew who had the ball, and the boy that had it was racing down the field. He bumped into a fellow however, and everyone of the others piled on top of him.

I'm sure you wouldn't want me to attend another foootball game after all the rude things I learned there. Those boys ran into each other and never said excuse me, or begged one another's pardon.

Once everyone started to shout at once, and, not wishing to appear stupid again I shouted too. I sincerely hope that we were getting whatever the cheering was for. The cheering continued and, anxious not to miss any important feature, I asked if he had made a home-run. Imagine my embarrassment when I was told "It's only one down and three to go." I didn't know what was down, but I overheard someone say that they liked still had three minutes to play.

The most exciting part was during the intermission. I went to the Y.M.C.A. store and bought something refreshing. I needed it. I was very much upset and nervous. All the time I was there I was hoping the matron would not see me. She might have thought me vulgar for going to the Y.M. instead of the Y.W.—but the Y.W. was not open.

As the second half started I got got back into my seat. The man in white blew his whistle and they all started running again. They just pushed each other in heaps until I felt sorry for them. I was getting tired of such cruel treatment so I glanced around. Mary Elizabeth was very charming in her burnt-orange dress. This was something to write home about—a real Parisian model dress at our game. Sally was engrossed in the game and I was glad for I wanted to see just how she wore her hair. She should have used a lighter shade of make-up, but it didn't look half as bad as Kitty's.

Soon I noticed people leaving the stands and I followed suit. The score, they said, was 6-0 but no one told me who won. . . . .

We went back to the dorm. immediately, as that is the rule. And now I must close because lights are to go out soon and it's also a rule that we must be ready for bed when the lights go out.

Love,

Sue.

CONFESSION

Too much cannot be said for the effect upon one of the uplifting ethereal quality of music. By music in this sense is meant the music of the masters—Chopin, Liszt, Handel, to name a few.

To the average individual, music of the type indicated above, seems to him to be "above his head". So is any subject about which one knows nothing. But an appreciation of good music can be cultivated.

Several years ago, in an article concerning the indifference of the average person to classical music, William Lyon Phelps confessed to his enforced attendance at and his natural distaste for symphony concerts and classical music. His enforced attendance was, as the sociologist would say, due to group opinion. His natural distaste was, as the psychologist would say, due to environmental and retaining faculties.

Why, thought Mr. Phelps, noticing the wrapt attention of his neighbors, why are they so interested in this sort of music? What are they hearing that I cannot hear? It must be something worthwhile to absorb the attention of so many people. Why can't I hear it too? So he set himself to the task of concentrating, to listening to the music as he would listen to an interesting speech, to interpreting the inflections, the tones, the sounds. And as he listened he forgot his discomfort, for he became lost in the music, lost in the wonder of its beauty

No longer does Mr. Phelps feel his attendance at symphony concerts to be an enforced one, nor his distaste for music to be a natural tendency. Would that many of us would follow his example.

At a certain college, students taking a history examination were asked to state briefly the Monroe Doctrine. The prize for conciseness went to the lad who wrote "Scram Foreigners."

On November 15, Dr. and Mrs. McMurray left on a business trip into North Carolina. Mrs. McMurray visited many mills and schools in the interests of the College-Maid Shop, making several very important contacts with prospective buyers. In Greensboro, she placed an initial order for over $500 worth of uniforms in one mill. While they were in Greensboro, Dr. McMurray accepted the invitation of one o. his friends to attend th meeting of the North Carolina College Conference which was being held there. Dr. McMurray also did business concerning the Smoky Mountain Athletic Conference during this trip. Dr. and Mrs. McMurray returned on Sunday.

HIGHLANDERS TURN BACK TEACHERS, 13-7

Hulette's Passing Is Victory Margin

Gray, Marinaro, Atchison Star In Line As Teachers Threaten Goal

BY DICK MEADOWS

Three bullet passes from the hands of Albert Hulette, in the starting line-up for the first time, two of them to Wilbur Loessberg and the other to Toots Blazer, and an impregnable last quarter defense behind their own 20-yard line paved the way to a 13-7 victory for the Highlanders over Middle Tennessee Teachers yesterday afternoon on Wilson Field.

The game was packed full of punch, with both teams fighting bitterly for victory. The Scots charged through on defense and cleared openings on offense with gusto, hitherto unequalled this season, and the teamwork was almost perfect, the whole outfit playing aggressive, heads-up football.

The Murfreesboro eleven also put up a spirited scrap, and the outlook for the Highlanders was anything but bright when Teachers uncorked a pile-driving offense to knot the count at 7-7 in the first quarter. Baskins and Simmons led the first half attack for Teachers and Thomas and Harland were the best gainers in the desperate second half attempt to score.

For the Highlanders, the work of O'Neal Gray stood out above a line that also included stellar players in Atchison, Marinaro, Gamble, Millsaps and Alexander. In the backfield; Loessberg, Hulette, and Blazer performed in fine style, while Krainock, hindered by an injured knee, was in the tussle long enough to score the first Maryville touchdown.

The first half of the game was a period of wide open offensive football, with the side in possession of the ball having the best of the argument ost of the way. On the first play after the opening kickoff, Teachers fumbled and Krainock recovered for Maryville on the Teachers 45-yard line. After one play, Hulette fired a pass to Blazer for first down on the 20-yard marker, and Loessberg made ten more around end. A penalty put the ball on the 1-yard line and Krainock plunged over for a touchdown in two tries. Blazer made the extra point around left ned after a fake kick.

Teachers received the following kick-off and marched straight down the field for a score, with Baskins going oveer and then place-kicking the extra point to tie the count.

Toward the middle of the second quarter, the Scots worked the ball down to the Teachers 25-yard line and Hulette passed across the goal to Loessberg for the winning touchdown. The try for extra point failed.

The third quarter was played chiefly in midfield, but in the last part of the final period the Murfreesboro crew forced the Highlanders to put out all they had in two goal line stands to hold the slender 13-7 lead.

Drop 29-7 Decision

Meeting a combination that proved too strong to handle, the Scot footballers went down before an aggressive array of Cumberland Lawyers last Saturday at Lebanon by a 29-7 score.

No battle-torn gridiron, not even the green turf of the famous Rose Bowl, which last New Year's Day saw a ridiculed football team from Columbia University savagely hold a desperate Stanford eleven for four downs on its own one-yard line to protect its one-touchdown lead, has ever witnessed a more stubborn goal line stand than did Wilson Field yestserday when the Highlanders repulsed two successive drives by Murfreesboro backs from the two foot line late in the last quarter. On the fourth down, with the oval planted on the Scots' two-foot line and with barely a foot to go for a first down, Thomas, hard plunging fullback and chief ground-gainer for the Teachers, aimed a tremendous drive at the center of the line, but was stopped with little more than an inch of the needed yardage to go. Playing in the center of the line for the Highlanders was the sturdy combination of Butter Atchison, Renfro, and Louie Marinaro, who wece responsible for stopping him this last and greatest threat of the visitors

Hats Off To Gray

Playing what will undoubtedly go down in the records as one of the greatest games of his career as a Highlander, a plucky Maryville end by the name of O'Neal Gray showed not only his sterling qualities as a wingman, but also a mean toe for booting, which on several occasions helped the Scotties to maintain a telling advantage. Gray's alertness and spirit enabled him to slip behind the line of scrimmage when no one else could budge, and many a ball-carrier was thrown for a loss by his tactics. Once in the first quarter 159-pound Gray proved his courage by executing a vicious flying tackle on a man 170-pound half back, Baskins, who came lumbering hard around right end only to hit the ground heavily. Gray has another year to play for Maryville, and the likes of him will go a long way toward a winning team.

Clews And Meares Finish A Close Second and Third, Respectively

Running the five-mile course in 26:49:2-5 seconds, Stuart Snedecker finished the cross country run yesterday only 4 2-5 seconds short of the school record set by Spec Moore two years ago. Snedecker beat his own record of last year by 3 seconds. Graydon Paul, favorite for second place, became sick when half way around the course and was unable to finish.

Only 3 seconds behind the winner was Marvin Clews, freshman, who passed Rom Meares, third place man in the last five hundred yards. Clews, who had run a five mile course only once before, showed good prospects of becoming a championship runner before his four years at Maryville are over.

Close behind Meares was Bob Downes, with Steve Dmytriw finishing in fifth place. Cortez and Peters came in after Dymtriw.

Cage Practice Follows End Of Football Season

Pre-Season Schedule Calls For Four December Games

With five veteran performers and several others who have had some experience returning, and a large group of new men out, the 1935 Highlander basketball squad will begin practice under the direction of Coach Honaker November 26, the Monday following the close of the football season.

About fifteen men have been working out three times a week in charge of Rex Allen and Crumbaugh, and the squad will be increased after the football season. Only one or two of the freshmen who have been out thus far have shown much promise, but a combination composed of Allen and Henry at forwards, Hannah at center, and Overly and Crumbaugh at guards will be hard to break into. Some good reserve material will be on hand, but the appearance of a few more good reserves would strengthen the outfit considerably.

The pre-season schedule is being arranged, and will include at least four games before Christmas. The first contest will be played around December 5.

SOCCER TEAMS

Vie For Second Place Tonight

With the tournament already cinched by the freshman soccer team, the sophomores and junior-seniors square off tonight on Alumni gym at 7 oclock to fight it out for second place.

The freshmen won three while losing one game to win the championship, and the sophomores and the junior-seniors are tied with one victory and two losses each, making the winner tonight in the last game of the series the runner-up to the freshmen.

Junior-Seniors Topple Frosh

As a result of toppling an undefeated freshman squad, favorite to win, a hard fighting junior-senior soccer team left Alumni Gym Thursday on the long end of a 5-3 score.

Chambers starred for the winners, scoring four goals, with Froneberger placing a free kick for the fifth score. Berst tallied twice, and Johnson once for the freshman.

Frosh Defeat Junior-Seniors, 3-1

The freshman soccer team won its second straight victory in the women's soccer series by defeating the junior-senior team 3 to 1 last Saturday night in the Alumni gym. Berst kicked two goals and Johnson one for the freshmen, while Chambers scored the only junior-senior goal.

Colorful Pageant Is Annual Affair

Bill Downes and Orchestra Will Furnish Musical Theme Of Carnival

A cabaret in old Vienna on the beautiful, blue Danube will be the theme of the annual water carnival, which will appear at the local pool Saturday night, December 8.

According to Coach Fischbach, swimming coach and director of the carnival, plans for the coming event include much more elaborate preparations, such as music, decorations, and evnts, than those of last year.

Swimmers who will take part in the carnival will be seated at small tables sipping cocktails or whatever comes their way, and will rise to do their individual acts without the aid of a master of ceremonies. Only German will be spoken among the actors.

The repertoire of the carnival folk includes many new combinations in water-waltzing, tandem swimming, and burlesque. Exhibition diving by LeRoy Obert is one feature of the program.

Orchestral accompaniment through out the evening will be furnished by Bill Downes and his orchestra.

Frosh Blank Sophomores, 6-0

A speedy freshman soccer team, coached by Eleanor Johnson, won its third consecutive victory Tuesday, by blanking the sophomores to the tune of six goals. Freda Johnson led in the scoring.

Accordingly she went to Librarian Crowley with a request for the key to the museum. After he had announced that fact to Miss Baez, he obligingly gave her permission to look throgh the stacks, where perhaps she could find it.

The Baptists Are Coming

Football fans who can recall the many great tussles of yore between Carson-Newman College and Maryville are busy boarding up windows and preparing storm cellars before the rival elevens clash here next week. Time was when such battles were played on neutral ground, usually on Shields-Watkins at Knoxville, to prevent all possible bloodshed. The rivalry, a very bitter but colorful one, is among the oldest of the south.

game, the Highlanders slowed down and did not get back into stride until the closing minutes of the contest.

When the Cumberland offense began clicking after the first Scot thrust, the Lawyers put on steam to roll up three touchdowns, two extra points, and a field goal for a total of 23 points during the first half. The field goal and two of the touchdowns were made in the second quarter.

The Scotties, who have outplayed several of their opponents in the last half after allowing a large score to be marked up against them in the first half, outscored the Lawyers 7 to 6 after the halfway mark. After Cumberland had scored its only touchdown of the half the Scots pushed over a touchdown and converted the extra point in the last two minutes of play. With the ball on the 7-yard line as the result of a 25-yard pass from Hulette to Blazer, the Scot quarter who was shifted to fullback in the absence of Krainock made the touchdown in two plays. Blazer also added the extra point, making good a dropkick.

ANNUAL FALL CONCERT

The group of solos presented by Marie Carlson were all very pleasing because of her clear tones and vivacious interpretation.

A quartet composed of Calista Palmer, Carl Wells, Constance Johnson and Donnell McArthur sang By Singing Waters by Lieurance and Good-Bye by Lasti. The four voices were very well balanced, and were especially pleasing together when they sang their first number.

An ensemble of Lynn Ann Brown, Mimi Baez, Bernice Gaines, Roberta Hargrave, Helen Chambers, and Virginia Worth sang Tally-Ho by Leoni and Butterfly! Butterfly! by Delibes. Both selections were well suited to a women's ensemble. The stage appearance of the ensemble was especially attractive.

A violin quartet number Le Retour by Donela, and played by Miss Mildred Butcher, Ballard Quass, Glover Leitch, and Emily Watson, was well received by the audience. The first number on the program was the pretty selection, Minuet a l' Antic by Siebalck and played by Mary Emory and Margaret Johnson.

Dramatic Season Opens With College Players' Production

Stellar Performance Sets High Standard

With a melodramatic story of a tyrant's domination, the Maryville College Players opened the dramatic season last night with their presentation of "The Double Door". Reminiscent of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street", and "The Silver Cord" in the element of tyranny, the "Double Door" is the story of a woman's dominance of a household.

As a play, the drama must suffer the fate of all melodramas today: its overdrawn scenes sometimes appear ridiculous. Particularly in Act I, Victoria Van Bret was given the appearance of being very busy—summoning this servant and that, giving orders, mysteriously examining the doors to have them locked. Whereas, in reality she was doing nothing physical; all the activity was the diabolical planning within her own mind.

To Ellen Hitch, for her interpretation of the eccentric Victoria Van Bret, go first honors in last night's performance. Miss Hitch did two things: she creatd for hersef a role which was original in its interpretation, and she was able to sustain this role throughout the play. She did more with facial expressions, especially movements of the eyes, than with bodily movements. The only weak point in her characterization was at the end of the play when the already fanatical Victoria becomes almost insane as she contemplates her possession of the prized pearls. Taken as a whole, Miss Hitch's performance was more of an entity, more a unit of convincing characterization, than we have seen on Voorhees stage recently.

To Jane Irwin go second honors for her interpretation of Caroline Van Bret, the fear-ridden sister of Victoria. Particularly well done was the scene at the end of Act I, in which Caroline reveals the secret

Alexander Contest For Women Tnis Year

Meeting To Be Held Soon

The annual oratorical contest under the T. T. Alexander Prize Fund, established anonymously by a friend of the college in honor of one of Maryville's foreign missionaries, will be conducted soon by the Department of Bible and Religious Education. A prize of one hundred dollars in gold will be awarded to the winner of the contest, which this year is open to women.

Dr. Orr has announced that the subjects for this year will be similar to those in past years, namely: the Deity of Jesus Christ; Christ's Atonement for Sin; The Resurrection; and Salvation through Faith. The date for the contest will be decided by the candidates in a meeting to be held shortly after the Thanksgiving Holiday. The winner of the contest last year, in which men students participated, was Earle Crawford, president of the Y. M. C. A.

Naomi Willingham Returns From Europe

Those who remember Naomi Willingham, a graduate of '32, will no doubt know that she is enrolled at the Westminster Choir School at Princeton, New Jersey, and is a member of the even more famous Westminster Choir. Word has recently been received from her on the return of the choir from its European tour during the last several months. In the letter she says:

"I can scarcely realize that it has been a whole week since we landed again on good old American soil. We have had a wonderful trip. . . We have plunged into hard work already. We have had one rehearsal with Stokowsky for the B minor Mass. We sing the Mass with the Philadelphia Orchestra four times."

The choir sailed for Europe August 28 and since that time has toured about eight countries. Russia was the most interesting country of any. Due to Russia's objections to the church the choir discarded their vestments for the time being in favor of simple garments not offensive to Russian taste.

One of the most popular numbers the choir sang was the "St. Louis Blues". Miss Willingham was selected to sing the solo part, we are pleased to add.

She states that the mountains of Switzerland made her homesick for Maryville. During her four years here she was a valued member of the choir and glee club.

MEDITATION SERVICE

Following the custom of recent years the YWCA and the YMCA will unite in holding a short praise service on Thanksgiving morning.

The service will be held on the lawn north of Thaw Hall for fifteen minutes before breakfast next Thursday morning.

College Maid Shop Reports Busy Season

Operaitng under an exemption from the N.R.A. code the College Maid Shop is employing nearly one hundred girls and is filling orders received from widely separated parts of the country. The exemption from the code regulations is the only one granted to makers of cotton garments.

For about 15 years the Maid Shop has been in existence. Mrs. McMurray organized it at the close of the war. In the first years a large debt was accumulated, but with the help of Mrs. Thaw the shop was put on a paying basis. Now it is entirely self-supporting. The girls are paid by the piece with a resulting cost in production greater than in a factory.

The garments which especially have built up an enviable reputation for the Maid Shop are uniforms of several kinds and choir robes. The robes, in particular, have achieved wide distinction. The wine velvet robes of the internationally famous Westminster Choir, which has just returned from a European tour of eight countries, are made by our Maid Shop. Not only that, but the director recommends the shop exclusively. The choir school itself, in Princeton, has recently been equipped with curtains and day bed slips, also products of the Maid Shop. Robes are also being sold in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Missouri, and other regions.

Uniforms for mill workers are much in demand as well. The Apex Hosiery Mill is one of the largest customers and a hosiery mill in North Carolina has recently been added to that group.

A great many nurses in veterans hospitals purchase their supply of uniforms solely from the Shop because they can get the corrected measurements.

Bates Oration Prize Interests Many Men

A brief meeting of the students interested in the Bates Oratorical Contest was held last Wednesday morning when preliminary announcements were made regarding this year's contest. All those who plan to enter must submit three typewritten copies of their orations to Miss Jessie Johnson, chairman of the committee, on or before the first Tuesday of April. The orations should be from 1500 to 2000 words in length.

The subjects for the orations are picked by the executive committee of the faculty who, this year, has chosen the following subjects:

Problems of an Increased Leisure
The Art of Living
For Whom Government?
The Cost of War
The American Scholar
The Laboratories: for Service or Destruction?

The prize is provided from the anual income from a fund of one housand dollars contributed by the Rev. William H. Bates, D. D. and usually amounts to about forty dollars. Last year the contest was won by Maria Wynn. These oratorical contests are open to the men of the junior and senior classes in one year, and to the women of the junior and senior classes in the next year. This year the junior and senior men will compete.

Further information regarding the contest or procedure may be obtained from Miss Johnson.

MINISTERIAL GROUP

The Ministerial Association will hold its regular meeting Monday night in Athenian Hall at 6:30.

The speaker this week will be Rev. C. D. Martin of the Alcoa Baptist Church.

Glee Clubs Present "Briar Rose" Opera Fantasy, On Nov. 30

Producing Cast of Over One Hundred

Rehearsals for the opera fantasy, "Briar Rose", to be presented on the day following Thanksgiving, are progessing successfully. The production will be the largest given on the Maryville College stage for several years. A cast of sixty-two members of the Women's Glee Club, the Glee Singers, and additional talent, and an executive and technical staff of forty are combining efforts to make this return of musical-dramatic productions successful.

The scenes are laid in the Kingdom of Lorovingia in the thirteenth century, and the plot concerns the birth of Briar Rose, the princess, heiress to the kingdom, her betothal ceremony, and her marriage to the Prince of Tuscany. The banquet scene after the christening of the babe, the arrival of the prince and his attendants, and the finale in which the lovers are united present the most effective choruses and dramatic action.

Briar Rose will be played by Calista Palmer, already well known to Maryville audiences for her solo work. Carl Wells will play the Prince of Tuscany. Effective portrayal of the roles of queen and king has been given by the presidents of the two clubs, Leone Anne Brown and Carl Fisher. The supporting cast includes Elizabeth Kunkel, Robert Gillespie, Violet Webb, George Lehr, Helen Chambers, Donnell McArthur, James Laing, Lloyd Wells, William McCalmont, Roberta Hargrave, Mimi Gaez, Margaet Law, and members of the combined glee clubs in chorus. Especially fine characterization has been displayed by Marie

The committees appointed by the reshman, sophomore, and junior classes to make nominations for the king and queen of the Barnwarming have made their reports, Maria Wynn, Grace Proffitt, Dorothy Nethery, and Bobbie Reveley were nominated for queen; Earle Crawford, Hugh Crawford, Leland Shanor and Ernest Lowe were nominated for king.

Following the first part of the program for the evening, there will be an unusual and impressive ceremony in the crowning of the Royalty who will reign for the remainder of the evening.

Booths decorated to represent Spooky House and booths for Fortune tellers and Bingo will be erected along the sides of the gym. Also, the boy's Tumbling Team will make its initial appearance, and musical numbers will be furnished by a men's quartette. The Alpha Sigma Orchestra will play throughout the entire program.

The program is sponsored by the Y.W.C.A., and all proceeds will go to that organization.

THANKSGIVING—

What is Thanksgisving? Too often and with too many people it is merely a recognition of some benefit or some happy condition. Such recognition or even a verbal expression of it is not enough to constitute thanksgiving. Thanksgiving to be made real should be translated into thanksliving.

Since it is easy to profess thanks verbally, not much importance can be attached to that kind of thanksgiving. Just because we express a statement of thanks is no proof that we are really thankful. To prove our thankfulness we should not only give thanks but we should live our thanks.

Let us bring the matter down to our everyday life here on the Hill. Most of us would really admit that there are many things at Maryville that we are thankful for. We say we are thankful for the opportunity of studying at this college with its low cost and democratic student spirit. But are we really thankful? Real thanks would show itself in the way we live here and use the facilities offered.

We are glad, for instance that there is a good library. The evidence of our thanks, however, lies in the use we make of materials there. If we never read or consult the books except when compelled by assignments to do so we are not really thankful for the library, are we?

A deeper application of the principle that true thanksgiving is thanksliving is our whole attitude to the school. To be really thankful for Maryville means living in a spirit of appreciation of all that Maryville has stood for. Our thanksgiving is decreased every time we do something contrary to Maryville traditions, destructive to Maryville propery, or harmful to Maryville policies. If we are thankful for Maryville, our action will show it, for true thanksgiving is thanksliving.

Best of all we love opening boxes and cartons of the new Christmas merchandise which is arriving daily in our store. No use to have the worried expression of a last minute shopper because we can help you select your gift and lay it away for you.

Highlanders Meet Eagles Today In Bitter Classic

FOUR SENIORS END FOOTBALL CAREERS WITH SCOTS TODAY

Highlanders Will Rely On Aerial Attack To Subdue Ancient Foe; Marinaro, Kalman Beset By Injuries; Game Does Not Affect Conference

BY DICK MEADOWS

Another old-time grid feud will be renewed this afternoon when the Eagles of Carson-Newman invade the home of the Maryville Highlanders for the outstanding battle of the Smoky Mountain Conference season. The kick-off will be at 2:00 p. m.

The old rivalry existing between the two schools, the severe lacing given the Scots by the Eagles last year, the record of each team this season, and the fact that this is the last game of football for several members of both teams, combine to make this game one of the most colorful contests in this part of the country.

If any other team with the same season records were playing, the Eagles would be slight favorites to come out of the struggle on the long end of the score, but in a Maryville-Carson Newman game, past records have nothing to do with the outcome.

In five games this season against the same opponents, Carson-Newman has won two, lost one, and tied two, while Maryville has won two and lost three. The Highlanders have shown a little more offensive power but less defensive power than the Eagles against these opponents.

In spite of the figures, however, if the Scots continue the type of playing they exhibited against Murfreesboro last week, the Eagles will have to fly high to keep their feathers. The Highlanders kept up the victory spirit during practice all this week, and in the only scrimmage the first stringers tore through the Bulldogs with an irresistible drive and savage power. The Bulldogs could do nothing as the backs drove through for touchdowns almost at will.

Four Highlanders, Louis Krainock, Louis Kalman, Louis Marinaro, and Charles "Smiley" Richardson, will be wearing the Orange and Garnet of Maryville College for the last time this afternoon. Of this number, Richardson is the only one who is in top condition for the Eagle scrap, although the others will be able to play a large part of the game. Krainock has not yet recovered from a knee injury received two weeks ago, and will be missed when he is not in the line-up. Kalman is still handicapped by an old injury, while Marinaro received a torn shoulder ligament against Murfreesboro.

The remainder of the Highlanders, except for "Toots" Blazer, who has been bothered with a "charley-horse" are in good shape, and raring to fight it out with the Eagles in an effort to avenge the defeat suffered in Jefferson City last year. And with the Scots itching to get into the scrap, and confident that they have everything the Eagles have, it will be a truly great Carson-Newman team that stops the mad rush of the Maryville Highlanders.

Probable starting line-ups:

Carson-Newman		Maryville
Green	l.e.	Alexander
Goldston	l.t.	Millsaps
Conner	l.g.	Atchison

Tumbling Team Will Make Debut At Barnwarming

Group Pyramids Springboard Tactics Will Feature Novel Program

The Boy's Tumbling Team, an organization new to Maryville, will make its debut at the Barn Warming on Thursday night. The purpose of the group is for recreation and development of physical grace and agility. The team, at present consisting of fifteen members, is captained by Reese Scull. Assising him are Jim Miller, Walt Shropshire, Frank Dean, and Don Stevens.

The forthcoming program will consist of a group of individual feats, and group pyramids. Several of the group will demonstrate their prowess on the springbroad and parallel bars. The team will present several more exhibitions during the year and invites any fellows, interested in gym work and tumbling to join the group.

INTERCLASS SWIM

An interclass swimming meet will be held next Saturday night, December 1, in the local pool, according to an announcement made by the Y.M.C.A. athletic directors Thursday afternoon.

This meet is the second interclass event on the Y. M. C. A. athletic calendar, and the winner will get credit toward the cup offered by the Y. each year. The sophomores are leading the other classes at present with the touch football championship.

All men not going out for the vasity team are eligible to participate.

Women's Aerial Dart Tourney Starts Tuesday

With a squad of sixty out for the rst practice, the women's aerial dart tournament, which is scheduled to start on next Tuesday, promises to be highly interesting. The squad is practicing now and the tournament will be made up the first of the week. The competition is individual and the winner of the tournament will receive M club points. After the conclusion of the tournament, the women's gym program will be basketball.

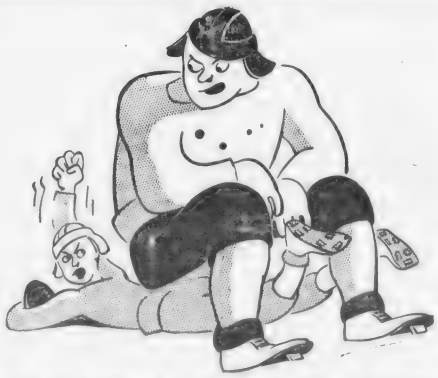
BASKETBALL IN SPOTLIGHT NOW

Schedule Includes Two Games Each With Conference Rivals

With the last football game of the season being played this afternoon, basketball will begin to occupy the athletic spot-light next week as Coach Honaker takes charge and starts sending his team through daily workouts.

The squad has been gradually rounding into shape during the practices three times a week and should be ready for organization when Coach Honaker takes over the leadership.

The varsity schedule is being worked out, and will include two games with every team in the Smoky Mountain Conference and two games with Emory and Henry outside the loop. The pre-season schedule will include games with Woodruff's of Knoxville, Blount Motor of Maryville, the Knoxville Athletic House, and probably a few more local independent teams.



The world never comes to an end just because you can't get something you've set your heart on.

November Reverie

Tonight I saw a sunset that people wouldn't believe
If they saw its crimson flames
splashed on canvas.
Tonight I watched slim green
shadows
Drip silently down from the cedars
And go
Rustling with the dusty leaves
Down into the valley.
Tonight I smelled the fragrant smoke of pine logs
Burning on another hill.
Tonight I heard God's gentle whisper
When the starlit wind brushed
The feathery tops of the cedar trees.
Tonight I walked beneath a slumbering mountain
That smiled and murmured in its sleep.
Tonight I felt the warm squeeze
Of the hand of a real friend.
Tonight I looked into the eyes of God in
The eyes of a mother who held
Her baby to her breast.
Tonight I felt the quick, cool pressure
Of clean young lips,
And the heart of one who cares
Throbbing in tune with my own.

* * *

I believe in sunsets and slim, silent
shadows.
I believe in dusty leaves and autumn smoke.
Praise God for mountains and valleys!
Thank Him for true friends and the love of a mother!
I believe in life
And Love
And Lips.
I believe in Youth and Heart-beats.
I believe in God.

Nirvana

Deep peace I feel; I watch the past unroll
Its once-read story with an easy mind.
I contemplate the sorrowful and droll—
Old hates, old loves . . . old waves that laved the blind—
And hold with God a council long and kind
High on the mist-shed towers of my soul.

He knows, and I, this is no tyrant's
dole,
This life; it is a poet's gift designed
For many hours, that who is so inclined
May re-peruse, and hear old rhythms roll
With stately thoughts until an idling wind
Slips down and pleasantly takes up the scroll.

French fears of a sudden air attack by Germany were aroused today when it was learned that Germany is able to produce 900 planes monthly. It is estimated that by Spring, Germany will have a fleet of close to 50,000 fighting planes.

Something really ought to be done about it. We hear that Carnegie inmates must go to the SLEEP movies in order to get a bit of sleep. We don't know the cause (saxophones, maybe), but appearances would indicate that the situation is becoming, well, whatever it is becoming. For instance, Ernest Mathews went to the movies the other night at six-thirty. He did not return until ten-thirty. When room-mate Dave Brittain inquired about his tardiness Ernie answered with some chagrin that he had fallen asleep and had not awakened until ten o'clock.

Mr. Speese went Ernie one better, though. The weeist, smallist, hour of the night (until three

The blondes got rather the worst of it in Dr. Orr's Ethics lecture about love and marri-
BLONDES age and related subjects. Not a few people were interested to discover that gentlemen are supposed to prefer blondes but that they really don't. On the other hand, the mother-in-law received more of their due than they generally get. Some dear old lady had given him an infallible method of choosing a wife, said Dr. Orr, and he was passing it on to us. Here is the rule: "Young man, pick out some nice old lady whom you would like to have for a mother in-law, and if she has a daughter, marry her."

CLUBS

GERMAN CLUB

The German Club met on Wednesday in Alpha Sigma hall. The song books, ordered by the members, were given out and the group sang several songs in German. A trio, composed of Carl Schmidt, George Greiner and Virginia Worth, sang "Treue Liebe" and a German round.

After the music Mr. Lagerstedt gave an enlightening lecture about his trip through Germany which he illustrated with pictures he had taken.

Feature dances, both solo and chorus, are under the direction of Violet Webb and Garnet Manges, and promise an addition to the entertainment. Costumes created by Miss Clara J. Brown and members of the Home Economics Department will be elaborate and in keeping with the period in which the scenes are laid. Miss Brown, who is an authority on ancient and modern costumes, has made exhaustive research in order that the ladies' gowns may be attractive and appropriatee. Students should watch the Chilhowean bulletin board during next week for pictures of the characters and their costumes.

Tickets may be purchased at the Y.W.C.A. or Y.M.C.A. stores, the Book Store, or from members of either glee club for thirty-five cents.

It is an unfortunate situation that prevents the production of "The Green Bay Tree", as planned by the Alpha Sigma Society Midwinter Committee. According to a statement issued by the committee on approva of midwinter productions, the play was finally rejected because of an underlying theme thought to be inarticulate with certain high standards set by other midwinters of the past.

Although the different committees connected with the producion of the play had already begun well-planned campaigns to promote its success, it is a noteworthy fact tthat they have accepted the rejection, not with a spirit of discontent and revolution, but with a spirit of willingness to cooperate in the selection of a more acceptable play. It is to be hoped that reactionary groups and 'I told you so's', who might tend to ridicule such events as the planting of the Green Bay Tree, will show the same fine spirit.

Are Animals Human

Or, are humans animals? Practically all Maryville students have heard these questions raised, partly in jest and mostly in indifference, in connection with the animal psychology laboratory in the basement of Thaw Hall, but we wonder just how many really believe there is a serious side to this form of experimentation.

To the contrary notwithstanding, on the campus there is a little colony of amateur psychologists who, working nightly under dim lights and carefully controlled laboratory conditions, add bit by bit to the steadily increasing fund of knowledge of psychology. These experimenters are able to get results

THETA MAKES BID FOR CUP FRIDAY NIGHT

"Launcelot And Elainee" Is Featured By Elaborate, Authentic Costuming

The annual competition for the Theta Alpha Phi dramatic cup will be opened next Friday evening when Theta Epsilon will present "Launcelot and Elaine", a four-act play by Edwin Milton Royle based on Tennyson's world-famous "Idylls of the King". Many of Tennyson's original lines have been kept, adding to the beauty and appeal of the play.

The story is laid in the legenary fifth century of English history and the plot is woven around Elaine's beautiful but hapless love for an unknown knight, Launcelot, who, in turn, loves Guinivere, queen of Arthur's court. These parts are played by Roberta Howie, Newman Smith, and Louis Reichelderfer. Supporting them is a large, talented cast from Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma.

Like at King Arthur's court with its jealousies and intrigues is skillfully portrayed by the introduction of several knights and ladies of the court. A notable feature of the production will be the elaborate authentic costsuming of that early period.

As the rehearsas indicate, Theta is putting forth great efforts to retain the cup. The cup which has been won in he last two years by Theta Epsilon becomes the permanent possession of the society winning it three successive years.

Barnwarming Festival Is Greeted By Record Crowd

King and Queen Enter Regal Domain In Austin Car

Thursday night several hundred students, faculty, alumni and friends packed the Alumni Gym to take part in what many believe to have been the most interesting and original Barnwarming Festival for several years.

The gym was decorated to represent a carnival lot, with bright-colored balloons and streamers every where. All around the walls were the booths which were the center of interest from 8 until 9:30. Among the attractions were the House o Horrors, a Bingo table, a fortune telling booth, and many more. The most popular of all was the hamburger and cold drinks stand, which did a rushing business all evening. Another very popular attraction was the Menagerie of Wild Beasts. A poll was taken among the visitors to find out which animal was most

FRED HOPE DRIVE Opens December 4 or 5

The Fred Hopee Drive, an annual campaign for the purpose of giving students and faculty at Maryville an opportunity to make a gift to the foreign mission work carried on by Fred Hope in West Africa, will be formally opened on December 4 or 5.

This opportunity is a custom of long standing at Maryville. Last year more than $500 was sent to him. Pledges are made on cards distributed in chapel and payments are made at the times designated during the year.

Fred Hope graduate at Maryville in 1906 and holds a unique position in the College's Foreign Legion.

VIENNA CHOIR BOYS PRESENT FIRST NUMBER

Are Members of Musical Hierarchy Founded 1498 By Emperor Maximillian

There is no organization in the world quite comparable to that of unique company of boys, the Vienna Saengerknaben, the Singing Boys of Vienna—who appear at Maryville College on the evening of December 4th.

They are members of a musical hierarchy that was founded in 1498 by imperial decree of Emporer Maximilian when a group of boy singers were ordered to sing daily mass under the auspices of the Court Orchestra of Vienna. For nearly five hundred years, up to the present time, the traditions of this organization have been kept intact and their ideals inviolate. Under the care and tutelage of the State, their reason for being has been to sing fine musical works—choral, operatic and religious—without professionaism or a need of glory.

The members of the Saengerknaben live today—as always—in the ancient impeial castle, the Vienna Hofburg, where once Hapsburg royality tread its venerable corridors. Here these boys work and study, eat, play and sleep. They pay nothing, but they have dedicated their boyhood to music. It is the dream of countless thousands of Austrian boys to be invited to join the Saengerknaben.

But few are called, tho many yearn. Only forty of them are housed in the castle, after rigid competitive examinations. Twenty-two of

Glee Clubs Make Good Showing In Opera Fantasy

Performances of Palmer, Wells, And Comedians Exceptionally Good

"Briar Rose", an opera fantasy by Louis Woodson Curtis was presented last night by the combined Glee Clubs of the college, under the capable direction of Miss Frances Henry. The peformance was one of rare excellence and charm, being based on the old legend of the sleeping princess and presented with a remakable degree of skill. The accompanist, Marguerite Sullinger Walker assisted ably.

Calista Palmer, as the Princess Briar Rose, sang her role with delicacy and sweetness, and her actions revealed poise and careful training. Miss Palmer shared the honors with Carl Wells, as Florizel, Prince of Tuscany. Mr. Wells displayed unusual talent both in singing and in acting. The duets, "Briar Rose" and "Life is made of Greetings" sung by the Prince and Princess were particularly lovely. Carl Fisher and Lynn Anne Brown, played admirably the roles of Clovis and Clotilda, the royal parents of the young princess. They, with their royal court of Lorovaine, added color and regal splendor to the performance. In the role of Lucette, nurse of Briar Rose, Helen Chambers sang with characteristic sweet-

Delayed Reactions

By DON HARRIS

Sometime ago a famouos man said he did his best work lying down. This idea interested me very much indeed, so I gave it a try. My work remained about the same, but my lying down improved 80 percent. This suits me exactly. Right in my line are those ads featuring blue waves and a ship's prow over the words "Beautiful Bermuda Calls". Ads headed "Are You Overworking?" also attract me.

On the other hand, a pet aversion of mine are mottoes like Do It Now. And yet such motives have their effect. Only last week I was thinking that this last year was the poorest season for genuine loafing and procrastination I had ever had. I asked myself, "Why am I working so hard when I really want to go fishing?"

Not that I'm complaining. Oh dear no. I like work—within decent limits. This minute I have 50 things to do and 14 letters to get off, and if you pin me down to a schedule I will turn out enough work to astonish even myself; but give me a week to fill a fountain pen and I will get it done just as you come for the ink. I am becoming a skilled non-laborer.

I don't believe in this feverish activity, anyway. If this were the test of efficiency, then Ford and Roosevelt would be replaced with Mexican jumping beans. My wife's motto will NOT be "keep the home sires earning." A man's efficiency is not to be measured by his mileage.

It strikes me that I should go away for a rest. I never felt so well in my life but I don't see why I wouldn't feel better in Miami, say. Vacation is just over, but that doesn't seem to matter. Maybe it's my rests that weare me out.

Take the matter of sleep. My parents tried to teach me to take my sleep or leave it, but I go around taking one sleep after another, never knowing when I have had enough. Now it's a funny thing about sleep—no two people go about it the same way; and a skilled sleeper works a long time perfecting a "stance", which he never changes. My rooom-mate, for instance, can't do any good with out one leg thrown non-chalantly over the headboard, his head hanging over the edge of the bed, and his eyes focussed, until sleep comes, on a design in the rug.

Every time we buy a rug with a new design it breaks up his sleep for weeks.

Personally I think sleep is a good idea, though overrated. My use of it has serious social consequences. I could take a lot more work if I didn't have this

Latest Shipment To Library Stirs Staff Reviewer

Fiction, Fact, Drama Included In Recent Shipment of Books

Book reviewers are expected to be calmly critical, but enthusiasm is surely more in order after spending some thirty minutes dipping into the latest shipment of new library books. As just a foretaste and appetizer we are going to mention a few that will probably create a stir of interest.

We just happened to run onto a large red book first, a novel about the Battle of Gettysburg bearing the title LONG REMEMBER. I that title is not self-explantory the preface supplies the clue. The author is Kantor. Another war, the days of '76, passes in review as fiction under the titles ARUNDEL and ROBBLE IN ARMS, both by K. L. Roberts. Benedict Arnold is a leading character, but at the same time the Satuday Review recommends both books for required reading in high schools.

Passing from fiction to fact, the biographies of Mark Twain, Sappho and Alexander the Great make up a trio to appeal to more than one taste. There are three volumes on Mark Twain which constitute a valuable set. Sappho and Alexander, too, are not apt to be dull reading There is an added flavor to them in because of the completeness with which our laboratories are supplied with apparatus of various types.

In checking over the laboratories and equipment we find that those of Maryville College are among the finest and the most complete in the South. It is thought that nowhere else in the southern states is there a comparative psychology laboratory to equal the one here, and the general experimental lab, second floor Thaw, holds up its head with the best.

The chief aim of the department is to make advanced courses in psychology more experimental than theoretical. Among the various types of apparatus to be found in the comparative lab are devices for testing visual discrimination in the white rat, for studying the activity of the rat during the oestrous cycle, and for determining the effect on equilibrium of rapid rotation in a wire drum. Another study, entirely new in its field, is being made to find how fine a discrimination a rat can make between roughness and smoothness, while still another apparatus aids in the study of maternal drive in the animal.

In the other division of experimental work can be found equipment amounting to approximately $7000 in value. Here are to be found complete and costly devices for measuring reaction time and any type of sensory discrimination and sensory acuity, together with apparatus for the study of motivation, emotional reactions, and learning.

"What," you ask, "is the ultimate value of this collection of meaningless devices and costly apparatus?" Simply this. It represents a material step toward the perfection of a comparatively new science. The story about the psycholofist who stayed up all night watching alternately a stop-watch and a white rat, which spitefully sniffed and scratched instead of running to the end of its "plank", never fails to bring a laugh. True, the psychologist might have tossed a coin and gone to bed, but science is not perfected that way. And so, we may be justly proud of our little colony of psychologists who work silently in the shadows, and most of all the laboratories in which they work.

OPEN FORUM

November 30, 1934
To the Editor of the HIGHLAND ECHO,
Dear Editor:

The widespread publicity given "The Green Bay Tree" makes it necessary to make this public announcement about the abandonment of the play by ALPHA SIGMA.

Reviews of "The Green Bay Tree" by nationally known dramatic critics have pointed out in it an underlying theme entirely unsuspected by all those who were concerned with its production here.

Relying on the better judgment of these recognized authorities it was decided not to produce the play, not because the critics' opinions were accepted without question, but because it was deemed advisable not to seem to oppose their findings.

A play with the pot said to be in "The Green Bay Tree" is admittedly unsuitable for the Maryville stage, and so oong as there was any reasonable doubt about it the producing taff agreed with the faculty committee that all thought of putting it on should be given up.

Published for a better general understanding and in co-operation with the faculty censors, by the producing staff of THE GREEN BAY TREE,
Signed, Alex Christie

Executive Council

Restricts Advertising

The following action of the Executive Council of the Faculty will be of interest to the readers of the HIGHLAND ECHO, and particularly to any who are concerned with the affairs of any project which solicits advertising.

The following publications may solicit advertising: THE HIGHLAND, ECHO, Football Programs, The "M" HANDBOOK, THE CHILHOWEAN

For the present, organizations in charge of public functions are not to solicit advertising to appear in their printed programs. Any other organization wishing to solicit advertising must secure permission to do so from the Executive Council of the Faculty.

It will, of course, appear that the publications above approved are all of the nature of all-student publications and are of service to the entire college. In view of this fact and also of the fact that local business men are beset by claims for advertising by many groups in the community aside from the College, it has seemed desirable to protect our all-student publications and also to relieve the business men of the embarrassment of an increasing solicitation of advertising.

This action was taken too late to affect the plans of the sponsors o' "Briar Rose" but otherwise will become effective at once.

AERIAL DART TOURNEY

The anunal Aerial Dart eliminations were begun by the girls on Tuesday afternoon, November 16, in the alumni gymnasium. The tournament is conducted this year by the present champion, Eleanor Johnson, This tournament is held in connection with the girls' point system, through which about ten girls win letters every year. It iis possible to win 50 points toward the letter requirement of 400 points by winning the Aerial Dart championship. The losers are consoled by the concession of from 20 to 45 points depending upon their reative abilities as aerial dartists.

these are the company that will perform here, under the direction of their rector, tutor and musical director.

Many of the boys are of humble origin. Social position of parents is neither a recommendation nor a detriment. Eligibility to membership in the Saengerknaben is subject to strict standards. Applicants must not only show marked vocal and musical abilities, but must manifest high qualities of character. At a recent election when only three places in the choir wee vacant, more than six hundred boys clamored for admittance.

Such qualifications have an organization of excellent little singers, whose audiences have included crowned heads and presidents of nations. Musical critics have made statements such as "Voices flutelike and lovely", "Ensemble tone of rare beauty". Unusually ardent enthusiasm have greeted these little singers wherever they have appeared.

Highlanders Finish Season With Four Wins, Six Losses

Two Final Victories Help Footballers Swallow Previous Defeats

Participating in a strenuous schedule that did not include a single set up, the 1934 Highlander football team fell one short of breaking even for the season by winning four games while losing six.

Two of the Maryville victories were by extra points and two losses by safeties one of which was made on the last play of the game. The Scots dropped the first three contests of the seasesn, won the next two, lost three more, and then ended the season with two straight triumphs.

In the opening game, September 22, the Highlanders were defeated by the Kentucky Wildcats 26-0 in Lexington. The Scots gave indications of a championship team in holding the Wildcats to such a low score.

The following Friday night, September 28, the Scots lost a heartbreaker to Tennessee-Wesleyan, 14 to 12, on Wilson Field. With the score tied 12-12 a safety on the last play of the game gave the Bulldogs the victory. The game was marred by a steady downpour of rain, and was the second straight battle the Scots fought on a muddy field.

The conference season was opened for Maryville with an 8-6 loss to Tusculum in Greeneville, again by margin of a safety, and for the third time on a muddy field, though not actually raining. The Scots played better all-round football than did the Pioneers, but Tusculum took advantage of Maryville errors to do its scoring.

Maryville finally broke into the victory line by defeating Lenoir-Rhyne 7-6 at Hickory, N. C. A place kick for extra point turned the trick.

Returning to Wilson Field October 19, the Highlanders upset the dope with a hard-earned 6-0 win over the King Tornado in the second conference tilt.

The Scots began a three-game losing streak October 26 by dropping a 19-6 decision to East Tennessee Teachers on Wilson Field. Teachers scored all its points during the first half, and the Scots pushed over a six-pointer in the last quarter.

A trip to Cincinnati, Ohio, November 3 resulted in a 40-6 loss to St. Xavier University, and another to Lebanon the following week ended the loss of a conference game.

At Wilson Field November 16, the Scots opened up a consistent passing attack that netted a 13-7 victory over Middle Tennessee Teachers in a hard-fought game. The last Saturday all defeats were forgotten when the Highlanders brought down the Carson-Newman Eagles 7 to 6 in the best game of the season.

THIRTY COMPETE

In Swim Meet Tonight

Approximately thirty men will compete in the inter-class swimming meet to be held at the college pool tonight December 1. This annual meet promises to be highly interesting as competition will be heavy in several of the nine events. The meet is free and open to all, a large attendance being expected.

The events include a 200 yard relay, free style; 50 yard backstroke; 100 yard breaststroke; 50, 100, 200 and 400 yard dashes, all free style; 150 yard medley relay; and diving.

Honaker's Cagers Point For Opener With Independents

Five Returning Letter Men Promise To Make Conference Race Hot

With about twenty-five men reporting regulary, the basketball team, with Coach Honaker, in charge, is preparing for the opening game on December 10. The men out for practice are looking well considering the earliness of this report. Five letter men are back with others who have had experience. The prospects for a successful season are as good as any in the Smoky Mountain Conference.

The five letter men include Hanna, Allen, Crumbaugh, Henry and Overly. Brittain, who lacked one quarter of lettering last year is also back. These men, those who did not play football, have been practicing three times a week since about the middle of October under the direction of Rex Allen. Several men entirely new to Maryville are out for the squad but their ability remains to be tested.

In recent practices, Coach Honaker has been stressing the handling of the ball, instead of shooting. He has been warning them against the danger of long shots and the frequent use of freak shots. His outlook for the squad is quite optimistic.

The first game will be played here on December 10, when the Highlanders meet the team representing the Blount Motor Company. Later in the month, the team representing the Athletic House of Knoxville will be met, probably on the home floor. The conference season will begin after Christmas, with Maryville playing two games with nearly every team in the conference, as well as one with Emory-Henry.

WRESTLING SEASON

Promises Powerful Team

The first practice of the 1935 wrestling squad will be held Monday afternoon, December 3, at 3:30 o'clock in the second floor gym of Bartlett Hall. All men who intend to go out for wrestling this season should report to Coach Bob Thrower at that time.

A large squad will probably be out again this year, with the return of lettermen in a majority of the weight positions assuring another powerful team.

The enrollment at Los Angeles Junior College was so great this year that police reserves were called out to keep the students in line during registration.

In a debate held recently at University of South Carolina, the question was, "Resolved: that a horse and buggy are better for romance than an automobile." The affirmative won.

Snedeke Defeats Field In Triangle Cross-Country Run

Highlander Team Gains Place Among Foremost In South

Running in its first intercollegiate meet of the season, the Maryville cross country team swept around a 2.9 miles course at Knoxville at a fast pace Thursday morning to defeat entries from the University of Tennessee, and Lincoln Memorial University by a wide margin.

With Stuart Snedeker leading the field by finishing in 15:57 3-5, with Graydon Paul fourth, and with Clews, Meares, and Downes in sixth, sevnth and eighth places, respectively, the Scot runners totaled only 26 points, while Tennessee made 39 and L. M. U. 55. The low score wins in cross country running, since first counts one, second counts two, and third counts three, and so on.

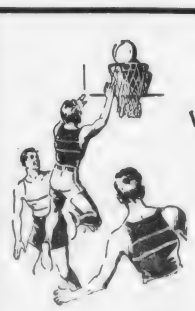
The Scot team gained a place among the best cross country outfits in the South by defeating Tennessee, and Snedeker proved himself one of the best individual runners by copping first place over Hansard and Reid, U. T. veterans. The Vols had previously defeated Georgia Tech, and Georgia Tech includes victories over Alabama and Auburn, all strong Southeastern conference teams.

M.C.-C.-N. Game Was a Natural

The Highlanders turned an otherewise inauspicious season into a well-rounded finish last Saturday afternoon when they sent their ancient foe, Carson-Newman College, led by the always over-ambitious Frosty Holt, sadly back to the Baptist city on he short end of a 7-6 defeat.

The game, played in perfect November football weather, proved to be a natural, and was packed with breaks both tough and lucky CARSON—NEWMAN throughout. Although outplayed by the Eagles for the entire first half the Scotties, led by the line drives of Crawford and Krainock, came back strongly in the second to score, and played defensive football for the remaining minutes after Overly, reserve back, had kicked the winning point from placement.

Led by Captain McDaniels, hard running back, Carson-Newman scored early in the second quarter after Hulette had punted to the Maryville forty. Green made eighteen yards on an end-around play, bringing the ball to the Maryville twenty-two, from which McDaniels broke through to the two-yard line, and on the nex play scored. The try for point after was wide.



The third period saw the Highlanders stiffen and settle down to an inspired attack of running plays. Several times they advanced the ball to the enemy's 10 and 20, only to lose on fumbles. Beginning the touchdown drive from the Carson-Newman 20, where the Scots had recovered the ball on downs, Crawford gained two yards aroun end, and Blazer advanced the oval to the fifteen where it was lost. After Stone, former Maryville athlete, had fumbled after a try at the line on the C.-N. eleven, Crawford advanced to the four-yard line in two line bucks, and on the next play Krainock, playing his last game for the Scotties, went over for the score Overly kicked the extra point.

WATER PAGEANT

To Be Spectacular Event

Under the direction of Coach George F. Fischbach, swimming instructor the annual water carnival will be presented on Saturday evening, December 8. The theme of this year's presentation will be "In Old Vienna." This theme will be followed both in the pageant itself and in the music of the Alpha Sigma orchestra, especially augmented for the occasion, under the skillful baton of Maestro Bill Downes.

Besides a colorful array of costumes the carnival will display many graceful diving and swimming events. Leroy Obert will perform many skillful and difficult diving feats, while the swimming team will execute several under water stunts with the aid of submarine illumination. Water waltzes and clown stunts will also be a part of the pageant. Special grandstands are being put up to accommodate the large crowd expected to attend.

ness, especially in the "Lullaby" in the Prologue. Roberta Hargrave as Mignon, lady-in-waiting to the princess added a whimsical touch with her singing of "Castles in Spain."

Renaulda, the wicked Fairy, was payed by Marie Cadlson, who executed the rather difficult character role most creditably. Dirk, another character part was very well done by Robert Gillespie.

Drago, the male villain, son of Renaulda, was well portrayed by Lloyd Wells. William McCalmont played Jacobus, the King's majordomo with ease and naturalness.

The village peasants were well represented by Mimi Baez, as Katinka, who sang the delightful "Legend of the Frog", and by a group of village children.

The fairy troupe was delightful in the christening scene. The fairy queen, was well portrayed by Elizabeth Kunkel. The dances of the fairies, especially the balloon dance were gracefully done.

Comedy was furnished by Ambrose, the royal cook, played by Donnell McArthur. Tallywick, the tailor, played by James Laing, Mytel and Peterkin whose roles were taken by Violeet Webb and George Lehr, and the royal jester, Jorian. Jorian proved to be one of the outstanding character presentations of the evening. Played by George Kent, the court fool's role, o difficult one, was portrayed with singular dexteity and was a decided contribution both comically and dramatically.

The ensemble work was excellent throughout the performance, the choruses showing thorough preparation. The costumes furnished by the Expression Department and the Home Economics Department, under the supervision of Miss Clara J. Brown, were most ingenious and colorful. The lighting effects were good, and the entire production was well staged. Particularly realistic was the storm scene, with flying leaves and descending darkness. The tower room of the castle added greatly to the effectiveness of the stage setting.

"Briar Rose" is the first opera fantasy to be presented on Maryville's stage for several years. Its success was evident by the interest of the large audience, maintained throughout the evening's performance. Such a production is indeed a credit to Maryville College.

Next, Bob Toms performed a clever juggling act, in which tea was served to the royal couple. Then the carnival Strong Man, Buck Millsaps, challenged any man in the audience to wrestle with him for five minutes Ritter answered the challenge, and after an extremely exciting contest Ritter defeated the champion and received a bag of peanuts as a reward for his strength. After the wrestling match, the Tumbling Club put on another act, in which work on the horizontal bars and the springboard featuredu The last number on the program was an exhibition of trapeze worok by both Scull and Shropshire, while the orchestra played "The Man on the Flying Trapeze". Miss A. Roberts Is Y. W. Campus Guest Miss Augusta Roberts, Y. W. C. A. secretary on the campus of the University of Kentucky, has been the guest of the Maryville Y. W. during the past week. She included our college in her itinerary which took her through other schools in Kentucky and Tennessee. Miss Roberts is chiefly concerned with the activities of the Y. W. at the University but she occasionally travels to other campuses.

One of her foremost interests is in the World Student Christian Federation. She was one of the two American women delegates to an international meeting of this commission in Holland in 1932 and is therefore vitally concerned with its welfare.

During her stay here she spoke to the entire Y.W. cabinet on Wednesday night in the Y. rooms and to individual members during the day Thursday. Another group which met with her were the Nu Gamma leaders. The stress was on the work of other associations and of the movement as a whole. Our share in the Interracial Commission of East Tennessee particularly interested her.

Y. W. Meeting

International Affairs will be the the topic for Saturday in the Y. W. C. A. Mexico, Palestine, and the Czar Zone are the countries that will be included in this discussion.

The next issue of the Highland Echo will appear on January 12, 1935.

Costumes Add To Effective Acting In Theta's Play

Newman Smith Gives Finished Performance

Presenting a dramatized version of the Launcelot and Elaine story, the Theta Epsilon Society last night made the season's first bid for the Theta Alpha Phi cup, annually awarded the best midwinter of the year.

As a play, "Lancelot and Elaine" was a fairly faithful dramatization of the story according to Tennyson. Of the two prophecies revealed in the Prologue, neither was fulfilled in its entirety in the play. The two prophecies were that Launcelot should betray his king and bring sorrow to Guinevere, and that the rule of Arthur should be overthrown by the traitor, Modred. The story would have to be carried on to the destruction of Camelot for the fulfillment of these predictions. Their introduction in the Prologue, is, therefore, misleading, and weakens the ending of the play.

Outstanding in the Theta Epsilon production of the play was the use of color. The costumes of the ladies-in-waiting, the queen, and the knights harmonized and gave a rich and colorful effect to the scenes.

The most finished performance of the evening was offered by Newman Smith, cast in the role of Launcelot. Mr. Smith sustained his role with consistency. It was largely his acting that made the story convincing and that created the atmosphere of seriousness for the play.

Miss Howie, as Elaine, and Miss Reichelderfer, as Guinevere, vied for first honors among the women. Miss Howie gave a consistent per-

Lloyd Returns From Another Conference

During the trip, from which they returned a week ago, Dr. Lloyd and Miss Clemmie Henry visited organizations and talked with individuals in Washington, Philadelphia, New York City, Northern New York State, New Jersey, and Central Pennsylvania. They saw many people who have shown an interest in Maryville for years and met many who through learning of Maryville are now her friends.

The purpose of the trip was to enlarge the circle of friendships for the college, and to acquaint people with the standards and objectives of Maryville.

Dr. Lloyd and Mrs. Lloyd left on Wednesday of this week to attend the meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Atlanta and will return on Friday evening. Dr. Hunter spent Tuesday and Wednesday attending the Deans' meetings in connection with the same association.

Handel's "Messiah" Will Be Presented Sunday, Dec. 16

Knoxville Talent Will Furnish Solo Material

In Voorhees Chapel, on the afternoon of Sunday, December 12, the Maryville College Music Department will present Handel's famous oratorio, "Messiah". The chorus, under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, numbers some one hundred twenty-five voices chosen from the combined vocal talent of Maryville's town and college people. The solo numbers will be furnished by the First Quartette of Knoxville's Second Presbyterian Church composed of: Muriel Parrette, Soprano; Lelia Hampton Leslie, Contralto; Paul Chavannes, Tenor; and Kyle Jenkins, Baritone. Charlotte Upp and Elizabeth Harrell Shugart are the accompanists.

The origin of the "Messiah" dates back to the year 1741, when the composer, George Frederick Handel, as yet comparatively unknown, was finishing an extremely poor season in London. Weary and heartsick because of the trying experiences and failures in the British metropolis, Handel was preparing to return to his native Germany. In the nick of time came an invitation to Handel from the Duke of Devonshire, the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, inviting him to Dublin to prepare to give a series of concerts in the interest of charity. About a month prior to this invitation, toward the end of August of 1741, Handel, with the help of Charles Jennings and a poor clergyman named Pooley, had worked out the scores for the "Messiah". He completed the composition in twenty-four days little realizing that it was to become one of the

Y. M.-Y. W. Sponsor Church Affiliation

The Y. W. and Y. M. report that a large group of students have taken advantage of the opportunity to take affiliated memberships with the churches in Maryville. On Sunday morning the Presbyterian church will accept those students who have shown their desire to become affiliated members. This new membership does not interfere at all with the student's membership in another church. The affiliated membership is is the reviving of an old custom of the college.

The Y. W. C. A. is planning to have its Christmas program on Sunday evening, December 16, at seven thirty. "The Messiah" will be given Sunday afternoon when the meetings are regulary held. It is hoped that Dr. Hunter will tell Christmas stories around an open fire as he did last year. There will also be carol singing when the old English custom of decking the halls with greens will be carried out.

Athenian Play Has Christmas Setting

"The Goose Hangs High" To Be Staged Next Friday

Second in this year's series of midwinters is "The Goose Hangs High" which the Athenian Literary Society will present on Friday, December 14. The play, in three acts, is by Lewis Beach, who has written a number of well-known productions. First presented in New York in 1924, this play met with great success.

The action of the play takes place in an American city during the Christmas season of the present year. The dynamic plot concerns the great sacrifices of parents who are trying to send their children through college.

The play is powerful and straight to the point. It is one that comes very close to every student, especially at this time of the year. The large cast, members of Athenian and Bainonian Societies, was carefully chosen, and judging from the ehearsals will present the play in professional style.

Seniors To Fling Brawl In Bartlett

The senior class social committee has prepared a very unusual theme for their open party next Monday night at eight o'clock. The party will be conducted as a Brawl with everything connected with it adding to that idea.

Those attending have been requested to dress as appropriately as possible to help in creating the correct atmosphere, and prizes will be awarded for the two best "get-ups". Refreshments of rye bread and cheese sandwiches, pretzels, and cider will be served from a bar presided over by Louis Krainock who will also serve as master of ceremonies. The decorations will be gaudy in keeping with the general theme.

The party will be held in Bartlett Hall with most of the entertainment taking place in the gym and balcony. A few tables will be provided for bridge and a small part of the program will be presented in the auditorium.

At least 150 seniors and friends will attend the Brawl and share in these and other unannounced features which the committee is unwilling to divulge.

Y. M. Meeting

The YMCA meeting this Sunday afternoon this week will be given over entirely to representatives of Knoxville College. The largest part of the program wil be given by the College Quartet which is considered one of the best Negro quartets in this section of the county. One of the Knoxville College men will also address the meeting for a short time.

W.S.C.F.—

The nations of the world seem eager to flaunt the bloody flag of war in spite of the significance of the approaching season.

Germany is secretly re-arming. France and Italy are fortifying their frontiers. Japan is determined in her stand for a 5-5-3 ratio. A Franco-Soviet entente exists. Last week American Army officers tested an eight-ton truck capable of eixty miles per hour. Even Spain has announced that she will purchase twelve gun boats!

Despite the discouraging rumors that the peace of the world is threatened, we cannot overlook the progressive endeavors of the World's Student Christian Federation to create undersanding between the nations.

This Federation, organized in 1895, includes in its membership, every member of a national Student Christian Movement. Members of the Student Y. M. C. A., of the Student Y. W. C. A., and of the Student Volunteer Movement belong to the Federation by the very fact of their being members of college Christian Associations affiliated with these national organizations.

Students realize that the innumerable ways in which nations and classes are effecting each other's existence have created a need for international groups which not only talk unity but also achieve it. The basis of unity is understanding. Understanding is achieved thru contact, friendship, tolerance. The World's Student Christian Federation offers a channel for the expression of Christian fellowship.

We, as students of this world wide organization, can take an active part in bringing about a unity that can stand the storms of bitter conflict, a unity that will not make mock of that symbolic phrase, 'Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men'.

The man who hustles hardest for experience usually outstrips the fellow born with ability.

formance, which was not overdone at the crucial point of Elaine's death. The piquant touches to the character of Elaine were refreshing and saved the character from insipidity.

Miss Reichelderfer rose to her best moments in the last act, where her somewhat passive interpretation was quickened by her anxious inquiry after Launcelot's health, and her scornful renunciation of what she deemed his false love. There was a particular ease about Miss Reichelderfer's entire performance. Her very presence on the stage seemed to grace the scene.

As a whole the production lacked a final polish. The action moved a little slowly, and characters occasionally spoke out of turn. The general effectiveness of the important scenes, however, could be detected in the reaction of the audience. The first and last scenes in particular seemed to convey their respective moods of anticipation and final pathos to those on the other side of the footlights.

Vienna Choir Boys Thrill Crowded Hall

verse criticism, the presentation of the Vienna Choir Boys (Wiener Saengerknaben) on December 4 was an emulation of pure tone qualities, finely distinguished modulations, and masterly control of voice and expression. The boys, ranging in age from eight to fourteen years, sang with ease the most difficult compositions of the old masters. To the director, Georg Gruber, is due much of the credit for the excellent interpretation.

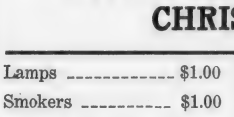
The first group included ecclesiastic compositions by sixteenth century composers. The most beautiful and effective of these was the Gallus' "O Sacrum Convivium", rendered in Latin.

Schubert's "Der Hausliche Krieg", a pretty love story, arranged especially for the Saengerknaben, was presented with the boys playing both male and female parts, in costume. Both members of the chorus and soloists showed excellent dramatic ability as well as finished solo and duet work. Costumes were clever; action was quick and well timed; and the ensemble work was most professional.

The Brahms, Schubert, and Strauss numbers in German which composed the final group were probably the most effective of the entire program. Especially notable in Schubert's "Lullaby" was voice control in pianissimo passages.

The program was so well received by the audience of more than nine hundred which filled Voorhees Chapel that several encores were presented, including "Blue Danube", and an unusual and strikingly beautiful arrangement of "Stille Nacht".

The entire program was presented in an easy, unstrained manner which indicated intensive rehearsal and intelligent management. The boys' most notable accomplishments are excellent tone quality, and instant and complete response to director.



The annual banquet of the football squad will be given this year on Thursday, December 13, at 7:00. Those in attendance will hear as principal speaker of the evening, Professor Chas. W. Henry, former head of King College.

The program, under the guidance of toastmaster Joe Gamble, will include speeches by Coaches Honaker, Thrower, and Boretsky, and members of the squad. Also, the captain of this year's team will be elected.

By BRYAN PAYNE

And so, dear readers . . . thank you! thank you! . . . . after being absent from this galley slavery at the sports desk for two weeks, during which time an ill-fated Highlander football eleven all but atoned for a luckless season by clipping the feathers of the Carson-Newman Eagles in the last game of the season, your scribe returns in a bustle of excitement to predcit that the Scot cagers will be about the classiest band of performers in the Smoky Mountain Loop this year. Five letter men, each of them an expert in his position, form the nucleus, and they, together with four or five reserves who lacked only a few quarters of lettering last year, loom as safe bets for conference champions.

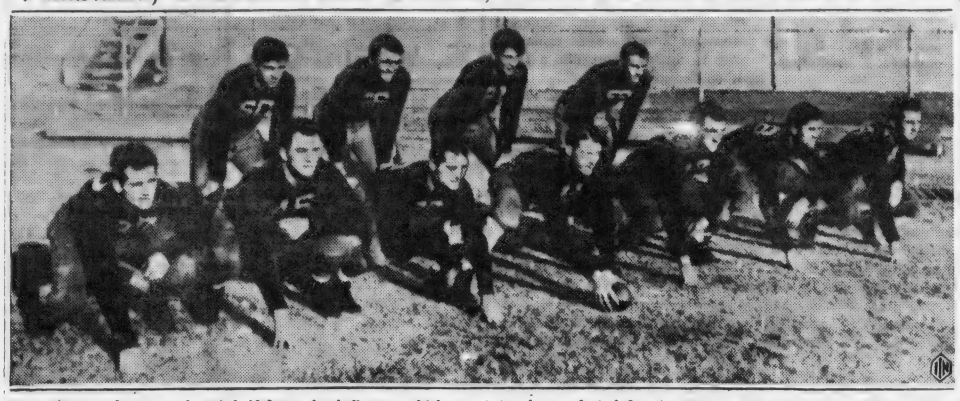
Stealin' Your Stuff



It's either a feast or a famine for columnists, so on the dry days we have to tendency to steal the Observer's material, for which we are truly repentant, but nevertheless a practice which we are moved to continue.

And so. . .

Last week we humbly petitioned our dear Brother Meadows to relieve us of the weekly scribbling. Meadows, full of a proverbial sophomoric fear of columns, at first declined gently, saying he didn't know what to write about, but soon gave in and promised to try his hand at it. Friday night, the time when all good columns should be underway, saw him comfortably seated in the Echo office surrounded by a ream of paper and a half dozen pencils. After cautioning him not to write more than twenty column inches, we left in search of further excitement. Imagine our surprise when, upon returning fully two hours later, there sat Meadows in a quandary chewing his pencil.

Coach Honakere's Highlander basketball team will get its first test of the season Monday night when it goes up against the Blount Motor Company team, local independents, in Alumni Gym at 7:30 o'clock.

The Scot cagesters have been developing a smooth passing game during practice this week, but still show early season faults in most departments of play. Coach Honaker has been working on the new material considerably, teaching signals and polishing the offense.

The team that starts against Blount Motor Co. Monday night will be composed of experienced performeres, four sophomores and a senior. Rex Allen, senior, and John Henry

1935 Grunters Look Promising

The extreme popularity of Maryville's manly art was again manifested Monday afternoon as fifty-five candidates responded to Coach Bob Thrower's call.

With five lettermen returning it is expected much competiion will be shown for the three remaining vacancies left open by the graduation of the 135 pound, 145 pound, and 165 pound lettermen. The returning lettermen are: Ridder 118 pounds; Hoglan, 126 pounds; Dean, 155 pounds; Millsaps, 175 pounds; and Gamble, unlimited weight.

The first week will be devoted to limbering up and the teaching of the various holds, with the actual wrestling to start during the following week. Daily workouts are being held until the Christmas vacation. The squad will resume practice immediately after the holidays, with the first meet being scheduled sometime during the middle of January. No definite schedule has been drawn up as yet, but, according to Coach Thrower, the schedule this year will be just as good and the competition just as tough as in the past.

It is hoped that from this large squad promising new material can be found to enable Coach Thrower to continue the enviable record Maryville has established during the past years.

Ferguson's Team Has Good Record

Friends of Blundon Ferguson, former Maryville athlete, will be interested to know that the Ansted High School Highlanders, football team coached by him, have just finished what is said to be the most successful season in the history of the institution. In a twelve-game schedule, Ferguson's team scored a total of 217 points, as against 39 points for the opponents.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

We felt really apologetic for smiling when Herbert Hunt exclaimproudly that he actually recognized several German words in the first group sung by the Vienna Choir on Tuesday evening. We know that the first group consisted of Latin numbers.

:—:—:

Betty Kent, also a German student, approached one of the little boys of the choir with "Auf Wiedersehen". "What?" inquired the bewildered child.

:—:—:

We're told that Professor Lagerstedt went behind scenes and "speeled off" a long sentence in German to one (supposedly) of the Vienna Choir boys. The poor little boy had no idea about what Mr. Lagerstedt was talking, for he was a Maryville child!

:—:—:

Tollton Coulter just asked us who Maryville's Dean of Women is and if she lives on the Hill. We wonder if he has never walked to Pearsons after an evening's entertainment.

:—:—:

When Elizabeth Knight first came to Maryville, she exclaimed about the horses with the long ears. When told that such animals were not horses but mules, Miss Knight excused her ignorance on the grounds that Illinois has only beautiful horses and she had on that account never seen a mule. Do you suppose Miss Knight realized that she was insulting the beautiful Illinois horse?

:—:—:

We are relieved to notice that Mr. Christie and Mr. Leitch are no longer participating in the Painting Marathon which they entered upon two weeks ago. We DID admire the Lyceum scenery which was a result of their day-and-night sessions.

—:—:—

'Tis a trifle tardy, but we can't refraini from commenting on the fact that Nathan Wanda inquired, when Mr. Christie was requested to make an announcement at the Barnwarming, as to whether the young man was a member of the faculty or of the student body. We wonder to whom we should extend our sympathy.

No sport talk appeared in the edition, and Meadows has not been quite himself since.

How 'About 'Tweaks'

Various opinions have been offered during the past week concerning the editorial caption, "The Press Speaks", which appeared in the last issue. Someone suggested, doubtless because of the similarity of the 'p' and 'q', "The Press Squeaks". Another decided that it should read "The Press Leaks". And still another, probably thinking of Hamlet's "Tweaks me by the nose" speech suggested that substitution, which, very likely, is the cause of the first two corruptions. Well . . .

the humorous side of the program well worth seeing. Submarine illumination of the pool will throw a new light on many new and different underwater stunts, and exhibition diving by LeRoy Obert fills a large spot on the program.

After the playing of the "Blue Danube Waltz", the program will continue from the cabaret, where the peformers will be seated, without interruption or announcement. German will be spoken by the performers, who will rise to perform without introduction. The carnival is expected to be remembered as the most elaborate and enjoyable water event ever given on the Hill.

wil be at the farword posts. Lee Hannah at center, and Crumbaugh and Jack Overly at guards.

Substitutions will be made frequently to give the newcomers a chance to show their ability in action, and to find the best reserve material. Brittain, sophomore, and O'dell, the most promising freshman prospect to date, will probably see a good bit of service.

The Scots face a tough opponent in the Motor Co. five, which is centered around three former college stars: Johnny Kizer, Highlander captain last year, Dean Bailey of East Tennessee Teachers, and Kennedy of L. M. U., all graduates of last year. The remainder of the team is composed of local talent.

There is a possibility of securing a game with Johnson Bible College in Kimberlin Heights the latter part of next week, but the date of the contest may be shifted to the following week.

Pioneer Story By Queener Appears In Historical Bulletin

Life of Gideon Blackburn Furnishes Material

An article by Professor Verton M. Queener appeared in the most recent bulletin of the Eastern Tennessee Historical Society. The article, which is between five and six thousand words in length, is a careful and gripping account of the life of one of Tennessee's pioneers, Gideon Blackburn, a backwoodsman who was a preacher as well as a warrior. The versatility of this man is better told in the words of Mr. Queener. Speaking of his entrance upon his life work, Mr. Queener says: "He not only carried a rifle and other equipment of a soldier, but also a Bible and a hymn book. All were to be used by him in making 'good Indians'."

Gideon Blackburn was born in Virginia in 1772 of Scotch-Irish stock, the nephew of Samuel Blackburn, the Revolutionary general. Gideon was an orphan from an early age and spent the greatest part of his childhood under the roofs of relatives. At fifteen he was converted, and soon thereafter he went to Martin's Academy which was presided over by Samuel Doak, Tennessee's first pastor and teacher. Here he received a literary education. His next instructor was Dr. Robert Henderson, an eloquent speaker who "drew crowds and had his way with them." Under Dr. Henderson young Gideoen studied theology and public speaking. In 1792 he was licensed to preach.

The same year he came to Maryville then known as Fort Craig. Here he became the first pastor of New Providence Church, and established a second church, called the Eusebia church, ten miles east of Maryville.

This was an auspicious beginning for a young minister, and Blackburn fulfilled the promise that it made. The remainder of his life was spent in founding religious and educational institutions and in assisting the Indians. Regarding this latter service, Mr. Queener says: "his work as a minister . . . eased the wounds made by the barbed edge of civilization as it cut down a weaker people."

Gideon Blackburn, although a minister, was not a sedentary man. His life, except for brief stretches of quiet, was full of movement. He did not stay long in one place—he followed the frontier as it was pushed towards the west. In 1833, at sixty years of age, he moved into Illinois. There, in 1838, he died.

Physically, Gideon Blackburn was a noble man. "He was two or three inches over six feet in height. He was of a lanky build, but straight and strong. . . His face was expressive and intellectual." Mentally, his chief characteristic, aside from his intelligence, was his stubborn will. At one time he became involved in an argument with General Jackson, and won; at another time he laid down the law for a bright young theological student named Isaac Anderson. Mr. Anderson did not have the orthodox conviction about a certain point of faith. After some sharp questions by Blackburn, Anderson "saw the light".

Although a great benefactor, the work of Gideon Blackburn ""was not spectacular enough to be carefully recorded by his contemporaries. To them . . . (he) was a preacher who performed his tasks in an unusually

Faculty Club Hears Factors On Fashion

Miss Clara J. Brown Addresses Group

Miss Clara J. Brown spoke to the Faculty Club last Monday evening on the subject, "Some Factors Influencing Fashion." The talk and many pictures which she exhibited were very interesting.

Miss Brown defined fashion as follows: "The method of expression generally accepted by a group of people at a given time is what may be catlled fashion or mode."

In primitive time clothes became important when the leaders of tribes were designated by a special dress or distinctive adornment. Fashion changes began to occur when the lower classes attempted to copy the dress of the wealthy. The latter, resenting this imitation, and determined to retain their distinction, discarded each fashion as soon as it became popular.

The forces contributing to fashion changes are communication, commercial interests, ideals and world movements, events, art and artists.

Commercial interests influence us very much. Often the skillful advertising of manufacturers or designers convinces the public that "everyone" is wearing a certain style, and so its success is temporarily assured.

The ideal of youth so prevalent causes men and women to copy college students' fashions; formerly, the ideal of maturity made fashionable powdered hair and artificial blemishes.

Archeological discoveries, wars, and successful moving picture costumes are but a few of the forces which contribute to style changes.

Miss Brown stated that she believed if men and women knew

Robert Casodesus, French Pianist, To Play Here Jan. 25

First Tour In The United States

On Friday evening, January 25, Robert Casodesus, the famous French pianist, will appear in the second concert of the Maryville College Artists Series. Mr. Casodesus is making his first American tour during January and February, and the Artists Series feels very fortunate in securing him to appear as one of this year's visiting artists, because he has made brilliant appearances all over Europe, North Africa, and in South America.

Casodesus was born in Paris on April 7, 1889, into a family of musicians having a wide musical reputation. After studying with his aunt, Rose Casodesus, and then with Mlle. Marie Simon, he was admitted at the age of thirteen into the class of the pianist, Louis Diemer, who was himself a pupil of Lizt. At the end of the first season he was awarded First Prize in Pianoforte. When he was twenty he received the First Prize for Harmony in the Class of Xavier Leroux, and the next year he won hte Diemer Prize.

His musical career has been brilliant from the first and he has played in England, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Poland, Baltic States, Russia, Roumania, Greece, Turkey, North Africa, Argentine, Brazil, Uruguay, before this first trip to America.

In Paris he has played many times with the Societe des Concerts du Conservatorie, with the Orchestra Calonne and the Orchestra Lamoureux under Paul Paray, with the Orchestra Starom and Paulet

Bids For Theta Alpha Phi Issued To Nine

At the last meeting of Theta Alpha Phi, honorary dramatic fraternity, formal invitations of membership were issued to the following students: Lynn Anne Brown, Lois Brown, Robert Borcer, Earl Crawford, Ellen Hitch, Roberta Howie, Louise Reichelderfer, Violet Webb, and Herr Wissler. Those accepting will be initiated in February. A second selection and initiation will take place later in the year.

Memberships in Theta Alpha Phi is open to upperclassmen who have demonstrated technical or acting ability in filling certain requirements for admission.

Junior Y. W. Cabinet

The selection of new students to form a Y.W. Junior Cabinet was made last Sunday afternoon at the regular fortnightly cabinet meeting.

The duties of the Junior Cabinet members will be to assist the senior cabinet members in the usual Y. W. activities. In this way, it is hoped that the work of Y. W. will be made known to more members of the freshman class than is now possible.

The term of office for these members will expire at the same time as that of the regular cabinet members.

Those selected were: Jean Northrup, Louise Orr, Marion Lodwick, Janet Talmage, Jean Howat, and Winnie Berst.

State Colleges Form Press Association

Three Day Conference Finishes This Morning

Within the last three months, a laudible movement has been initiated by The Tech Oracle to form a Tennessee College Press Association. The movement is the outgrowth of a study of the college newspapers and magazines of the state by Prof. J. L. Passons, chairman of the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute Publicity Committee, for Mr. Passons believes that an association of these publications will be beneficial to the staffs and institutions. Furthermore, many of the states bordering Tennessee already have college press associations.

Representatives of the staffs of the publications were invited to attend the meetings at the Institute on January 10, 11, and 12 for the purpose of organizing such an association.

A feature of the meeting was the judging of the last three issues of each paper represented, and suitable awards were given to the winners. Also, four noted newspaper men and several college journalists addressed the association.

A few of the subjects for discussion were as follows:

1. Selection of staff members
2. Responsibility for material
3. Office equipment
4. Advertising rates and services
5. Printing costs

A constitution and by-laws were adopted, and according to them, the officers were elected. The next issue of the ECHO will carry news regarding the elections.

Athenian Christmas Play Well Received

Boasting one of the best selected plays of this year, the Athenian Literary Society on December 14, made its bid for the Theta Alpha Phi cup with its production of "The Goose Hangs High." Its presentation at that date was a happy recognition of the approaching Christmas season, the same season which is the essential background of the play.

Herr Wissler, cast in the leading male role of the comedy, gave the best performance he has ever given on the Voorhees Chapel stage. His interpretation was more natural and unaffected, more spontaneous than it has been in other plays.

Mr. Wissler's teammate, Miss Harris, cast as Lois Ingals' twin sister, made the most of her lines, and brought sufficient vitality to her role to keep the audience interested in her next move.

Earl Crawford and Lorena Mae Dunlap, as Mr. and Mrs. Ingalls executed well, roles which were difficult because they were apparently empty of any deep dramatic possibilities.

The grandmother's role, which was taken by Vi Webb, held much of the humor of the play, and upon it hinged the movement of the action. Miss Webb's interpretation was full of subtle humor.

William MacCalmont, in the role of Hugh, was occasionally almost violent in his characterization, but

Dr. W. T. Thompson Of Richmond To Lead February Meetings

Birmingham Musician To Direct Singing

The fifty-ninth annual February Meetings will open on Tuesday, February 5. It is Maryville's rare good fortune to have secured as this year's leader, Rev. W. Taliaferro Thompson, D.D., of Richmond, Virginia, and as directors of music Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Heasty, of Birmingham, Alabama.

Dr. Thompson is a man at the height of his power and career, and is widely known as one of the outstanding preachers of the South. Churches and educational institutions in the East also frequently seek him as a speaker and from time to time endeavor to persuade him to accept a call as a pastor. But he has felt his work to be in Richmond where he is Professor of Religious Education and Practical Theology at Union Theological Seminary of the Presbyterian Church in the U S. (Southern Presbyterian).

The following biographical sketch is taken in part from WHO'S WHO IN AMERICA: William Taliaferro Thompson: Born, Charleston, South Carolina, in 1886; B. A. (Phi Beta Kappa) Davidson College (North Carolina), 1905; B.D., Union Theological Seminary (Presbyterian, U. S.), Richmond, Va., 1909; postgraduate fellowship, Union, 1909-1910; D.D. from Davidson, 1919. Ordained to the Presbyterian ministry, 1910. Pastorates: Lexington, North Carolina, 1910-1914; First Presbyterian Church of Knoxville, Tenn., 1914-1919; Government Street Church, Mobile, Ala., 1919-1920. Became Professor of Religious Education, Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, 1920. Editor-in-chief, Union Seminary Review, 1921-1924.

He was Smyth Lecturer, Columbia Theological Seminary, Atlanta, 1932 to 1933; was Moderator of Presbytery of Orange, 1913, of Presbytery of Knoxville, 1915, of Synod of Appalachia, 1917. Was Director of Army Y.M.C.A. work at Camp Greene, N. C., and later at Camp Jackson, S. C., 1918.

During his college days, Dr. Thompson was a baseball and tennis star,, playing short-stop on the varsity baseball team and ranking number one on the tennis team; he played semi-professional baseball three summers, one with the Darlington, S. C., team, and two with the Petersburg, Va., team. He was also for a time a high-school teacher and athletic coach. For the past nine years he has been religious work director and tennis coach at a boy's camp in South Carolina; for a man of Dr. Thompson's present prominence and busy schedule to give his time to such service is indeed an interesting suggestion of his unassuming and dedicated spirit and of his vigorous youth.

Ten years ago he was sent by the World's Sunday School Association and the Southern Presbyterian Executive Committee to the Orient for five monhs of lecturing. He went on around the world and spent a considerable time in Palestine. He spent last year, during which he was on Sabbatical leave from his regular work, largely in study in New York and elsewhere. He is in constant demand as a speaker at conferences and colleges; he returns frequently to his Alma Mater, and

TCPA

As the Echo goes to press, the Tennessee College Press Association, holding its initial meeting at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, Cookeville, is drawing to a close.

The movement is one worthy of attention especially, since the main discussions pertain to the general problem of the college newspaper, the financial status.

That no delegate represented Maryville is a fact to be regretted but our cooperation with the organization may be tangibly represented in the future.

BAND

Part of the proceeds of the Celt-Scot game is to form the beginning of a fund to secure College Band uniforms. Exact details regarding the type and color design of the uniforms will not be made public until the fund is sufficiently large enough to warrant the necessary consideration.

It had been hoped that the band in its new outfit might be able to arouse further enthusiasm among college rooters during basketball games of this season but to date the plan seems impracticable.

Next year's seniors, after the first football game, will, no doubt, write to pining Maryville grads of the class of '34 with unbounded praise for the gaily-bedecked Scotty band, adding, perhaps, that "clothes make the man, you know."

—13—

For many people it's an unlucky number; for some people it's a lucky number. But unlucky or lucky, tomorrow, another 13, will go down in history as the "day the Saar Plebiscite was cast."

To be French or to be German is the problem. Either choice invoves unpleasantness feel the dwellers in that much-discussed, much quarrelled-over section of Europe.

They may decide therefore to remain under League control.

Time will reveal their decision; time, too, will reveal the wisdom of [illegible] decision.

SUPERIORS SCOTTIES

Novelists have loved her name. They have given it to fine romantic creatures who had much spirit and much beauty, but who had not always the character, the ability, or the fineness of the quality of the Tess we know. It is small matter now that her parents christened her Theresa Decker Frey; her name today is, to those who know her, Tess Frey.

From the moment Tess came to our campus she has been one of those who has been called upon to lead, one of those who has stood out above the rank and file of campus folk. She came with almost two years of high school work to complete in addition to her regular college course. But in spite of having to do in four years work which would normally require six years, Tess's name has appeared on the honor roll more than once.

She has been prominent in the program of the Y.W.C.A. She was a member of the freshman cabinet, a member of the regular cabinet when she was a sophomore, president of the organization in her junior year, and at present she holds the office of Nu Gamma chairman. In line with her interest in the activities of the Y.W.C.A. is her interest in the church activities in which young people are engaged. This year she is Director of Young People's work at the New Providence Presbyterian Church. Tess is not by any means a novice in this work for she has been for several years a camp director at "Rosemartin", a camp fostered by the Old First Presbyterian Church at Newark, New Jersey.

Tess is a Biology major and a lover of Botany and of those tramps in the woods which are a part of the study of that science. She was an assistant to Miss Hudson in the Biology department two years ago.

Various responsibilities have fallen to Tess. She has been an officer twice in Bainonian Society; she is twice in Bainonian Society. She was vice-president of her class when she was a sophomore. She is now a member of the Student Council, serving as vice-president.

She came to college on her own responsibility and has been self dependent throughout her four years here. Tess has made no effort to make herself known, but the sheer worth of her character together with her spirit of warm friendliness has brought her scores of friends here in Maryville.

under Koussenitzky, and with the Orchestra Pasdeloup under Rhene-Baton. Florent Schmitt in the Paris, "Le Temps" writes: "We heard Robert Casodesus, the eminent French pianist, who is not far from being the first pianist in the world." In the "L' Intransigeant" Robert Casodesus has conquered a place in the very first rank of his generation of artists. At his recent recital he appeared in the full mastery of his magnificent talent: forceful, brilliant, ardent."

Casodesus is noted especially for his association with the outstanding modern French composers and he is acknowledged as one of the foremost exponents of the music of such men as Gabriel Faure, Paul Dukas, Maurice Ronel, Florent Schmitt, and Guy Ropartz.

He is also well known as a composer. His works include chamber music as well as larger compositions for the piano and symphony orchestra. Many of them have been played with considerable success in France and other countries.

In next week's Echo the brilliant program, with annotations, that is to be played by Casodesus will be printed.

DR. GEO. A. BUTTRICK TO SPEAK AT COLLEGE

On Wednesday, January 16, at the regular chapel hour, 8:10 a. m. an address will be given by Rev. Dr. Geo. A. Butrick, pastor of Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City. Dr. Buttrick is one of the best known and ablest preachers in America. He has graciously consented to come to Maryville for this one address during the time that he is at the University of Tennessee as the Annual Convocation Speaker.

more about fashion, they would gain more pleasure from selecting and wearing their clothes, and the standards of selection would be generally raised.

About fifty-nine members of the faculty and their friends were served dinner at this monthly meeting of the club. The color scheme was black and white, and, together with calendar place-cards and other decorations, carried out the idea of welcoming the New Year and bidding farewell to the Old.

Director Is Praised For Messiah Success

The second presentation of Handel's "Messiah" on the afternoon of December 16 established it as an annual musical program of the college. It was again under the skillful direction of Miss Frances Henry whose fitness for that task was proved last year. The chorus numbered one hundred and twenty-five students, but also drawn from the town. The solo work this year was done by the first quartet of the Second Presbyterian Church of Knoxville. That quartet consists of Muriel Parrette, soprano; Lelia Hampon Leslie, contralto; Paul Chavannes, tenor; and Kyle Jenkins, bass. Their contributions to the effectiveness and beauty of the oratorio were very pronounced. The tenor aria "Every valley shall be exalted" and the contralto aria "He shall feed his flock" are perhaps the best known.

The real strength, however, of the "Messiah" is in the choruses and in them there was a rich blending of the one hundred twenty-five voices. The accompanists were Elizabeth Harrell Shugart of Knoxville and Charlotte Upp.

For the exchange program between societies the Athenian Literary Society will entertain their Bainonian sisters with the following program:

As you were about ready to journey home, it appeared that we would be out of business for a while.

But we are glad to surprise you with a clean, well stocked and open store on your return. We wish to thank the college students for the voluntary aid which they gave in checking the fire.

It was a tedious job, but our merchandise has all been inspected, damaged items removed, so that you can know that the manufacturers are ready to guarantee every item we have on our shelves as new merchandise.

Empty copy baskets, idle ruminations about qaulified column fodder, and football captains all go to remind us that Captain Jim Holloway, elected by the Highlanders before vacation began, is now serving as the twelfth captain of a Maryville grid squad since Coach Bob Thrower headed that all-powerful team of 1923. As a matter of fact, according to the new Maryville system which withholds the election of captain until the season is completed, he was captain all season, only no one knew it.

Maybe He Spanked

Nothing needs to be said about Coach Bob. Even the most ill-informed freshman has heard by now how the great Texan used to do everything to opposing teams but spank 'em. But, although everyone knows about it, the wise-acres on the corner will even now rant for hours about the way Bob and his cohorts overpowered their foes, and even the stove-league quarterbacks find a word of praise.

In 1924 we know the captain only by name, one Mr. Hamilton, who resigned during the season In 1925, Joe Gamble, young Maryville attorney and brother of Mose, the tackle of yesterday and the pachyderm of tonight, led the Scots in their struggles for victory, and they say that he was some mean sck. The squad of '26 followed the star, Mr Cartwright, who also ennobled himself in baseball.

Everybody Knows Stone

In 1927 the Highlander captain was none other than John Stone, one of the best all-around athletes to attend the college and only a few summers ago a leading contender for batting honors in the American League. While at Maryville, Stone was a mainstay on the football and basebbal teams, playing a fighting center on the former and handling a mean stick with the latter.

1928 saw J. D. Davis, now a successful coach of football and basketball, as quarterback and captain. The following year the Scotties paced the gridiron under the sterling leadership of Lowell McDonald, guard, who is now a successful coach of high school football at Eldorado, Illinois. Carl Storey served as guard and captain in 1930.

Immortal Callaway

Periodically down thru this list of gridiron men we strike one whose name echoes the countless, long-sung deeds which go to build Maryville football tradition. We began with Bob Thrower, moved on up to John Stone and now we come to Lee Callaway. Of the backfield men who have roamed the battlefields, not only in the conference but in other sections as well, Callaway will always be remembered as one who got started and then went places. As modest about it as a nigger who has stolen a hen he would not tell it to anyone, nor that he was captain in 1931. Lee is now in Vanderbilt with the medics and never fails to be on hand for the fall pow-wows, where he leaves a good lesson in sportsmanship each time he comes. In 1932 it was Marty Gillespie, tough little fullback, Fast Pass Attack Marks Victory Of Scots Over J.B.C.

Henry, Hannah, Crumbaugh Have Little Trouble In Finding Hoop

Johnson City Bible College's five man circus dropped in on the Scotties of Alumni Gym last night for a basketball game, and left the floor after thirty-two minutes of annoying difficulty in finding the hoop, to say nothing of being the heavy loser, to wit, 33-13.

In a game fraught with wild throws, few sensational plays, and much bungling of the ball, the Scots, plainly profiting by their encounter with the Champion Celts Monday night, presented a quick, snappy passing attack which alone saved the go from the hall of farce.

John Henry, playing a flashy game at forward for the Scotties, carried high point honors from his two contenders, Crumbaugh and Hannah, by virtue of a free-throw and two tallies scored late in the ast quarter. His total was thirteen points, with Crumbaugh and Hannah each dropping eight.

Coach Honaker started the same combination, Allen and Henry at forwards, Hannah at center, and Overly and Crumbaugh at guards, which opened against the Celtics here Monday night, this combination proving to be the most aggressive so far this season.

Henry, forward, opened the Scot attack from the side when he found he rim for the two points. Hannah, a moment later, scored on a crip shot, and after both teams had dribbled the length of the floor with no result Crumbaugh, guard, added another crip to the collection.

After considerable passing and waiting for the opening Crumbaugh repeated with a neat throw of the right arm, and Hannah followed with two more points from the side. This spurt was followed by a desultory stretch of free-throw failures on the parts of both teams, nine in all.

From here on to the halfway mark it was nip and tuck between Henry and Hannah for scoring honors. Henry slipped in a slow crip which barely oozed in over the rim, and Hannah followed with two points batted in from the side. Henry duplicated the play by scoring on a missed charity toss, after which Hannah dribbled close in, spun around and flipped the sphere home. With the score reading 16-2, Allen entered the scene with his famous one-hand to add two points. Following this, Highsmith, visiting

The Scot swimming team will open the season against Tusculum at the local pool Friday, January 18. A squad of fourteen has been rounding into good shape for the opening tilt and promises to show gratifying results before the close of the season.

Six lettermen, Herries, Esbach, Greiner, Meeks, McInteer, and Burckhalter, have returned to the squad, and are backed up by Huff, Johnson, Jewett, Bradbeer, Brubaker, Ruse, Ackerman and Odell.

The Scots are strong in dashes, with McInteer, Bradbur, Ruse and Johnson, while Esbach continues to hold up the endurance end. Huff and Jewett will dive, Burckhalter will swim the backstroke, and Herries and Meeks return to the Scots for breaststroke.

Mose Gamble To Tackle Eddie Crawford In Feature Heavyweight Bout

The championship Highlanader wrestling team, seeking its fourth consecutive state title, opens the 1935 season against the Knoxville Y.M.C.A. grapplers tonight at 8:00 o'cock in Alumni gym.

The final team eliminations for the match were held during the later part of the week, and Coach Bob Thrower will send an outfit against the Knoxville crew consisting of five lettermen and three others who were on the squad last year but failed to letter.

Coach Thrower's chief worry this week has been over his 165-pounders, since "Smiley" Richardson, who would have gotten the call, is out with a shoulder injury. The final choice to fill the gap went to Renfro, 155-pound sophomore, who has the advantage of a year's experience over the other 165-pounders. Renfro will have a tough assignment in facing Creekmore, veteran "Y" performer.

In the 118-pound and the 126 pound classes, Ridder and Hoglan should make points for the Scots, while "Skeet" Shields will give Captain Askin, Knoxville 135-pounder, a stiff battle. In the 145-pound class, Coulter will enter the bout for the locals against Mills, a fast, aggressive wrestler, and in the 155-pound division, Dean meets a former Southern champion, Shields, who has been showing old-time form this season.

The biggest thrills of the match should come in the 175-pound and the heavyweight fights, when Buck Millsaps tackles Coher, a former University of Virginia star and a newcomer to the Knoxville team, and Mose Gamble renews his feud with Eddie Crawford, U. T. football player.

Scots Beat Wesleyan, 33-30

Hard Fighting Barely Maintained Lead

ATHENS, Jan. 9—The Highlander basketball team took a rough and tumble battle from the Tennessee Wesleyan Bulldogs here Wednesday night by a score of 33 to 30.

The Highlanders grabbed an early lead and were never overtaken, but had to play fast time basketball all the way to hold down the Bulldog sharpshooters. The Scots did not pile up a big lead at any time, and the Bulldogs were only one goal behind toward the middle of the last quarter.

The unusually hard playing by both teams caused rough going most of the game, and personal fouls a total of 39.

Lee Hanah, center, with 10 points, and John Henry, forward, with 9, were high scorers for Maryville. Overly, guard, contributed 7 points to the final score, Allen, forward, 5, and Crumbaugh, guard, 2. Arrants and Farmer made 7 points each for the Wesleyan high scores.

Although the Scots have defeated the Bulldogs previousy on the home floor, this vicotry was the first for Maryville over Wesleyan on the small Wesleyan court in the last three or four years.

nomic motive is the strongest. F'instance, the price of haircuts in town was advanced ten cents on Thursday. And was there an epidemic of hair cutting in the early part of the week. Suggestion: why not have a rumor that the price of shoe-shining and clothes-pressing is going to advance?

We see more evidence every day that people are different. While passing two college girls on Court Street the other day we overheard one remark, "Gee, I'd just hate to live out in town." We had always thought that the oppoosite sentiment existed. In this connection there is the case of Lois Black and her enlarged sphere of influence since the holidays. Living in town she has a distinct advantage over her campus sisters. She is able to provide her dates with food every time they call. For its quality consult Leitch and Godfrey.

Alumnus Broadcasts On N. B. C. Hook-Up

Laurence L. Cross, of the Class of 1914, pastor of the Community Presbyterian Church of Berkeley, California, has become well-known on the Pacific Coast for a radio program "Cross Cuts From the Log of the Day" which the National Broadcasting Company is now featuring on a Coast-to-Coast hook-up Tuesdays, 1:00 p. m., Central Standard Time.

The program consists of an interpretation of current events from the standpoint of a minister by Mr. Cross, and musical and novelty features in which his family assist him. He has been giving that program on a station-to-station hook-up along the Pacific Coast for a number of years. He and his two brothers Rev. Frank M. Cross, of Birmingham, Alabama (a new Director of Maryville College), and Reverend Robert Cross of Los Angeles, California, are alumni of the College.

has been leader of the annual religious meetings there no less than three times.

Dr. Thompson is remembered in Knoxville as one of the most able and spiritual preachers in the long history of the churches there although he was only twenty-eight years old when he became pastor of the great First Church. There are those who remember with enthusiasm the addresses he made at Maryville College during his Knoxville pastorate.

He is a man of attractive personality and is looked upon as possessing an unusual balance of quiet vigor, intellectual interest, and spiritual earnestness.

Mr Heasty, who comes to lead the singing, is an experienced director, an excellent singer and a strong personality. He is the Associate of Rev. Dr. Joseph M. Broady, at the Sixth Avenue Presbyterian Church of Birmingham. Mrs. Heasty is the leading singer of he city.

The stage lacked nothing for an appropriate seting.

The adverising of the play deserves mention for its being one of the most novel methods employed. The device of the microphone and the loud speaker at Thaw Hall was well calculated to arouse interest.

the following year saw Ray (Finklestein) Russell, rangy center, hard hitter on the nine, and javelin heaver, at the helm. Thus we come to Holloway, a guard who charges with a mean shoulder, and to whom we look forward for one more year of the same kind of play. Congrats, m'lad. It's a pleasure.

The Shame of It

But over and above it all crowds into the mind of your scribe the unquenchable thought of the forgotten man, and so we shall simply speak of it in the form of a fair and frank question to the 1934 Highlander team as a voting unit. Don't you think you forgot to remember Louie Krainock, who for four years has been the most faithful and most spirited man in your ranks? The answer is yes. Perhaps Louie would not be classed as a "great" football player; he never really got his chance until late in '33. But this last season saw him one of the best kickers on the team, saw him buck the line like a veteran, and let us say that none has bucked it harder than he, saw him back up the line to the limit on the defense, saw him on the field always with a fighting spirit and a desire for teamwork and, in general, saw him figure in the most notable Scot attacks and defenses of the year. In addition to all this he is an honor student, doing the work of an English major and honors work in Philosophy, and he is this writer's idea of a gentleman.

Louie, in the mind of this humble scribe, if not the honor then the thought behind it is unqualifiedly yours.

J. B. C. BASKETBALL forward, scored from under the hoop upon recovery of a missed free throw shortly before the half ended, with the Scotties leading, 20-4.

Third-period scoring began when Henry recovered a bogus throw from the foul line and made good the try. A long rest period followed during which neither goal was seriously threatened, both teams clubbing the ball considerably. Anderson, forward for the Bible College, finally broke under for a counter, after which the Scots worked the ball down fast, Crumbaugh going under on famous "No. 2" for two more points.

Crumbaugh then furnished the only sensation of the day by successfully connecting for two charity throws, which up to this time had gone the other way.

The final minutes of the game were marked with infrequent scoring, mostly by Hannah and Henry, with Brittain also adding two. A late rally from the visitors brought the score up to 33-13, where it remained as the game ended. Fast passing and a tight defense were the main features of the Scot performance, all being centered around Henry, forward, Hannah, center, and Overly, guard. Allen suffered a scoring sump as a result of fewer attempts at the rim, while Crumbaugh, playing good ball in both departments, laved in a talley boom.

Summary:

Allen, 2	f.	Anderson, 4
Henry, 13	f.	Highsmith, 4
Hannah, 8	c.	Smith
Crumbaugh, 8	g.	Barazone, 2
Overly	g.	De Boeor, 1

EDITORIAL

When eminent artists appear on the Maryville stage it is to be hoped that the usual courtesies of college men and women will be extended to them.

That college men and women need to be reminded that attentiveness to the program not only is a courtesy but is based upon the foundation of courtesy, consideration for others, is a fact to be deplored. In view, however, of the disturbing elements in certain sections of the chapel last evening campus opinion should be such as will disapprove of impoliteness to guests.

Casadesus Wildly Acclaimed On Third American Appearance

Famous French Pianist Thrills Crowded Chapel

Robert Casadesus, the brilliant French pianist, appeared here last night in his third recital in the United States. A large audience received all of his numbers with enthusiasm and M. Casadesus responded to the continued applause with three encores.

His playing was perfect in technique, and his intrepretation of compositions by Beethoven, Chopin and Schumann and the modern French pianist, Ravel, was exquisite and powerful. It is impossible for any but music critics to judge adequately the playing of so great a musician, but the entire audience was pleased beyond any expectations by this wonderful master. Tarantelle and Berceuse by Chopin and Loccata by Ravel were particularly well received.

The stage appearance and personality of M. Casadesus were very pleasing. The program was pronounced by many the best that the Maryville Artist Series has brought to Maryville. His program contained the following numbers:

I.

32 Variations, C Minor—
Ludwig Van Beethoven

II.

Carnaval, Opus 9—Robert Schumann

III.

Polonaise, Opus 44
Berceuse, Opus 57
Tarantelle, Opus 43—

Toccata—Maurice Ravel

FRENCH CLUB

At the last meeting of the French Club, a business meeting was held, and the following officers were elected: President, Theron Alexander; Vice President, Joan Dexter; Secretary, Ruth McCampbell; Treasurer, Warren Jones. An interesting paper was read by Phyllis Dexter.

Bills Due Monday; One Faculty Change

As announced in the last issue of the Echo", the Treasurer's Office will be open for the payment of second semester's bills from Monday, January 28, through Thursday, January 31.

The Book Store is now open for the return of rented books, and those in charge urge all students to return their books as quickly as possible. Textbooks for the second semester will not be rented until Wednesday morning.

The only change in the Faculty for the new semester will be the return of Miss Carroll, Associate Professor of Biology, who has been doing advanced work at Duke University during the past semester. In Miss Carroll's absence, her position has been filled by Mrs. Bessie H. Olin of Maryville.

February Meetings Had Origin In 1877

Instituted In Dr. Bartlett's Administration

The February Meetings, beginning a week from Tuesday, will be the 59th in a series of meetings which originated in 1877.

It was during the administration of P. Mason Bartlett as president that the first February Meetings were instituted, Dr. Wilson tells in "A Century of Maryville College". For ten years following the Civil War the College had shared in the special services held annually at the New Providence Presbyterian Church. The pastor there at that time was the well-known Dr. Isaac Anderson. The growth of the college, however led Dr. Bartlett to initiate special services held on the campus. At that time the chapel was on the second floor of Anderson Hall. The Rev. Nathan Bachman, D. D. conducted these meetings. The custom in the early years was for each leader to be in charge once in four years.

The meetings were designed then to turn the attention of those connected with the college "manward as well as Godward", to quote Dr. Wilson. This is still an expression of their purpose. The meetings themselves are still regarded as "the culmination of every year's campaign for character building."

Society Parties On Tuesday After Meet

Theta in Bartlett; Athenian In Thaw

The first joint meetings of the societies will be held on Tuesday evening, January 29, at eight-fifteen. Since they are to follow the swimming meet, they will be of necessity informal occasions. Both programs are to be unusual in their entertainment.

Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma Societies extend to their members an invitation to "go nautical" abroad the S. S. Bartlett. A varied and attractive program has been planned featuring the Alpha Sigma Orchestra and including deck games and sports, sailor dances and yarns, and a skit by the Bartlettonian Players. Refreshments will be served beside "the rolling waters" of the swimming pool.

Bainonian and Athenian Societies invite their members to attend a theatre program to be staged in the philosophy classroom. Features of the program will include a cartoon comedy on the screen, a magician, and a mock opera. Refreshments will be served in the adjoining salon.

The admission fee of fifteen cents for each person or twenty-five cents for each couple will be paid at the door. A large number of guests is expected to attend both functions.

WEDNESDAY

No classes will meet on the day between semesters, Wednesday, January 30. Rules will be partially suspended, and an evening of entertainment has been planned for students on the Hill. Early in the evening a girls' basketball game will be held in the gymnasium, with a possibility of some exhibition wrestling by members of the men's wrestling team. Following this the parlors in the girls dormitories will be thrown open to the tudents.

ALL ALIKE?

The following article appeared in the Dickinsonian of November 30, 1934:

"Writings of students in one of the chapel hymnals of Bosler hall reveal interesting comments, cartoons, and poems about chapel speakers, the faculty, and the College in general.

"These entries have been made from March 1, 1929, to the present time and range from praise to condemnation.

"'5-7-29, Bennie Folsom spoke today—prayed for everyone but Mr. Burns and the plumber. Rotten."

"5-8-29, Prof. Eddy. Talked of scientists. Cribbed his prayer."

"5-27-29, Bishop. Fifteen boring minutes of admonishment regarding the benefits of being good."

"2-17-32, The faculty looks the same today. Prettyman makes an ugly face. Herber still looks as though he does not know the score.' Wing reads excuses and history papers. Rohrbaugh's cold, mummy-like face persists. Patterson looks too old to be up there. Taintor—as ever (One would think all her friends were dead and her ideal gone)."

"2-27-29, Count Felix von Luckner. Very good. Good speaker and interesting accounts of his experiences. Spoke from 10:15 until 12:15. Great stuff."

The two following poems concerning Professor Wing were found:

"Hark the Herald angels sing,
Mistory notes from Herby Wing;
Here they come and here they go,
That's the students tale of woe. . .

The second attempt portrays a student's impression of Professor Wing's office:

"On first entering that office of Dr. Wing's
I started in amazement at the jumble of things,
Quickly turning about I looked at the door,
Almost sure I would see. . .
Superintendent
M. Cohen & Sons, Junk."

"4-20-30, Dr. Taintor. Very good. It seems that all the good ones remain within their time limit."

"4-9-30, Thompson on 'The Inner Aspect of the Situation.' Rotten."

"2-24-30—Thomas. First verse of America'. Good talk.

"4-16-32, Another preacher. 'Don't swear. Don't steal, Don't smoke Don't be bad, Don't Cheat. Go to Church. Have good morals. Don't lie; and a hundred other don'ts'. 'Nuts', I say.

"10-8-32, Prettyman. 'The measure of life is what you give.' Darned good; why don't some of the others get away from mechanical speeches. The most of them seem to know nothing outside the subjects they teach."

"11-14-32, Long speech. Up on the platform Eddy continues to look like a prizefighter. Bishop seems ever embarrassed at being so much in the public eye. Dean Meredith is always scrutinizing the gentleman's section—her female brood is usually

Debate Season Opens Friday Night With L. M. U. And Emory

Freshmen Preliminaries Next Week

Doctor Hunter, Maria Wynn, and Earl Crawford, despite the absence of Professor Queener, the regular varsity coach, have succeeded in preparing the forensic squad for its usual trying season. Catheryn Smith, although not entitled such, filled a role equivalent to business manager, writing letters and making contracts.

The debate season will open Friday, February 1, when a men's affirmative team, composed of Pieper and Hartman, meets L. M. U. at Emory Henry, and a negative team, composed of Smith and Badgett, meets Emory Henry at L. M. U.

The teams that will attend the North Carolina Convention on March 7th, 8th and 9th, and the Provincial Convention on April 12th and 13th have been tentatively selected. They will consist of the men's teams mentioned above, and the women's affirmative team of Maria Wynn and Florence Hyde, and negative team of Mary Gladys Brown and Roberta Howie. The Provincial Convention will be held at Franklin College in Franklin, Indiana, and the North Carolina Convention at Lenoir-Rhyne.

The men's teams, besides those given, are composed of Wilson and Morgan, and Badgett and Christie. The other women's team is composed of Marcella Ardern and Eleanor Pflanze.

In addition to the scheduled debates listed in a previous issue of the Highland Echo, negotiations are being made for engagements with Southwestern, Waynesburg, Asheville Normal, Cumberland, and Vanderbilt. If secured, these debates will probably take place at Maryville during February and March.

Maryville is fortunate in having back most of the debaters that gave her her most successful season last year, winning three-fourths of the scheduled debates. Five of these, Florence Hyde, Grace Proffitt, Earle Crawford, Jimmie Smith, and Maria Wynn, will be awarded the highest honor of Pi Kappa Delta, the Degree

Fields Resigns As Dean of Men

President Lloyd announces that Dr. Fields has asked to be relieved of the duties of Dean of Men, effective at the end of the present semester, in order that he may devote his full time to his work as Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology and Education and to some writing he is now doing for publication. This request has been granted with regret.

Dr. Fields came to the Faculty of Maryville College in the Fall of 1932, as Professor and Head of the Department of Psychology and Education. A year later he was appointed also as Dean of Men and has filled both positions with much effectiveness since that time. But he now feels that he should give undivided time to teaching, research, and writing. He is prominently known in the national field of psychological research and is at present writing sections of an important book.

AND LIFE GOES ON

At the end of this first semester of whatever scholastic rank we may be classed, it is time to examine ourselves if we have not already done so.

We should examine ourselves to see if we have accomplished what we planned to do last September. And if we have not succeeded in doing all we hoped to do ask ourselves the reason. We should consider whether or not we enjoyed the courses for which we enrolled. If not, why not? Because we did not study; because they did not fit into our program; because we were prejudiced; because we were bored; because we had no time.

What new friendships have you formed? You who are freshmen will have many to add to your list; sophomores will have made more contacts; juniors will have deeper attachments to the old friends, seniors will have realized how much all Maryville friendships mean.

Do you like Maryville? Like the College so much that you loyally uphold her traditions and despise the student whose adverse criticism brands him a moral coward?

Are your intentions for the next semester good ones? As at the New Year season have you made resolutions? Resolutions to study harder and longer, to apply yourself with diligence to assigned work; the desire to cultivate friendships, to read good literature and daily news?

The end of the first semester is the time for us to re-examine ourselves.

SUPERIORS COTTIES

Students of the life of campus-citizens have observed three types of students on the campus. One class receives considerable but momentary notice at their entrance into college. Another class waits two or three years for recognition. A third type stands above the common ranks throughout the whole college experience. It would generally be conceded that Earle W. Crawford would find his name in the third category.

Earle's first opportunity for leadership came when he was chosen president of his freshman class. That same year his interest as well as his ability as a speaker became apparent in his work on the freshman debate team. The following year he became a member of the Varsity Debate Squad and of Pi Kappa Delta, organizations in which he has held membership until the present time. He is now president of Pi Kappa Delta. His superior quality as a debater, already known in local debate circles, became more widely known last year at the national Pi Kappa Delta convention at Lexington, Kentucky, where he won recognition and much praise. That he was winner of the T. T. Alexander Oratorical Contest is proof of his competence in the field of oratory.

"SQUIRRELY"

It would follow that Squirrely, as he is popularly known, has dramatic interests. And so he has. He has appeared in two Athenian midwinters, "She Stoops to Conquer", and "The Goose Hangs High". He played also in the Bainonian midwinter, "A Little Journey", and in the College Players' production, "Within The Law."

He is well liked in men's organizations on the campus. For three years he has been a member of that band of hikers who call themselves Pi Upsilons. Last year he served them as president. He has been an office holder in the Athenian society. This year he is president of the Y. M. C. A.

Very definite and unmistakable qualities of leadership have appeared in Earle's character: manliness, ability, a likeable personality, and strength of character.

The field for missionaries in China is always broadening, for wars are constantly keeping the country in a state of turmoil and uncertainty. Kingship Robs Peter of Boyhood

King Peter; right, while student in England

Because he can't play like other boys, has to study more than most boys and is watched and guarded more than any other boy in the world, life is so strange to Yugoslavia's 11-year-old King Peter, son of the assassinated King Alexander. Being prepared for his task of ruling the nation, Peter has a fixed daily schedule of study and exercise that excludes most boyhood pleasures. Too young to realize the meaning of his father's murder, young Peter is bothered by the police who constantly guard him, but he is courageously carrying out his part as the boy king of Europe.

"Mind Affects All" Galbreath's Theme

Dr. Robert Ferguson Galbreath, President of Westminster College in Pensylvania, addressed the student body last Saturday morning. Dr. Galbreath was visiting Maryville on his return trip from the Atlanta Conference.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he" was the theme of the address. "You are, in a large measure, what you think yourself to be. To realize that the thought waves of a man's mind are reaching out and touching everyone—not only people on the campus, but people all over the world, is an impressive thought. Man, by his thoughts, is directing the forces of the world for right or wrong.

"Morning devotions have a real value, for through them one catches emanations from the mind of the Eternal, links his mind with God's, and thinks God's thoughts with Him"

There is nothing that tones a fellow like a restful companionship—with himself.

Basketball fans, after a three-year lethargy, are beginning to bristle with interest over the prospects of the 1935 Highlander cage squad. Wise old sideline coaches are beginning to nod their heads and predict, as never before, that Honaker's men will split the conference wide open with a clean slate and a conference crown. To date the Scotties have remained undefeated in the loop, a record which is equalled only by Coach Frosty Holt's outfit from Carson-Newman, but as yet no real opposition has been offered. The first serious issue will come to a head Tuesday night on the home floor when the locals match crips with Coach McMurray's fast aggregation from Johnson City. Last week Tennessee Teachers were defeated at Carson-Newman by a close score.

At It Again

Another item which seems to be leading the local sports parade is the vicious race for high score honors ensuing between Maryville's two outstanding cagesters, Lee Hannah and John Henry. Hannah raggy center, leads the pack with a total of 113 points, while Henry, valuable forward, is a close second with 105 points. Allen, the other regular forward, is third with 84. And that brings us around to a little story about Hannah which we uncommentingly present for your amusement. Last week the sturdy lad was selected by doctors as the donor of a bit of blood for a transfusion. The medics warned him to stay in bed, or else, but Hannah would not have it so, and here's the story. That same week he played against Tusculum, scoring seventeen points, and on the following eve in a fast fracas between the Scots and L. M. U. scored sixteen. They say that Coach Honaker has added an old fashioned bleeder to the local equipment.

Is He Slipping?

Since Glen Roberts, once thought to be the Houdini of the hardwood court, visited Alumni Gym Wednesday night the general opinion is that he is minus his wares, for the big center scored only 18 points against the Scotties in comparison with the 35 tallies reaped by his unorthodox shooting of last year. This may be true to a certain degree, but we should rather attribute the slump to a tighter defensive play on the part of the Scotties. Coaches along the border have spent the practice sessions gunning for the fake-wizard, and pretty generally have succeeded in holding him to low scores. This being the case, next season should find him brought down to earth and practically no threat at all. But since Roberts has a background for basketball that practically no other man in this region has, having spent nearly his entire boyhood on an outdoor court back in Virginia, there is no telling what havoc he might wreak during one of his 'hot' spells

Signs

Your scribe never used to believe in signs, but lately certain signs have seemed to be forerun by the proverbial shadow. For instance when Coach Thrower goes uptown to buy a new sweat-suit and a box of Ex-Lax we know right away that the wrestling season is right around the corner, and that Gary Ridder is having another gaining spell. Likewise do we feel the onrush of the baseball season when Toots Blazer begins to visit the co-ed gym classes, throwing tennis balls at the members thereof. And finally, we

NEW RECORDS SET AS SCOTS TOP TUSCULUM

Esbach, Burckhalter Set Fast Paces In 400-Yard And Backstoke

Two new college records were set, one in the 400-yard freestyle by Embry Esbach and the other by Rey Burckhalter in the backstroke, as the Scot tankmen opened the season with a sweeping victory over Tusculum last Saturday night. The final score was 53-31.

Esbach clipped considerable time off the old record to swim the 400 yard course in 5:56. Burckhalter swam the 100-yard backstroke in the record time of 1:15. Bradbeer, yearling dash man, has already lowered the college record for the 50-yard dash from 28 seconds to 26:5.

Wintry blasts and bad roads account for the cancellation of the meet which was to have been held Thursday with Knoxville Y. M. C. A. mermen in the local pool.

Leroy Obert, veteran diver for the Scotties, is unable to enter competition this season because of an operation performed during the recent holidays. Continued improvement in Huff and Jewett, however, indicates that the locals will be well represented in this department.

The next meet will find the Scotties pitched against a veteran U. T. squad at Knoxville, January 31.

Highlanders Top Smoky Conference Race With Four Wins, No Defeats

Defeat Lincoln Memorial University, 40-25, Lose To Emory-Henry, 38-34

After finishing a hard pre-season schedule, the Maryville Colege basketball team opende the conference season January 14 with an easy 49 to 25 triumph over Appalachian Teachers on the home court.

The Scots added two more contests to the conference win column the same week by stopping Tusculum 33 to 25 at Greeneville and L. M. U. 44 to 33 at Harrogate. Both games were pulled out of the fire with last period rallies.

The Maryville line-upss for the three games were as follows:

Teachers—Allen 10, and Henry 16, forwards; Hannah 5, center; Overly 2 and Crumbaugh 10 guards. Substitutes— Pearson, Atchison. Peery 4, Brittain, Odell 2.

Tusculum—Allen 10, and Henry 5, forwards; Hannah 17, center; Overly 1 and Crumbaugh, guards. Substitutes— Odell and Pearson.

L. M. U.—Allen 6 and Henry 15, forwards; Hannah 16, center; Overly 4 and Crumbaugh 2, guards. Substitutes—Odell 1 and Pearson.

Defeat L. M. U., 40-25

With Hannah hitting the hoops for 12 points and Henry and Allen making 10 each, Coach Honaker's hustling Highlanders had little trouble downing the Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters by a 45-25 score Thursday night in Alumni gym.

After having been held in check last Saturday night by the Railsplitters until the last four minutes of play, the Scots started the second contest prepared to go the limit but turned what should have been a good ball game into a rout. The Maryville five chalked up goals with monotonous regularity, even though substitutes went in at frequent intervals, and played its usual tight defensive game.

The Maryville victory over L. M. U., accompanied by a Carson-Newman triumph over East Tennessee Teachers, put the Scots ahead of the pack in the early stages of the race for the Smoky Mountain Conference title. The Highlanders have won all of their first four conference games.

Line-ups:

Maryville		L. M. U.
Allen 10	f.	Stooksbury 11
Henry 10	f.	Hurst
Hannah 12	c.	Livesay 3
Overly	g.	Boyer 3
Crumbaugh 3	g.	Slover

Substitutions— Maryville: Pearson, Brittain 1, Peery 4, Atchison, Odell 1, Hulette 4. L. M. U.: Cooper 3, Johns 4, Brewer, Saine, Barker 1.

Lose To Railsplitters, 38-34

Surging forward in a sensational last half attack centered around Allen, Henry, and Hannah, the Highlander basketeers pulled up to within one goal of the fast-stepping Emory and Henry Wasps, Glen (Houdini) Roberts and all, last Wednesday night, only to have the Wasps grab the victory with two baskets in the last minute of play. The final score was 38-34.

The Scots started the game with a scoring spree that netted 8 points before the Wasps could find the basket, but with the famous Roberts shot beginning to click, Emory and Henry pulled away to hold a comfortable 20 to 13 lead at the half way mark.

Soon after the second half opened, Maryville moved up on the Wasps and kept within four points of the visitors all the last part of the period. With the Scots trailing by 2 points and five minutes to play, the two teams began an even race to the finish, each side taking its turn hitting the hoops until Emory and Henry made the final score read 38 to 34 with a field goal that ended the game.

Glen Roberts, as usual, took high score honors with 18 points. Rex Allen countered 14 and John Henry 12 for the next in line.

Line-ups:

Maryville		Emory & Henry
Allen 14	f.	Robinson 1
Henry 12	f.	Fulk 2
Hannah 3	c.	Roberts 18
Overly	g.	Mackey
Crumbaugh 4	g.	Neel 8

Substitutions— Maryville: Pearson, Atchison, Odell 1, Brittain. Emory and Henry: Propps 8, Countiss, Fielders 1.

Cagesters Meet Eagles Tonight

Scots Out After Fifth Conference Victory

Tonight the Scot netmen, in the first of an exchange of conference games, clash with Carson-Newman at Jefferson City. Next Tuesday night conference fans will find a fast and interesting game when Gene McMurray's quintet from East Tennessee Teachers oppose the Scots in Alumni Gym. The Teachers, who had a victory over Carson-Newman snatched from their hands in the closing seconds of a game last week will come prepared to win the score with the Scots. The final tilt of the week will be with Tennessee Wesleyan, whose basketeers visit Alumni Gym Friday night.

When some of us are wont to lament the strictness of Maryville's rules and regulations, we should think of the plight of students at the University of Wyoming. Dates are not allowed even at athletic events.

GRAPPLERS VIE TONIGHT WITH CHATTANOOGA

Visitors Hold Southern Y. M. C. A. Championship For 1934; Scots Confident

With victories already registered over Tennessee and the Knoxville Y. M. C. A., the Maryville College wrestling team will seek its third triumph of the year against the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. in Alumni gym at 8:00 p. m.

The Chattanooga team, holders of the Southern Y. M. C. A. championship in 1934, will send a strong outfit against the locals, but the Highlander grapplers have little fear of seeing their record marred.

The Maryville line-up will be the same as in the previous matches, with the exception of the 165-pound class. "Smiley" Richardson, who has been out several weeks with an injured shoulder, is back in shape again and will take on the Chattanooga 165-pounder, while Dean, who wrestled the 165-pound class last week against Tennessee, will return to the 155-pound division.

With a line-up consisting of Ridder, 118-poundclass; Hoglan, 126-pound class; Shields, 135-pound class; Coulter, 145-pound class; Dean, 155 pound class; Richardson 165-pound class; Millsaps, 175 pound class; and Gamble, heavyweight, the Highlanders are practicing assured of a team victory, although by a small margin, but the majority of the individual matches will probably be closely fought.

Coach Thrower will take his Scot grapplers to Chattanooga next Saturday for a return engagement with the "Y" forces.

Interclass Cage Go Begins Soon

Tourney Will Come Shortly After Semester Begins

Interclass basketball will be the next event on the Y.M.C.A. athletic program, it was announced by the directors this morning.

Although no definite plans have been made it is understood that teams from the classes will clash in the first round of the tourney shortly after the beginning of the new semester.

Class athletic directors are advised to get their teams together for practice sessions as soon as possible within the next week.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

One of the compensations of senior life around here is the Ethics Course. T'other day in the midst of a "pop" quiz E. New-

THUD man Smith, illustrious president of the seniors, hit the floor with a resounding smack. He didn't hit it with a book or a fountain pen, either, but with himself. In other words, his seat parted from its supports and he landed square on the floor. Just another heavy thinker!

:—:—:

Maybe you didn't noitce it. Last Saturday morning, the day the dx classes had their final announced quiz, the closing hymn GLORY in chapel was "God Speed the Right". The seniors were all either primed or getting primed for the ethics final. Along comes this hymn, and did they sing? You see the last line is: "If we fail, we fail with glory, God speed the right." If we fail. . .

:—:—:

Isn't it surprising what an education will do for a fellow, or a girl for that matter of it? It seems that Hen Session was in DEAD progress (or whatever the women call a Bull Session).

One of the senior members of a philosophical turn of mind (maybe), inquires out of the depth of her thinking: "I wonder how many dead people are buried out there in the cemetery?"

:—:—:

This man Gillander is quite a statistician in his own right. He claims that Dr. Orr has used the expression "In the last 125? analysis" 116 times this semester, 11 of them being in one class. Gillander is willing to bet that the count will reach the 125 mark before the semester closes.

:—:—:

This snowfall covered up a lot of things, but it also brought some others to light. One of the things dragged forth was a

SPAT pair of spats which moved around the campus on Dr. Fields' ankles. There's more than one reason for wearing spats, as you know. They keep the feet less cold, cover holes in the heels of sox, and even make it possible to dispense with sox altogether. Which of these lowly reasons is Dr. Fields' we don't know.

—:—:—

Isn't it too bad that we can't see everything that goes on? Two or three days ago we'd have liked to have seen a little

GAY incident participated in by a couple of members of the faculty. It seems that the snow reminded Daddy Knapp of his boyhood days, and getting playful he tried to stuff snow down Miss Clemmie Henry's back. Lots of fun, eh what, Dr. Knapp?

:—:—:

Two little boys went to chapel, Crumbaugh and Campbell. It was Wednesday morning a week ago. They settled down to PROMPT wait since the chapel was empty. Said Crumbaugh: "It's nice to get here this early—ten minutes to eight—we can get our snooze in before the crowd gets theirs." They waited a while and when no one else came they took another look at the clock. It was not 7:50 but. . .8:50. Missed by an hour!

:—:—:

There's no intention of turning this column into Society News. That's wrecked too many good papers. But. The KENT snoopers have something to pass on. Betty Kent is leaving our midst in a day or two to journey on to Harrisburg, Pa. where her aunt lives. She is not going just to see her aunt, however. She'll meet our old friend Dana Hanby and there be united with him in the holy bonds of matrimony. Then they'll go to Buffalo, New York to live where Mr. Hanby is employed by the Purina Company, manufacturers of cereals. P. S. best wishes to the couple.

:—:—:

What's Alpha Sigma gonna do? Fool us and not put on a play?

:—:—:

And this by way of morality: the way to Burn 'em up is not to razz the referee.

Orchestra Concert Next Saturday Night

The orchestra is to give its first concert of the year next Saturday night, February 2, at eight o'clock in Voorhees chapel. This concert is to be an introductory concert rather than one of the regular concerts which the orchestra gives each year. The program of pieces to be played has not yet been definitely settled.

During this "hour of music" Lorena Mae Dunlap, a graduate of the expression department is to give a reading. The reading which she is to give is "Sunny Goes Home" by Fanny Kilbourne. Miss Dunlap is well known on the campus for her activities in the field of expression.

Are You Any Better?

Your scribe feels that it is about time someone said something about the juvenile practice of booing which is accustomed to take place at nearly every athletic event of the year. The only place in which it has not been noticable so far was at the one tank meet held at the local pool last week, and that was probably because the Scotties were obviously superior. Not only have the judges and referees been heckled but also players on opposing teams have had to tolerate the same unsportsmanlike tactics. Maryville enjoys a certain prestige because it is the biggest college in the Smoky Mountain Conference, but it would seem that that prestige will crumble away when it is whispered around that "Maryville canit take it". What are you going to do about it?

Dr. G. A. Buttrick Addresses Students

Dr. George A. Buttrick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York City, delivered an appreciated address in chapel Wednesday morning of last week. His theme was "For their sakes, I sanctify myself." With this text he showed that one should not live only for self or only for others, but that the two should be combined. He said that we should "sanctify ourselves. . for others' sakes." He asserted that there was much evil in present day systems that needed eradication, that we should sanctify ourselves for its eradication.

Dr. Buttrick, one of the foremost ministers in America, was visiting Knoxville in connection with the University School of Religion.

1935 FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

Although the entire Highlander schedule is not complete, games will be played during the 1935 football season with Cumberland, King, Carson-Newman, Murfreesboro, Lenoir-Rhyne and Teachers. The dates and locations of the games will probably be decided upon at the conference meetings. These six schools are under two year contracts with Maryville, of which this year was the first.

Games may be played with Kentucky and St. Xavier, but have not been decided upon as yet. St. Xavier is seeking a game with the Highlanders on Wilson Field. In any event, Maryville is sure of an interesting schedule.

SOUTH AMERICA—Reports concerning revolutions in South America are slow in coming, for we have it on good authority that the South America representative of the Highland Echo has been spending most of his time posing for picture post cards.

Book Browsing

"Creative Youth" by Hughes Mearns. Doubleday, Doran, and Vo., New York, 1929

Anyone who picks up, even casually, the volume entitled "Creative Youth" will very probably find himself leafing through its pages with more than ordinary enjoyment. "Creative Youth" is partially an authology of verse by high school pupils of The Lincoln School in New York. But, more than that, it tells how and in what strange ways this surprising poetry came into being. A ninth grade boy writes of Broadway as

Twisting paths of golden light;

Another boy, a junior in high school tells us that

A little boy stood on the corner
And shoveled bits of dirty, soggy snow
Into the sewer—
With a jagged piece of tin.
He was helping spring come.

These are but two of the finished products that are deserving of praise.

Yet, the fashioning of these poems under the guidance of a skillful teacher constitutes an equally interesting process. Poems, good and bad, were brought in. The instructor's task was to single out the one good line or idea as an incentive for further endeavors. The author tells of a girl who submitted a graduation poem with the conventional figure of a ship leaving harbor. The first line alone was worth salvaging from the remainder of the poem. It read:

The ever-passing steps went by our door.

Discarding all but this line, a class poem of real beauty developed.

Very little of the criticism of the young poets' efforts was done in a formal group. Amusing instances are related of discussions carried on heatedly in the halls of the school. Most of the revising and re-writing of poems was done at the suggestion of fellow classmates.

To what happens when the creative urge of high school pupils is given freedom to express itself "Creative Youth" offers a most satisfying answer.

A professor at Dickinson College asked whether the women had any way of defending thei rright of suffrage, should the men organize to deny it to them by physical force. One of the fair students sallied forth with the suggestion that the women might unite and refuse to cook for the men. The professor immediately came back with, "Why, the women can't cook anyway!"

A sweled head is a sign of ignorance.

Diversions Offered By Joint Society Meetings Enjoyed

Nautical Gathering And Theatre Party Well Attended

Theta Epsilon and Alpha Sigma societies held their joint meeting in Bartlett Hall on Tuesday evening, January 29.

Clever decorations made the gym seem very nautical, and a yearning for the sea was awakened in the hearts of many of those attending. The song of the waves was accompanied by the Alpha Sigma Orchestra which presented a program of popular music that was met with approval and applause.

Joan Dexter and Rosemary Garst entertained with a sailor dance, and the famous players from Bartlett-on-the-Hill presented a skit that was very unique. Magic and song added a finishing touch that rounded out the enjoyable program.

The running track above the gym floor was set with tables and many couples viewed the entertainment with advantage from the "top deck."

Cinnamon buns were served with hot chocolate to all the passengers not steering from mal-de-mer. Few were so troubled, for the refreshments were readily accepted as was the entire program of the evening.

Bainonian—Athenian

Athenian and Bainonian societies presented their joint program at the Athonian Theatre on Tuesday evening. The entertainment was varied and well received by the audience.

Following the movie show "Cartoon Comedies", several groups of songs were well received, particularly pleasing being those of Calista Palmer's with the male harmony accompaniment. Leland Waggoner entertained with baritone solos.

Kathryn Meisle and Joe Penner, familiar artists to Maryville students, were impersonated by Marie Carlson and Walter West, respectively.

Readings by Andrew Walrond popular music sung by the Wells Brothers, and a skit by Marion Lodwick and Roberta Hargrave concluded the program.

Ballet Russe At Knoxville Friday

The second program in the Knoxville Artist Series presents Col. W. de Basil's Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, on Friday, February 8th.

Leonide Massine, maitre de ballet, principal dancer and choreographer who has created more than half the colorful stage productions of the Russian's repertoire, actually set out in life to be an actor. He was playing his first role, that of a waiter balancing a large platter across a crowded stage in a Moscow theatre, when Serge Diaghiler, eccentric genius of the ballet world, who was also the discoverer of Nijinsky, happened to be in the audience, Diaghiler started him on his career.

In interludes between dance seasons he studied painting and sculpture in Italy and the dance in Spain where he collaborated with the composer Manuel DeFalla on "The Three-Cornered Hat". The Monte Carlo now gives this ballet exactly as produced by Diaghiler in Paris, with the settings of Picasso and Massive dancing the leading role.

College's Annual Religious Services Begin On Tuesday

Dr. Thompson and Heastys Will Arrive Monday

At 9:45 on Tuesday morning Dr. Thompson of Richmond, Virginia will be presented to the students and faculty of Maryville at the first chapel service of the February Meetings. Mr and Mrs. Heasty of Birmingham will lead the singing as previously announced. Changes in the schedule of classes and of the supper hour have been made which will be followed during the progress of the meetings. Also, inaugurating a new custom for the meetings, a chapel service will be held on Monday morning, February 11, in place of a Saturday evening service.

Enthusiastic comments have been received from many quarters on the choice of Dr. Thompson as leader for this year's series. A Knoxville business man remarked the other day, "I knew Dr. Thompson well several years ago. He was a great athlete, a fine preacher, and a most attractive person."

Such words as these and the many others of praise for Dr. Thompson indicate that the College is fortunate in securing his leadership. He is a man of eminent position and recognized ability. To have him as a daily speaker and counsellor during the meetings is therefore a privilege.

Mr. and Mrs. Heasty are known to a considerable number of students and teachers through the Ovoca Young People's Conference at Birmingham, or elsewhere. They are looking forward eagerly to their leadership in singing at Maryville. The College has been fortunate in those who have led the music during the various years. Mr. Stringham has rendered a magnificent service for more than a decade, and now Mr. and Mrs. Heasty join the list of our benefactors.

Y. W. C. A.

"Keeping in Tune" is the theme of discussion planned by the Junior Cabinet at the regular Y. W. meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. meeting tomorrow at 1:00 p. m. will be in the nature of a surprise meeting. The speakers will be a prominent Maryville alumna and one of the students.

Spalding, American Violinist, Is Next On Artist Series

Musician Was Decorated For Services In War

Albert Spalding, one of the greatest living violinists both here and abroad, will play at Maryville College on Friday evening, March 1st. Spalding is now following his long continued custom of touring six months of each year in America and six months in Europe. The noted American musician is said to have a larger European following than any other American artist.

Spalding was born in Chicago, and studied music in New York, Florence and Bologna. After his debut, he was honored by being chosen as violin soloist for the New York Symphony Orchestra on their first European tour.

Spalding is admired greatly in Germany, the country against which he fought in the American Expeditionary Forces. For his service during the late World War, he has been given as decorations, the Cross of The Crown of Italy, and The Cross of The Chevalier of The Legion of Honor of France.

In a recent tour of Europe, Spalding was guest soloist for the Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra. Following the concert, a Berlin newspaper cabled the New York Times:

"A large and critical audience, which included the most distinguished musicians of the German metropolis, gave the American a rousing acclaim."

Of a recent American concert the New York World-Telegraph says

"To hear such music, the critic would cheerfully engage to journey to the other side of the moon."

Negative Teams Of M. C. and Emory Win. Debate King At 6:45

Women To Meet Virginia Intermont Tonight

The first debate of the season was held last evening when Maryville's negative team debated Emory and Henry of Emory, Virginia at Lincoln Memorial University, Maryville's affirmative team debated Lincoln Memorial University of Harrogate, Tennessee at Emory-Henry, and Emory-Henry debated Lincoln Memorial at Maryville.

The subject for discussion was "Resolved that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munition."

The judges of the evening, Dr. Hunter, Professor Davis, and Professor McMurray, cast their decision in favor of Emory-Henry which upheld the negative side of the debate. The members of the teams were as follows: Emory-Henry—Mr. McQuilkin and Mr. Varnell; Lincoln Memorial—Mr. Hoener and Mr. Elder; Maryville affirmative—Paul Hartman and Archibald Pieper; Maryville negative—James Smith and Earle Crawford.

Professor Nickols, debate coach for L. M. U., accompanied the team.

The Maryville team which debated Emory-Henry last evening won the judges' decision. The members of the negative team were mentioned above.

This evening Maryville's women's team, Marcella Ardern and Eleanor Pflanze, which accompanied the men's affirmative team and debated King last night will debate Virginia Intermont. King's affirmative team will debate Maryville's negative team which is composed of James Badgett and Alex Christie, here. Prof. Barr Miller of Knoxville College will act as critic judge. The debate will begin at six forty-five.

The schedule for the season includes debates with South Western, Vanderbilt, Waynesburg, Milligan, Tusculum, Center, Teachers', Carson-Newman, Asheville Normal, and Cumberland, and also includes trips

Shawn Men Dancers In Knoxville Monday

Ted Shawn and his ensemble of men dancers will give a recital in Knoxville on February 4 at the University of Tennessee auditorium.

Shawn, America's first dancer to achieve international recognition and who now is presenting a dance form new to the twentieth century, is attracting nation-wide attention with the program which he will present.

Pioneering for years to restore dancing for men to its rightful stand, he has now organized and trained the first company in modern times composed entirely of men dancers, and with them he presents a program of dances essentially masculine in principle and performance. It is said to be the most important contribution to the development of the art of the dance in this century.

Imperative to the recital is the carefully planned musical background furnished by Jess Meeker, composer. Most of the compositions of the evening's performance are his own.

Leitch sits down the row a bit wiggling a pencil and making sketches. Rema Young is next to him and says, "What's that?" "A man" is the answer. "Then what's his name?" Truly an intellectual bunch!

A few rows down is Louie Krainock also stroking with a pencil but he's no artist. Maybe he's having some trouble digesting the bananas he ate the night before. He vows he ate only three, but the evidence is all against him. Beef Myers can give all the proof needed about Louie's consumption of the fruit, and also about his prowess as a shot with the peel.

Here and there is an ambitious student taking notes, and this the first meeting of the class! Seniors, too, but then some people just never will learn.

Lorena and Ossie, in front of us, are almost asleep.

It's now time for some fresh air, so a couple of volunteers get up and raise the windows. It isn't that there's an unusual amount of hot air floating around, but the room does get warm in the afternoon with the sun streaming in.

We notice, too, that Charlie Allen has sort of gravitated into a seat besides Barbara Whitmore. Not that we would hint that there's any thing other than coincidence about it.

Cory looks cute sucking his fountain pen. He needs a lot of nourishment to make up for the sleep he lost making up the Ethics grades. Some of them, though, he didn't make up very much. We noticed a good half dozen F's.

Downes and Quigley are collaborating over the consultation of a little booklet on How to Study the Bible, written in German.

We feel very virtuous. The editor just turned around and we could assure her that all's well with the production staff. We're a wee bit late, but better late . . . .

It would be interesting to compute some statistics about chewing gum in this class. Seven people are exercising their gums on it. Chew Dentyne— sweetens the breath and cleans the teeth. About 50 chews to the minute is a fair average. Multiplied by the number of chewers and the minutes spent in class it would represent enough energy to demolish fourteen dishes of Pearsons beans.

And now for a word about the prof, himself. He's in a class by himself, and there's no one else who can possibly approach him.

Gee, there's the bell. Sorry.

DIGEST POLL

"College newspapers are the only organ of, by, and for Youth in America today," said Arthur S. Draper, Editor of The Literary Digest. "The youth that those papers reach will one day govern this country. That day is not far distant."

With this thought in mind The Literary Digest is conducting a Peace Poll, sending ballots by way of the editors of thirty colleges who could cooperate.

The signing of the ballot is evidence of the fact that the Youth of America is interested in current events, understands them, and would like an opportunity to register an opinion.

It is, however, too late for Maryville College students to express their opinions to the Digest Poll, as the survey of the reaction is to be published in February.

We feel that interest in current events cannot be too strongly stressed in view of the position that we shall have at a future date to play our part as influential citizens of the United States of America.

FAN MALE

Members of the College Choir, that faithful band of lusty warblers, are finding the confinement enforced by the Voorhees walls, a little above average temperature as the torrid days approach.

"Fan the Males" rumbles the base section.

"Mail them fans", chirps the soprano songsters.

"Fans, Fans," echo the tenors and altos. "The more air the better the tones."

But who will fan the males or who will mail them fans?

No one knows. Does any one care? We hope so.

The HIHLAND ECHO will not be published next week.

SUPERIOR COTTIES

One of the interesting puzzles which Nature thrusts upon the world is her trick sometimes of placing a superior intellect and personality in a frame to all appearrances too small to support qualities of such magnitude—and in the end making a peculiarly neat and finished work of the whole. Nature must take particular delight in her inconsistencies when she observes Dottie Nethery (her parents christened her Dorothy Madge, but Dottie is sufficient.) How so much energy, so much intelligence, so much ability can be packed into her small person is no less than an inexplicable mystery.

Dottie is interested in a number, a very great number of things.

DOTTIE NETHERY

Biology and Botany have attracted their share of her attention. She was a Biology assistant when she was a sophomore, and for the last two years she has been Botany assistant. She has been a member of the Nature Study Club since she was a junior.

On the other hand, Dottie has literary tastes. She has been a member of the Highland Echo staff for four years; she is a member of the Writers Workshop; and this year she is doing Honors Work in English, making a special study of five English poets.

She has been active in the program of the Y. W. C. A. here on the campus. She was a Nu Gamma leader two years ago and this year she serves as president of that organization.

She has been outstanding in other directions also. She was once secretary of her class, and she was treasurer of Bainonian last year.

Moreover, she has been a member of the Girls' Glee Club, and she has served on the Student Council. In addition, her grades have been of a uperior quality and her name has appeared among the Honor Roll ranks every semester since she came here. She has proved herself the possessor of a remarkable ability, but she has shown also that she has a charming simplicity, a quiet dignity, and an intense interest in all that happens about her—a rare combination that makes the delightful Dottie known here at Maryville.

HIGHLANDERS MAINTAIN LOOP LEAD

SCOTTIES TOP JUNIOR QUINT IN FAST TILT

Henry Leads Scoring Attack With 16 Points; Allen Second With 13

Led 21 to 20 at the halfway mark by a game quintet from Tennessee Wesleyan the Highlander basketeers jumped into the lead early in the third period to completely rout the Bulldogs in Alumni Gym last night. The final count was 55 to 40.

The local scoring attack was headed by Henry, who tallied 16 points, while Allen and Hannah were next with 13 and 12 points respectively. McGhee, center for the Bulldogs, was high for the visitors with 15 points, and Owens was a close second with 12 points.

After several futile attempts at the hoop, the Scotties advanced rapidly to an eight-point lead when Allen scored on a Bulldog fumble in home territory. Allen's opener was followed in quick succession by tallies from Crumbaugh, Henry, and Hannah beneath the rim.

Overly made good a toss from the charity line, after which McGhee opened the opposition with a follow in shot from deep in the foul circle. Following this Keith let fly from center-floor for two more points, and on the tip-off scored again from the same position.

After the Scotties had advanced fiv points with free-throws by Odell and Overly, and a field goal by Hannah, the Bulldogs unleashed a deadly atack from the center and side to pull away with a small lead of three points, but lost it immediately as Hannah and Allen scored on two tip-ins from crip position.

Keith and McGhee broke through a tight Scot defense for two countrs as the half ended, the Bulldogs

JUNIORS DEFEAT SENIORS IN FERN CAGE TOURNEY

A fast junior team, led by Froneberger, defeated the Seniors 40-37 last night in the third game of the Girls' Point System basketball tournament.

The juniors won the first game of the tourney over the sophomores 81 to 26 Tuesday afternoon, and on Thursday afternoon the freshmen topped the sophs 36 to 3.

The series will be resumed Tuesafternoon and continued on Thursday and Saturday of next week.

The SPORTS EDITOR

This Smoky Mountain Conference basketball situation is getting to the point where too much can hardly be said about the chances for the local hoop to make good. With six league scalps to their credit, and with only seven more "long greens" between them and the end of the slate, the Scotties, already leading the closest contenders by two games, have advanced almost beyond any danger which might arise from any of the would-be dark-horse camps lying around the brotherly gathering. Milligan College Buffaloes, conference champions of last year, could, in all probability, be accused of having the perennial designs, but Milligan has already been beaten twice, once by Cullowhee's Catamounts, and again by Appalachian Teachers. Monday night the Scotties will resume their somewhat strained relaiations with Frosty Holt's Horribles from Carson-Newman, in which the Eagles will undoubtedly, in some manner or other, strain themselves to relieve the embarrassment of the last encounter.

Scraps

In a statement to your scribe for the game last night Referee Doug Stratton declared the Scot-Bulldog encounter to be one of the best examples of sportsmanship he had ever seen on the home floor. He remarked that the good will was evident not only among the players, but also among the spectators. This is a significant note which speaks for itself. Let's keep it up.

* * *

It is time that local cage fans began to watch the interesting tactics of a frosh reserve, Odell by name, whose consistent play, we predict, will make him a regular before many nets have been swished. If you don't go to the games you might not know that Odell plays basketball, but he does, and in a way that would lead you to believe he knows what it is all about.

Sitting in the "press box" last night we were commenting rather copiously aobut somebody-or-other's dribbling tactics. The one at our side didn't exactly know what dribbling meant, but guessed it was the way they pumped the ball up and down, up and down.

SCOT TANKMEN LOSE MEET TO TENNESSEE MEN

Fischback's Mermen Miss Obert's Diving In 48-37 Defeat

Maryville College tankmen returned to the Hill last night on the short end of a 46-38 defeat suffered at the University of Tennessee pool yesterday afternoon.

Absence of Leroy Obert in the diving seems to account for the loss.

Intramural Sports Will Begin Shortly

Ping-Pong, Checkers, Chess Will Commence Next Week

A full Y.M.C.A. sports program, consisting of ping-pong, checkers, chess, and basketball will get underway sometime during the following week, O'Neal Gray, athletic director, announced this morning.

Due to the impending February Meetings and use of the gym by Coach Honaker's cagesters, it is possible that basketball will be held up for another week, but the lighter competition is not expected to clash with the college program.

Again the ping-pong crown appears unattached, since Roland Beck, champion of last year, will not be back. Likely contenders for the honor are Red Gilmore, Crumbaugh, and Harold Quigley.

Chess fans will have Bill Quigley, returning champion of last year, to defeat, while the honor berth in checkers still remains a question.

Notices on the bulletin boards will advise prospective competitors when to sign.

Victories Over Carson-Newman, Teachers Bring Total Wins To 6

Only Seven Conference Games Now Lie Between Scotties And Loop Flag; Meet Carson-Newman Here Monday

By BRYAN PAYNE
(Echo Sports Editor)

Coach Honaker's Highlander basket swishers continued their whirlwind advance in Smoky Mountain Conference circles here Wednesday night with a sweeping 37-27 victory over a husky crew of Buccaneers from Johnson City.

A checkup of the schedule played to date reveals the cagesters undefeated in the league at the end of the first six loops. Impressive wins have been scored over Appalachian Teachers, Carson-Newman, East Tennessee Teachers, L. M. U., and Tusculum.

The two remaining teams on the conference slate yet to be encountered for the first time are Milligan College's Buffaloes and King's Tornado, both of whom have suffered defeat within the ranks at least to the extent of two. Milligan, loop champion of last year, looms as the only real threat between the Scotties and league supremacy.

Defeat Carson Newman, 46-37

Continuing its deadly attack on the ranks of conference opposition, the Highlander basketball team strode over the Carson-Newman Eagles by a 46-37 score last Saturday night in Jefferson City.

The first half was a nip and tuck affair, with the score 13-13 and two minutes to play in the half. The Scots then looped in four goals in rapid succession to hold a 21 to 13 lead as the period ended.

The last half was also a close battle, but the Highlanders were never in danger, keeping the 8-point lead safe with a consistent attack.

John Henry, versatile Scot forward, held high score honors with 16 points, followed by Layman, Carson-Newman center, who registered 15. Hannah tallied 14 for Maryville and Allen 13.

Defeat Teachers, 37-27

Led by Lee Hannah, lanky center, the conference hopefuls pulled away from the McMurray coached clan late in the second quarter and were not threatened throughout the remainder of the game.

The visitors, led by Crouch, forward, grabbed an early lead of ten points before the locals, centering their attack around the fast combination of Henry, Hannah, and Allen, could function, but the half found the Scotties in the lead, 18-14.

Hannah and Allen led the scoring for the Highlanders with 14 and 12 points respectively, while Crouch was high for the visitors with 9 points.

Lineups:

Maryville (37)		Teachers (27)
Allen 12	f.	Crouch 9
Henry 9	f.	Dyer 7
Hannah 14	c.	Massengil 8
Overly	g.	McCall 1
Crumbaugh	g.	Todd

Substitutions: Maryville—Odell 2, Pearson, Hullette, Atchison, Brittain; Teachers— Kilday, Oakes, Speegle 2, Thorton, Hunt.

Meet Eagles Monday Night

In what will be the final basketbal tilt before the February Meetings, the Highlander hardwooders engage the Carson-Newman Eagles Monday night on the local court.

After the Carson-Newman struggle, the Highlanders have a two weeks rest before meeting the Milligan Buffaloes, whose crown the Scots are gunning for, in Alumni gym February 14.

Coach Thrower And His Gang Are Off Again

Grapplers Express Fear Our Increased Strength of Southern Y. Champs

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Writer)

Maryville's daring young men of the mighty physiques, with the Thrower at the rudder, embarked in fine fettle at noon today for the good isle Chattanooga, where they will seek further conquest at eight o'clock tonight.

The Y.M.C.A. clan, holders of the Southern Y. Championship laurels, are expected to present a much stronger line-up than that which appeared here last week when the Scotties drubbed them with apparent ease.

With one exception the local line-up will be unchanged from that of last week. Smiley Richardson will grapple in the 165-pound class, while Frank Dean will move back to the 155-pound division.

Chattanooga boasts the added fortification of regular performers in the unlimited, 165 and 155 pound classes, and may prove a serious threat to the state champions.

In the best meet of the season, featuring evenly matched individual contestants, in spite of a one-sided team score, the Highlander wrestlers defeated the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. 29 to 5 last Saturday night in Alumni gym.

The results by weight classes were as follows:

118-pounds—Ridder (M) threw Wright; time 7:18

Even the greatest of them make a slip once in a while. It was a practice debate and the mighty Pieper was laying it on. Said he: "One third of the armament business is international. Just think of it! Fifteen percent!"

Of course we've no way of accurately computing it but we believe that more thinking was done last Wednesday than on any day during the semester. The trouble was to find something to do. . . . legally. And there was nothing, nothing but nothing.

We recommend Dean Hunter's course 301. You'll learn lots of stuff in there. f'rinstance. "What verb do you use with 'five and five—ten? 'Is or Are?" Said Best: "How about Ham and Eggs?" and the Dean replied "I'm in favor of them."

ME TOO

:—:—:

We notice that Theta-Alpha Sig were all at sea on Tuesday night. But that's not as bad as Bainonian-Athenian who had to have their entertainment in the dark (of the Athonian Theatre). Wonder what the next idea will be. How about a barn dance in Thaw attic, or an informal tea on the golf course?

SEE

:—:—:

Anyone who read the script of the play in the Bartlett Players put on Tuesday night can tell you that there was more to it than was seen. Krainock's comment was: "I liked your version of my play." Fisher came out at the end with a trumpet, and the reason given for that was, "He couldn't find a guitar." Maybe he didn't know the difference.

Poetry Corner

In the thought that readers of the ECHO would enjoy a column of original poetry written by Maryville students, we are introducing this week the first of a number of poems contributed by members of Dr. Hunter's poetry class of last semester. This one is in free verse and seeks to create only one effect upon the reader.

Etude in Gray

In the bleak chill
Of a frozen dawn
The ancient massive stone of cloister walls
Stands gray as death
Against the lighter gray of thick
snow clouds;
The winter wind has scattered the damp fog
Till but a few thin ragged wisps remain,
Settling down around cold, bare
walls;
The pickets of the fence are bleached skeletons
Standing hand in hand in silent
watch
Around the garden of the monastery;
A solitary junco hops about the garden,
His feet leaving a delicate tracery in the snow.

No sound is heard to break the silent gloom
Until the holy brothers, one by one,
Each with bowed head, telling his beads,
Come slowly through the garden,
Gray-gowned and somber, on their way to prayer.
Gray-haired old men, long steeped in holy lore,
Young, beardless novices with ashen faces
And only burning eyes to show they live
And are not walking shadows as they seem;
The quiet procession moves with soft tread
To the open portal of the holy chapel;
They enter, kneel, and say their matin prayers;
Their litanies within the chapel
done,
They go in solemn silence to their cells.

No sound is heard along the frozen paths;
The dusky blue-gray of hemlock
shadows
Makes a dark, jagged pattern on the snow.

leading by one point.

Opening the third period Allen, Henry, and Hannah began hitting the rim with uncanny rgularity to pull the Highlandrs up into a comfortable lead of six points.

Overly scored twice on free throws and Hannah made good another crip attempt before the opposition could rally with two long shots from deep down the side. Counters in rapid succession by Allen and Henry moved the Scotties into a 13 point lead at the end of the third period.

From this point the invincible combination of Hannah, Henry, Allen, Overly, and Odell, looking every inch the conference champions that they are soon to be, coasted on into a fifteen point lead with a neat long shot by Odell, and a crip by Overly, as the game ended, 55-40.

Matchless accuracy on the parts of Allen and Henry featured the Scot attack, while Overly, Allen and Hannah were bulwarks of defense.

The Wesleyan five were forced to make most of their attempts from beyond the foul circle, only five or six times breaking under the basket for crip shots. McGhee and Owens were outstanding for the visitors.

Also noteworthy, as in all previous games, was the superb offensive and defensive play of Odell, reserve guard. Odell, a freshman, makes it a point to get down to business without delay, and should prove a valuable asset to the Scotties in years to come.

Thompson's Fifteen Sermons During Meetings Summarized

"Friendship With Christ" Theme of Morning Services

The fifteen addresses given by Dr. Thompson during the February Meetings were all characterized by his sincere Christian personality which dominated the other factors of original thought, numberless illustrations and references, careful continuity, and splendid presentation. The student body, and the faculty felt that they had had a rare and wonderful privilege in listening to these frank and inspirational talks from a man who has lived widely and has proved, in his own life, the value of being a friend of Christ.

Tuesday—

On Tuesday morning Dr. Thompson announced that his theme for the morning services would be "Friendship with Christ", and he said we wanted Christ to be our friend for the same reasons that we seek friendship among our acquaintances: for what a person is, for what he gives, and for what we share together.

His text was John 15:9, "Henceforth I have called you not servants, but friends," and in a very attractive introduction he stated that the best thing in college is friends, and that none of life would be worth living without them. The fullness and richness of life can be measured by the number and deepness of friendships.

Wednesday—

Taking as his text, St. John 19: 1-6, Dr. Thompson spoke on finding Christ as a friend, elaborating on the saying of Pilate, "Behold the Man."

To Christ was applied a test proposed to judge our earthly friends. By the final analysis Christ meets all the requirements; truth, courage, holiness love and magnitude. Because of the fulfillment of these requirements He is, though unseen, a trusted friend.

Dr. Thompson's text was taken from Gensis 37:19, "And they said one to another, Behold this dreamer cometh." Dr. Thompson said that we are all dreamers; day dreams are important, in fact they are almost necessary for retaining our self respect. However, Joseph's dreams, like those of many of us, were dangerous to him because they caused him to waste time, to develop bad mental habits, and to dodge reality. On the other hand, inspiration and power may come from dreams, as is proved by the fact that after Joseph was sold into bondage, his dreams changed to the creative dreams of a man of action. The three great factors in the success of Joseph, or of any other Christian, are dreams, work, God.

Thursday—

On Thursday morning Dr. Thompson spoke of Jesus in relation to our universe. He presented the problem of whether or not there is that in the universe which has intelligence, character, and love, which cares and is friendly. He quoted David Hume's statement: "I find no clear evidence in nature or history of the existence of a benevolent influence."

Dr. Thompson showed that Jesus had answered that statement when he said: "He that has seen me has seen the father." He showed that Jesus solved the problem by giving a solution of it in his own charact-

Delegates Attend Y.M.-Y.W. Conference

The Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. have each sent two delegates to the Tennessee Student Christian Conference which is being held at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute at Cookeville, Tennessee this week-end. The delegates, who left Friday morning, are Elizabeth Kunkel, Shirley Jackson, Alex Christie, and Robert Lodwick. Miss Bonnie Hudson, whose home is in Cookeville, will act as chaperone.

About a hundred delegates from various Tennessee colleges are expected to attend this Conference, which is sponsored by the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. and the Cumberland Presbyterian and the Methodist Episcopal, South, Churches. The theme of the meetings is "Christian Students Facing the Present Social Order". Some of the speakers at the Conference will be Dr. James W. Workman of Arkadelphia, Arkansas; Dr. E. L. Stockton of Cumberland University; and Dr. George Carver of Tuskeegee Institute, Alabama. Miss Mary Elizabeth Dale of T. P. I. is leader of the Students' Round Table discussions.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

On Wednesday morning, February 20, during the regular chapel service Dr. Stevenson will discuss "Encouragements from Christ's Hopefulness."

Bainonian Presents "Late Christopher Bean" Next Friday

Ellen Hitch Has Leading Role

Next Friday evening, February 22, Bainonian will present as its midwinter play "The Late Christopher Bean", by Sidney Howard. This play, which has achieved international acclaim both on the legitimate stage and on the screen, when the leading role was taken by the beloved Marie Dressler, is a worthy vehicle for the talents of Bainonian.

The story of the play is laid in the New England which Mr. Howard knows so well. The death of Christopher Bean, an obscure artist, causes little grief to anyone but Abby, the servant girl who loved him, until suddenly it is found that the dirty, neglected old canvasses which he left to pay his doctor's bills are extremely valuable. A mad scramble results, with everyone but Abby interested only in the mercenary advantages to be gained from Christopher's paintings; Abby, however, remains wistfully faithful to the memory of her lost lover.

The New York Times pronounced this "—a funny comedy with an hilarious conclusion. It is a creditable piece of comic work." The New York Sun comments thus: "It is a deft and happy and eminently likable play, with a pungency under the surface and surprise around the edges—"

Artists' Series To Sponsor Spalding, Violinist, March 1

ALBERT SPALDING

Popular American Player Also Well Known For His Musical Compositions

The final presentation of the Maryville College Artists' Series in 1935 will feature Albert Spalding, American violinist, on March 1. Spalding was born in Chicago, and inherited much of his musical genius from his mother, who was for a long time a oloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra under Theodore Thomas. At seven he began playing the violin and later his principal teachers were Chiti, the famous Florentine master, Buitrago in New York, and Lefort in Paris.

When he graduated from the Bologa Conservatory at fourteen he received the highest honors ever accorded anyone since Mozart, and made his professional debut in Paris with Adelina Patti at the Chalet. His American debut was made at Carnegie Hall, New York, as soloist with the New York Symphony Orchestra, Walter Damrosch, conductor, with which organization he appeared afterwards over forty times. Since then he has appeared with great success in practically every civilized nation of the universe where music plays an important part in the national life of the people.

Shortly after the United States joined the Allies, Spalding cancelled over $30,000 worth of contracts and enlisted as a private. He had previously been examined for the draft but had not been called. He studied for a commission and would have sailed as an officer but for the loss of his papers in Washington. Most of his foreign service was given in Italy. His commission as ground officer in the aviation corps came to him in November, 1917. He was decorated with the Cross of the Crown of Italy, the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a foreigner.

Spalding is today one of the most popular of the world famous violinists, and plays every season from sixty to ninety concerts in his country, and an average of about from sixty to ninety concerts in this or some other foreign country. He plays alternately on two instruments, a Guarnerius del Gesu (1735) and a Mantegnara (1721).

While still a comparatively young man, Spalding has made an enviable reputation for himself as a composer. He has to his credit over sixty violin compositions, twenty five piano numbers, thirty songs, three chamber music quartets, four orchestra compositions and endless transcriptions and arrangements. A large amount of his success depends upon his personality and sympathetic interpretation. He has been called "another Kreisler", "the aristocrat of all violinists", "a credit to himself, to his country, and to his art."

Y. W. CONCERT

The Y. W. C. A. is sponsoring a piano and organ concert this Sunday afternoon. It will be presented in the chapel by Joyce Fields and Florence Grabiel at 4:15. The invitation is extended to all Maryville students to enjoy this musical privilege. The five o'clock bell will be rung as on week days.

SENIOR PARTY SOON

On Tuesday, February 26, only members of the Senior Class will be allowed to attend the class party, the program of which will consist mainly of the movie, 'Anne of Green Gables.'

GLEE CLUB SOCIAL

Following the meeting of the Men's Glee Club in the Y. Rooms on Monday evening the Women's Glee Club will meet for a joint social hour of music.

F.E.R.A. Projects Of Unusual Nature

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration program conducted through the office of the Student Help Secretary consists of interesting projects. These projects are causing comment upon the campus because of their unusual nature.

Perhaps the most interesting projects are those conducted in the psychology and education laboratories. Under Dr. Fields, tests and experiments are being made in the psychology department and the results are being compiled by F. E. R. A. workers. Work in the education department is somewhat similar.

F.E.R.A. work is also being done out in town by students from the Hill. Through the benefits of the relief program, it has been possible to re-open the Maryville City Library, where several students have been employed. Work in the local health office and community house are also on the F.E.R.A. program. Under the auspices of the community house a social survey is being made, with the aid of the students. Some workers are also employed in relief work at the Blount County Court House.

Other projects include the compilation of data on the modern writings of standard writers, and library work in the language department.

Y. M. C. A.

Dr. Clifford Edward Barbour will be the guest speaker at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon. To old students Dr. Barbour needs no introduction, he is a prominent leader in young people's work and a member of the Maryville College Board of Directors.

Special music will be rendered by the Dixie Vagabond Quartet.

There will be a formal dinner next Friday night, February 22nd.

NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

"One Greek to Another" isn't the name of a new movie but an attractive ad designed to inform struggling sororities and frats that the old Chapter House may be modernized through funds insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

"It is now possible for fraternities and sororities and other groups to have their homes or meeting places brought up-to-date." We wonder what "other groups" will be the first to take advantage of the offer.

PEACE POLL

Although Maryville did not vote in the College Peace Poll, campus opinion agrees with the latest returns that the U. S. can avoid war and that there are an even number for and against U. S. entry into the League of Nations.

The majority would fight if the U. S. were invaded but would not "bear arms for the U. S. in the invasion of the borders of another country."

Government control of armament and munition, and universal conscription of all resources of capital and labor in order to control all profits in time of war were advocated. The question, "Do you believe that a national policy of An American Navy and Air Force Second to None is a sound method of insuring us against being drawn into another great war" was aswered negatively by the majority.

There will be no HIGHLAND ECHO next week.

Y. W. C. A.

At the regular Y. W. meeting tomorrow afternoon a resume of the February Meetings of the three years previous to this one will be given.

The theme and summary of last year's February Meetings conducted by Dr. Vale will be told by Anne May Donnell; those of Dr. Davis' will be discussed by Bessie Rieves; those of Dr. Foulkes, leader in 1932 by Vi Webb.

SUPERIORS SCOTTIES

Among the superior Superior Scotties on the Hill, is James Rhodes Smith, who came to Maryville four years ago from Meridian, Mississippi.

Jimmie (He is best known to us as Jimmie) "plunged into the thick of things" at the very first, for he was made President of the Fellowship Club, a member of the Student Council, a member of the Freshman debate squad, and treasurer of the Freshman Class.

In his second year, Jimmie was lected class president. He continud in debate for the next three ears as a member of the varsity eam and won in his junior year the egree of Special Distinction, the ighest degree a college debater can be awarded by Pi Kappa Delta. Also, he has been on the Y. M. C. A. advisory council during the last hree years.

These do not complete Jimmie's undertakings. He has been a biology assistant for two years, business manager of the "Chilhowean", and buiness manager of the "Echo" as well as an Honor Roll Student.

Such a record brings to Maryville's attention the capability, scholarship, and congeniality of Mr. Smith.

The man or woman who determines to live their life alone faces a sure and certain destiny—extermination. Do you catch on?

FEBRUARY MEETINGS

er. Therefore, Dr. Thompson said, there is that in the universe which has character, has meaning, and does love.

The text for Dr. Thompson's sermon on Thursday night, was found in Hebrews 12:4. "Ye have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin." Dr. Thompson said that everyone is subject to temptation, and so temptation is a fight for everyone. A person must attempt to discover where his temptation lies, whether in the will or the imagination. "The first mark of maturity is to face reality squarely" and this we must do in dealing with temptation. If possible we should avoid temptation by avoiding certain places and people. Dr. Thompson concluded his talk with the following: "For the sins I have not sinned, for the dreams I have not dishonored, again I say rejoice."

Friday—

Friday morning's sermon had as its theme the worth of an individual's life. Dr. Thompson pointed out that our heredity does limit us, but that we are too easily discouraged because we compare ourselves with those who are smarter than we.

Our lives can only become of value to us when we feel someone else loves or cares for us. Christ is the sincere friend of each of us, and His friendship will give our lives inspiration, faithfulness and restraint and peace.

Dr. Thompson based his message on John 17:19 "For their sakes, I sanctify myself." He pictured the need of the world in every sphere and showed how scientific achievement had far outrun the social order, "Santify" means to set apart and we should accomplish it by first developing ourselves to the full and then consecrating ourselves to the task of bettering conditions. Dr. Thompson pointed out, however, that "for their sakes" was not a strong enough motive. With it we should combine the thought of doing it "for His sake".

Saturday—

On Saturday morning, Dr. Thompson emphasized three points:

1. Everyone CAN do something for Christ,
2. What one can do he OUGHT to do,
3. What one ought to do he WILL do.

In elaborating, he pointed out that one can be a nurse, a doctor, a minister, a clerk, or a wife by the will of God. Each is expected to do his best with the opportunities before him. Everyone cannot be at the top; some must be at the base of the pyramid, but all can do Christ's will where they are.

Sunday—

Dr. Thompson's text was in John 4:17. He told, in the beginning, the parable of the talents, and said that the reason we do so little is that we think we have so few talents, and yet the world is run by one talented men and women. He showed very clearly that college students commit numerous deeds of omission, and yet feel they are doing no wrong. Sin, then, is a failure to live a generous and constantly helpful life.

Monday—

Shading his morning sermon with a beautiful word-picture of the crucifixion, Dr. Thompson emphasized the need of forming a friendship with Christ. Friendship is twice as

Grapplers Point For Vol Matmen In Meet Tonight

Continue Unbroken Line of Victories With Impressive Win Over Vandy

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Writer)

With its long string of victories still unbroken, the Highlander mat aggregation expects to tighten its hold on the state championship when the University of Tennessee grapplers visit Alumni gym tonight for a return match. The first bout will begin about 8:15, at the conclusion of the Maryville-Tennessee tank meet.

The Scots hold an early season victory over the Vols, but Tennessee has won over Vanderbilt and the Knoxville Y. M. C. A. since that time, and plans to battle the Scots to a closer score.

Two changes will probably be made in tonight's line-up, with the return of Buck Millsaps to the 175 pound class and the initial appearance of Harris in the 118-pound division. Otherwise, the same wrestlers who opposed Vanderbilt Thursday night will face the Volunteers.

Defeat Vanderbilt, 23-9

Coach Bob Thrower's championship Highlander wrestling squad put the pressure to a game outfit from Vanderbilt University Thursday night to win five of the eight matches for a 23 to 9 decision.

Four of the five Scot wins were by falls, as Ridder, Hoglan, Renfro, and Gamble added five points each to the local cause in good bouts. Dean registered three points by taking a time advantage over a twelve-pound heavier opponent after sixteen minutes of action.

The Highlanders defeated the Chattanooga Y. M. C. A. in Chattanooga the second straight time February 2nd, by a score of 24 to 8.

Results of the Vanderbilt match:

118-pounds—Ridder (M) threw Slayden (V); time 5:19
126-pounds—Hoglan (M) threw Giles (V); 4:39.
136-pounds—Fishel (V) defeated Shields (M); time advantage 2:52
145-pounds—Robinson (V) defeated Coulter (M); time advantage 4:06
155-pounds—Renfro (M) threw Daniel (V); 4:36
165-pounds—Dean (M) defeated Noel (V); time advantage 2:00
175-pounds—Peebles ((V) defeated Richardson (M); time advantage 1:15.
Heavyweight—Gamble (M) threw Guffer (V); 3:25.

Holt's Team No Match For Final Scot Drive

Three fast baskets by Crumbaugh, Henry, and Hannah, in the last three minutes of play, broke a 35-35 tie to climax an exciting, hard-fought basketball scrap with a 42 to 37 Highlander triumph over Carson-Newman on the home court February 4th.

On The Bench

The SPORTS EDITOR

Any spectator who was privileged to watch the Highlander basketballers in action Thursday night as they battled savagely for a clean triumph over Milligan, holders of the Smoky Mountain Conference championship for the past seven years, can no longer hold a reasonable doubt as to their crown-worthy caliber. With only one more untried foe to be met in conference circles, and that foe floundering hopelessly away in sixth place, having been the humble doormat on which nearly every league quint has unmercifully wiped its feet, Maryville's coronation looms but a week away when the Scotties take to the road. On this trip the Scotties will meet Milligan, Teachers, and King, all rated below them in performance.

* * * *

The Other Side

However, lest this prediction on the basis of early-season results would make us seem overconfident, we hasten to add that the danger, according to an improbable construction of the case, is not yet over. Five more conference games remain on the local schedule, while Milligan, the nearest contender for top honors, boasts six. Should the Scotties lose all of the next five their percentage rating would stand at .615, a sure loser provided Milligan won the next six, a feat which would advance her standing to .769. But in any event the home boys are out in the lead with eight straight games, and lest we should be accused of being a pessimist we leave on this note.

* * * *

Two of A Kind

That is, we leave, bound for the next paragraph, which does naught else but take off its hat to the most harmonious combination of basketeers your scribe has ever watched on a hardwood court, the center-forward clique of Lee Hannah, and John Henry. It clicks with the precision of a Seth-Thomas, and throughout every conference game has never failed to baffle the opposition. And this fact strikes another interesting point. Back in high school days Hannah, Henry, and Butter Atchison all played on rival teams, members of the Blount County League of athletics, Hannah at Everett High, Henry at Friendsville High, and Butter at Maryville High, Maryville High and Everett were then, as they are now, the bitterest of foes.

* * * *

Scraps

A tribute to Buck Millsaps, the iron man of the Highlander Grunt and Grunt Co.: when Buck didn't appear on the mat Thursday night for his customary victory in the 175-pound class fans all over Alumni Gym whined in disappointment. Buck has been out with a near-attack of flu, but will be in the line-up against Tennessee tonight. Throughout his years on the Maryville mat Buck has never suffered defeat, the nearest to it being the draw fought at Knoxville last year.

Honaker Issues Call For Spring Football Mar. 1

Wants Only Men Not Taken By Other Spring Sports To Don Moleskins

Renewing a custom which he discontinued last year Coach Honaker will issue a call to football men for spring workouts scheduled to begin on or about March 1.

In a statement to the press yesterday afternoon Honaker pointed out that only new men and other men who are not interested in other spring sports will be urged to report for practice.

As in previous years the present plan is not a rigorous one, and is designed for instruction in the fundamentals of the game and physical preparedness.

Y. PROGRAM TO CONTINUE WITH CLASS BASKETBALL

INTERCLASS

With the checker tournament well into the second round, basketball looms as the next event on the Y. M. C. A. Sports program, it was announced by the directors this morning.

No drawings have been made yet. Basketball will conclude the Y. schedule until after the varsity season is over.

Basketballers To Take To The Road

Meet Milligan, Teachers, King, King, Emory-Henry

Undefeated in conference competition thus far Coach Honaker's basketeers swing into action at Johnson City Monday night against Milligan in what will be the first of a four-game road trip. Tuesday night at Johnson City the locals will engage East Tennessee Teachers.

Wednesday the team travels to Bristol where it will meet King College for the first time this season. From there the boys travel to Emory, Virginia, where they will try to avenge the close defeat suffered at their hands some weeks ago on the home floor.

The conference season will come to a close with two home games, scheduled as follows: February 25, Tusculum, and February 28 King.

JUNIOR BASKETEERS WIN GIRLS' NET TOURNAMENT

Sweeping through all three contests without a setback, a well-organized junior squad carried off top honors in the Girls' Point System basketball tournament, concluded last week. The juniors defeated the sophomores 81-26, the seniors 41-37, and the freshmen 36-28.

The freshmen, beginning the season with an inexperienced outfit, showed steady improvement to win two of the three games played, while the seniors won one and the sophomores none.

The freshmen defeated the sophomores 36-3 and the seniors 35-14. The seniors turned in a 54-11 victory over the sophs.

The Point System Girls are now practicing for the volley ball series which will begin in about three weeks.

The breadth and beauty of human character is dependent on the ideal so constantly before us.

Scot Swimmers To Face Vols In Meet Tonight

Scheduled To Meet Tusculum Tankmen Away Next Saturday

In the first of a two-sport meet with U. T. tonight, the Scot mermen will oppose the Vols swimming team at the local pool. The meet will begin at 7:00, ending in time for the wrestling meet.

Coach Fischbach will use the following men: In the free-style relay, Johnson and Greiner; McInteer and Ingram. Burckhalter and Ingram will swim the backstroke, Herries and Meeks the breaststroke. Esbach and Brubaker will swim in the distance dashes, and Bradbeer, Greiner, and Johnson in the short dash events. The medley relay will include Burckhalter, Meeks, and Bradbeer, and, in the diving, Jewett and Peters will represent the Scots.

Next Saturday, the Scots journey to Tusculum for a return meet there, and on March 5, will meet Emory University at Atlanta, Georgia.

When Albert Spalding played with the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra last season, the first person to rush backstage after his performance was Mayor Fiorello La Guardia. The Mayor of the City of New York and the famous American violinist are old friends. They met first at the Italian front when Spalding was an adjuant under LaGuardia in the air service during the World War.

Enthusiasm Rises To A High Pitch As Scotties Belay Ancient Foes

By BRYAN PAYNE
(Echo Sports Editor)

All but cinching the race for the Smoky Mountain Conference flag Coach Honaker's Cagesters blew themselves to another undisputed triumph by turning back Milligan College Buffaloes 43-32 in Alumni Gym Thursday night.

A bit of the old spirit which characterized that historic struggle of four years ago, which saw Milligan forge ahead in the last minute by two points, crept into the melee last night and found enthusiastic fans clinging excitedly to the edges of the pews.

Bedlam broke loose shortly after Milligan had opened the scoring with a toss from the side and the Scotties had jumped ahead with a crip and free throw.

Milligan, unable to forget the Maryville victory which last year clouded their claim on the conference crown, glued the sphere to the rim for four straight points to gain the lead once more.

Maching point for point in what was afterward admitted to be Coach Eyler's biggest disappointment in years, the two teams advanced to a tie at 14-all, from which Milligan, led by Ayers, star guard, ran it up to 19-14.

After several confused attempts at the rim the locals raised their stock to 17, and as the whistle blew for the first half Hannah let fly from the side to tie it up at 19-all amid wild cheering from all sections of the gym.

Maryville opened the second period with two points, but allowed Milligan to crack their defense for six points, which brought the count to 25-21. A goal by Hannah narrowed the gap, and on the next play Odell, cool as any veteran, dribbled across the line and fired from his favorite position at center-floor to lock the score once more.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Anyway Tuesday night's meeting furnished us with two thoughts (that is, two thoughts PISA for the column). The upperclassman who stood with the freshmen to sing the theme song, was he asleep, or just honest? And Phil Cory! He reminded us of the Leaning Tower of Pisa.

:—:—:

Tuesday morning in chapel Dr. Lloyd said, "We will be lead in prayer by Calista PUNNY Palmer and her whistler". After Calista had finished some people expected Christie to get up, but he didn't. The doctor had said, "Herr Wissler".

:—:—:

There has come to us a request to publish a little society news. You all know Mr. Samuel NEXT? Thomas Waid of West Virginia. He's Dr. Lloyd's stoker and he also keeps the YMCA finances straight. Know who we mean? Well, little Sammie upped and got married a while back. . . a good while back and he's been holding out on us ever since. Sam's wedding bells rang out on August 21, 1933. . . . almost two years ago. Any guy wot could keep quiet about such an event in his life, well. . . Just, well.

We don't mind publishing such information once in a while, but if the present epidemic 25c keeps up we'll have to start charging for the service. The rate will be twenty-five cents a line flat.

Rumor hath it that the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Association Meet, to be held again in Knoxville sometime in May, will include not only tennis and track, but golf, wrestling, and other sports. Such a breadth of activity can not fail to bind Tennessee college athletics into a stronger unit, and will certainly increase good will and understanding among participants.

To Monsieur Isham de Jones goes the honor of founding the first fencing class of Maryville College. M. Jones, possessor of a pair of masks and a foil or two, has gathered a small following about him consisting of Cal "der Teufel" Schmidt, Rey "The Basque" Burkhalter, and a number of other promising young thrusters. It's a mysterious group. Beware of the shadows, you night owls!

MILLIGAN GAME

With much of the fury of the opening minutes spent the game drew to a characteristically Highlander finish as the Scotties, weary and breathless, staged a final spurt which left Milligan completely in the background.

Hannah us usual led the scoring for the Scotties with 17 points, while Henry and Allen followed with 11 apiece. Ayers was high for the visitors with 10 points, Grant and Tidwell following with 9 each.

Too much can not be said about the flashy offensive play of Hannah and Henry, while Allen was outstanding on both offensive and defensive performance. Overly and Odell proved invaluable in bringing the ball down within scoring territory.

Coach Eyler was of varied opinions about the outcome. In the dressing room he was persistent in declaring that his team expected to lose, while as he mounted the car for the homeward trip he violently declared that such should never have come to pass.

The Buffaloes have held the conference championship for the past seven years.

PORK AND BEANS—fil dextr

This is not to be a dissertation on the excellencies or anything else of Pearsons' food. We feel that that subject has been exhausted by constant treatment down through the ages. Our title, then, is not to be misinterpreted as being suggestive of our daily fare. In fact, to be perfectly honest, we must confess that our title can hardly be interpreted at all, certainly being not all representative of anything we plan here to set forth. Our assignment was to write four hundred words about anything, under the title of Pork and Beans. Summoning the spirit of Gertrude Stein to our aid we bravely start. We feel sorry for the man who produced the volume Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing at all; we think there is such a book. We have at least Pork and Beans to throw out as an anchor if we feel ourselves floundering too hopelessly.

We awoke at an inexcusably early hour this morning with this task rattling in our head (we almost said heads. This editorial "we" is confusing, but some form must be maintained, or where would such an article as this be? It is so pitifully adrift in life, with so little excuse for its existence that it must have stiffening of some kind. So the starch and backbone of these words must be the artificial "we", though we assure you we are single—we—I—mean singular.) Parenthetical digressions are great blessings. That one took up seventy words, or 70-400 of our whole requirement. Having wakened so early (reread first sentence of paragraph to pick up thread of thought again; look carefully—it's a very fine thread; handle it carefully—it is very fragile). We considered rising, but before we had considered to the point of action we found ourself (note singular of plural pronoun) waking again, and this time we rose without considering.

We dreamed last night that spring had come, and we know the dream was based on the false promise held forth by yesterday's warm air and roller skating. In the dark this morning, however, we heard the monotone of drizzling rain, and our throat was sore. It was then that we considered—too long—the question of getting up.

We could pursue the subject of spring—just to avoid Pork and Beans—but we are afraid that spring, like happiness, eludes pursuit, and we would do nothing to ward off the season when young fancies turn etc.

One more lengthly parenthesis would bring us to the end of our page, but we refuse to be so cowardly right here at the end. These Pork and Beans, like most pork and beans, are mostly beans.

FEBRUARY MEETINGS

valuable, he stated, if the friends become attached through service and help to each other. True friends must suffer. Dr. Thompson also laid emphasis on the evaluations of the friendship of Jesus; namely, what he is in himself, what he has done for us, what we can do for him, and what will be the cost. In closing, he attached his theme to the sentence, "I love a man because of the cost to me; and of what I do for him."

Dr. Thompson's sermon on Monday evening dealt chiefly with the human desire for freedom. Freedom is one of our instincts, yet if we successfully acquire freedom from convention and restraint we cannot reach our ultimate goal of a Christian life.

Two kinds of freedom were explained by Dr. Thompson; one, a false freedom to do what one wants to do, the other, a true freedom to do what one ought to do.

Faith in God brings about our best freedom, and that is freedom of the soul.

Tuesday—

(Acts 22:6; 2 Tim. 1:12)

Tuesday morning's sermon was on deepening our friendships through care and cultivation. Dr. Thompson discussed our inability to will an emotion and pointed out that thought and time are necessary for the growth of friendship. "We must resolve to keep the laws of friendship", he said.

Dr. Thompson applied his sermon to our friendship with Christ, "Christ came to minister—to be used by us." It is not fair for us to attempt to bear our own burdens. An intimate and sincere confession to Christ alone, Dr. Thompson maintained is the only method of achieving true friendship.

Dr. Thompson chose a familiar text for his sermoxn on Tuesday night, "God is love", but from these words he drew four new thoughts on great love. It is characterized first by its personal nature; it is directed toward individuals. Yet this love never compels or forces a response. It is capable of being hurt because of its sensitiveness. Last, one can never be neutral in regard to that love. It must be accepted or rejected.

Wednesday—

Taking as his text Hebrew 11:27, "He endured as seeing Him who is invisible", Dr. Thompson wove his Wednesday morning and farewell address about the following thought concerning the types of people on any college campus:

1. Those controlled by the crowd,
2. Those controlled by the fear of the consequences of misdeeds,
3. Those controlled by convictions,
4. Those controlled by Christ.

Those in the first group, he said, are "worthless"; those in the second group a "menace"; those in the third group of a "tragic nobility"; those in the last group, though likely to stagger and fall, have the power to struggle up and win if they have really known Christ.

Questionnaire Shows Students Favor Echo

Representative Group Offer Suggestions

There is an old idea that it is a good policy to stop and see how we stand. In pursuance of this policy the ECHO staff conducted a questionnaire and found, greatly to its surprise, that the paper is a big favorite with the students.

Of the one hundred students questioned, practically all admitted that they read every issue of the ECHO and the rest replied that they read most of it most of the time. The larger portion of the group even advanced the theory that the paper was too small! They did not think of our printing costs though!

Front page news, sports, and "Maryvillians at Large" ran a close race for being the first thing looked for by most people. Front page news finally won out with the other two coming in a tie.

The ECHO has long followed the policy of "malice toward none; chrisity toward all". For this reason it has not published a gossip column of the "who was Red type with on Friday night?" Students, however, voted seven to one in favor of Maryvillians at Large, if it is to be considered a gossip column. News is not confined too closely to campus happenings; the majority agreed that sports events do not take up too much space in the paper.

Suggestions for the improvement of the Echo included: more space to clubs and alumni news; science and literary reports; investigations into past activities of the college; movie reviews; a calendar of coming events; and discussions of student problems. One person suggested cartooning as an improvement. Not everyone was complimentary. One person suggested that we get better writers. (We agree with him.)

Hyde and Wynn Try For Alexander Prize

Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn were the winners of the preliminary contest for the T. T. Alexander Prize, which was held last Wednesday afternoon in the philosophy classroom.

The Department of Bible and Religious Education supervised the trials, and the judges were Drs. Orr and Rodgers, and Professor Kiger.

The T. T. Alexander Prize Fund was established by a friend of the college in honor of one of Maryville's foreign missionaries. One hundred dollars in gold is awarded annually to the winner of an oratorical contest with the subjects chosen by entrants from a specified list of subjects. The subjects were the following: The Deity of Jesus Christ; Christ's Atonement for Sin; The Resurrection; and Salvation Through Faith.

The contest is open in alternate years to men and women students of all classes.

Dr. Stevenson's theme for the chapel service on March 6 will be "Life's Great Struggle."

Spalding Plays In Season's Final Concert

Superb Playing of Brilliant Violinist Thrills Audience

Albert Spalding is acclaimed the outstanding instrumentalist of this country, and the most famous violinist America has yet produced. His performance here last night had brilliant evidence to the truth of this statement.

In a concert of unusual beauty, Spalding showed his mastery of the violin, and captured his audience with his ability and personality full of vigor and graciousness. A musician is seldom heard employing his instrument in so effective and expressive ways.

One of the outstanding compositions of the evening was the Sonata in A Major by Cesar Franck. Thru all the varied and difficult movements Spalding displayed the artistry of a master musician. Very different in tone, but most enthusiastically received was Ravel's "Piece en forme de Habenera"—a beautifully played number. Paganani's Caprice No. 24 and Ravel's Tzigane in their surprising and sparkling passages added dash and vigor to the program. Spalding's own work, A Vienese Waltz, received much well deserved applause as one of the encores.

Not a little credit should be given to Andre Benoist, accompanist for the evening. Benoist has traveled with Spalding for over twenty years, and he may be recognized as a sympathetic and able accompanist. He gave a beautiful piano background to the violin solo work.

Spalding presented all the fine execution of a true musician, from the brilliance of the upper positions to the deep richness of the lower strings, from the harmony of chorded passages to the delicacy of pizzacato variations. His superb playing provided a fitting close to this season's concerts of the Series.

Seven Initiated By Theta Alpha Phi

The initiations of the pledges of Theta Alpha Phi, the honorary dramatic society, have been taking place during the past week. During the week the pledges better known as "worms" have been at the bidding of Theta Alpha Phi members. On Thursday afternoon, February 28, the informal initiation took place in the Expression Department rooms. The formal initiation was Thursday night at the home of one of the members, Nina Gamble.

During the past week the pledges, Leone Ann Brown, Ellen Hitch, Robert Borcer, Herr Wissler, Louise Reicheldefer, Violet Webb, and Lois Brown, have been set at many arduous tasks. Each one of the pledges has been assigned to a certain member for whom the pledge had to do anything from cleaning rooms to buying lyceum tickets. This has given members of the society an unusual chance of both exercising their ingenuity and taking a week off. One of the pledges had to accost three people in the dining room before meals for two days, and say, "I am a despicable

Bainonian Makes High Bid For Cup

Excellent Acting In "The Late Christopher Bean"

Bainonian Literary Society made its bid for the Theta Alpha Phi cup on Friday night, February 23, in its presentation of "The Late Christopher Bean". The play, written by Sidney Howard was recently used as a starring vehicle for Marie Dressler, in a screen version of the play called "Her Sweetheart."

Ellen Hitch, who recently won laurels in her portrayal of Victoria van Bret in "The Double Door", was the oustanding character of the evening's presentation in the role of Abby, servant of the Haggett household and the widow of the late artist, Christopher Bean.

Grace Hitch, a newcomer to Maryville's stage was convincing and humorous as Mrs. Haggett. She displayed remarkable ability and remained in character consistently.

Dr. Haggett was well portrayed by LeRoy Obert, whose stage presence was exceptionally good. Obert played the old Doctor's part with ease and dramatic realism.

The supporting cast, composed of Ruth Proffitt as Susan Haggett, Edward Brubaker as Warren Creamer, Ruth Clopton as Ada Haggett, Evan Renne as Maxwell Davenport and Charles Allen and Walter West as Rosen and Tallent, presented a very creditable performance.

The excellent management of the production added greatly to the effectiveness of the play.

Krainock Writes Alpha Sigma Play

March 15 Is Date of Final Midwinter

Alpha Sigma Society has departed from the usual procedure in regard to its mid-winter by arranging to present a play which has been written by one of the members, Mr. Louis Krainock. The play, "The Crippled Pigeon", is a tragedy in three acts built around the theme of a father's dominance over his family. Mr. Krainock has dealt with this theme in short story form for the Writer's Workshop. That critical group received the short story with enthusiasm and those of them who have read the play predict for it a very successful production.

After the usual competitive tryouts a cast was selected early this week and intensive work on the play begun. Every member of the cast is particularly interested in the success of the play due to the close connection between the author and all those concerned with its production.

"The Crippled Pigeon" will be presented in Voorhees Chapel on Friday night, March 15, with the following cast: Edith Nicolai, Lynn Ann Brown, Nina Gamble, Robert Gillespie, Carl Fisher, and Glover Leitch.

SUNDAY VESPERS

At the regular vesper service on Sunday evening, March 3, Dr. Stevenson will discuss "A Problem in Profit and Loss"

THE BULL AND THE RAT—W. J. C.

Five o'clock in New York is Cocktail Hour, but ten-thirty at night is Hamburger and Onion Hour at Maryville. Along about that time a soft, melodious whistle directed carefully at one window is heard; the string is lowered and "whoosh" - go the hamburgers. A little later a freshman trying the same trick gives a low call that reverberates from building to building - and another girl is moonshined.

To the regular calls on the campus just now we have an added attraction, The Call of the Worm. One student bows to another and repeats, "Most worthy member of the Theta Alpha Phi, I am a worm." We are told that there are other requirements for joining this fraternity, but I suppose this one is indicative.

Some calls are seen and not heard. Witness, the close calls at chapel every morning. The last person to enter puffs down the aisle. So, with a huff and puff and a scurry he stumbles into his seat, blindly reaching for a hymn book so that he will seem awake. Then the call to worship, "All members of the Junior class will remain for a few miutes after this service to have the triannual song and dance about payments of dues." It reminds me of that famous quotation, "What this country needs is less white collars and more dirty fingernails". (Socrates)

A long paragraph is indicated; we dedicate it to that great caller to slaughter, Robespierre, now famous for his epigrammatic statement, "God save the King, he has but one life to give for his country." Speaking of hamburgers, we are reminded of the time we didn't have one and wished that we did. Two of us left Maryville early in the morning and climbed the mountains. Reaching the top we ate our lunch and left enough for supper. Then we scrambled down the other side and wandered on till we found a nice place to camp for the night. We built a fire, made our beds and prepared to eat. Not till then did we discover that each of us thought the other had the nutriments. "The trials of this life are many and its burdens are hard to bear" (the Koran), but we hope we never have to go thru another night like that one.

Did you ever study any of the bird calls? The calls made by animals that peculiarly different to. The "moo" of a cow slouches up his throat and seems to droop out of her mouth at a clumsy, heavy, awkward gait as if his little heart would break. On the other hand the shrill squeak of a rat pierces to your very soul, like the quick thrust of a rapier.

If you happened to be in the neighborhood of Thaw Hall the other day you probably heard some kind of weird, unearthly noise. We were having Theism class; "If you will close the doors to keep other young women from rushing in," said Dr. Lloyd, "I will give the mating call of the bull Mohammedan."

Allen Sings Swan Song With High Individual Score

58-40 Victory Over King Closes No-Defeat Season For Conference Champs

Coach Honaker's Smoky Mountain Conference championship lads wrote a unique and unprecedented page into the history of conference basketball play here Thursday night when they completely crushed King College's Tornado, 58-40, to bring a colorful season to a close with thirteen victories and no defeats.

Climaxing what is the most successful season ever passed in Maryville basketball circles Rex Allen, brilliant forward for the Scotties, rose to new heights in his swan song to college athletics with twenty six points to set the pace of the season for individual single-game scoring. Allen placed third in individual scoring.

An admiring student body made the old oaken rafters of Alumni Gym ring with enthusiasm last night as the Scotties, already undisputed winners of the loop flag, took the floor to tighten down the last clamp on conference supremacy.

Big Lee Hannah, outstanding center in conference circles this season, opened the scoring for the Scotties after intercepting a pass deep in home territory, and soon afterward scored again on a short pass play down the floor.

Rex Allen, playing what was undoubtedly the greatest game of his colorful career as a Highlander forward, scored twice in rapid succession to raise the count to 8-0 before Pettigrew, giant center for King, broke through the Scot defense for a crip and two points.

Allen scored again from the side and Henry followed with a throw from the foul circle. Led by Compton, diminuitive forward from King, the visitors made their one and only threat of the night at this point with three field goals and a free-throw to narrow the breach, and on the next three plays Esser and Pettigrew connected to give the Tornado their one-point lead.

Goals by Allen and Hannah, and a charity shot by Atchison pulled the Scotties into a safe lead. Pettigrew again reached out into the sawdust for a crip, and Allen made good a free-throw before the half ended, the score reading 23-17 for the local crew.

As the whistle sounded for the final stretch Crumbaugh grabbed the spherre on the tip-off and scored from the side, and moments later scored again with a free shot. Allen made good two tosses from the line before Fogarty, opposing guard, registered three straight longs from the side to boost the score 29-26.

For the following ten plays it was all Allen and Hannah, with Odell contributing three points and Henry four. Allen tallied again from the side and Crumbaugh connected for three markers before Harris, midget forward, raised King's score to 38 with two from the field and a free throw.

With lless than a minute to play

QUESTIONNAIRE

The results of the questionnaire conducted by the ECHO have been pleasantly surprising to the Staff Members.

The majority of the people questioned took into consideration the fact that we were fellow students and were doing our best to satisfy the student body. Some answers, such as "you need better writers", and "give us a gossip column," indicated thoughtlessness. Our staff is selected on a competitive basis. Gossip is a form of cruelty.

A few of the suggestions for improvement have already been adopted. One, the Campus Calendar, appeared in the last issue of the ECHO.

Varsity Debaters Continue Victories

Frosh Squad Named

Debating on the national question, Resolved: that the nations should agree to prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions, the Maryville varsity debating teams have been very successful. The debaters have won six and lost two decision debates; they have also participated in six non-decision debates.

In a series of non-decision debates with Asheville Normal, held here, February 19, Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn, James Wilson and Clifford Morgan upheld the affirmative, while Mary Gladys Brown and Eleanor Pianze, and Marcella Ardern represented the negative sides. James Wilson and Clifford Morgan, affirmative, won a critic judge's decision from Cumberland University's team here Monday night.

In a women's triple meet on February 25, Hyde and Wynn, affirmative, defeated East Tennessee Teachers at Carson-Newman. The same night a negative team composed of Brown and Pflanze defeated Carson-Newman at Teachers.

Thursday night, February 28, the Maryville second men's negative team, journeyed to Tusculum where they lost a decision to their opponents.

Next tMonday night, March 4, a triple meet will be held, Wilson and Morgan, affirmative, debating at Teachers and Ardern and Pflanze, negative, debating at Milligan. Badgett and Christie, negative, will meet Teachers here. Wynn and Hyde affirmative, meet Milligan at Maryville, the same night.

Eight members of the varsity squad and Prof. Davis will travel to Hickory, N. C. next week to participate in the South Atlantic Convention in that city. Maryville will be represented in oratory, extemporaneous speaking, and other types of speaking at the convention. In the women's debates, our speakers will be Wynn and Hyde, and Brown and Howie; in the men's debates Archibald Pieper and Paul Hartman, and Earle Crawford and James Smith. Our orators will be Brown and Pieper. Crawford will represent Maryville in extemporaneous speaking.

The final selection of the Freshman debate squad was made this week. Those on the permanent squad are Lois Black, Minnie Lou Chittick, Clara Dale Echols, Helen Maguire, Louise Orr, Ruth Ray; Edward Brubaker, Earl Carlsten, Edward Gillingham, John E. Lancaster, David Maas, Leland Waggoner.

The annual election of Y. W. C. A. officers was held on Thursday of this week. Following their installation on Sunday, March 10 the new officers will immediately enter into the duties of their office. The installation service will be at the close of the vesper service in the chapel.

Those eligible to vote were the active members of the organization, that is, those who had taken the Y. W. C. A. pledge.

The results of the election are as follows:

President—Elizabeth Kunkel
Vice-President—Katharine Orr
Secretary—Shirley Jackson
Treasurer—Ruth Chittick
Nu Gamma Chairman—

Coach Honaker Has Given Scot Athletics a New Face

Long List of Achievements Marks Capable Mentor's Thirteen-Year Stay at Maryville

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Writer)

With the crowning of the 1935 model of the Highlander basketball machine as Smoky Mountain Conference champions, Coach Lombe Scott Honaker added the building up of another title-winning team to his long list of achievements since coming to Maryville in September, 1921.

When Coach Honaker first took charge, the athletic system was poorly arranged, and competition was limited to the smaller colleges and to practice games with Tennessee, in which the Volunteers overwhelmed the Highlanders year after year.

The advent of a new coach, who put much-needed "pep" into the teams and who broadened the schedules, stirred the lagging interest in athletics, however, and marked the beginning of a new era in Maryville sportdom. In his first year, Coach Honaker turned in the enviable record of seven victories, one defeat, and one tie in football; seven victories, six defeats, and one tie in basketball; and fourteen victories, six defeats, and four ties in baseball. Since that time, the Highlanders have won football, baseball, and basketball titles in the old Appalachian Conference, and this year have added basketball to the list of Smoky Mountain Conference championships.

Before 1933, Coach Honaker's football teams had lost only three games within the conference, and had won the football and baseball crowns every year. The year 1927-1928 was probably Coach Honaker's most successful as a whole. In winning six out of nine football games, the Scots held Kentucky to a 6-6 tie and lost to Tennessee 7-0, while the basketball team won 12 and lost 9, and the baseball nine went through a 14-game schedule undefeated.

Coach Honaker's ability as a baseball coach is easily proved by the fact that only two teams, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and Vanderbilt, have won a majority of games over the Scot outfits since 1921. Included in Maryville's baseball schedule during this time have been such teams as Oglethorpe, usually one of the outstanding combinations in the South, Ohio State, and Michigan State.

In the process of building championship teams, Coach Honaker keeps the welfare of his men in mind, also, and Maryvillle graduates are scattered all over the country as college and high school coaches, while an average of one athlete a year has gone up to the major leagues from the baseball team.

Thrower Issues Call For Track

Coach Bob Thrower gave the first call this morning for all track men and newcomers to report for a meeting in Bartlett Hall Monday at 4.

Workouts will begin on the track soon. The meeting Monday is for preliminary instructions as to equipment and qualifications.

Scotties Take Three On Trip To Cinch Play

(By Charlie Lewis)
Special to the Echo—

The Maryville College basketeers proved that they are real champions by downing three strong conference foes on successive nights in their recent road trip. The fourth and last game o fthe trip was dropped to the strong Emory and Henry quintet, a non-conference team.

The Milligan College Buffaloes, dehroned champions, furnished the opposition for the Scotties in the first game of the trip. Coach Honaker's lads came out on the long end of a 41-37 count to garner victory number one of the jaunt. John Henry led the Scotties with 19 points.

In the second game the Honakerites chalked up victory number two at the expense of Gene McMurray's Teachers. John Henry, for the second itme, led the scoring with 20 points. The final count was 43-29.

King College fell prey to the Highlanders in the third and last conference tilt of the trip. Lee Hannah, crooked-legged center, amassed 24 counters to lead the tallying. Allen and Henry came through with 10 markers each. The final tally was 48-42.

A tired but determined Scot quintet faced the Emory and Henry Wasps in the last game of the trip, only to be turned down by a score that revealed nothing of the fight that was put up.

CHARLES CLARK TRIUMPHS IN Y CHECKER TOURNEY

The finals of the Y. M. C. A. Checker Tournament were completed last week with Charles Clark carrying off first place honors and Rex Allen winning second place by advaancing to the final round.

Competition for the class athletics cup will be continued next week when the freshmen meet the juniors and the sophomores play the seniors in the first games of the interclass basketball tournament. The ping pong tournament is also slated to get under way next week as soon as the pairings are arranged.

Scot Matmen Leave Today For Final Match With Vandy

Defeat By Appalachian Teachers Has No Bearing On State Title

With the Maryville-Appalachian Teachers match a thing of history, Coach Bob Thrower and thirteen of his hhardy mat warriors left at 8 a. m. for Nashville to meet Vanderbilt University tonight in the last bout of the season.

The defeat by the North Carolina matmen Tuesday night had no bearing on the state title and the Scots are confident they will return with a victory over the Commodores and the fourth consecutive state championship.

When the Scots face Vanderbilt tonight, Garry Ridder, 118-pounder, and George Hoglan, 126-pounder, will enter the match for the last time in the Orange and Garnet trunksl. Both men have hung up splendid records under Coach Thrower's guidance and their places will be hard to fill next season.

The remainder of the positions will be filled as follows, with Rom Meares again taking the place of the injured Coulter, and Proffitt replacing Richardson; 135-pounds Shields; 145-pounds R. Meares; 155 pounds Dean; 165 pounds Proffitt; 175 pounds Millsaps; Unlimited class, Gamble.

Others making the trip were Harris, Ed Meares, Coulter, Downes, and Renfro.

Mermen Leave for Atlanta Monday

Close Season Saturday With Triangle Meet at U. T.

Coach Fischback and the Scot mermen will leave Monday for Atlanta, Ga., where they will engage in a meet with Emory University. After their return, they will close the season in a triangle meet with U. T. and Georgia Teach at U. T. on Saturday, March 9th.

Winning only three first places the Highlander tank team bowed to a fast group of aquatic stars from Alabama Polytechnic Institute, of Auburn, Alabama, by a 53-31 count Wednesday night in the local pool.

The Highlanders were defeated b the University of Tennessee tank men 51-34 in the Maryville pool February 16.

28 Report For Baseball Opener

Drills To Be Held Indoors For Some Time

Twenty-six promising baseballers reported Friday afternoon for the initial practice of the season.

For the next few days workouts will be held indoors, where the fundamentals of fielding will be examined.

On The Bench..

Most of the time it's pretty hard for your scribe to catch just what Coach Honaker is thinking about the performance of his Highlander cagesters. He doesn't betray much through his face, and when he looks at you blankly in reply to the customary query, "Well, Coach, what'd yuh think ov'em?" you can't be too sure whether he is considering brickbats or roses. But there was no mistaking the atmosphere which fairly oozed from the dressing room after the King game Thursday night. In spite of all he could do Coach dripped one grin after another as he sat there on the edge of his desk. Looking wistfully down at the gray floor, like a great teacher who has led his brood through a troublesome course, he sighed as though glad it was over, and yet just about as ready for another one like it to begin.

Finally we blustered out, "Well, Coach, we're waiting for the biggest statement you ever made. To what do you attribute . . . etc. . . buz. . . buz?"

And back it came before we could wet our pencil, "To the rottenest manager I ever saw, or ever hope to see." Anoother sly grin.

Manager Lewis bowed.

"What think ye of the performance as a whole?" we intruded, still hopeful.

"Ummm. . . . not bad," he volunteered. "For the poorest defense of any team in the conference we did pretty well, I reckon." Still foxy. But we remembered King and Tusculum and a few others, and so tried it again.

"Tell you what we'll do," quoth your scribe. "We'll lay it on heavy and leave it at your door for fear of being drubbed a Bob Murphy. O. K?"

A chin-stroking and a thumb-twiddling followed. He was weakening. 'Yeh, guess that'll do." Settled!

And so, folks, here we go with a few closing remarks about the Highlander net swishers, Champions of the Smoky Mountain Conference for 1935.

* * * *

For The First Time

The close of the season has found the Scotties setting the pace with a feat never before accomplished by a conference basketball team. They have weathered 13 conference skirmishes with 13 victories and no defeats. Milligan College Buffaloes, rulers of the kingdom for the past five years and again heralded as a sure bet to hold top position, were routed ingloriously from the throne and forced to seek the lower level of fourth place. Boasting none of their own the Scotties played throughout the

Scotties Have Long Fight To Dethrone Milligan Supremacy

Cagesters Battled Emory-Henry In Tourney Finals At Kingston, 1929

By JOHN McINTYRE
(Echo Sports Writer)

On a tarnished plaque in the office of Coach Honaker is engraved the unemotional record of the one-point defeat of the Scot quintet by the Emory-Henry Wasps in the finals of the conference tourney in 1929. From that time until the present, the Scot netmen have been forced to remain in the background while Milligan drew all honors in the hardwood classics. But the time of all teams comes, and has come this year to the Scots. By an unquestionable superiority over all conference teams, they have fought their way to the top, establishing Maryville as champion in the third of conference sports.

The quest of basketball supremacy began in 1928, when the first conference tourney was played at Kingston. In 1931 this form of settlement was abandoned in favor of the percentage system. Until the present season, the Milligan Buffaloes have remained at the peak of the scoring.

During the last few years, Maryville has obtained an almost continuous string of victories in track and base ball. With one or two exceptions, the Scot thinlies have topped the heap in track, and, with the exception of one year, the nine has maintained conference diamond supremacy.

The beauty and strength of the quintet that has proved its value against all foes this year has in a large measure wiped out the memories of the heart rending defeats of the past. By smashing all conference records in wins, and totalling nearly seven hundred points against the stiffest of competition, the five have undeniably stamped themselves upon the memories of all their followers.

In the year 1927, when the Smoky Mountain Conference actively began competition, the colleges that were members were: Carson-Newman, Emory and Henry, King, Milligan, Tusculum, and Maryville.

Since that time, Appalachian Teachers, L.M.U., and Cullowhee, Cumberland, and East Tennessee Teachers, have been added, and Emory and Henry dropped from the list.

With all but one of the netters returning next year, the conference may—nay, will see again the Scot basketeers at the top of the list when the final net is swished.

We supposed that you noticed the poodle that the Appalachian Teachers brought along with them on Tuesday night. We

We always knew that there was something wrong with this cold weather. (just in case the weather should change by Sat-

The theism class was hearing about Mohammedanism the other day. Dr. Lloyd got to talking about the condition of women

Here's Where We Come In

And while we are speaking of all conference players we might as well speak about all-conference players. Long-legged, cool-headed Lee Hannah, center for the Scottiies, has not only uncomprisingly bottled up every center in the conference, Carson-Newman's own Laymon included, but has emerged somewhere very near the top of the heap in scoring honors. Tho only a sophomore Hannah's performance this season has shown a polish that only a few players attain in four years of training. A master of the one-hander and pivot shot Lee teamed up with John Henry, forward, to make a scoring combination that has carried the Highlanders proudly around the brotherly circle, and which promises to repeat such tactics for the next two years. Scribes, readers, and die-hards, it is our pleasure to nominate for all-conference center position our own Lee Hannah!

Carson Newman's Orange and Blue in an article about a meeting of the Portia club stated that an ice course in pink and white was served. Our curiosity is aroused as to just what an ice course in pink and white might be.

Dr. Knapp Honored On 75th Birthday At Faculty Dinner

Presented With a Gift From The Faculty

Over seventy members of the faculty and their guests were present at the faculty banquet last Monday night, March 11, held in honor of the seventy-fifth birthday of Dr. Knapp. Presentation of an arm chair and foot stool was made by the faculty.

Dr. Lloyd gave a short talk in recognition of the approaching birthday of Dr. Knapp on March 15. Dr. or Daddy Knapp was born in Downsville, New York. "He graduated from an academy up by Lake Ontario and entered Hamilton College where he became a Phi Beta Kappa graduate. He took his bachelor's and master's degrees at Hamilton, did further study at Cornell, and meanwhile became a teacher." Dr. Knapp taught in various colleges for thirty-one years before he came to Maryville College in 1914, when Dr. Lloyd was a senior, to act as Professor of Mathematics and Physics, becoming in time also manager of the varied program of the Book Store and Post Office.

Dr. Knapp has been recognized by everyone who knows him as an "able and beloved teacher, a scholar of varied and broad interests, a friend to be trusted, and a Christian gentleman to be honored and emulated. Dr. Lloyd, concluding that the birthday of Dr. Knapp was a very special event, then presented, on behalf of the faculty, the gift.

Lagerstedt Reads On Heinrich Heine

Following the Faculty Dinner on last Monday, Professor Lagerstedt read a paper on Heinrich Heine, one of Germany's greatest lyricists second only to Johann Wolfgang Goethe. Heine was born in 1797 in Duesselsdorf in the Ruhr. He attended Bonn, Goettingen, and Berlin Universities where he studied law. For a while he was editor of a paper in Munich, but after the Napoleonic period and during the revolution to 1830 a succession of events caused him to go to Paris where he spent the rest of his life. He received a regular stipend from the French Government and a yearly allowance from a wealthy uncle in Hamburg. He married an unimportant French girl who was unable to appreciate his writings, but nevertheless he lived with her in great harmony. He died in 1856, and was buried in the Montmartre cemetery in Paris. Heine's poems have been set to music by Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Rubenstein, Brahms, and Silcher.

Professor Lagerstedt talked about the religious philosphy of Heinrich Heine, showing how Heine was influenced by various religions including Judaism, Catholicism, and Protestantism. He went on to show, however, that Heine finally returned to a belief in a personal God.

Installation Today Of Seven Elected Into Alpha Gamma Sigma

Miss Bassett Also Elected Into Honor Society

The chapel period today was given to the installation and public recognition of the newly elected members of the scholarship honor society, Alpha Gamma Sigma. Dr. Lloyd sketched briefly the purpose and history of the organization and called on the secretary, Dr. Hunter, for the minutes of the last meeting. Then followed the installation of the new members.

Though organized only last year, Alpha Gamma Sigma occupies an important place among the honorary organizations of the campus. Its student members are chosen on the basis of their scholarship record in liberal arts courses. An average of 6.50 is required for one to be eligible for election. Also a specified number of hours in liberal arts courses must be completed for graduation. No more than ten percent of those receiving a B. A. degree may be elected in a year. The election of juniors with a high record is permissable if the society chooses to do so.

Faculty members belonging to Phi Beta Kappa are included in the associate membership of the society as well as others who are elected on the basis of superior scholarship and breadth of interests.

Upon recommendation of a membership committee Miss Almira Bassett was elected, in recognition of her outstanding scholarship record here at Maryville College in her student days and her years of successful teaching in both high school and college.

The faculty members of Alpha Gamma Sigma are Dr. Hunter, Dr. Hussey, Dr. Knapp, Dr. Lloyd, Miss Bassett, Miss Josephine Hunter, and Miss Viola Lightfoot of last year's senior class.

The student members are Robert Brown, Annie May Donnell, Lorena May Dunlap, Mary Gilllingham, Dorothy Nethery, Roberta Reveley, and Maria Wynn.

S. V. Holds Interracial Conference

The State Student Volunteer Conference will be held this weekend at Bethel College in McKenzie.

The program will consist of discussion groups, an election of state officers, and inspirational talks. The theme will be "The Christian Response to a Broken World", and the main speaker will be Dr. Darby Fulton, former missionary to Japan, and present General Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A.

The delegation from Maryville left here at six o'clock Friday morning, and will return on Sunday evening. It consists of the following: Willis Garrett, Elizabeth Peterson (State Vice-President), Ellen Baker, Charlotte King, Barbara Whitmore, Blanche Nick, Stuart Gillis (State Treasurer), Charles Allen, and Mr. Black.

Keen Competition For Cup Offered By Final Mid-Winter

Student Production Excellently Interpreted

With the Alpha Sigma's production of "The Crippled Pigeon" last night a playwright witnessed the first staging of a production of his pen, an audience witnessed the premier performance of a three act tragedy, and an organization was the first to present a play written by a member of the student body.

By bringing the drama within our own sphere, it stimulates our thinking about dramatic possibilities to include among the season's production a play of local origin. Last night's performance was a happy inauguration of what might become an institution. We should like to see more student talent exploited.

Mr. Krainock's play as a play compared favorably with any that has been presented on Voorhees Chapel stage this year. The problem of the play, the unresolved problem of an idealist in an antagonistic environment, was given the setting of an immigrant's given the setting of an immigrant's home, a setting which in itself served to throw in bold relief the basic problem of the drama. The characters were for the most part types, skillfully portrayed. The action followed a direct course from the beginning, offering few complexities of development or varied possibilities of interpretation.

We hailed with some glee the dramatic foreshadowing in the first act, accomplished by the discovery (ironically enough in one of the few scenes of gayety in the play) of the revolver in the top drawer. Such a device Ibsen could employ, and did in another play entitled by a fowl, "The Wild Duck".

The concluding scene of "The "Crippled Pigeon" was, in our opinion, weakened by Bela's leaving the room, pistol to head, and by the sound of the explosion after the curtains had fallen. We would fell the curtains on the heels of Bela's

Students Organize Shakespeare Club

Feeling the need of an opportunity for more advanced study of the works of Shakespeare than is offered in the regulation college course, a group of Shakespeare students met with Dr. Hunter Monday morning and organized a club for the purpose of studying this poet's work.

Only those students of Maryville who have had at least one semester's formal study of Shakespeare are eligible for membership in the club. At the meeting Monday morning, Dr. Hunter, Lorena May Dunlap, Fern Metzger, Louis Krainock, and Edwin Best were made the Governing Board of the organization. Regular meetings are to be held every Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:00 in Dr. Hunter's classroom.

At the first regular meeting, Joyce Fields and Robert Lodwick will give reports upon the tragedy, "King Richard III".

Maryville Chorus To Sing At Cincinnati May Twenty-Second

Invitation Extended By The General Assembly of The Presbyterian Church

A Maryville College chorus made up of the choir and glee clubs has been invited to sing at the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Cincinnati on Wednesday, May 22. The chorus will sing in the afternoon at a meeting sponsored by the Board of Christian Education, and it is understood that Dr. Lloyd will speak and the Chorus will sing in connection with a discussion of Music and Worship in the Christian College. The chorus will sing again in the evening at a meeting in charge of the General Council of the Presbyterian Church had at a Maryville College banquet attended by alumni of the Cincinnati area and those visiting the General Assembly.

The General Assembly is the annual national meeting of the Presbyterian Church and is attended by ministers and elders from all over America and various foreign countries. In addition to those in regular attendance, the meetings are attended by many hundreds of other people from Cincinnati and elsewhere.

Probably about fifty students will make the trip, going up in cars on May 21 and returning on May 23. They will be entertained while in Cincinnati by Maryville Alumni or other friends of the College and by those in charge of the meetings. The Chorus is under the direction of Miss Frances Henry.

We congratulate our new Alpha Gamma Sigma members, and our Honor Roll students. Of the more than eight hundred students enrolled only one hundred fourteen can make good or excellent scholastic records along with extra-curricular activities.

We who have failed, fail for various reasons but this is no time to make excuses—never explain, your friends don't need it and your enemies won't believe you.

The lesson to be gained from the example set by our grade making classmates is that of concentration,— applied to the subjects which we undertake to study.

Of course we realize that there are subjects which we do not wish to undertake. We refer to required courses. But in any institution of learning such as Maryville certain subjects are prescribed, principally for the benefit of bewildered underclassmen.

By the time, however, that bewildered underclassmen have reached the stage commonly thought of as all-wise seniors, the number of required courses decreases noticeably. This is as it should be, for by the fourth year in college a student should have realized exactly what his goal is and by what studies he may strive to that end. Nevertheless there is some limitation placed upon one's course of study in a desired field by required courses.

As progress in educative methods improve there is no doubt that the number of required courses for seniors will disappear almost entirely from college catalogs.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Our Superior Scotties come to us from near and far. Grace Graham Proffitt comes from the college campus where she lives, the daughter of the college treasurer, and Lorena May Dunlap from Cebu, Cebu, in the Philippine Islands, where she was born, the daughter of a missionary.

GRACE GRAHAM PROFFITT

Grace shows exceptional ability in varied fields— athletic, scholastic, executive, literary, and musical. In her first three years she received awards in athletics. In her second year, she was program secretary for Bainonian and associate editor of the "M"" Book. As a junior she was on the Chilhowean staff, was vice president of her class, took part in the Daisy Chain, and represented Maryville in the semi-finals in the national oratorical contest and in the finals of national extemporeneaking. In the same year, she was admitted to Writer's Workshop and was elected to the Y. W. cabinet. All four years, she has written for the ECHO, and in the summer following her junior year, she attended the Blue Ridge Conference as Maryville's delegate.

This year she has been treasurer of Bainonian, a member of the Athletic Board of Control, a member of the Student Council and of the choir and the glee club. She was the student representative at the national Pi Kappa Delta convention. She has been awarded Special Distinction in Oratory. And with all she is an Honor Roll student.

LORENA MAY DUNLAP

Lorena May's college activities parallel Grace's in versatility. During her first year, she was a member of the Student Council, and the Three I Club. In her second year, she was elected to the "Y" cabinet and continued in the Student Volunteers as program secretary and in her third year as secretary. She had the lead in the cast of Bainonian's mid-winter play, "Little Journey."

In her third and fourth years, she was again on the Student Council and on the "Y" cabinet.

In dramatics, she was a member of College Players and stage manager of Bainonian's mid-winter. Last year she was admitted to the Delta Chapter of Theta Alpha Phi, and this year she is graduating in Expression.

In the past two years, she has served on the Student-Faculty Committee, and has been a member of the Home Ec Club, and of the Daisy Chain. She played the lead in Athenian's play, "The Goose Hangs High", was on Bainonian's play committee, was President of the Student Social Committee, and Chairman of the Senior Invitations Committee. Frequently also, she has addressed societies and clubs about the Philippines. During all four years she has been an Honor Roll student.

It is possible to say, most sincerely, that Maryville College has been greatly enriched by the presence and work of both Grace and Lorena.

emark to Anna, "I have made up my mind."

The original cast as we may call the six players who interpreted the drama to us last night, were, considered individually, the best cast that has graced the stage this year. Scenes empty of action they put across my intensity which was yet not melodramatic. Each upheld his own part remarkably well.

First honors are probably divided between Miss Nicolai, for her emotionally well controlled portrayal of Mari Banas, and to Mr. Gillespie, for his consistently ironic Janas Banas. Mr. Fisher played perhaps the most difficult role in the play— the idealist—a role always difficult to preseve from the two dangers of insipidity and frenzy. Bela's emotional state in the last act Mr. Fisher had not sufficiently prepared us for by his interpretation of the role in the first acts.

To the four characters, Miss Brown, Miss Gamble, Mr. Fisher, and Mr. Leitch, we are indebted for the only light in the almost unrelieved gloom of three acts. The scene of mild gayety which occurs in the first act was handled by this quartet with a touch skillful in its lightness.

She: Women are fools to marry.
He: Of course, but who else is there for us to marry?

Dr. Stevenson's topic for his address in the Chapel service on March 20 will be "Strength's Opportunity."

The following quotation from the paper issued by Carolina Teachers College might make a good debate question. "The dumb freshman who asks questions today will dumfound the world tomorrow." People certainly will use any kind of material for puns thes days.

Baseballers Meet Indiana In April

Prospects Look Bright As Diamondeers Warm Up

With an attractive schedule being arrangd, featuring a two-game series with Indiana University and another with the University of Cincinnati, both on the Maryville diamond in April, and with hard practice slated to begin as soon as the weather permits, local baseball interest is mounting rapidly.

The outlook for the 1935 season is considerably brighter than last year, and the Highlanders hope to regain their former supremacy in East Tennessee baseball circles after a one-year absence from the top.

A squad of over thirty men worked out in Alumni gym the past two weeks learning the fundamentals of fielding, throwing, and batting, and then went out to the diamond Thursday afternoon for the first time. After the Friday session, Coach Honaker planned to cut the squad to about twenty-five men so that he can give more attention to those candidates who have shown most promise of future development.

Seven lettermen and a large number of reserves from last year's team are in uniform again this season, as well as several newcomers who have had some experience before coming to Maryville.

The pitching and catching departments are best supplied with material, while the outfield is close behind. Coach Honaker's chief source of worry probably will be the filling of the short stop and second base posts left vacant by the graduation of Kizer and Gillespie.

In addition to the Indiana and Cincinnati games, the Highlanders will play two games each with Carson-Newman, East Tennessee Teachers, L. M. U., Emory and Henry, Hiwassee, and Mars Hill.

TRACK MOVES OUTDOORS

After two weeks of training in the Bartlett gym and on the football field, the track squad moved out to the track Thursday afternoon for the beginning of intensive training which will continue until the first meet of the season with Tennessee in Knoxville April 26.

Coach Bob Thower has 37 men on hand, but since only 7 are lettermen, the prospects for the season are uncertain at present.

Champions Play In Cage Tourney

Breezing through to a 40-10 triumph in the first round and winning the second by forfeit, the Maryville Indians, composed chiefly of the college cagesters, advanced to the semi-final round of the Friendsville Independent basketball tournament to be concluded tonight.

The Indians had no trouble in the first encounter and are favorites to cop the tourney. The first opponent tonight will be the Friendsville Marbles, while the other semi-final game will be played between a team which includes part of the college second team and one made up of Maryville High players. The final game will be played after a short rest.

Smiling Steve Boretsky, hero of many Maryville grid conflicts of the past, has donned the Orange and Garnet moleskin again, this time as coach of spring football.

With nearly a month to go yet Steve will continue to lead Highlander prospects through the fundamentals and signal drills, and at that time will team with Coach Thrower to round the track squad into shape.

During the past year Boretsky has served Maryville College as assistant backfield and wrestling coach. A three-letter man and veteran in all departments of sport, Steve is well equipped to serve in these capacities

Seven Players and Lewis Receive Letter Awards

Rex Allen, retiring star forward for the Highlander basketeers during the past season, was unanimously elected team captain at the annual banquet given for Honaker's lads last Tuesday night.

After the formal course and talks, letters were awarded to seven players and manager Charlie Lewis. Those players receiving letters were Rex Allen, Jack Overly, Lee Hannah, John Henry, "Chuck" Thomas Crumbaugh, Butter Atchison, and Jim Odell.

Grapplers Lose Ridder, Hoglan

By DICK MEADOWS

"By far the best 118-pounder Maryville has ever had" was Coach Bob Thrower's statement when asked what he thought about Garry Ridder, the "good little man" who will match his strength and skill with the best of the nation's intercollegiate wrestlers, next week at Lehigh University.

Coach Thrower's comment, coming from the one person who should know, was made not merely for praise of a senior athlete who has done well, but because the record made by Ridder at Maryville deserves such praise.

When Garry was a freshman, he went out for wrestling only a day or two before deciding he was not a wrestler. Coach Thrower persuaded him to come out the following year, however, and Ridder surprised himself by not only making the first team, but by winning five out of five matches.

As a junior, Ridder continued his excellent performances of the preceding year by winning five out of seven bouts. The two defeats, both on time-decisions, were suffered at the hands of Blalock, of Appalachian Teachers, the only man who has ever beaten him.

This season Ridder's record speaks for itself: nine matches, eight won by falls and one by a time advantage, 43 points scored out a possible 45. This brings his record to 19 victories in 21 matches; and he was never pinned.

Wouldn't it be great if Garry Ridder could set off this already remarkable record with a national championship to close his career?

When the call for wrestling practice is sent out next December, one of the 1935 grapplers whose absence will be only too evident is George Hoglan, 126-pounder. Although George will not go down on the records as an unbeaten wrestler, he will go down as one who has beaten every opponent, except one, at least once.

Hoglan went out for wrestling his sophomore year and lettered by winning the only match he entered. The following season he won five of the seven matches, with victories over both the men by whom he was defeated.

This year Hoglan won six matches while losing three, but Blalock, of Appalachian Teachers, was the only man who was not defeated in a return affair. Hoglan and Blalock opposed each other only once.

The characteristic which perhaps aided Hoglan most in winning 12 of his 17 bouts was his everlasting fight. It can be truthfully said that George Hoglan never gave up until the match was ended.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Inhabitants of the rooms on second and third floor rear, Pearsons Hall, were startled on Thursday morning by the precipitous descent of a pan containing some slightly congealed chocolate fudge. Since this was quite different from the usual burnt matches, candy wrappers, and streams of water usually poured from above, the onlookers were at loss to explain the miracle. All was quiet again after Calista Palmer, with the aid of the man-about the campus, "Brownie", collected the remains, and woefully made her way up the three flights of stairs.

He may be the an official representative of Chicago Theological Seminary, but he's still the same Dick Orr, and we're glad of it. Pleased to see you back for a couple of days, Dick! In one way he has changed a little, though. He barged into the room a minute or so before supper, just off the bus, to get a scrubbing brush to clean up. After a bit he got a little worried, "Is my shirt clean, enough?" Dick never did mind before how he looked as he mosied around the campus. But on the other side: he hadn't had a wink of sleep the night before but he stayed up till three for an old-fashioned bull session. The same RKO!

A student received a call some time ago from a store in town, demanding that she call and make adjustments on a bill she had owed for some time. Indignantly the coo-ed marched in to inform the merchant that she didn't owe anybody anything—and the storekeeper was just as surprised as she was! Now, when something like that happens, who takes the blame? It sounds like that Hitch girl to us.

This conversation between two boys, one of whose eyes were more than slightly crossed, was overheard by one of the SURPRISE! College girls who has been doing some social service case work. One boy confronted the other, registering surprise.

"Crossed, ain't they?"

"Um-hum."

"Who did it?"

What's the point? There ain't none—we just wanted a rest from some of the poignant attempts at jokery that have been permeating our entire campus life lately. Whew! And what jokes they are! Page Lee Johnson!

:—:—:

Mr. Lagerstedt's first-year German classes are amusing. Highly intellectual discussions of cheeses, sausages, and "wurst", TSK! TSK! are often interspersed by bits of wit from the Professor himself. However, one of the students not long ago pulled one that even "Laggy" couldn't better.

Circumstances in the story to be translated were exciting; and when he came to the sentence describing a young man's enfolding a maiden in his arms, Mr. Bryant said "he hadn't got that far." Nuff said!

DEBATE

ville Normal is a women's school, but that did not stop Bert Howie from asking their debate coach, "When do we debate your boys' team?" The Maryville boys were welcomed, and the combination of Pieper and Hartman made quite a hit.

The past week at Maryville has been featured with several interesting debates. An Oregon style debate was held Monday night, with the topic "Was there sufficient evidence to convict Hauptmann of first degree murder?" The cross examination feature made this debate very unique, and the decision was taken by the affirmative side.

Thursday evening there was held a debate between teams from Carson-Newman and Milligan, on the subject of munitions. The debate was won by the affirmative team from Milligan.

A Maryville affirmative team of James Wilson and Clifford Morgan won their debate Thursday at Carson-Newman. At Milligan, James Badgett and Alex Christie, negative team, were also successful.

College Executives Plan European Tour For Summer Months

President Lloyd To Speak In Scotland And England

President Lloyd has announced his plans for a trip to Great Britain and Europe this summer, accompanied by Mrs. Lloyd, Miss Clemmie J. Henry, Student-Help Secretary, and Miss Mary E. Caldwell, Dean of women.

President Lloyd will make the trip as one of the American Interchange Speakers for 1935, under appointment by the American Commission on Interchange of Preachers and Speakers between America, Great Britain, and France. This Commission on Interchange is an organization jointly representing the Church Peace Union, the Federal Council of Churches, and the World Alliance for International Friendship.

It is interesting to know that, although only ten or twelve representatives are appointed annually by the Commission, thus making an occasion for the same representative's being sent twice quite rare, yet this will be the second time that President Lloyd will have been sent on this trip. The first time was in the summer of 1930, just before he came to Maryville as President. During his first stay, most of his speaking engagements were in London, Newcastle, and other cities of Great Britain, where he spoke in churches, forums, clubs, and similar

Athenian Mid-Winter Is Awarded Trophy By Theta Alpha Phi

Alpha Sigma And Bainonian Receive Next Ranks

The Athenian Literary Society won the Theta Alpha Cup Award with its play "The Goose Hangs High"

Second place in the Midwinter contest went to Alpha Sigma's, "The Crippled Pigeon", written by Louis Krainock. Bainonian's presentation "The Late Christopher Bean" ranked next, and fourth place went to "Launcelot and Elaine", which was given by Theta Epsilon.

The judges gave much credit to Athenian for its unique and forceful advertising, and to Alpha Sigma for producing an original student-written play.

Outstanding actors of the year were indicated as Robert Gillespie, Roberta Howie, Edith Nicolai, and Herr Wissler. Honorable mention was given to Ellen Hitch, Lorena May Dunlap, Violet Webb, and LeRoy Obert.

In commenting on "The Goose Hangs High" the judges highly commended the excellent scenery and the large cast, the members of which seemed to take their parts with naturalness and poise.

Krainock's "The Crippled Pigeon" was complimented for its reality and the forcefulness of its chief characters.

"The Late Christopher Bean" was also enjoyable through the work done by the stage committee.

Many From Maryville Hear Dr. R. E. Speer

A large group of Maryville students and faculty members heard Dr. Robert E. Speer, who spoke in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of Knoxville last Saturday night. His address centered about the theme, "Are Missions Doing Anything?" Dr. Speer emphatically and eloquently gave testimony to the fact of the success of Christianity in carrying out its missionary program. Although well advanced in years, Dr. Speer impressed his audience with his vigor of address and his command of speech. With all his zeal, he presented the claims that missions have to the attention of all earnest and right-thinking people.

Graduation Recital Has Novel Program

Excellent Acting Displayed In Fantastic Play

Voorhees Chapel was fairly well filled at the first Graduate Expression recital which was held on last night. This was the first of a series of three expression recitals to be held before the end of the semester. The second one will be held at the end of April, and the last recital will be held during the regular Commencement exercises. Each of the graduates in Expression must participate in two of the three recitals.

All of the scenes took place in a garden which made a very effective setting. Mary Gladys Brown introduced the program with the poem, "Come into the Garden, Maude." The invitation was given in a very provocative fashion.

The program was continued with a one word play by Egan called "In a Garden". Lorena May Dunlap was the very demure and at times coquettish maiden of thirty, and Ellen Hitch took the part of the persuasive suitor. The clever and enlightening conversation was carried on in single words.

Amy Lowell's poem, "Patterns" recited by Louise Reichelderfer, contributed a more serious aspect to the program. Miss Reichelderfer, who looked most charming, gave the

Many Departments To Be Represented By Honor Students

Twenty-three Are To Study In Sixteen Departments

The group of students selected and approved to do Honors Work in various departments of the college during the school year of 1935-1936 is exceptional both in numbers and in range of interests. Next year twenty-three persons, four women and nineteen men, will follow a course of independent study in sixteen different departments.

Six departments have two or more students represented, Bible and Religious Education, Biology, Economics, English with three students, French, and Political Science. In previous years no Honors Work has been done in some of the departments. During the present year, by way of contrast, six students have been working in five fields of interest. This is evidence that the value of such study as Honors Work offers is becoming more widely accepted.

1935-36 will mark the 4th year in which Honors Work has been offered to superior students, giving them opportunity for advanced independent study in the direction of their choice under the supervision of a faculty advisor. Classroom requirements are reduced accordingly. The particular topic or course of work is chosen by the student and his instructor.

Louisville President Defines Education

Dr. J. R. Cunningham, President of Louisville Presbyterian Theological Siminary spoke in chapel services on Wednesday, March 20, giving his views as ot the purpses of education.

In summary, Dr. Cunningham said, "Education is not necessarily an Open Sesame. There are conditions that ought to center around education. One should be educated in mind and words. Morality should be built with religion, for there is a need for Christ in education. There is a a need for education, but there is also a need for God, beauty, truth and virture. Education means that one must follow the way of honor, live in the light of truth and possess the will to work for man.

Debaters Continue Successful Season; Attend Conference

Badgett and Christie Defeat Milligan and Center Teams

Continuing their successful season, the Maryville Debating squads took four more debates recently. In a triangle debate on March 14, James Badgett and Alex Christie, negative, defeated a team from Carson—Newman at Millingan. On the same date an affirmative team composed of James Willson and Clifford Morgan defeated Milligan at Carson Newman.

On March 19, Badgett and Christie, negative, defeated a team, from Centre College here. On March 23 James Smith and Earle Crawford defeated an affirmative team from Southwestern. The last home debate will be held here on April 16 when Archie Pieper and Paul Hartman meet a negative team from Bucknell.

Traveling to the Tennessee State Tournament which meets at Vanderbilt University on April 5 and 6, Maryville will be well represented. Florence Hyde, Maria Wynn, James Smith, and Earle Crawfodr will take part in debate. Walter West, a freshman, will speak in the Oratorical Contest. Earle Crawford will also represent the school in after—dinner speaking. Dr. Hunter will accompany the group.

At the Provincial Convention at Franklin, Indiana, on April 12 and 13, Mary Gladys Brown, Roberta Howie, Paul Hartman, and Archie Pieper will represent Maryville in debate. Pieper will compete in oratory also. Grace Proffitt will speak in the oratorial and extemporaneous speech contests. Those who compete in the Tennessee Tournament will also be among those making the Indiana trip.

Eliminations Tuesday For Bates Orations

The first eliminations in the Bates Contest will be decided by the Committee next Tuesday, when the papers of the contestants must be handed in. This contest, started by the contribution of Rev. William H. Bates, D. D., of Greeley, Colorado, provides a prize each year for the men and women of the junior and senior classes. Last year, the prize was won by Maria Wynn.

The choice of subjects for the contest is very wide, including the following: Problems of an Increased Leisure; The Art of Living; For Whom Government; The Cost of War; The American Scholar; The Labs: For Service or Destruction. The committee in charge of the contest is Jessie K. Johnson and E. R. Hunter.

Winners Announced In Varsity Speeches

Winners in the Extemporaneous contest this week were: Earl Crawford, speaking on "Political Trends in America" and Grace Proffitt, who discussed "American Movies". Miss Johnson, Miss Gamble, and Dr. Knapp acted as judges.

"War vs Peace", given by Walter West, and Grace Proffitt's "A nice juicy steak or a piece of lean pork", won in the oratorical contest. Judges were Dr. Rogers, Prof. McMurray and Prof. Davis.

Somnic Musings on the Morphean Phase—L. R. K.

This modern era, with all its specialization, has failed to produce a single connoisseur in the field of sleep. William Beebe has accurately stated that there are no connoisseurs of sleep. He wrote his essay a decade or two ago, and he was right, at the time. Lamb, Hunt and others have been experts on getting up on cold mornings. Harry Walrond, former student, professor of campanology in the local belfry was a specialist on organizing his neurones for getting fully awake and out of bed. But until my appearance on the American scene there has been no true sleeper since Rip Van Winkle, or perhaps, George Pullman, for sleeping is a science as well as an art. Will anyone dare state that a baby which sleeps away three quarters of its early life, enjoys sleep? Without employment of the scientific method, the babe cannot.

Before dropping off to sleep, I observe several fundamental laws of preparatory action. I find that the secret of enjoying sleep is not to become unconscious for a number of hours, but to remain as conscious of the fact that I am unconscious. Before entering my bed, the altar of the Somnus, I select a book to carry with me—usually a familiar book. If the lights are out I take a book whose contents I know by heart. The idea is to take a book to bed. Now I enter the bed, and arrange myself. The clock is wound, and the next day's lesson properly unstudied—I am at peace. Morpheus now sits on the foot of my bed, twanging a Spanish guitar. But I am not ready for him yet. He must woo even further; my soul is not properly en rapport with his. I raise heavily weighted lids and attempt to struggle to a sitting position. I fail, but sleep leaves me for the moment. Hedonistically I anticipate the pleasures of sleep that will be mine. I muse over how delightful I will feel when I finally yield. Morpheus strums another bar of the "Nocturnal Melody in H", and beckons. Again I waver, and almost surrender.

With a sigh, I descend from my couch and grasp the alarm clock. Under the hall light I adjust it to 1:00 or 3:00 a. m. Then back to bed. It is now one o'clock. I pass through Nervana, Paradise, burugens, I visit Dante's Inferno—time and space do not exist save as states of my mind, which is now working on a low scale of activity.

WHO ARE WE?

How much longer will Hollywood producers concoct college films out of the memories of their own "Rah! Rah!" days? How much longer can they ignore the fact that the dance-date-alcohol obsession is submerged in the economic independence problem, that the antics of the college gang have given way to an effort to harmonize social conformity and individualistic independence, that campus society and politics are aware of national affairs?

The racoon coat and new model roadster, passports into the society of "valuable contacts", have been displaced by cultural interests and social responsibility. The new graduate's aim is service, not success. The best service he can give is to disseminate the culture and information that will exclude the evils of radicalism from America's social order.

If we believe that "life imitates literature" we would better be about finding some better opinions of ourselves than are set forth in college fillms and magazines. It is gratifying to note that some persons take us more seriously.

Christian Gaus is a dean who believes in his students. He says "the young barbarians on the college campuses which only a few years ago were regarded as the nation's playgrounds . . are earnest prospective citizens of the commonwealth of the future."

The Judiciary Committee in congress listened to a petition of 4000 students urging the passage of the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill. The Literary Digest was interested enough in student opinion to conduct a student poll on war. It was learned that though college students are unquestionably opposed to war, eighty percent favor defensive warfare.

H. L. Mencken is judging an American Mercury contest which offers $500.00 for the best undergraduate essay on the subject "The Professors Got the Country into This Mess, but We Can Get It Out". The American Mercury believes that if Washington's staff of "recently unemployed professors" would resign in favor of a twenty-one year old president with a cabinet of the average age of twenty, something might be done.

A ruling of "no public officers over forty years of age" would have relegated "Huey Long to Canebrakes in 1933", and put Senator Borah to work "quietly spraying Idaho potato bugs these last thirty years." Of course, the Mercury admits, because of the efforts of these same professors, the $500.00 will only be worth 58 cents each, but wouldn't it be fun to show our sceptical friends that we can have a serious thought?

Theere is one passion to which you may make a complete surrender--the passion of a lofty ideal.

SUPERIORS SCOTTIES

Little and lithe, pretty and petite, both "superior" and "Scotch"—that's Violet Webb, Editor-in-Chief of the Highland Echo, now taking a deserved vacation as the junior editors do their stuff. Vi is really Scotch in accent and nationality, if not in generosity and friendliness. She lives in New York, and has been employed as a stenographer in the British Embassy.

Vi is probably known to the great number of students and townspeople through her dancing. She's musical, too, and has been a member of the Vesper Choir and the Women's Glee Club for the last two years. Her part in the light opera "Briar Rose" was well portrayed, and she has given creditable performances in several of our midwinters.

"VI" WEBB

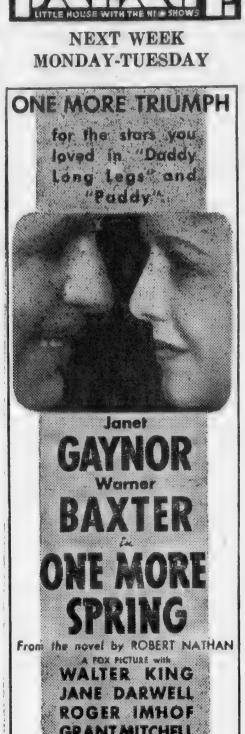
As an English major, Vi has been especially interested in the journalistic phase of college life. She has been a member of the Echo staff for all of her four years in Maryville, serving as Managing Editor in 1934, and as Editor-in-Chief in 1935. As a member of the Chilhowean staff, and as a contributing member of the Writer's Workshop she has been ost valuable.

In the Y. W. C. A. Vi has served on the cabinet (1933), as Secretary (1934), and as Vice President in charge of the Nu Gamma activities (1935).

With all her varied activities, Vi never seems to tire. "Speed" is her middle name, and speedy she is. For a small bundle of personality she comes very near being an ideal "Superior Scottie".

This issue of the Echo is edited by Elizabeth Kunkel, Managing Editor. The editor of the April sixth issue will be Bryan Payne, Sports Editor. Alex Christie, Feature Editor will edit the Echo on April 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Ramsey announce the birth of a son, David Lawrence Ramsey, on March 15. Mrs. Ramsey was before her marriage Miss Lenora West and is the daughter of Mrs. Clyde T. West. She graduated from Maryville College in 1932 and while in school was prominent in dramatics and the activities of Theta Epsilon.



All senior invitations must be purchased from Lorena May Dunlap, Grace Proffitt or Theron Alexander before Monday, April 1. Paper backed invitations sell for $.21 and leather backed ones for $.36.

The following is quoted from the Lenoir Rhyne paper. "The number of college students in the United States has increased approximately 900 per cent since 1900, while the population of the country has increased only 63 per cent."

Buddie's Friends Have Lost A Comrade; Ridder And Millsaps Lose Hard At Lehigh; But When Brain and Brawn Meet, Everybody Wins

By BRYAN PAYNE
(Echo Sports Editor)

Buddie is dead.

Everybody remembers Buddie. He was the pretty black Spitz who used to romp over the campus daya fter day with his two pals, the young German Police and the scraggly little something whom we knew only as Mutt.

Buddie belonged to Miss Heron. Nearly every day she used to take Buddie down by the edge of the campus on the golf course, there leashed or free as his temper merited, he would romp and play the whole afternoon away.

He liked to charge up and down the practice field, too, and sometimes he would slip in Thaw while the door was open and slyly creep upstairs like a young schoolboy about to play a prank on his teacher.

But Miss Heron doesn't park down by the golf course anymore, and somehow the practice field sleems strangely to be lacking something. And Buddie's pals, too, seem to sense the absence of their friend, for they don't romp and bark and race over the campus like they used to. But we think they know where Buddie is.

Well, Buddie is gone now.

Many happy bones to you, Buddie.

The Elf and The Giant

Garry Ridder and Buck Millsaps are back home from the national wrestling tourney held at Lehigh University in Pennsylvania last week, and all they will tell you is that they drew byes in the first round and lost in the second. But we didn't believe it was as simple as that so we snooped around for the yellow sheet which carried the tournament story, and here it is.

Both grapplers drew byes for the first round matches. In the second round Ridder lost to Quenelle of St. Lawrence University via referee's decision and a time advantage of 2:27, after a prolonged match of sixteen minutes duration which included two extra periods. It was a strange trick of strength which caused Garry to lose the match at all. With a minute and a half to go he topped his opponent by a 1:30 time advantage, but in the ensuing seconds allowed Quenelle to climb up for a counter advantage of a minute, which left only an insufficient advantage of 30 seconds to the Highlander. "In the extra periods," Garry said, "I just got tired."

Buck Millsaps suffered his first defeat of intercollegiate wrestling in the second round when he lost to Serfass of Gettysburg College on a time advantage of 2:02. A short paragraph in the Bethlehem Globe-Times characterized Buck as a "tough customer", and indicated that his opponent had his hands full in holding him down.

Oklahoma Entered Five Teams

The late edition of the National Collegiate Wrestling Championship brings the total events to eight, five of which have been carried off by Oklahoma A. and M. Altogether there were five teams entered by Oklahoma colleges and universities, Oklahoma University finishing second in team points for this year. Each of the colleges and universities entered full teams and managed to carry off honors in five out of eight divisions. Teams from colleges and universities all over the middle-west, among which appeared Indiana and Illinois, Iowa State, and others, were entered in the meet. The interesting fact is that the East managed to carry off little or no honors throughout the competition, and although Maryville did not advance beyond the second round the fact remains that the Highlander mat team is classed among the outstanding teams in the South, having lost only one match in the last five years and tied Vanderbilt several weeks ago for the state title.

The Scholar and The Behemoth

When brain and brawn get together, everybody wins. At least that is what happened some time ago when Dr. and Mrs. Hill Shine threw open their suburban chicken range and cabbage patch to the ravages of Coach Bob Thrower's Highlander grunters. The boys have not to this day quit marvelling at how sometimes in the course of a lifetime an English Literature professor will "come out of the corner and have the gang out for a heavy meal and a rousing good time."

But Dr. Shine had the biggest time of all, for he knew what they were thinking. And then we imagine that he grinned to himself several times too, for he could hardly help thinking of the days back in North Carolina when he used to coach all athletics at one of the high schools while working for his degree. And now to Coach Thrower's wrestlers Dr. Shine grows bigger and bigger.

Well, when brain and brawn get together, everybody wins.

Ridder Is Honored

Not only has Garry Ridder been proclaimed by Coach Thrower as the "best little wrestler of 'em all", but he was unanimously elected team captain in the bargain. Garry's courage soared to unequalled heights all during the feasting and ceremonies, but toward the close it took a sudden drop . . . he was asked to make a speech. It seems that none of the aggressiveness which colored his appearances on the mat was able to come to his aid, and so the evening passed.

Ping Pong Tournament Goes Into Third Round

The Y. M. C. A. interclass sport program is nearing its completion in these closing months of school. At present, competition is still strong in the ping-pong tournament which is now in its third round. The Y. Athletic Committee requests that all matches be played as soon as possible.

The next two events on the program will be the spring tennis tournament and the track meet. The dates of these events will be announced later. The program will close with these contests.

The victory of the juniors in the baseball tournament threw the race for the interclass cup into a three way tie, since the sophomores won the football crown and the fresh-

Golfers Engage U. T. Today At Holston Course

Team Will Get Its First Test This Afternoon In Match Play

Something new will come to the fore in Maryville sportdom this afternoon when the Scot golf team matches strokes with the University of Tennessee at Holston Hills Country Club in Knoxville. Play will begin at one o'clock.

As the sport page goes to press those who will represent the college have not been picked as yet, but it is rumored that Dick and Joe Battaglia, John Grebos, and Pete Kosloski probable winners in semi-final matches of the campus golf tourney now going on, are the marked men.

University teams in past years are reputed to be among the strongest teams in the South, but there still remains a large chance for the Scots, since several of the probable line-up are backed by some experience with long courses. The matches will be the regular 18-hole distance, match play.

Net Squad Guns For Bayou Team

Competitors Enter Second Round In Spring Tourney

With some twenty promising men coursing through the second round of spring tournament play the Scot net squad has begun earnest training in preparation for the opening meet April 12 with Mississippi State on the home courts.

Favorites to top the competition are Ed Scott, junior and holder of fall tournament honors for last year, Jonathan Gillingham, runner-up last year and team captain, and Quigley Bros. members of the squad last year.

A complete schedule has not yet been arranged, but meets with local colleges and universities have been arranged, together with a four-day trip through the South and West Tennessee. Among these are Mississippi State, University of Tennessee, University of the South at Sewanee, Tusculum, Emory and Henry and Teachers.

Coach Thrower Sees Good Year For Thinclads

Time Trials Unearth Many New Faces In Speed, Jump Events

In spite of the difficulties of rounding a forty-man squad into shape for the current track season, Coach Bob Thrower grins and says that the prospects have no dark clouds flying. The squad is showing some excellent support in nearly all of the departments this year.

In the time trials held Thursday and Friday of this week, the showing was indicative of a successful season. In the high hurdles, Dowell and Richardson took first and second place, respectively. In the mile run, Paul, Dmytriw, and Clews, in order; in the two mile run, Paul, Dmytriw, and Clews; in the half mile, Snedecker, Brown, and Lodwick placed; and in the quarter mile, Snedecker, Talmadge, and Ross.

In the 100 yard dash, Rich, Talmadge, and Savitski placed, and the same three placed alike in the 220 yard dash. In the low hurdles, the placement was Loessburg, Richardson, and Dowell.

In the field events, the shot was taken by Little, with a put of over 35 feet. Johnson threw the discus 102 feet for honors in that department, Loessberg, Steakley, and Hallam placed in the broad-jump, Loessberg's high being 21 feet 1-2 inch.

Steakley, Gray, and Toms placed in high jumping, with a high mark of 5 feet 6 inches. Lavendar and Johnson took first and second in the pole vault, with Lavendar's high being 11 feet.

Having yet plenty of time in which to better those marks, the Scot trackmen seem destined to attain their usual supremacy this spring. The new names on the list of Scot thinlies are numerous, though, and the ability of the new material on the field this year is not known.

If a man wears a suit of the U. of South Carolina he is considered a capitalist.

To Open Season Monday Against Hiwassee Nine

Game With Alcoa Today Ends Training Grind; Batteries Good

Coach Honaker's Highlander baseballers will move into fast company Wednesday afternoon when they meet Colonel Bob Allen's Knoxville Smokies, powerful Southern League nine, at Smithson Stadium in Knoxville.

Cllosing a gruelling four-week training period the locals will officially open the 1935 season here Monday against Hiwassee College, and this afternoon will meet Alcoa independents in a warm-up affair.

The locals have been showing up well in practice, in spite of poor baseball weather, and the tilt with Alcoa this afternoon should supply the final necessary preparations for Hiwassee and the Knoxville Southern Leaguers. Coach Honaker has assembled a well-balanced outfit that has hitting, pitching, and fielding strength in good proportions.

Although frequent changes will be made in the line-ups for the first few games, the present starting infield will find Jim Holloway, veteran, of two years ago, playing first base, Don Cross, who also lettered two years ago, or Mark Andrews on second, John Henry at short stop, and Toots Blazer on third base.

The outfield will be composed of Wilbur Loessberg, Walter Coker, and Louis Kalman, all lettermen, with the pitchers also in line for duty when not in the box. Dick Corns will do the major part of the work behind the plate, with Glen Evers, freshman, doing most of the relief work.

The pitching staff will be well taken care of, with the return of Ralph Hand and "Butter" Atchison, and the coming of two good freshman prospects, Carl Evers and Ralph Ashby. If necessary, Holloway can take a regular turn in the box, and Collins, another freshman, will be ready to step in if the others falter. All of these pitchers will probably hurl one or two innings against Alcoa.

The battery attack will be centered around Loessberg, Holloway, Corns, and Blazer, with several good hitters to back up this quartet of sluggers. Loessberg led the team last season with a hefty .359 stick average, while Corns was second with an even .300 mark. Holloway was a leading hitter two years ago and Blazer did considerable damage to the oppositions with his long range swats last season.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Doc Lloyd confessed in chapel the other morning that he was getting old and feeble, and that he couldn't do the 440 from Wil-
SIS ard Memorial to Chapel as fast he used to. We have got to admit that he's conscientious for the same night he went out training. Yes, siree, he trained. So far so good, but how he trained! He trotted over to the Alumni Gym at 8:30 and joined the "M" club for the evening. That might still be all right, BUT they played INDOOR baseball. Yes, he must be getting feebler.

:—:—:

Our school treasurer, F. L. Proffitt, is a real business man. Maryville owes a lot to him. No sooner had the Tennessee leg-
GOLD islature decided to tax school property than he commenced gold-mining operations under his window. All they've found so far has been a whole. Anyway they could move it over to the golf course and use it for another hazard.

:—:—:

The electrician Mr. Robert Howard Toms, was over in Baldwin. Like the chivalrous gentleman he is he sung out "Man in MAN the hall" as he climbed the stairs. A head stuck itself out a door and from it (the head) issued, "I doubt it".

:—:—:

Not only do the students go to sleep in Dr. Rogers' classes. Proof: the class was redaing in turn from the Bible. Dr. R. "Miss SNOOZE Bell, where did you stop reading?" Miss Bell, "I haven't started yet."

:—:—:

College students and Spring is the subject for lots of cracks. But, honestly we'd have NOW, liked to have seen Cecelia Conover trundle
KIDDIES Louis Krainock across the campus on the crossbar of the Hyde bicycle. Cec on the saddle and Lou on the bar. Both on the spot. Line for Kiddie Kars and scooters forms on the right.

:—:—:

It is not true that Mose Gamble was runner-up in the Junior class election for May Queen attendant.
He is being reserved
LIE for May Queen for next year. And while on the subject: 'agonna be good this year. Three attendants elected but nary a queen! "Button, Button, who's got the queen?"

:—:—:

Everybody should take sociology 202. With every chapter there are written assignments. One this week was to evaluate Mar-
BIBLE tin Luther's contribution to equality, Miss Cramer got interested in that, very interested. She got a Bible in the library and then inquired of one of the seniors who should know, "Whereabouts does it tell about Martin Luther?"

:—:—:

We should have a column of "Boners"—and one for "Freshman Boners". In the library, where bigger and better mistakes
VOLUME? are made daily. A call slip was turned in last week by a young lady who filled in the blank calling for "Volume or Year" with the word FRESHMAN. A most thorough young lady, indeed!

:—:—:

The Registrar's Office has been sending letters to some high school seniors, enclosing with each of them one of our time-honor-
STICKERS ed (and probably time worn) Maryville stickers. In her reply the most courteous prospective college freshman enclosed a sticker from her high school! We should begin a collection.

lovely poem in a very dignified and convincing manner.

The second short play was the humorous and fantastic play, "The Weathervane Elopes". Dighty, a most realistic statue, and Jackie, a more robust statue in a sailor suit, gave to the short play spontaneity and humor. It is nedless to say, Mary Gladys and Leone Anne captivated the honors of the evening. No one could have been more whimsical or thoroughly delightful than Mary Gladys.

The sentimental gardener and the persistent Miss Greensleeves added to the imaginative nature of the play.

"In a Garden", a pantomime and dance, by Schurter was given by Roberta Howie and Edwina Lowe, who were delightfully quaint and charming.

Louise Reichelderfer concluded the enjoyable recital by reciting a short poem, "The Garden" by Thomas Edward Brown.

Lois Brown, stage manager, and her committee, Sylvia Ammons and Charles Allen, deserve mention for the splendid setting, costuming, and make-up of the entire performance.

organizations.

Each January the American Commission on Interchange of Preachers and Speakers selects ten or twelve men, picked from several denominations, from the list of several hundred. These representatives' credentials are sent to a similar organization in London, the British Council on Interchange, which after accepting the credentials, handles the arrangement of speaking engagements for the American speakers. The British Council also sends to America each summer five British speakers, who are taken care of in like manner by the American Commission.

The Maryville party plans to sail for Great Britain about June 15, and to return about August 20. President Lloyd intends to take his car with him for convenience in travelling both in Great Britain and on the Continent. Although the schedule is not entirely definiate yet, the party plans to spend about five weeks in Great Britain, while President Lloyd fulfills engagements in England, Scotland, and other countries. The rest of the time will be used in touring some of the countries on he Continent.

But my little clock will save the day. He does not know what time is, but he ticks on and on. Two o'clock arrives. Then, because of the laws of logical sequence, three arrives an hour later. The raucous alarm startles me into activity. From force of habit I rise to dress for breakfast, chapel, classes, lunch, classes again, and a formal dinner. Then it dawns on me that it is only three o'clock, so I set the clock for six, contemplating joyfully the prospect of three hours more. Morpheus triumphs till six, and again my little timepiece manfully routs the shades. But agan, I repeat the process and go back to sleep. I never rse at six. When seven arrives, I awake thoroughly. I do not belong to that class of somnolent philosophers who are forced to readjust every neurone and nerve fiber. I spend, in short, all my waking hours in preparing for those which I must spend unawake. Sleep is not a recurrent necessity, but a nightly occurring epoch that must be approached with artistry and finesse.

At the Tennessee Polytechnic Institute fifty feet of adding machine paper was used in finding which student group had the highest scholastic average for the Fall quarter. The average for the entire student body was less than 74.3 pec rent. The average for those on the football team was about 66 per cent. Thehighest averagewas made by those students who didn't live on the campus. Wish we had the adding machine paper to add up some of the standard means in Dr. Fields' class.

The Tiger, a paper issued by Clemson college, reports a speech given by the chief of the pharmacy faculty at the University of Madrid in which he said that diamonds may be made synthetically in large quantities for commercial use in the near future, and also that the modren day chemist is arriving at knowledge of transmutation of substances. Some of the people who wrote what they did in Mr. Griffitts' last Chemistry test about Alchemy may be right yet.

On Sunday morning, March 17th Dr Lloyd visited Western College for women in Oxford, Ohio and addressed the chapel services.

From Ohio Dr. Lloyd went to Chicago, where he saw eight of Maryville's graduates at the Presbyterian Theological Siminary, and from there he went to the University of Illinois at Urbana. He returned to Maryville's Campus on Thursday morning.

EDITORIAL

Let us suppose it is the middle of May. Activities of the college year are drawing to a close and you are making plans for the summer. At the same time there is a sort of feverish-pseudo-excitement abroad on the campus, for the new Chilhowean, which for the past two months has gathered a large accretion of anticipation, is finally on sale.

This fact is widely and persuasively spread over the campus and as a result of this Mr. Average Student now gleefully empties his penny bank and strikes out for Thaw Hall. He carries two dollars and a half with him, which is "all the Chilhowean is costing him this year". He deposits this capital on the table with gusto and straightway receives his book, though which he turns rapidly until he reaches the page which returns the stare. At this point a queer trick of human nature which he is not wont to analyze suddenly brings him to the blurred realization that the fun is over, the excitement gone, and so he adds another volume to the family archives of literature.

But Mr. Average Student doesn't let this worry him long, for he rationalizes the experience by saying that it cost him only two dollars and a half. And so he goes on, year after year, paying his "two dollars and a half" until at the end of his senior year with a minimum of introspection he discovers that after all nearly thirty-five dollars have slipped out into the general funds of the yearbook. If we analyze this introspection we are sure to find the facts which follow.

According to the present system Mr. Average Student bears the brunt of a shamefully

FACULTY PLAN NEW TYPE OF EXAM SYSTEM

Comprehensive System Covering Major and Related Courses Begins in Spring

In the 1935-36 issue of the Maryville College Catalog, the Faculty makes an anouncement of great importance to the students in general, and particularly to those who are freshmen or sophomores this year. This announcement contains information that in the spring of 1937 the College considers installing a new system of comprehensive examinations, to be used either in all or designated departments. According to the plans, students majoring in these departments must pass the examinations before securing their degrees. The examinations, which will be given about the first of May, will probably be of several hours' duration, and will include both oral and written forms. It is planned that these comprehensive examinations will cover not only the student's major, but also subjects related to his major.

This type of examination has been used before in connection with Honors Work.

FRED HOPE FUND SWELLED TO FOUR HUNDRED DOLLARS

The total amount paid in on the Fred Hope Fund pledges to date is $483.10. The last payment was due on March 12.

$300 was sent to Dr. Hope on December 27, and it is very desirable that the balance of the fund be sent to him as early as possible, before he close of the school year.

Miss Nina Gamble Is Popular Selection For Queen of May

Annual Pageant Will Depict Many Departments And Traditions of the College

Miss Nina Gamble, popular senior and resident of Maryville, will don the traditional regal robes as Queen of May at the annual festival to be held in the college amphitheatre on May 1. Miss Gamble was elected by a large majority at a class meeting Wednesday morning.

Nina's presence on College Hill has been characterized by numerous participations in the social activities of the college. A member of Theta Alpha Phi and a graduate in Expression she has won fame as an actress and interpreter of difficult roles, and her friendliness and kindness to everyone is felt and appreciated by all who have known her. She is a member of Theta Epsilon Society.

Plans for the annual May Day festival indicate that it will be more elaborate than ever before in the history of the pageant. The many improvements and beautifications to the college wood effected during the past year by Mrs. Walker have assured designers of the program an ideal setting.

The theme for the pageant will be "Maryville College", in which many of the departments of the college and many of its sacred traditions will be reviewed. As sponsors of the celebration the Y.W.C.A. has rested the work of assemblage in the hands of Leone Anne Brown and Elizabeth Kunkel, who will be assisted by Mrs. West and her pageantry class, Mrs. Queener, Miss Henry,

Printers Rush Work On 1935 Chilhowean

New Book Is Modern In Design, Progressive in Spirit

"We are pushing the work on your book" says a recent letter from the printers of the 1935 CHILHOWEAN. Every one of the photographs and every bit of the manuscript copy has been in the hands of the publishers for a considerable time. The book should be distributed to the subscribers within a few weeks.

The 1935 CHILHOWEAN is modernistic is design and progressive in spirit. Distinctive features of the annual be the enlarged feature section and the unusual view section. The photographic work is especially noteworthy, particularly that of the group pictures which have been taken in such a way as to give impressions of the entire campus, including the college wood.

At this advanced stage in the production of the annual the only difficulty appearing is that of meeting financial obligations when due. Without a greater and more definite support by those in debt to the CHILHOWEAN it will be impossible to have the books on the campus until near the end of school. The staff asks for the prompt payment by classes and organizations of their CHILHOWEAN bills so that, in turn, the accumulating charges against the annual may be met, and the book delivered on time.

Shots At Golf

Editor's Note— Although not a member of the Echo Staff Miss Chittick has made some rather interesting and accurate observations of the way in which this "old man's game" is exploited on College Hill. Feeling sure that there is pertinent thought for everyone in what she has to say we give you the privilege of following her through this brief enlightenment.

By M. L. CHITTICK
(Echo Special Writer)

Regardless of the number of golf tournaments held hither and thither and the space given it in the national dailies, the golf course seems to have reached its highest peak of popularity right here on our own campus.

Consider with me any warm spring day (except Saturday or Sunday). It is about one o'clock and we are looking out from Baldwin. What we see is not golf as we learned it, bnt a new, obviously highly technical game. Upon closer examination we find that there seem to be two principal modifications of this game which we poor stupid folk thought was played always with club and ball.

At this moment (it is right after lunch) the most popular form of "golf" seems to be the one played more or less close to mother nature. The first requisite is the ability to sprawl gracefully on the green and to dismiss, with a flick of the fourth finger, any inquisitive ant who thinks seriously of nesting in the eyebrow. To be really skilful, one must be adept at tickling one's partner under the chin with any convenient blade of grass. Of course, as with every other thing in the world, this form of golf has its own peculiar advantages and disadvantages. The most outstanding of the latter is the likeliness of rising from the communion with nature well covered with grass stain; but, after all, we must be prepared to make sacrifices.

The second type is not quite so interesting as the first and involves a little less effort. In order to qualify for this golf, one must be a master at playing hands and looking long and deep into one's partner's eyes. This last, of course, without blinking the lashes, for that ruins the effect. This is very important and compares with the follow-through in golf the way they play it back in the sticks where I came from. This seecond type may be played either sitting on a bench or walking slowly up green and down green. It has a distinct advantage over the first in that it never covers the player with sticks and bots of grass, which may prove to be embarrassing later. And we must always think of these things.

Playing either way, there is constant need to consider ways and means of avoiding balls in case some silly, uninformed person happens to be playing the game that way.

Oh, yes, golfing is great sport. You must try it sometime!

McAfee Will Speak At Presbyterian Sunday

Foreign Mission Authority Will Speak at Y. M., Vespers

Dr. Cleland B. McAfee, General Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, is in Maryville for the week-end and will address several college gatherings.

Dr. McAfee spoke at the men's banquet at the New Providence Presbyterian Church Friday night, and this morning in chapel. Sunday morning he will deliver the sermon at the New Providence Church, in the afternoon he will address a joint meeting of the Student Volunteers and the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A., and will lead the college Vespers service in the evening. The joint afternoon meeting will be held in Bartlett Hall.

One of the most prominent and able of churchmen, Dr. McAfee went into his present work at the urgent request of the Presbyterian Church. His interest and knowledge of foreign missions has made him an authority on the subject, and he has written a number of books in the field of religion and missions.

Before accepting his present position, Dr. McAfee was for 18 years professor of Systematic Theology at the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Chicago, and among his students was our own Dr. Lloyd. Previous to that Dr. McAfee held several important pastorates in New unorganized, unsound, and unprofitable year-book business basis. At the end of the four year course he has stood the following expense:

Class Dues --------	$15.00
Club Taxes -------	5.00
Book Costs --------/	10.00
Pictures ----------	3.50
Total ----------	$33.50

Subtract the amounts paid for annuals and pictures and we still find a financial burden in spite of the fact that he may not have his picture published nor buy an annual. But these dues and assessments are necessary, for without them the yearbook can not begin to exist.

Another phase of the present system which we think is very unfair is that which requires the senior to pay twelve dollars for his annual and picture while the freshman pays only five dollars. The latter argues that the former gets more, which is true, but hardly to the extent of seven dollars. The senior argues that the freshman has more money. This is both true and logical.

The system with which we would replace the present one is socialistic but practical and profitable to all. It is at once just, sound, and economical. Let us examine it.

The proposed system operates according to the following issues:

(1) A class assessment which is the same for freshman and senior alike.

(2) A special fee to be called club assessment, which is the same, regardless of class distinction.

(3) A regulation calling for the purchase of a yearbook by every student of the college, families excepted for more than one copy.

(4) Summation of these three fees into a single one to be called publications fee, which is to be collected through the treasurer's office.

One of the fundamental economic laws is that a higher rate of production makes for a lower trend in cost. According, to this then, it is possible to produce eight hundred books more cheaply than the four hundred which are now being produced, and in some manner or other sold.

Roughly the total production cost for the Chilhowean under the present plan is twenty-five hundred dollars, which cost for the most part is borne by four hundred students. An increase of four hundred copies in production would, roughly, raise the expense to forty-five hundred dollars, four thousand of which are borne equally by eight hundred sutdents at an individual assessment of five dollars per year. The additional expense would be erased by college payments for the athletic section and sale of advertising It is even possible under this plan to do away with advertising altogether in the Chilhowean, and thus at once put the Highland Echo on a better financial basis.

And so it can readily be seen that this proposed system is sounder financially and more just than the present one, for it brings the publication to every student at an equal cost to every student; it makes for a lower cost of producion and consequently a total cost of twenty dolllars per four years to Mr. Average Student instead of the thirty-five dollars which he is charged now; and finally, it provides Mr. Manager and Mr. Editor of said book with ACTUAL WORKING CAPITAL instead of the usual flimsy and irksome contract which lies wrinkled and mute in the manager's desk drawer.

Shades of happiness! This is the dream of every manager and editor.

—Bryan Payne

HUGH CRAWFORD, JR.

Maryvillian, and one who has contributed much to life on the Hill. First, there's the honor roll. Five times has this estimable name appeared on the rolls of the intelligensia (sp.), and we have all expectations that on his diploma will appear the hard-earned words, Cum Laude.

Hugh has been active in YMCA work, serving as vice-president in 1934-5, and taking part in the majority of their functions. He has been vice-president of the Athenian society, and has held other offices in this organization.

In 1933-4 Hugh was president of his class, and rendered service of great value in the organization and activities of the Class of '35. He has served on the Highlad Echo staff, too, which is another evidence of his vesatility and capability.

The name Crawford connotes to Maryvillians distinctive service, quiet dignity, and ready amiability. And Hugh is no exception to this rule. He has made a place for himself, and for his name, in the hearts of all those connected with the College.

Pitchers Star As Highlanders Cap Hiwassee Game

Four Scot Tossers Hold Foe To Single Safety; Cross And Holloway Slug

The Highlanders opened the season on Tuesday afternoon with an easy 5-0 victory over Hiwassee on the local diamond, as four Scot hurlers set the visitors down with only one safe blow, while Maryville collected seven hits and played errorless ball afield.

Ralph Hand, sophomore left-hander, opned the game in the pitchers box for Maryville, and struck out eight batters during the five innings he was on the mound. Only one man, a hit batsman, reached first base, and a double play, Cross to Henry to Holloway, promptly cleared the sacks.

After four scoreless innings, the Scots tallied once in the fifth, as Carl Evers, replacing Hand, cracked a triple over right field on his first appearance at bat and scored on a single by Don Cross, second sacker.

The first batter to face Evers in the sixth frame singled, but an outfield fly, followed by another double play, Evers to Cross to Holloway, retired the other side. Three batters were retired in a row in the seventh Ralph Ashby and Collins, two other newcomers, pitched the last two innings in fine style, each striking out two of the three batters pitched to and keeping the bases empty.

The Highlanders scored twice in the seventh frame on a double by Holloway, a sacrific by Henry, a single by Swearingen, and two Hiwassee errors. In the eighth, Holloway's three-bagger, an error, and a single by Mark Andrews drove two more runs across.

Holloway, with his double and triple, and Cross with two singles, led the Scots at bat. Carl Evers, Swearingen, and Mark Andrews made one safety apiece.

The starting Maryville line-up was as follows: Cross, 2B; Coker, L.F.; Blazer, 3B; Loessberg, R.F.; Corns, C.; Holloway 1B; Henry SS; Kalman, CF.; Hand, P.

Spring Football Workouts Close

Boretsky Uncovers Several Promising Gridders

A successful football Spring training period was brought to a close last week after a month of practice. Steve Boretsky, who was in charge of the work-outs, was well pleased with the results of the training, and discovered several promising gridders for next season's play.

Probably the most valuable "find" was Ross, a hard driving freshman back who did not go out for football last fall. This youngster has a good chance to see a large amount of service next fall with the aid of a little more tutoring and experience. Several other new men also showed up well, and need only a bit of competition to become good performers.

Among the old men, Louis Marinaro, Bruce Alexander, Albert Hulette, Stanley Hall, and the others continued the good work of the regular season. Hulette, who came into his own only toward the close of last season, has shown up particularly well with his long punting.

Since the close of spring football, Steve Boretsky has been assisting Coach Honaker with baseball and Coach Thrower with track, dividing his time about equally between the two.

The SPORTS EDITOR

By DICK MEADOWS

When Indiana University takes the field against the Highlanders next Thursday and Friday, local baseball fans will hvae the opportunity to see one of the best collegiate outfits in the country in action. The Hoosiers have carried off Big Ten championships for three years in succession, and have shown no signs of relinquishing their hold on the leadership. Coach Everette Dean, who, by the way, is recognized alslo as one of the best basketball coaches in the conference, annually develop an almost unbeatable team, and many of his players enter the major leagues with very little minor league tutoring. His latest contribution to the majors was a left-handed pitcher, Wilshere, who went directly from Indiana to the Philadelphia Athletics at the close of the college season last June. Two members of the team which oppose the Highlanders, Himmelstine, shortstops, and Cox, outfielder, are expected by Indiana supporters to go to the majors soon after graduation, while three others, Kehrt, pitcher, Wilson, catcher, and Farrer, first baseman, will bear watching.

Jimmy Rich Makes A Story Book Finish

If all of Coach Bob Thrower's cinder pounders put up the kind of drive for the finish line which was made by one of the dash men in the time trials last week, the Orange and Garnet should break Tennessee's domination of East Tennessee track cicles today in Knoxville. Not for a long, long time have local track followers witnessed a race so close as that which took place between Jimmy Rich, Roy Talmage, and "Ziggy" Savitsky last week in the 220-yard dash. Talmage took the lead at the gun and set the pace all the way around, with Rich hanging close to his heels and Savitsky a few paces behind. Talmage held gamely to his scant lead down the home stretch, but with the tape only a step away, Rich hurled himself forward and fell across the lne a split second ahead. That's the kind of fight that wins meets.

Good Pitching Is Backed By Good Fielding and Hitting

Even though th pitchers gave the infielders and outfielders very little chance to shine, the infield took advantage of th one Hiwassee hit and a hit batsman to execute two double plays, thereby holding the total number of batters to twenty-seven, or exactly three each inning. Not a bobble was committed during the whole affair, and the substitutions reached the total of seven. The combination of Holloway, Cross, Henry, and Blazer in the infield appears air-tight, with Mark Andrews capabable of filling in at second, third, or short stop about as well as the others. The batting attack has yet to attain its full power, but Cross and Holloway showed that they are ready to pester opposing moundsmen by collecting a pair of safeties each, while Walter Coker let it be known that he is ready to be pestered. Up to his old tricks again, Coker forgot to dodge twice in four trips to the plate and took his base forgetting hit by a pitched ball.

Hoosiers May Get A Surprise

If the Hoosiers come to Maryville with the idea that the Highlanders will be push-overs, however, someone is in for a big surprise. It may be the writer, but more than likely it will be Indiana who gets the greatest shock, fo Coach Honaker's outfit has strength in every department, with no outstanding weakness in any. Although rain has kept the locals idle most of the week, the Hiwassee game was enough to give a sample of what will follow when the big games stat. The prize performances in this contest, of course, went to the four pitchers, Ralph Hand, Carl Evers, Ralph Ashby, and Collins, who yielded only one hit in the full nine innings. Hand struck out eight batters during his five innings of work, while Ashby and Collins each whiffed two of the three men to face them. Now the pitchers want to know who will have gotten credit for a perfect game if Hiwassee had failed to get a hit!

Indiana To Bring 'Big Ten' Champs Here Next Week

Hoosiers Have Won Title Last Three Years; Play Scots Thursday, Friday

The biggest attraction of the 1935 Maryville baseball season, a two-game series with Indiana University, champions of the Big Ten Conference the past three years, is slated for Thursday and Friday of next week on the local diamond.

The series with the Highlanders will be the first of the season for the Indiana outfit, but the squad is reported in excellent condition after two months of training in its steam heated practice barn, and will pit a powerful combination against the local sluggers.

Unless bad weather cuts short the work-outs next week, the Scots also should be in top shape for the series. Final preparations for the northern invaders will be made in a return game with Hiwassee Tuesday afternoon on the Hiwassee field.

After meeting the Highlanders, Indiana will engage several other Southern outfits before hitting the road north for the conference season.

The game scheduled for this week between the Highlanders and the Knoxville Smokies was rained out three times. Originally scheduled for Wednesday, the contest was postponed until Thursday, but another rain caused postponement until Friday, only to have more rain wash away the last opportunity for the two outfits to tangle. The Southern Leaguers have the remainder of the exhibition dates filled.

English Student Gives Lesson In Table Etiquette

How To Eat Spaghetti Through A Soda Straw Is Theme of Instruction

By EDWIN J. BEST
(Echo Special Writer)

The conventional way to eat spaghetti is to wrestle with the slippery substance; chase it around your plate a few times and spear your thumb with a fork, and in the end to dine on crackers and milk.

As the title indicates society is maknig progress, but as it is, the title is misleading. The appellation would indicate that the stalk of a cereal plant should be used in the operation, but this is erroneous. Here the word straw illustrates that type of semantic change which comes about because a common similarity of objects has caused a fixedness of relation in the designation applied to the objects. The straw here referred to is of paper, but it has a marked resemblance to the vegetable product through which cider and other beverages of like nature were once inhaled.

The pseudo-straw should be taken in the right or left hand or visa versa. With the unencumbered hand seize quickly on the stray end of a piece of spagetti and insert this potion of the captured viand into the straw. Then exhaust the straw of air by a gentle suction with the mouth. The once elusive length of dignified dough will now slip without hesitation up the straw.

The above operation is to be repeated with each separate section of spagetti.

The consumer will find that small bits of cheese and other foreign substances tend to clog the straw. A sharp exhalation of the breath will expel such impediments. As such obstacles are encountered they should be discreetly blown into the fingerbowl or at those eating at the next table.

Those who wish to economize will find that the same straw may be used indefinitely if, after each dish

JUNIOR-SENIOR GIRLS WIN BASEBALL TOURNEY

Each team played two games during the meet, with the high total score being awarded the championship.

Coach Thrower Looks For Hard Battle With Vols

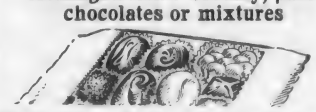
Highlanders Place Hopes On New Men To Back Up Veteran Runners

The annual Maryville-Tennessee track duel is being waged this afternoon on the University cinder path in Knoxville. The first event was slated to begin at 2:00 p. m.

Although the Volunteers are favorites to take the measure of the Scots, the squad Coach Bob Thrower has organized is expected to push the U. T. trackmen to the limit in the first meet of the season for both teams.

Coach Thrower carried an outfit to Knoxville about equally divided between lettermen and newcomers. The lettermen are chiefly veterans who can be counted on for several first places, and the Scot hopes rest to a large extent on the ability of the untried material to come through under fire.

Tennessee has another strong team in the making this season, led by Harry Anderson, who is the biggest threat in the dashes, anchor man in the relay team, and one of the best high and broad jumpers. The Vols also have good material in the distance runs, the javelin throw, the pole vault, and the weights.



The starters for Maryville will be as follows:

100-yard dash—Rich, Savitsky
220-yard dash—Rich, Savitsky
440-yard dash—Snedeker, Talmage, and Ross or Sparr
Half-Mile run—Snedeker, R. Brown, R. Lodwick
Mile run—Paul, Dmytriw, Clews
Two-mile run—Paul, Dmytriw, Clews
Low hurdles—Richardson, Hallam, Dowell
High hurdles—Richardson, Kleemeier, Dowell
Broad jump—Loessberg, Steakley, Gray
Pole Vault—Lavendar, Johnson
High Jump—Toms, Steakley, Gray
Discus Throw—Johnson, Little Shot Put—Little, Johnson
Javelin—Lehr, Millsaps
Mile relay—(undecided)

Either the class of '36 is absolutely extraordinary or else . . . . . Twenty-three "superior" students! Practcally 25 percent HONOR of those who will graduate in 1936! We are referring to the Honors Work candidates for next year. The cynic says they're out for the Honor, but certainly not for the Work. Soon the student who will be honored will be the one who resists the social pressure and declines to do "Honors" Work.

Pieper is the latest to be bitten by the philosophy bug. His system explains away the existence of evil in the world. Girls, you BEWARE better be careful. If he asks you, "What's the difference between right and wrong", don't tell him that you don't know. He might ask you for a date.

Our President of the Student Council has been spending some time recovering from an appendicitis operation (our symARMY pathy). The authorities at the hospital couldn't decide one day week before last whether they were to be raided, or if it was just another war. Down the road, two by two, marched six husky loyal pals of said President—and it was no small army. The football letters of Gamble, Atchison, and Pieper just made them look bigger (and Magee—).

P. S. Since the above lesson has been prepared for the press the writer has by experimentation found that most species of sphagetti refuse to be coaxed up a straw. But a way which was found to be successful is as follows:

Sprinkle one tumblerful of sand on each quart of spagetti to be eaten. Then don canvas gloves and eat the non-skid spagetti with the fingers. Those whose nerves will not permit the grating sound produced in chewing the sand will perhaps eliminate spagetti from the menu and resort to soup instead. E. A. Robinson Dies After Operation

Famous Modern Poet Succumbs In New York In Midst Of Busy Career

Widely recognized as the foremost modern American poet, Edwin Arlington Robinson died April 6th in a New York hospital where he had recently undergone an operation. Though he was 65 at the time of his death he was still engaged in writing. His most recent book, "Amaranth", came out last year. With the death of Anny Lowell, Vachel Lindsay, and now Robinson the number of first rank American poets has been sadly reduced.

Among the best received of Robinson's poems has been the trio of Arthurian poems in which he proved himself to be as skillful with blank verse as he had been with the sonnet in his early volumes. His great achievement in these particular poems was the mastery with which he selected high moments in the lives of the characters and made them speak revealingly of themselves. Nor is Robinson's treatment lacking in the lyric beauty which Tennyson had displayed in his "Idylls of the King."

A number of short poems are well known for the beauty of language merely or often for their unexpectedness and packed suggestive character description. Robinson is capable, on the other hand, of gradually unfolding a character through a long poem with a humorous and ironical touch. "Captain Craig" is a delightful example of this quality. Other longer poems bearing the distinctive stamp of Robinson are "Ben Jonson Entertains a Man from Stratford" with its discernment of the character of the mysterious Shakespeare, "Isaac and Archibald" reminiscent of Robinson's own Maine boyhood, "The Man Against the Sky" which rewards repeated reading increasingly, and others.

Throughout his writing Robinson maintained a personal manner of expression that was often circumlocutory and obscure, but again beautifully precise and flavored with a dry humor.

Because he possessed these many gifts of a poet, we are grateful that Robinson's poetry remains to us, as living and stimulating as before.

National Festival Of Folk Culture

Tennessee Folk Lore Society Will Participate

Plans for the National Folk Festival to be held in Chattanooga, May 14-18, drawing as they have nation wide attention, are of particular interest to Tennesseans, who live in a section where there is a wealth of folk arts.

Cooperating with officials of the National Folk Festival is the recently organized Tennessee Folklore society which is served by leading state educators as officers and which has already inaugurated program of collecting and preserving ballads, customs, and folk lore of other sorts in the state. Dr. Edwin R. Hunter is an officer in this organization.

A preliminary festival under the auspices of the state society is to be held at Crossville in April to select the best contributions of folk expressions for use at the national festival in Chattanooga.

Further information is available at the Dean's office for anyone desiring to make contributions to the preliminary festival.

Senior Committee Selects Sheridan's "School for Scandal"

Casting To Begin Soon For Annual Senior Play

"School for Scandal" by Richard Sheridan has been chosen by the class play committee as the play to be presented by members of the Senior Class an Friday night, May 31. Sheridan's play has been chosen in preference to a more modern one because it has been requested that the Senior class present a play which will be of value culturally as well as just amusing.

"School for Scandal", considered Sheridan's best play, has its setting in eighteenth century England. The theme of the play is a satirical observation of the surface life of the eighteenth century social world.

Casting for the play will begin soon, and all Seniors will have an opportunity to try out.

Debate Squad At Pkd Convention

Expect To Climax Successful Season With Pi Kappa Delta Victory

By tonight reports will be coming in from Franklin, Indiana, where Maryville is making a bid for forensic honors at the Provincial Convention of Pi Kappa Delta. The Maryville entrants left at four o'clock Friday morning. They were met at Franklin by Professor Verton M. Queener, who is Provincial Governor for the Province of Kentucky.

Maryville has entrants in debate, oration, after-dinner speaking, and extempore speaking. The orators are Grace Proffitt and Archibald Pieper. The extempore speakers are Grace Proffitt and Earle Crawford. Earle Crawford will also participate in after-dinner speaking.

In debate the affirmative teams will consist of Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn, and Archibald Pieper and Paul Hartman. The negative teams will consist of Mary Gladys Brown and Roberta Howie, and Jimmie Smith and Earle Crawford.

During the past season Maryville debaters have engaged in 57 debates and lost only ten. For the Provincial Convention, Pieper says: "We are optimistic."

Last week Maryville debaters took first honors at the Tennessee State Convention, which was held at Vanderbilt University at Nashville on Friday and Saturday. A silver loving cup, which is at present in the library, was presented to the winners. Maryville won by obtaining the decision in fourteen debates and losing it in only two. The lost debates were divided between the two teams.

The affirmative team consisted of Florence Hyde and Maria Wynn, and the negative team of Jimmie Smith and Earle Crawford. Walter West orated and Earle Crawford presented an after-dinner speech. Dr. Hunter accompanied the team.

Earlier this season, Maryville debaters took first honors in the South Atlantic Region Forensic Convention at Hickory, North Carolina.

Dr. Floyd W. Reeves Addresses Faculty At Monthly Dinner

National Educator Advocates Elimination of Grades And Attendance Requirements. Endorses Adult Education

Dr. Floyd W. Reeves, Director of Personnel for the Tennessee Valley Authority, discussed "Trends in Higher Education" before a large number of the faculty at the regular monthly meeting of the faculty club last Monday evening in the Home Economics Rooms.

Some of the modern trends in higher education discussed by Dr. Reeves are, an increasing number of survey courses in various fields, a reduction of departments with combination under one head, the elimination of grades, hour credits, and compulsory attendance, with the development of a more creative and individual method of study, and the division of junior and senior colleges.

A large part of the speech was concerned with the development of adult education, through the use of forums conducted in high schools and colleges. Possibly the Federal government will make money available for such a program next year. Dr. Reeves also stressed in connection with adult education the possibilities of an improved and expanded radio educational system.

Dr. Reeves has completed some valuable research in the educational field and has written several books. Since June 1933 he has been on leave of absence from the University of Chicago, and is acting as director of Personnel for the T. V. A. in Knoxville, controlling directly employment and the general welfare of the employees.

A "HOME EC" REMARKS

In the course of our four years on the Hill, we have heard skeenteen times, "Oh, you're majoring in Home Ec?" This is said in a superior, pitying tone, implying that anybody can take Home Ec. We can take it, but really, we feel sorry for you who feel sorry for us. You are misinformed, Home Ec isn't a cinch. You forget that our curriculum includes those chemistry courses which are not "parlor courses."

Being a Home Ec senior means ust one thing; the privilege of living in an apartment, the , Home Management House, for three weeks. Those weeks have several distinct pleasures. Consider first the advantages offered to moonshiners. The walk from the chapel is approximately twice as long as it is from chapel, to Pearsons. Then, there's the privacy that can't be found in the milling throng. Parlor dates in the apartment are more home-like than in the curtained-off stages of the Society halls. There's nothing like raiding a frigidaire to insure the success of a date.

We Home Ec majors must be versatile when we prepare our meals. We must become efficient in disguising the hash so that our husbands, if any, won't be any the wiser. English majors will probably serve the same old hash, and ruin their husbands' dispositions.

After our training and experience in giving formal dinners, teas, and buffet suppers, we have fairly good equipment for entering the diplomatic service. Formal dinners are usually served to members of the faculty. There is offered an excellent opportunity for working up a professor's opinion that may have been slipping a little.

Someone once said "The world little dreams what wonders are wrought with food." We have found that any professor, however unapproachable in the class room, soon relaxes when s ubjected to the soothing, savory and candle-lit atmosphere of the dining-room.

I could continue expounding the advantages of our chosen profession but let me just say, we do not appreciate expressions of superiority and sympathy. We are doing what we want to do, and what is more, we like it.

Students at Manchester College decided to get even with the local cops who prevented a theatre rush with tear gas bombs. They set to work in the college chemical lab making their own bombs.

A card will now reach them at the college hospital.

During the past thirty years the church attendance at Washington and Lee University has shown a drop of 40 per cent.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

LOUIE KRAINOCK

From a Hungarian family settled in Westville, Illinois, comes one of our best known seniors, the Superior Scottie of this week's issue. The family name is Krajnyik but Louie took pity on our Anglicized tongues and changed it to Krainock, and he has made that name, Lewis Frank Krainock, one of the best known on the campus.

From the beginning of his college career he has been interested in athletics. He was a member of the wrestling squad in his freshman and sophomore years, and since his sophomore year he has been on the football squad. There is no need here to rehearse the outstanding service he did this past year as halfback on the Highlander team. This year, too, he served as secretary of the Athletic Board of Control.

Louie is also prominent in college literary circles. For two years he has been a member of the Writers' Workshop, and we will not soon forget "The Crippled Pigeon", the first play written by a student to be produced as a society midwinter.

His general popularity is indicated by the offices he has held. He has been president of the Spanish Club, vice-president of the YMCA, and president of Alpha Sigma. For three years he has been one of the Hi-Trailers among whom he is noted for humor, sociability, and depth of thought. . . invaluable elements in a "bull-session."

All these activities do not hinder his scholastic attainments. For three years his name has appeared on the Honor Roll, and at present he is completing a year's Honors Work in Philosophy.

Here indeed is a Superior Scottie, a leader in scholarship, athletics, and student activities.

Chemistry-Physics Club To Sponsor Popular Lecture

Dr. Buehler of the University of Tennessee will give an address next Tuesday night on the subject, "Leaders of Chemistry in America." The meeting is under the auspices of the Chemistry-Physics Club, but is open to all students and will be held in the Philosophy Classroom.

American Students in German universities, it is said, when forced to salute Hitler demonstraions, raise their hands and shout, "Heel Hitler!"

The shadow may be the price we pay for sunshine. Tears are the interest on the loan for a little while.

"Look as idiotic as you possibly can "if you want to be healty, says Dr. Gay B. Nash, of New York University physical education department.

There is no real sadness in this old world until you are called to face the dark vista of a long delayed hope.

The majority of the shivering spectators who braved weather disagreeable even for football to see the Maryville — Indiana encounter Thursday afternoon were unaware of the fact that they were witnessing something that has never before taken place in organized baseball. Nevertheless, as far as Coach Honaker, Coach Dean, of Indiana, and sports writers of this region know, Thursday afternoon was the first time two double squeeze plays were ever successfully carried out in one game, collegiate or professional. The double squeeze play, in which runners on second and third base take off when the ball leaves the pitcher's hand and both score when the bitter lays down a bunt for a sacrifice out, is seldom successful once, much less twice, in one tilt. The Highlanders pulled the trick first in the opening frame, when Wilbur Loessberg tapped a lazy roller down the first base line with John Henry and Holloway on second while Indiana came back in the eighth with the same play to establish a record for the double squeeze

* * * * * * *

If the Maryville-Indiana series is taken as a standard, the comparative merits of athletic teams in the various sections of the country, a subject which always furnishes a good question for argument in the winter stove leagues, has been settled for the time being with regard to the calibre of baseball played here at Maryville. The Indiana athletes praised the Highlander aggregation highly, saying the locals would be on about an equal basis with the Big Ten outfits. The two games with the University of Cincinnati next Thursday and Friday will serve as an additional comparison of intersectional teams in action, and the Scots should be in a better position to boost their standing after the experience gained this week.

* * * * * * *

Early season predictions that the Highlanders were to have another classy ball club this season may have been either good prognostications or just plain lucky guesses, but at any rate, the signs of power have steadily become more evident, and were in full view in the last three innings of the second Indiana tilt yesterday afternoon. Any team that makes eight hits and six runs in the last three innings, after being held at bay the first five, should have little to worry about once it reaches mid-season form. Coach Honaker is still juggling his line-up, and it is a safe bet that the one which is finally decided upon will be a smooth-working combination.

* * * * * * *

Although very little is being said now about basketball, the presence of Indiana's Coach Everett Dean on the campus came only a short while after the announcement of two important changes in the basketball rules, namely, the abolishment of the pivot play (Glen Roberts special) and the elimination of the jump ball following the completion of a free throw for a personal foul. Coach Dean is chairman of the National Research Committee which is investigating the advisability of abolishing the tip-off altogether, and thinks the latest rule change is merely a trial step toward complete elimination of the jump ball following a completed basket or a foul shot. Coach Dean also is in favor of abolishing the pivot play to decrease the several accompaniments of the system, such as contact and petty fouling, and is working to get a larger center ring to avoid crowding on the tip off while the present rule is in effect.

Spectacular Finish Gives Highlanders 6-5 Victory Over Indiana For Even Break In Series; Lose First Till, 9-7

Blazer's Single Drives Henry Across With Winning Tally to Break Up Game In Eighth After Two Are Out; Indiana Boasts Several Big-Ten Championships But Withers

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Writer)

Fighting to a sensational up-hill finish to score six runs in the last three innings, the Highlander diamondeers triumphed over Indiana University 6 to 5 yesterday afternoon on the local field to gain an even break in the two-game series.

For the first five innings Hosler, Indiana hurler, held the Scots to two hits, singles by Holloway and Corns, in the second frame, while his mates capitalized on Maryville errors for four runs and an apparently safe margin.

In the sixth round, however, the Scot artillery opened up and cut down the Indiana lead to one run. Odell, batting for Kalman, reached first base on an error, and Carl Evers, Loessberg, and Holloway delivered to send in three tallies.

The score was tied up in the seventh frame as Blazer singled, went to third base on a single by Glen Evers, and crossed the plate after an outfield fly by Odell. The next two batters failed to bring home the winning run from second base, however, and the game, originally slated for only seven innings, had to continue.

Indiana moved out in front again in the first half of the eighth as two singles brought in another marker and a 5-4 lead.

In the home half of the eighth, the Scots could no longer be denied, as Loessberg led off with a single to center, stole second base, and scored on a smash over second by Henry, with the latter advancing another base on the throw to the plate. The local hopes were beginning to sink as Hosler bore down on the next two batters, but "Toots" Blazer came through with the goods in a pinch and sent Henry across with the winning run with a single to right centerfield.

As a whole, the game was better played than the first contest, and the Scots deserved the victory. The few bad plays by the locals were fully offset in the late inning drive and the steadier defense.

Collins started in the box for Maryville and allowed only three hits during his five-inning stay on the mound. Hand began the sixth frame, but after a streak of wildness, the sophomore left-hander was replaced by Carl Evers, who yielded only three safe blows the rest of the way and started the Scot rally in the sixth inning by driving in the first run with a single to right field.

Loessberg, Holloway, and Blazer led the Scot attack with two safeties each, while Henry, Corns, and the Evers brothers each connected safely once.

The starting Maryville line-up: Cross, 2b; Loessberg, rf; Henry ss; Holloway, lf; Corns, 1b; Blazer, 3b; G. Evers, c; Kalman, cf; Collins, p.

Score by innings:

Indiana	200	011	01—5	6	1
Maryville	000	003	12—6	10	3

Pushing over three runs in a ninth inning rally to overcome a one-point Maryville lead, the Indiana baseballers topped the Highlanders 9 to 7 in the first contest of the two-game series Thursday afternoon on the local diamond.

The two teams displayed various types of play in a see-saw battle, with spots of heavy hitting, good pitching, and fast fielding showing up at irregular intervals with early season errors and lack of consistency.

In spite of the weak spots, however, the close fight kept the outcome uncertain throughout. Maryville started the scoring with a three-run cluster in the first frame on a single by Cross, an error, a single by Holloway, a grounder by Corns scoring Cross and advancing Henry and Holloway to third and second, and a sacrifice by Loessberg to score both runners on a speedy squeeze play.

After four scoreless innings, Indiana went to work and tallied four times on three hits and two errors in the fifth round, while Ad-

Scot Netmen Play Tusculum Today At 2:30

Squad Gives Power As Season Opens; Mississippi State Fails to Appear

Weather permitting, Coach Fischbach's Highlander netmen will get their first test of the season against a strong Tusculum squad this afternoon on the local courts. The first match will be called at 2:30.

Due to some misunderstanding in schedule Mississippi State College, scheduled to appear against the Scotties yesterday afternoon, failed to arrive for the meet. The afternoon was taken up with light workouts in preparation for today's encounter.

Another match in spring tournament play was completed yesterday when Gillingham, senior and team captain, defeated Rex Allen in three sets, 8-6, 1-6, 6-1. Gillingham's victory yesterday places him in the final playoff, where he will probably meet Scott next week.

With nearly three weeks of stiff workouts under their belts the netmen are rounding into promising form, and bid fair to develop power before the season is many meets old. Bulwarks in the singles division will be Scott, Gillingham, Allen, and Woodling, while young Gillingham, Foster, Morgan, and Quigley will probably figure in yet untried doubles combinations.

Cincinnati Tops Baseball Card For Next Week

Meets Scot Outfit Thursday and Friday; Carson-Newman Plays Here Saturday

As the headliner of a second outstanding baseball card in two weeks, Cincinnati University comes to Maryville for a two-game series with the Highlanders next Thursday and Friday.

Little is known of the strength of the Cincinnati Club, since it, as well as Indiana, is beginning a Southern tour while waiting for warmer weather in the North before beginning the conference season.

Following the Cincinnati series, the Scots will get their first test in Smoky Mountain Conference competition when Frosty Holt brings his Carson-Newman Eagles to town next Saturday for a tilt with Coach Honaker's stalwarts on the Maryville field. Although both the Scots and the Eagles have suffered from the lack of practice during rainy weather, another week should find them working smoothly for the opening battle.

The game scheduled with Hiwassee last Tuesday was postponed because of rain, and will be played Monday afternoon on the Hiwassee diamond.

Golf Tourney In Semi-Finals

Play Match With University of Tennessee There Next

The survivors in the spring golf tournament, Peter Kosloski, John Grebos, James Battaglia, and Richard Battaglia, are expected to complete the semi-final round of the tourney this week-end. Kosloski faces James Battaglia and Grebos meets Richard Battaglia in the semi finals, with the winners competing Chattanooga To Oppose Thinlies Today at 2 P. M.

Neither Team Has Been Tested This Season; Locals Meet Tennessee Tuesday

This afternoon the Scot track squad plays host to a strong organization from Chattanooga University in a meet slated to begin at 2:00. The strength of the visitors has not yet been measured, as the meet here today is the season opener for them. They are expected to be strong in the weight department, the jumps and pole vault, and possibly in the dashes.

Coach Thrower plans to start about the same men that he would have started against U. T. last Saturday. The middle distance and distance runners will be counted upon for firsts, their strength being known. All of the other events are sprinkled with new material, which has yet to be tested under fire.

Bidding again for favorable weather, Coach Thrower carries his squad to U. T. next Tuesday, where the Scots will meet the Vol tracksters in the meet that was postponed from last week on account of rain. The meet held in the meantime will help in the selection of material to use against Tennessee. The line-up will probably be only slightly changed, however.

Next Friday, April 19, the Scot thinlies journey afield to meet L. M. U. on their home track. The Scots are given a decided edge in this meet.

The probable starters against Chattanooga:

100 Yard Dash—Rich, Savitsky
220 Yard Dash—Talmage, Rich
440 Yard Dash—Snedeker, Talmage, Ross or Spahr
Half-Mile—Snedeker, R. Brown, R. Lodwick
Mile Run—Paul, Dmytriw, Clews
Two-Mle Run—Paul, Dmytriw, Clews
Low Hurdles—Richardson, Hallam, Dowell
Broad Jump—Loessburg, Steakley, Gray
High Jump—Toms, Steakley, Gray
Pole Vault—Lavendar, Johnson.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

Dr. Hunter apologized profusely for the accident that happened to the papers he took with him to Nashville last week.

ROBBER

The joy with which the Shakespeare class heard that the papers had been stolen can be eaily imagined. But, when the Dean said that the papers would have to be replaced, everyone agreed that it was a dastardly villain who stole Doctor's baggage.

:—:—:

Possibly the thought of staying with a Ph.D. was too great for the three men students who went to Nashville last week, but nevertheless Crawford, Smith and West all took the same room. When Doctor Hunter asked who was going to stay with him, the three boys decided to flip coins to see who should be the victim. The man who turned up the odd side was the Dean's roommate. Crawford and West turned up heads and Jimmy mith turned up tails. Doctor Hunter didn't seem to mind.

ROOM-MATES

:—:—:

Miss Heron took a load of the YW over to the intercollegiate banquet in Knoxville last Tuesday night. The rest of the contingent arrived in good shape and looked in vain for Miss Heron's gang before the meal began. Towards the end of the ham and potato course they arrived looking a little embarrassed. Seems that all the directions they had were to go to a church. As you may know there's a few churches in Knoxville, and they had quite a time touring the city looking for some other hungry peoples. It later developed that they had stumbled on another banquet in another part of town, but they didn't stay there long when they noticed that no men were present—it was a strictly hen affair.

They had a good program at the banquet, but the meal wasn't so hot according to the banquet connoisseurs of the YM. These banquets at the New Providence Church must have spoiled them. You have to go abroad to appreciate home.

The best tale of the evening is credited to the pianist Henri Abusamra. Henri was on the program. Someone asked him his name. He said "Abusamra", and when he says it fast you don't know what he says. The inquirer said, "Huh?" Henri came back with "Brown".

:—:—:

Pity the conscientious members who stayed for the discussion groups. They had to come back in the Crawford buggy.

TRAMP

Now that car is temperamental, more's the pity, and it thought to have a rest just outside Maryville. Even with Mr. Black abroad it wouldn't be stirred, and the crew had to finish the ride afoot. (Don't say anything to Squirrely. He was very unhappy over the failure of the family automobile).

ler, Hoosier pitcher, was holding the Scots in check after the first inning splurge.

Maryville tied the count at 4-all in the last half of the seventh. With two men down, Cross slammed one of Adler's hooks on a line drive into right centerfield for three bases, the longest and hardest smack of the contest. Henry followed with a single through shortstop to send Cross home.

Two markers in the eighth frame put the Hoosiers ahead again, but the locals came back in the last half of the inning with an attack which netted three tallies and a one-run advantage. Loessberg led off with a single, stole second, and scored on a hit by Blazer. An error put Odell on base and scored Blazer, and Ashby doubled down the rightfield foul line to score Odell.

Two singles, a double, and another one-base swat drove three Hoosiers across the plate in the last round, however, and the Scotties were unable to deliver in the final turn at bat.

The team batting honors were almost evenly divided, with Indiana collecting 13 safeties and Maryville 12. Hosler, Indiana rightfielder, led the individual work with four singles in five trips to the plate. For the Highlanders, Cross, Blazer, Ashby, Loessberg, and Henry each gathered a pair of safeties, and Corns and Holloway one each. Doubles by Hendricks, pinch hitter for Indiana, and Ashby, and a triple by Cross were the only extra base hits.

Maryville Takes A Holiday

Whether his holidays were spent here on the Hill or at his own or a friend's home, there is not a single Maryvillian that wishes that the vacation period had been shorter. In spite of the inclement weather here and elsewhere, very few plans were changed for that reason.

Most intrepid of all those leaving the campus was the group that went 2,200 miles to Worcester, Massachusetts and returned in a certain oil-burning, spring-breaking Buick. Carl Fisher, Henry Abusamra, and Wilbur Loessberg made the trip, taking Art Herries as far as Baltimore and Dick Sellars to New York. Easter Sunday found Messrs. Bob Downes, MacCalmont, Obert, Garrett, Christie, and Fleming in Philadelphia, and Dick and James Battaglia, John Elliott, Joe Cortez, and John Crump in the vicinity of Newark, N. J. Other groups went to Birmingham, Chattanooga, Nashville and closer points. Very few people living in Tennessee, North Carolina, or Kentucky did not spend the holidays at home.

Quite a number of students spent their vacation camping in the Smoky Mountains. Professor Lagerstedt and a group of boys hiked in

Miss Henry Attends D. A. R. Congress

Spends Easter Week In Capitol City

Accompanied by Miss Irma Gamble and Mrs. Clyde B. Ement, Miss Clemmie Henry drove via the Shenandoah Valley, to Washington, D. C. during the recent holidays, to attend the National Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This Congress was composed of four thousand representatives elected from the various Chapters all over the United States and in England.

The D. A. R. is an old organization, and one of the strongest women's organizations in the country. It is intensely interested in educational work of all kinds, both with American and foreign-born people, and has invested large sums of money in this work.

One representative made the trip from England especially to be present and speak at the Congress. Will Durant was one of the speakers, and although President Roosevelt was not in Washington, sent very cordial greetings which were read at one of the meetings. Mrs. Roosevelt held a reception in the White House for members of the Congress on Saturday afternoon.

At the Tennessee dinner held at the Mayflower Hotel on Tuesday evening, April 16, there were present a number of government officials, Secretary of State Hull and Mrs. Hull, Speaker of the House of Representatives Byrne and Mrs. Byrne, Judge Hugh M. Tate, who is now Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and who is a Director of Maryville College, and Mrs. Tate, and others.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, the President General of the National Society of the D. A. R. visited Maryville College last year, and spoke at the chapel exercises.

Graduates Present Second Recital

Monologues, Play, And Poem Well Received

The second Graduate Recital in Expression was presented in Voorhees Chapel last evening to an appreciative audience.

Miss Roberta Howie, who opened the program, was delightful in her humorous and cleverly portrayed monologues.

The second part of the program was presented as a two act play, "Sweethearts" by Gilbert. Miss Edwina Lowe, interpreting several characters, exhibited versatility and excellent voice control. The second act of this amusing and imaginative play, taking place thirty years later, was enacted with considerable ability by Mary Gladys Brown, Deane Bell, and Martina Robison.

Miss Lorena May Dunlap, concluding the program with Tennyson's "Enoch Arden", was extremely pleasing. Her poise and interpretation were enhanced by the musical accompaniment furnished by Miss Florence Grabiel.

Franklin To Speak At Ministerial Dinner

Banquet To Be Held In Presbyterian Church

The Ministerial Association will hold its annual banquet on Tuesday, April 30, at 6:30 p. m. at the New Providence Presbyterian church. A very interesting program has been prepared, the theme of which is a surprise and is known only to the program committee.

The speaker of the evening will be the Reverend C. McCoy Franklin of Madisonville, Tenn. All students on the Hill who attended chapel on March 7th will recall his excellent talk, part of which was a description of his childhood home in the mountains and imitations of the birds he was acquainted with. The toastmaster of the banquet will be Dr. C. W. Henry, former president of King College and president of the Alumni Association of Maryville College. Musical selections are also on the program.

The committee requests that all rservations be made by 7:00 p. m. Saturday. The cost of the banquet will be fifty cents per person. Rereservations be made by 7:00 p. m. ard Schlafer, William Talmage, or Herr Wissler.

BARR LEADS CHAPEL

The devotions in chapel on Friday morning were led by Dr. Harry W. Barr, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Urbana, Ohio, and leader of young people's work in that section of the country. Dr. Barr has also been active in bettering social conditions and has been interested in welfare work. Dr. and Mrs. Barr are making an extended tour of this part of the South.

Miss Meiselwitz Is Campus Visitor

During the past week Miss Gertrude E. Meiselwitz, Associate Professor of Home Economics, has been in Maryville for part of her Spring vacation. Miss Meiselwitz is doing graduate work at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin, which has a national reputation in the field of Home Economics.

Instead of writing a thesis for her degree Miss Meiselwitz is revising the entire Maryville cooking course to meet the demands of present-day teaching. She plans to leave again tomorrow. A dinner party is being given tonight in her honor by members of the faculty in the Home Economics Room.

Twilight Concert Draws Music Lovers

New Talent Displayed At Annual Presentation

The annual Twilight Concert under the auspices of the Chilhowee Club of Maryville was held in Voorhees Chapel Tuesday afternoon, April 23. Th program consisted of several piano selections given by various members of the music department under the direction of Miss Laura B. Hale, head of the Piano Department. Appreciation comments were supplied by Miss Hale before each number.

The "Nocturne" by Chopin, the introductory selection on the program, was played by Mimi Baez, Roberta Hargrave, and Jean Northrop. Its soothing and restful tones were skillfully harmonized by the three pianists. Shutt's Barcarolle as played by Lillian Armstrong and Evelyn Coddington gave a distinct impression of the rise and fall of a boat on the waves as the boatman brings the oars back and forth. "Andante Finale" by Denee was a more brilliant selection than the first two. Henry Abusamra and William Kimball interpreted the fast moving Andante with unusual precision and strength of touch. The fourth piece on the program "Du Bist Die Ruh", became a lilting and appealing melody when played by Margaret Brient, Evelyn Coddington, and Elizabeth Schoch.

Bach's "Concereto in C Major" was played by Garnet Manges, Charlotte Upp, and Martha Burchfield. This number which was one of the most difficult was executed with greatest ease and smoothness.

Three pieces which were of a less serious note than the rest of the program were played by Garnet Manges. The "Hurdy-Gurdy Man" by Mattay and "The Harmonica

Robinson Memorial Service On Tuesday

English Department Sponsors Program

In appreciation of the work of Edwin Arlington Robinson, who died April 6, 1935, a memorial program will be held next Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in the college chapel. A survey of the poet's life will be given, an analysis of his poetry presented, and selections of his work read. Fern Metzger, Dorothy Nethery, and Nathalia Wright, respectively, will handle these divisions which form the body of the memorial hour. There will be a background of appropriate music.

All who familiar with Robinson and wish to have a part in this recognition of his poetic infuence are invited to attend. The groups specifically responsible for the program are Dr. Hunter's poetry class, Writers' Workshop, and the Shakespeare Club.

Glee Singers Present Program May Night

Moore and Wynn, Knoxville Artists, Will Be Features Of Evening

Having been well received in a number of pre-season performances, and just recently returned from a successful debut as a Lyceum number on the Oneida High School Program, Oneida, Tennessee, the Maryville Glee Singers will entertain a home audience on the evening of May 1st in Voorhees Chapel.

The program this year, besides having a variety of sacred and secular music is being featured by Mr. Carter Moore and Mr. William Wynn, Knoxville artists, and our own Dixie Vagabond quartet. Mr. Moore besides being an artist in his own right, is strangely unique in his choice of instruments. Maryville audience will be treated probably for the first time, to a series of selections on the Marimba and the Victor Theremin. Mr. Wynn, is no less an artist in his ability as a magician.

These stellar attractions, coupled with the chorus numbers of Negro Spirituals, skits, etc., are destined to please a capacity audience.

This will be the last appearance of the Glee Singers until May 22, when, together with the combined choir and Women's Glee Club, they will appear on the program of the Session of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church at Cincinnati.

ORCHESTRA CONCERT

The College Orchestra under the direction of Miss Mildred E. Butcher is making final preparations for the annual concert to be held in Voorhees Chapel on Friday evening, May 10th.

WEDNESDAY CHAPEL

At the chapel service Wednesday morning, May 1, Dr. Stevenson will center his address about the theme "Your Own House".

Annual Program Dedicated To Mrs. John Walker

Amphitheatre Will Be Site of Traditional Spectacle

On May 1 at 2:00 o'clock the annual May Day Pageant will be presented in the new amphitheater in the college woods. The program of the afternoon is dedicated to Mrs. John Walker in acknowledgement of her generosity in developing the amphitheater.

This year's pageant is called "The Queen of May and Her Court Visit Maryville College", and was planned and outlined by Mrs. Lenore West Ramsey who graduated from college in 1932. The entire program is being directed by Mrs. Clyde West, head of the Expression Department, assisted by her pageantry class and representatives from the Y. W. C. A. For a number of years the Y. W. C. A. has sponsored the program and their cooperation with the Expression Department and the college has helped to make this event one of the most attractive and enjoyable performances presented during the college Faculty Members Address T. E. A.

Students Also Attend Nashville Convention

On April 17 and 18, Dr Lloyd and members of the faculty attended educational meetings at Nashville.

The Tennessee College Association met at Vanderbilt University and Dr. Lloyd was present at the meetings in which college executives discussed their problems and particularly teacher training laws. The Association was addressed by the retiring president, Dean Paschall of Vanderbilt, whose office is taken by President Robb of Tennessee Wesleyan.

After this meeting Dr. Lloyd journeyed to Columbia, Tennessee, where he talked with Mrs Mary Robinson Street, only living child of Dr. John J Robinson the second president of Maryville, who served from 1857 to 1861. Mrs. Street gave documents and information to Dr. Lloyd concerning Dr Robinson, and also a picture of tha former president.

Willis Garrett and Elizabeth Peterson accompanied Dr Lloyd and attended Student Volunteer Officer's Council meetings at Scarritt College.

On the following day Drs. Hunter and Fields and Miss Gamble attended meetings of the Tennessee Educational Association. Also in attendance at the meetings were Walter Cloud, Donald Harris, and Louis Krainock.

In the meetings of the English division of the T E A, Dean Hunter represented the college and read a paper entitled "Curriculum Needs in College English."

ROBINSON MEMORIAL

Glancing through the college newspapers on our exchange list we find that not one has mentioned Edwin Arlington Robinson's death much less any who mention a memorial service in recognition of this great American poet.

Sponsored by members of the English Department classes and encouraged by the active interest of Dean Hunter the service will be one well worth the attendance of any student or town person who may be interested in literature.

DISHONESTY

Wishing to cooperate with the powers that represent the student body, we take this opportunity to deplore the flagrant dishonesty both in class during examinations and outside class in the exchanging of required assignments, and the utter carelessness of thoughtless students who take no pride in keeping the campus clean.

Dishonesty, whether in or outside of class, should be the concern of the students as well as the professor, particularly those students who, through their own honest efforts, have their grades lowered because of the dishonest higher grades of others.

In class, the professor is able to take certain measures to assure protection for all. Outside of class his jurisdiction is somewhat handicapped. Therefore it is up to the students to protect themselves.

It is not easy to refuse to allow your friend to copy your theme or paper or notebook. Yet when you refuse him how much of a friend is he? He derides you,—and is no more your friend. Even an unwilling attitude arouses his contempt. Yet you are the one who has or should have contempt for him!

When, ever so unwillingly, you "help a pal"! (and by that we do not mean helpful and willing assistance in daily work, but downright copying) you and he lose many things—tangible and untangible.

You lose the right as sole owner of the work created; he, with embellishments may receive a higher grade, and lower the grades of honest students; you lose your respect for him; you help him to be weak—if you refused and offered to help him he might be able to do the work himself and maintain his self-respect. He, when the matter is known, for such matters always become known sooner or later, loses the respect of many a worthy friend.

Action by the student council for the solution of such problems seems impossible so late in the college year yet this is just the time something should be done, the last month of school, with its term papers and themes and notebooks. But the student council cannot function unless it has the cooperation of the student body. ARE YOU WILLING TO COOPERATE?

SUPERIOR COTTIES

Two girls outstanding in this year's senior class, alike in many ways, but each one outstanding in her own field; honor roll students, "honors work" participants, and, in addtion, roommates, are Fern Metzger and Maria Wynn.

Fern is one of the many Pennsylvanians on the Hill, giving her address as New Castle. For all-round development she cannot be excelled. Although she carried a heavy program of work as secretary to the

FERN METZGER

Dean, which demands a large portion of her time, she has taken part in varied phases of extra-curricular activities. She has served the Y.W.C.A. as Nu Gamma leader, and, this year, as secretary. She has been president of the French Club, Program Secretary of Bainonian, and an outstanding leader in the field of English drama, under the supervision of Dr. Shine.

Such a program as this is a full one, but she has found time to be cheerful and helpful, and to make for herself many friends on the campus.

Maria lives in Eagan, Tennessee, and her accomplishments during the four years at Maryville bespeak a college life replete with conquests and honors.

Her work as assistant to the

professor of history is not so demanding as Fern's secretarial position, and has left her time for productive activity in Theta's midwinters, which led to her membership in Theta Alpha Phi. She has won the Bates Oratorical Prize and the Tri-State Oratorical Prize, and her prominent achievements as a debater have resulted in her serving Pi Kappa Delta as secretary for two years. Maria, too, has been useful as a member of the Writers' Workshop, and of the Y. W. C. A. Cabinet. Her honors work has been in history.

Sign Of Life, Growth

The long-anticipated event is at hand. The new dining-hall addition will be used for the first time for the evening meal, Wednesday, May first. The new section is approximately one-half as large as the space now in use or will compose about one-third of the total space. This means that probably two hundred, more or less, can be accommodated in the new part. The exact number cannot be determined until the tables are placed.

Seniors and juniors may move into new secton. It is requested that all seniors and juniors who desire places in the new hall sign their names and classification before Tuesday on the cards which will be distributed on Monday. However, none but seniors or juniors can be accommodated. No senior or junior is required to move to the new section if preferring to remain with present companions in the old.

This change will necessitate rearrangement of the table lists. The tables moeved to the new section will be reduced in size to accommodate six persons only at each table; in the old section the tables will be retained at their present size. All matters pertaining to the organization of tables should be taken up with Miss Ware or Miss Moore.

HILLS

I look for mountains
That I have grown used to,
The misty blue peaks
Hemming in the world,
But there are no mountains;
The ground is flat,
And the snowy sky
Arches over the flatness.

I looked for a tiny valley
That I know, cupped in hills,
With just a little roof of sky.
And a narrow rocky river running through it,
But there are no valleys;
The ground is all flat,
And the whole gray sky
Arches vastly over the flatness.

This flatness is dull,
And the eye can see too far.
I am looking for mountains
To rest my eyes against,
But there is no rest;
The flatness never ends.
The road is straight and flat.

Conference Track Meet To Be Held Here May 4

Scotties Trounce Teachers Twice In League Bouts

Hand And Atchison Hold Bucs In Tow While Scot Sluggers Hit Hard To Win 8-5, 18-5

The Maryville baseballers added another series to their list of victories this week as East Tennessee Teachers fell before the mighty Highlander sluggers 8 to 5 and 18 to 5 in Smoky Mountain Conference games Tuesday and Wednesday at Johnson City.

Hand went the route in the pitcher's box for the Scotties in the first tilt, giving up only six hits while his mates were touching McCall for ten. A triple and a single by Cross (ss), a double and a single by Odell (lf), two singles by Loessberg (rf), a three-bagger by Henry (ss), and singles by Holloway (cf), Blazer (3b), and Glen Evers (c) made up the Scot hits.

In the second affray, which went only seven innings, Maryville took advantage of fourteen hits, including triples by Cross, Loessberg, and Holloway and a double by Corns, twelve walks, two hit batsmen, and an error for eighteen runs, while Atchison was holding the Buccaneers to seven safeties and five tallies. The Scot hits were distributed as follows: Cross (ss) 1 for 4; Loessberg (rf) 1 for 3; Henry (lf) 3 for 5; Holloway (cf) 2 for 3; Corns (1b) 2 for 5; Blazer (3b) 1 for 3; Odell (ss) 2 for 4; Burris (c) 2 for 3; Atchison (1) 0 for 2.

Slugging, Hurling Defeat Cincinnati

Pounding out fourteen hits for as many runs in the opener and coasting through behind the five-hit pitching of Ralph Ashby in the second tilt, the Highlanders swept the two-game series with the University of Cincinnati here last week by scores of 14-11 and 7-1.

The first contest was a wild slugging affair in which the two teams collected a total of 27 hits, 25 runs, 5 home runs, and 2 triples, for 47 total bases. John Henry and Dick Corns hit homers for the Scots, while Jim Holloway and "Toots" Blazer connected for a triple and two singles each to lead the batters. "Butter" Atchison started in the box for the locals, but was relieved in the sixth frame by Collins, who in turn gave way to Hand in the seventh.

In the second encounter the Highlanders opened the hostilities with a three-run rally to give Ashby a lead which was never threatened, as the Scot left-hander held the Cincinnati hitters in check the full nine innings. Don Cross led off in the first round with a sizzling liner to right center for four bases, Loessberg doubled but was out on an attempted steal, Henry walked, and Holloway followed with another circuit clout to bring the total to three runs, enough to sew up the game. Holloway's homer and single, Loessberg's two doubles, Cross' homer, and a triple by Swearingen, pinch hitting for Burris, were the highlights of the Maryville attack.

On April 15, the Scots defeated Hiwassee 6 to 3 on the enemy field behind the pitching of Atchison, who hurled the first six rounds, and Ashby, Loessberg, Corns, and Blazer garnered two bingles apiece for the Highlanders.

The treasure-house of the mind is always open--and it always means a hidden wealth.

HIGHLANDERS PLAY C.-N. AGAIN TODAY

Two-Game Series With Emory-Henry Slated For Next Week

Smarting under the sting of two straight defeats at the hands of the Eagles, the Highlander diamondeers left for Jefferson City today determined to bring home a victory in the third game of the series to be played this afternoon. Coach Honaker will probably start Carl Evers in the box for Maryville, with Ralph Hand ready for relief work.

Next week the Emory and Henry Wasps come to Maryville for a two-game series with the Scots on Wednesday and Thursday. The Scot-Wasp encounters of the last few years have been noted for the number of contests decided by one run, and the same closeness is expected in this series.

Layman Tosses Eagles To Twin Win Over Scots

Holds Scots To Five Hits As C.-N. Takes Thrsday Tilt, 6-3; Win Saturday, 3-1

A lanky right hander by the name of Layman put misery into the hearts of the Highlanders with his baffling curves and deadly war club Thursday afternoon to defeat the locals almost single handedly by a 6 to 3 score in favor of the Carson-Newman Eagles.

Layman, the only hurler who has been able to silence the big guns of the Highlanders, practically stole the show as he yielded only five safe blows, kept the plate uncrossed after the first inning, and collected two triples, both of which could have been stretched into home runs, and a double, driving in two runs and scoring another.

Four solid smacks with one out in the first frame, a circuit drive by Olive, two singles, and Layman's double, put Carson-Newman off to a flying start, but the Scots came back in the last half of the round to knot the count at 3-all. After two were down, Henry angled to center field, Holloway was purposely passed, and Corns sent both runner home with a two-bagger. Corns, who was the only Scot to get more than one hit, then crossed the plate on an error to figure in all the scoring.

A single, a sacrifice, and an error gave the Eagles the lead in the sixth frame, and a triple by Layman in the eighth, followed by a home run by Dowling, put the game on ice. The Scots filled the bags with two away in the seventh but failed to score when a runner was caught off base for the third out. All together, the Eagles got to Ashby for ten safeties.

The Highlanders were defeated by the Eagles 3 to 1 last Saturday at Jefferson City in a game played in the rain and called at the end of the sixth inning. Layman was on the mound for Carson-Newman and Carl Evers for Maryville, the latter being replaced by Hand in the last inning. The Eagles garnered seven safeties to five for the Scotties.

Why not try this at Maryville? The Student Council could prepare the questionnaire.

Every visit to a weighing machine by some people seems to be a matter for depression.

Scot Netmen To Hit Road Monday For Four Meets

Meet Tusculum Today In Return Match On Home Courts At 2 P. M.; Lose There

Coach Fischbach with five netmen and manager will leave early Monday morning for Chattanooga where they will meet Chattanooga University in the first of a four-meet road series Monday afternoon.

Teams scheduled for the trip are Chattanooga University, The University of the South at Sewanee, Middle Tennessee State Teachers Collge at Murfreesboro, and Cumberland University at Lebanon. The squad will return Thursday morning in time to encounter The University of the South in a return meet on the home courts that afternoon.

Those players who will probably be picked to make the trip are Captain Johnathan Gillingham Rex Allen, Ed Scott, Ed Gillingham, and Dave Woodling.

Lose To University of Tennessee, 6-1

Blasting their way to victory in six of the seven matches played the Tennessee netters outclassed the Scot forces on the U. T. courts last week for a 6-1 decision. Ed Scott won the lone Maryville pointer by defeating Smith in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4.

Summary: Hodges (T) defeated J. Gillingham 6-3, 6-1; Hylton (T) defeated R. Allen 6-3, 6-1; Scot (M) defeated Smith 6-4, 6-4; Sienknecht (T) defeated Morgan 6-4 6-4; Stanberry (T) defeated E. Gillingham 6-2, 6-2. Doubles: Hodges and Sienknecht (T) defeated Allen and Woodling 7-5, 6-2; Hylton and Stanberry (T) defeated J. Gillingham and Scott 6-2, 6-2.

R. BATTAGLIA WINS GOLF TOURNAMENT

Defeats Kosloski In Final Round After Tight Semi-final

Playing a steady game throughout, Dick Battaglia defeated Pete Kosloski 8-up, 7 to go, in the 36 hole final round of the spring golf tournament Thursday afternoon.

In the semi-finals, Kosloski outpointed Jim Battaglia on the 19th hole after the regular 18-hole match had ended in a draw, and Dick Battaglia stopped John Grebos 1-up in 18 holes in another hotly contested match.

These four golfers will represent the Scots in a match with the Green Meadow Country Club either this afternoon or next week and in another with Tennessee later.

Wasp Trackmen Meet Scots Here Tuesday At Two

Impressive Wins Over L. M. U. And Chattanooga Give Scots Slight Edge Over Wasps

In the final overture to the all-conference and state track meets, Coach Thrower's men oppose Emory and Henry University here next Tuesday. The Scots are expected to top the Wasps, as the strength of the visitors is centered about one man in the weights, while the locals have shown more power in the track events and in all-around performance.

Off to a smashing start, the Scot thinlies decisively outpointed the Chattanooga University trackmen here April 13, by a score of 94 to 37. The initial meet of the season found the Scots strong in many departments, contracy to previous beliefs. They scored 10 firsts, tied for one, and lost four. They swept two events, the half and two-mile, for all counters. Previous records were smashed as Johnson set a new mark in the discus throw, a distance of 118 feet 4 inches, and Loessburg bettered his own mark of the previous year with a broad jump of 21 feet 9 1-2 inches. Klein, of Chattanooga, scored nearly thirty of the visitor's points, with firsts in the high hurdles, shot put, javelin throw, and discus, and a tie with Toms, of Maryville, for first in the high jump. He also took second place in the 100-yard dash and the broad jump.

Plans Are Made For First Annual Smoky Gathering

Bob Thrower Responsible For Landmarks In Conference Track History

The first annual Smoky Mountain Conference track and field meet will be held on the Maryville cinder-path Saturday, May 4. The first events will get under way at 1:30 p. m.

Coach Bob Thrower has been working a long time to get an annual conference meet established, and finally succeeded last December in making arrangments for the meet, with the first gathering to be held at Maryville. A different college will be the scene of the all-conference competition each year, with L. M. U. the probable host in 1936.

Invitations to the meet next week have been sent to all the conference members, and Maryville and L. M. U. will enter full teams, while most of the other colleges are expected to send several performers each.

The only other time the conference teams have congregated in track was in 1929, when Emory and Henry, then a member of the loop, sponsored the event at night, and the Highlanders carried off highest honors. Since that time, however, all efforts to make the meet an annual affair had failed until this year.

"Isle of Capri"

Every spring great droves of birds migrate across the Mediterranean ocean to Italy. The natives catch a male bird and with a hot rod burn out his eyes which starts him on a song that will last until his death. Far out over the ocean even in blackest night comes the blind little prisoner's song that allures thousands of his brothers into the nets of the Caprians.

There is an alluring song, a symphony of quality, of service, of convenience, and of economy where you will find those things to increase your allurement in an atmosphere of vibrant jubilation; and we are the birds that sing it to you, but with our eyes made sparkling by your visits.

A well known Baptist university in Ohio has been experimenting with a new style of questionnaire. Questions are given by professors to the students in their courses. These questions deal with the students opinion of the course, the professor, the manner of presentation, and other related subjects. The idea has served to bring about a better understanding between instructor and students, and often an improvement in the course.

the Scot trackmen sank before a powerful Univrsity of Tennessee squad Tuesday, April 16, in a rainy meet at Shields-Watkins field in Knoxville. The final tally was a 92-39 win for the Vols. The Scots scored but one first, Snedeker breaking the tape in the quarter. However, they were shut out of only one vent, the shot put, and scored many of the second and third places. The Scots lost heavily in the weight events, and proved best in the middle distances.

Sweeping first and second places in ten events, the Scots easily topped the Lincoln Memorial University cinder squad by a score of 100-26, in a meet at Harrogate, Friday, April 19. Losing only one first, the javelin throw, the Scots outpointed the visitors in practically all events. The Scots took first and second places in nine events, and seem to be in good condition for the coming meets.

MARYVILLE'S HOLIDAY

the neighborhood of Indian Gap, Monday.

George Stanley, Bob Toms, and Miss Holland chauffered more than forty students to Norris Dam Saturday and Monday. Mrs. Proffitt, Miss Holland, and Miss Butcher were chaperones for a number of groups that enjoyed their holidays near the Hill. Very few students took advantages of the swimming privileges during the vacation. Evening "moonshining", however, was enjoyed by a great number of those who remained at Maryville. In spite of overcast skies Sunday morning the town had its "Easter parade".

Among the visitors to the campus during the holidays were Malcolm Gwaltney, who graduated from Maryville last year, and his fiancee, Miriam King, also a former student, and her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Hargrave of Philadelphia were among the parents who passed the holidays at Maryville. Fern Bailey enjoyed the visit of her two sisters from Newark, New Jersey.

Several young men, including one from Birmingham, visited friends on the Hill.

The program closed Monday evening with the Hour of Music sponsored by the Y. W. C. A., which was held in Voorhees Chapel. Although very few were in attendance, the program was delightful. Particularly enjoyable were Calvin Schmidt's solos, sung in German. The audience enjoyed Strauss' Blue Danube Waltz, a piano duet by Joyce Fields and Florence Grabiel. Equally delightful were the familiar Nocturne, op. 9, no. 2, by Chopin, and Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody, both piano solos brilliantly executed by Florence Grabiel. Elizabeth Kunkel acted as commentator during the program.

The pageant is divided into ten episodes which symbolize the different departments of the college: Biology, Literature, Modern Foreign Languages, Mathematics, Athletics, Bible, Music, History, Home Economics, and Ancient Foreign Languages. The episodes are under the direction of the following students who are members of the pageantry class: Deane Bell, Sylvia Ammons, Lois Brown, Marjorie Fleming, Ruth Proffitt, Charles Allen, Ruth Clopton and Jane Irwin. Lynn Anne Brown and Lillian Crawford are the Y. W. committee members who have charge of the processional, the decorations, and coperatin among the committees.

Many dances are included in this years program and all of the girls participating are being trained by Mrs. Verton Queener, head of the Women's Department of Athletics. The college orchestra, under the direction of Miss Mildred Butcher will play for the processional and at other times during the pageant. The Girls Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Frances Henry, will sing.

The processional will be led by Louise Lloyd, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. R. W. Lloyd, and Sheila Cochran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Cochran of Alcoa. Nina Gamble, the May Queen, will be accompanied by Newman Smith, president of the senior class. George Howell, son of Prof. and Mrs. George Howell will be the crown bearer and Billy Caldwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Caldwell, and Jimmy Callaway, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Callaway, will be train bearers. The junior attendant, Lynn Anne Brown, will have Don Hallam as her escort, Ellouise Bundy, sophomore attendant, will have LeRoy Obert, and Bea McConnel, freshman attendant, has selected Thomas Bryan.

Over two hundred students will participate in this unusual pageant, which will be especially interesting because of the setting of the natural amphitheater. It was estimated that over one thousand attended the program last year, and even a larger crowd is expected this year because of the reputation the May Day program has gained throughout East Tennessee.

Martha Burchfield completed the program by playing "Concerto in B flat minor" by Tschaikowski. Mrs. Burchfield's mastery of her subject and her excellent technique and precision of touch was obvious through the entire Concerto. She was accompanied on a second piano by Garnet Manges.

Crowds Attend May Day Pageant

Over fifteen hundred people attended the unusual and interesting May Day pageant held in the college amphitheater on Wednesday. The amphitheater itself, which has been improved by Mrs. John Walker, was more beautiful than in former years and makes one of the loveliest natural settings that can be found in the South.

The color combinations of the bouquets and dresses of the queen and her attendants helped to make the procession most charming and impressive, and the pageant presented to the queen and her court showed originality and careful work.

The Maypole dance, which followed the Alma Mater sung by the Girls' Glee Club, was especially good this year because of the modern dresses worn by the dancers, and because of their careful training. A butterfly dance and a mock wedding of the different flowers symbolized the Biology department.

The department of English presented Chaucer, Shakespeare, Elizabeth and Robert Browning, and Gertrude Stein. The Spanish Department was well represented by Mimi Baez and Pete Kosloski who showed unusual ability in their dancing and singing of a Spanish song. A number of students sang German songs and concluded their episode with the cry "Heil Hitler".

A scene in a modern French shop was the presentation of the French department, where lovely living and

Editor's Note; The Association of Atlantic Highlanders is an alumni association near Princeton, New Jersey. The following account of one of their meetings is recorded by Harry Wood, Secretary-treasurer.

At three o'clock on the afternoon of April 13, 1935 "The Highlanders" again gave witness to the undying spirit of Maryville. By train, by car, and by Ford, by "one's" and by "two's" and by the car-load they came from their Highland fastnesses to the lowland beside bonnie Loch Carnegie in Princeton, New Jersey.

As the clans gathered in Alexander Hall parlor on the Princeton Seminary campus, the conversation grew into a mighty chorus which waked the echoes and made the welkin ring and there was much hailing of the Queen of all the Highlands and eventually we did "loud her praises sing." Many was the acquaintance not forgot which was here brought back to mind. With so much excitement the time sped very quickly and the appointed hour arrived when the "moonshiners" strutted their way slowly to the banquet hall at Peacock Inn.

At Peacock Inn the assemblage took on the appearance of the proverbial Literary Society Joint-Meeting. As they waited to enter the banquet hall the "buzzing" continued and anyone observing from the sideline could guess that this was a crowd of Maryvillians, especially when, in some cases, there were threatening outbreaks of starvation crys.

The motley mob was finally quieted by the gentle mallet of the toast-

Glee Singers' Program Goes Over Big

With a surprising variety of entertainment, from music to magic and back again, the Glee Singers presented a delightful and enjoyable program on Wednesday evening. Directed by Miss Frances Henry, the twenty-two men opened the program with a stirring group of songs including

Great and Glorious—Haydn
Lamp in the West—Parker
The Builder—Cadman
Sea Fever—Andrews

The popular songs presented by the Dixie Vagabond Quartette, which consists of Carl Wells, Lloyd Wells, Donnell McArthur, and Carl Fisher, were well received.

The novelty numbers on the program were supplied by Billy Wynn, magician, and Carter Moore, of the University of Tennessee, who presented some novel instrumental music. Mr. Moore's control of the Victor Theremin and Marimba was entertaining and interesting. The Glee Singers followed with four numbers.

Liebstraum (arr. by Henry Abusamra)—Liszt
The Singer's March—From the German
Travlin'—Enders
Heah Dem Bells. (Incidental solo by Donnell McArthur)—Strickland

The final group was generally of a more serious nature, including The Bold Bandolero—Hodson
Drink to Me Only—Old English Song
Oh, Hail Us, Ye Free (from "Ernani")—Verdi

One of the most unusual and effective efforts of the program was accomplished by Henry Abusamra and Carl Wells, at two pianos, and James Laing and Dave Birch with cornet and saxophone. The several solo and ensemble numbers presented by this quartette were received enthusiastically by the audience.

This is the last chance I shall have to do that which I have longed to do this many a month:—not bother about balance, not figure out head linees, use different kinds of type,—in other words, be different for a change.

You see, this is my last ECHO, my last editorial, the last time that in the wee small hours of the creeping dawn I shall wrack my brains for a fitting thought, or for another word meaning something like programs or service or recital or banquet but consisting only of say,—three or four letters. I'm sure those above mentioned words have appeared at least once in every issue since I started the head-line craze, that fantastic fascinating juggling of words that must number 17 and 18, or 12 or 13, or even, when we broke down and had a streamer headline, 40 to 42 spaces and always must make a certain amount of sense.

And now it's all to end. Praise Allah! Yet,—oh dear! June 4th isn't far away. And along with that pathetic note is a minor tune,—those notebooks, and term papers, and novels. Yeah, brethren, I hear a mighty chorus.

And along with that minor tune is a major one, a very sharp one,—after graduation, what? That sounds so much like a Commencement address that I'll just stamp on it and go back to the original theme.

Rain,—no edtorial. (P. S. If you don't believe me ask the night watchman. It's raining NOW. Time: 2:30 a. m.)

ATTENTION Business Men

Applications for position on the HIGHLAND ECHO Business Staff should be handed to Professor Walker or Davis.

Consideration is given to those applications presented by assistants of junior ranking particularly those who have had experience in previous years. In this connection it is urged that freshmen and sophoores make applications.

DR. RICHARDS ADDRESSED STUDENT BODY RECENTLY

On Tuesday morning, April 30, the Rev. Dr. McDowell Richards spoke to the students at the chapel exercises. He was the speaker at the meeting of the Ministerial Association the night before. Dr. Richards is one of the south's best educated men. He holds degrees from Davidson College, Columbia Theological Seminary, Princeton University, Princeton Seminary and Oxford University of England. For the past three years he has been president of Columbia Theological Seminary at Decatur, Georgia, a suburb of Atlanta. This school is one of the official seminaries of the Southern Presbyterian Church.

With Dr. Richards came a quartet who also appeared on the Tuesday chapel program, singing three selections. One member of the quartet was John Talmage, a former Maryville student who is studying at Columbia.

Representatives from the Y. W. C. A. are attending the Interracial Conference at Morristown Normal and Industrial College. The conference assembled on May 3 and is attneded by representatives from all East Tennessee colleges.

The conference is concerned with upward trends of the present, in social, moral, industrial, political and economic trends. The program is taken up with lectures, discussion groups and forums, and social activities.

Those attending from Maryville are Marjorie Fleming, Dorthea Stadelman, Emily Watson, Mary Knibide and Hendrika Tal.

SENIOR HOP

Bartlett Hall on Tuesday night will be the scene of the last senior party of the year. It will be a formal party, open to the seniors and their friends. An evening of games has been planned, combined with a varied program of tap dancing, music, and a dramatic skit. Betty Woodwell is the chairman in charge of refreshments, Louise Reichelderfer will plan decorations.

Orchestra Concert To Feature McGhee Dancers

The College Orchestra will present its annual concert in Voorhees Chapel next Friday night at eight o'clock. A program different from any given in many years has been arranged, and the indications are that the concert will be one of the leading events of the month.

The feature of the evening will be a program of varied dancing by pupils of the Annie McGhee School of Dancing, Knoxville. About thirty children ranging in age from six to twelve will participate in the numbers, ballet, toe, acrobatic, tap, and other modern and novelty dances. The children will be in elaborate and appropriate costume, and will give eighteen different numbers as their part of the program. The Annie McGhee School is the outstanding school of dancing in Knoxville and is giving its annual recital on the evening following the program here.

Miss Lillian Armstrong who graduates this year from the music department will play some piano selections as part of her graduating recital.

Some of the orchestra numbers to be played are two selections from Delibes' Ballet Sylvia, Sleeping Beauty by Tschaikowsky, and "The Red Mill" by Victor Herbert.

Echo to Have Payne. Banquet Thursday

Following the selection of staff members by the Student-Faculty Committee on Publications, election of the new editor of The Highland Echo for 1935-36 was held Thursday, May 2. Bryan Payne was elected editor-in-chief by unanimous vote.

Mr. Payne, who has been a member of the Echo staff since his freshman year, served as Sports Editor this past year. He has appointed Richard Meadows to serve as Sports Editor, and Elizabeth Kunkel, present Managing Editor, to serve in the same capacity.

The new staff, which will begin working as a unit for the next publication on May 18, consists of the following members: Staff Editors: Elizabeth Kunkel, Katharine Orr, Alex Christie; Junior Associate Editors: Bernice Gaines, Ann McCambridge, Richard Meadows, Edward Thom; Sophomore Cubs: Ellen Baker, Robert Gillespie, David Maas, John MacIntyre, Simpson Spencer, Walter West.

The annual banquet of the editorial and business staff of the Highland Echo will be held next Thursday night, May 9.

Alas,—Curriculum Changes

The following modifications in academic requirements will be fully noted in the forth-coming issue of the Catalog. A preliminary word regarding them is given here.

For some three years notice has been givn that the class graduating in 1936 would be required to have 130 hours of credit. That notice has been withdrawn and the requirement will continue to be 126 hours.

However, the academic-hour requirement will be stated as 122, for the Physical Training requirement will not be stated in terms of hours but as semesters of credit. Accordingly the graduation requirement will be 122 hours, 366 grade points, and four semesters of credit in Physical Training.

Another change is in regard to the requirement in foreign language for students who had no foreign language in high school. Henceforth their requirement in language will be the same as for other students except that the Committee on Entrance and Advanced Standing reserves the right to direct that six hours in whatever field seems best designed to round out the students' general cultural training. For example, a student majoring in Chemistry might be directed to take six hours of Social Science or English if it appeared he had rather consistently neglected those fields in favor of his science specialty. This six hours is not an addition to the total hour requirement but will be a draft on the student's elective privilege.

DR. FRANKLIN TO PREACH AT NEW PROVIDENCE

Rev. McCoy Franklin will preach at the regular morning service at the New Providence Presbyterian Church tomorrow. Mr. Franklin addressed the student body several weeks ago and will be remembered for his imitation of bird calls.

GLEE CLUB CONCERT

Henry, should be given credit for admirable discipline and effective interpretation of both classical and lighter numbers. Although clear enunciation, always difficult to develop with such a group, would have provided additional polish, the voices of the singers blended smoothly, and the program was a fitting one to a perfect May Day.

SUPERIOR SCOTTIES

Two dark-haired Alpha Sigma brothers are Superior Scotties. One is the right-hand handy man around the campus; the other, we are told, is no mean automobile salesman. The one is Ernest Broyles Lowe, sometimes called Ernie; the other is Everett Newman Smith, almost always called Newman.

Ernie, besides being a man with a hammer—or perhaps, because of that fact—is a competent stage manager of dramatic productions. For the last three years he has stage-managed a play, and this year, in addition, he played a role in "Launcelot and Elaine". For two years he has been a member of Theta Alpha Phi, serving this year as president of the organization.

ERNIE LOWE

The Y. M. C. A. has claimed its share of Ernie's attention. He was once a member of the cabinet. Last year he was Y. M. C. A. treasurer and business manager of the "M" Handbook. He was, also, last year vice-president of the Student Council and a member of the Student-Faculty Committee. As a member and officer he has been an enthusiastic supporter of Alpha Sigma activities.

Newman, who is president of the present senior class, has also had dramatic interests as a member of Theta Alpha Phi and as an interpreter of roles in mid-winter play productions. Moreover, he has been active in debate circles at Maryville. He was a freshman debater; he is a member of Pi Kappa Delta; and last year he represented Maryville at the Pi Kappa Delta convention at Lexington, Kentucky. Newman is a biology major and is this year Bacteriology assistant in the Biology Department. His most recent appearance in a position of honor came at the recent May Day festival when he appeared as escort to the Queen of the May.

In another important respect Ernie and Newman are by no means dissimilar. Both possess an affableness and a hearty geniality which make them cheerful assets to the life here on the Maryville campus.

MAY DAY PROGRAM

mock wax models vied for the attention of customers.

The Mathematics Department was symbolized by an interesting episode which showed the power of mathematics in the world, and the Bible Department presented a group of three tableaus of the Old Testament. The Department of History had for its symbolization representatives for each American war.

Music was represented by the spirits of Pan, Harmony, Rhythm, and Melody and an accompanying chorus by the Girls' Glee Club.

The Home Economics episode was especially attractive because of the dances of the hat box and the cooks and the chefs.

The Department of Athletics featured tumbling, fencing, and dancing.

The last episode represented the Ancient Foreign Languages and consisted of several Greek tableaus.

The combination of a perfect day, a beautiful setting, and an interesting program made this year's May Day pageant a distinct success, and credit should be given to Mrs. West, Mrs. Lenore Ramsey, Mrs. Queener, the Pageantry Class, Lillian Crawford and Lynn Anne Brown, the Y. W. representatives, and all others who cooperated with them in planning and producing this spectacular pageant.

MARYVILLE TRACKSTERS ARE HOSTS TODAY

Scots To Enter T. I. A. A. Track Meet Saturday

Scotties Hope To Maintain Standing Won At T. I. A. A. In Knoxville Last Year.

In the closing round of the 1935 season, Coach Bob Thrower will enter several of his outstanding Highlander tradmen in the second annual Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Asociation meet to be held Saturday, May 11, at Tennessee Polytechnic Institute in Cookeville.

The group making the trip to the state meet will probably be selected chiefly from the winners in the conference competition this afternoon, since only the men who can be counted on for a first or a second place against a stronger field will be taken along.

The Highlanders rated second in the first T. I. A. A. meet at Knoxville last year, with Tennessee first, and Southwestern, Sewanee, and Chattanooga third, fourth, and fifth, respectively. These teams should cause the Scots the most worry again in the meet next Saturday, although the locals defeated the Chattanoogans earlier in the season.

Baseballers Play L. M. U. Here On Monday, Tuesday

Honaker's Men Play L. M. U. In Two-Game Series Next Week

After registerng four straight victories over Carson-Newman and Emory and Henry, the Highlander baseballers are all set to stop another conference when Lincoln Memorial University brings its outfit to Maryville for a two-game series Monday and Tuesday.

The Railsplitters have a strong team again this season and probably will give the Highlanders plenty of trouble. Both Maryville and L. M. U. have beaten East Tennessee Teachers twice, with Maryville winning by wider margins in both contests.

FRANK DEAN, "ISHAM" JONES WILL SERVE AS Y. M. C. A. ATHLETIC DIRECTORS

The Y. M. C. A. Cabinet is fortunate in securing the services, as Athletic Directors, of two active, and popular young men, Frank Dean and Harold (Isham) Jones. Dean is one of our most formidable wrestlers and it is a rare occasion when he fails to add five points to Maryville's advantage at the completion of his 165-pound class encounters. Jones, although not active as an actual participant in any field of sport, is nevertheless a very capable and efficient manager of the baseball team. Both of these boys will do much to furthering the athletic activities of the Y. M. C. A. during the coming year.

TRACK AND FIELD MEET WILL BE FINAL EVENT IN Y. ATHLETICS

The last event in the program of Y. M. C. A. inter-class sports will be a track meet to be held Friday, May 17. Each of the class athletic diretors is urged to begin organizing his respective team.

HIGHLANDERS CRUSH C-N, E-H IN FOUR TILTS FOR PERFECT WEEK

Second Win Gives Highlanders Even Break In Series With Carson-Newman Eagles

Two innings of the wildest exhibition of baseball seen on the local lot this season gave the Highlanders a 13 to 3 triumph over Carson-Newman Tuesday afternoon and an even break in the four-game series.

In the fourth inning, with Carson-Newman holding a 2-1 lead, Coach Honaker's crew went to work and piled up seven runs on singles by Corns, Blazer, Glen Evers, and Cross, mixed in with two passes, three errors, speedy base running, and loose fielding in general.

The following round brought forth another orgy of scoring as the Scots pounded Layman, star Eagle hurler, who won two decisions over the Highlanders from the box and then capitalized on the inability of the relief pitcher to find the plate. Blazer walked to open the inning and Glen Evers clouted a three-bagger to send Layman to the outfield and Taylor to the mound. Kalman walked, and Evers made home safely in a double steal, with Kalman going to second. Two more walks, an infield out, and Holloway's single brought in the three final counters.

While the Highlanders were scoring runs almost at will, Carl Evers and Ralph Ashby, victims of Layman's pitching in the first two tilts, were turning in a sterling brand of tossing to even the score with Layman. Evers pitched the first six innings yielding only four hits and three runs, while Ashby also gave up four hits in the last three rounds, but kept them well scattered.

Glen Evers, freshman catcher, set the pace for the local hitters with a single and triple in four times at bat, while Olive hit a triple, double, and single to lead the Eagle sluggers

Defeat Eagles, 4-3

Slashing out a home run with the score tied in the ninth inning, John Henry, Scot shortstop, broke up a pitcher's battle between Ralph Hand of Maryville, and Harris, of Carson-Newman, last Saturday afternoon at Jefferson City and enabled the Highlandere to carry off their first victory in the third game of the series with the Eagles by a score of 4 to 3.

The Highlanders collected a total of 14 safe blows including home runs by Henry and Holloway, but Harris was effective in the pinches, while Hand batted 5-hit ball, struck out six batters, and whitewashed the Eagles after the second inning, in which Carson-Newman scored all its runs.

Big Jim Holloway, ace of the Diamondeers Capture Fourth Straight With Heavy Triumph Over Wasps

Coach Honaker's fast-stepping diamondeers won their fourth straight triumph Thursday afternoon by trouncing Emory and Henry, 7 to 5 in the second game of the two-game series after overpowering the Wasps in the first tilt Wednesday by a 12-3 count. In the first contest, Atchison and Collins pitched for Maryville, with Barker doing the tossing for Emory-Henry. Evers and Ashby pitched the second game with Gitings pitching for the Wasps.

The outstanding player of the first game was Donald Cross who accounted for three of the Maryville scores. Jim Holloway accounted for two runs in the same game beforte being replaced by Swearingen. The crowd received the thrill of the afternoon when Holloway made a back-handed stab at a long line drive into center field and held on to the ball despite the awkward position of the catch. Mackey was the outstanding player of the afternoon for the Wasps, collecting two of the teams' ten hits and converting both into runs.

The second game was featured by closer playing on the part of both teams. Jim Holloway was easily the star of this game as his bat accounted for all of the seven runs. After Cross, Loessberg and Henry had reached base either by hits or walks, Holloway sent a long drive into right field. Gilmer, of Emory and Henry, dropped the ball, giving Holloway a chance to complete the circuit and account for the fourth run. In the seventh inning, after Loessberg had reached first on a base on balls, and O'Dell had fanned, Holloway duplicated his homer of four innings before, and when he crossed the plate he had accounted for his sixth run of the day. Emory and Henry tied the score in the seventh, but Holloway's second homer untied the knot and gave the Scots their winning margin. In the eighth, with one down, and three men on base, Blackwell of Emory-Henry struck out and O'Dell caught Marshall's line drive to short to retire the side and save Maryville in a crucial moment. Humphries of E.-H. hit one of the longest homers seen on the local field this year, the ball going over the fence into the woods beyond the track. Louie Kalman showed his track ability in vaulting over the barbed-wire fence to field the ball.

Scot sluggers, poled his four-bagger for the first Scot marker in the fourth round and a double by Hand following Kalman's single in the sixth frame drove in the second. A double by Holloway, a single by Corns, and sacrifice by Blazer added the third tally in the seventh inning.

Netmen Break Even On Road

University of Tennessee, Chattanooga, State Meet at Cookeville Remain on Schedule

Coach Fischbach's netmen were idle today after having broken even on a four-game road trip during the past week.

Of the four teams met, Chattanooga, Sewanee, Murfreesboro Teachers, and Cumberland University, the Scotties defeated Teachers and Cumberland, 4-3, and 8-1, respectively, and lost to Chattanooga and Sewanee, 3-2, and 8-1.

Playing Chattanooga on Monday afternoon, Allen won in singles and Allen and Gillingham triumphed in doubles. Journeying to Sewanee Tuesday Scott won in singles to save the squad from a complete blank. On Wednesday Allen, Ted Gillingham, and Morgan won in singles, and Allen and Woodling won in doubles against Murfreesboro. On the following day Scott lost the only match of the meet.

Those making the trip were Captain Gillingham, Allen, Scott, Ted Gillingham, Morgan, Woodling, and Coach Fischbach.

Returning to the campus Friday morning the racqueteers encountered Sewanee in a return meet that afternoon. Sewanee managed to cop three singles matches before rain stopped the meet.

The remaining schedule calls for meets with University of Tennessee on May 8, the state meet at Cookeville on May 11, and the closing meet with the University of Chattanooga here on May 17.

First Annual Track Meet To Begin At 1:30

Scotties Are Heavy Favorites To Triumph Over Conference Foes; L. M. U. Rates.

The first of a series of annual Smoky Mountain Conference track and field meets was scheduled to get underway at 1:30 this afternoon on the local track.

As the sport page goes to press none of the entries has yet reached the campus but it is understood that nearly every team in the conference is sending participants.

Lincoln Memorial University and Maryville are the only colleges entering full teams, while King College, Carson-Newman College, and others are sending distance and dash men.

Maryville College is branded as the favorite in this afternoon's struggle, with L.M.U. following in second place for speculative honors. Maryville has defeated the Railsplitters this season on the cinderpath, 100-26.

Plans have already been laid for the conference meet to be held at Harrogate, Tennessee, next year, the home of Lincoln Memorial University.

Tracksters Win Over Wasps, 9-630

Gathering twelve firsts in fourteen events, the Scot trackmen ran rampant over the Emory and Henry Wasps on the home track last Tuesday. Losing only the shot put and discus throw in the field events, and taking all firsts in the running, the Scots easily piled up a comfortable margin to end in a 96-30 win.

MARYVILLIANS · AT LARGE

Miss Johnson's freshman English class was having book reports last Thursday. One enterprising young freshman anounced that he had read JOHN BROWN'S BODY. Asked Miss Johnson: "Don't you believe that John Brown's Body is just a little too heavy for freshmen?"

BODY

:—:—:

If you've had to go idto Biss Hedry's office durig the past week, you've probably had quite a tibe udder stadig her segretary, Miss Gaides. It's all because Sprig cabe; the Dature Club frolicked at Bodvak Sprigs; ad Lee Shador idsisted ad goig dowd by the lake. Hope you're sood better, Berdice.

:—:—:

We have absolutely no sympathy for that Baldwin freshman who stealthily took a picture of her moonshining roommate at a moment when, perhaps, it had been better if no picture had been taken. 115 is her room number, girls. Do your duty!

:—:—:

We had no idea there were so many lovely ladies at Maryville until that May Day pageant. We heard several references to the "cute couples" that attended the queen. And the dancers, from the smallest orchid butterfly, to the most excellent pony chorus were delightful. Less graceful perhaps, were the antics of George Stanley in that German dance.

MAY DAY

:—:—:

We'd like to know just how much those seniors know about aluminum, any how. All we could find out about the whole trip was "how much fun it was to turn corners" in those trucks.

If you've never seen Marvin Minear, the fellow that prints all those slips requesting you to "report to the treasurer's office", when he's wriggling his Adam's apple, you must ask him to perform for you. Dr. Fields could probably use him in some of his classes. The psychological effect would be very interesting.

APPLE

:—:—:

One thing they forgot to put down to Newman Smith's credit as a "Superior Scottie" is his remarkable voice. If you've ever been so unfortunate as to sit directly in front of him at a baseball game, you know what we mean. Ed Lodwick and Jimmy Laing come in second and third, respectively in vocal talent, we believe.

We thought, for a moment, the other day that Miss Heron was not at the baseball game. Our searching revealed no trace of the familiar blue Essex. We finally found her in a shining new Chevrolet over near the grandstand. Congratulations, Miss Heron!

ATLANTIC ASSOCIATION

master, none other than the president of the Association, the Rev. H. Gordon Harold '27. Prayer was offered by the President of Princeton Theological Seminary, and one of the Directors of Maryville College, Dr. J. Ross Stevenson. For the succeeding half-hour or more the party became very industrious and did less talking than during any previous half-hour since their arrival Chicken was the chief obsession during this period.

The program of the evening was opened by the singing of some Scotch songs, led by Mrs. Julian (Mary Chris Benn) Johnson, '29.

Mr. Donald Briggs, '33, in his own inimitable fashion, gave some heart-rending impersonations of some well-known, unique faculty members of dear old Maryville.

A reading by Michael Presbyterio Testa, 34, was well received and added a thoughtful sentiment to the fine spirit of the occasion.

The climactic contribution of the evening was an address by Dr. Donald Mackenzie, professor of Biblical Theology at Princeton Theological Seminary. His interesting interchange of seriousness and humor and his own genuine Scotch accent made him particularly well-fitted to be with us and to speak to us.

The business meeting was the next in order for the evening, but there is little of that which would prove interesting to Maryvillians, except for the election of new officers. The retiring officers for 1934-1935 are: President, H. Gordon Harold; Vice President, Mrs. Luther Hammond; Secretary-treasurer, Lynn Rankin. Last year when the Association did not have its annual meeting, Mr. Rankin, who was preparing to graduate from Princeteon Seminary and who is now studying in Edinburgh, Scotland, appointed as acting-Secretary-treasurer, Harry Wood, '33. The nominating committee consisted of Dr. Vincent Shipley, '12, Donald Briggs '33, and Barbara Lyle '32. The nominees for 1935-1936 were presented as follows: President, Dr. Julian Johnson '27; Vice President, Mrs. Joseph (Billie Crawford) McClellan; and Secretary-treasurer, Frank R. Neff, Jr., '33. The nominees were declared elected by a vote of those present.

Reports were made by ex-President Harold and ex-Secretary Wod concerning absent members of the Association who had sent greetings and regrets and information to the group. These reports varied widely, all the way from those who were doing big things and couldn't be present to those who were getting married and would not be present. Following this, there was a general round of news contributions concerning Maryville and Maryvillians. This proved to be very interesting and enlightening in some cases.

One of the most pleasant features of the evening was to hear from Professor John W. Ritchie, of the class of '98, and a noted writer, scientist, and lecturer. He is the wrter of our Alma Mater and told us some interesting experiences which he had while writing this famous song of ours. He said that nothing had ever brought him so much fame for so little work. Professor Ritchie put most of us to shame when he said that he had driven all the way from Columbus, Ohio, in one day, not for us to see him, but that he might see us. Professor Ritchie's home is in Flemington, New Jersey.

STUDENT COUNCIL ELECTS ATCHISON PRESIDENT PRO-TEM

Popular Junior Has Served On Council Two Years; Succeeds Shanor

Frank T. (Butter) Atchison, junior and star Highlander guard, became President Pro-tem of Student Council by will of the council at a meeting held last Tuesday night.

Atchison has served on the council for the past two years as sophomore and junior representative, and will continue during the next year.

He succeeds Leland Shanor, senior, who served as president pro-tem of the council during the past year.

Nothing has quite so delicate a poise as character. Even whispering may dislodge it.

On The History Of a Hat

Editor's Note—Mr. West, whose home is up in Ole Kaintuck where the fine horses abound, knows thru experience what it feels like to work with the noble thorobred. He has prepared here an excellent short account of the glamor which surrounds the historic Kentucky Derby.

By WALTER WEST
(Echo Staff Writer)

On the first Saturday in May the world stands still for a few moments to learn the story of the current chapter in the history of the world's most famous hat. This hat, known the world over, is the Kentucky Derby. All over America, horse lovers and people who don't know the difference between a horse and a mule await to hear who has won the great race known by the unusual name. In England the word-picture of the race is carried by the British Broadcasting System From France to China, from Alaska to Argentina, people focus their attention on Churchill Downs in Louisville, Kentucky, where this great race is renewed each year.

In 1874, a few horsemen in Kentucky cast envious eyes upon the famous English Derby (Darby). One of their number took his daughter and his valise and made a trip to England for the purpose of surveying the possibilities of staging a race of this magnitude in Kentucky. (While there, it is said, he married his daughter to a titled Englishman). After seeing the race at Epsom Downs, England, run over a two mile track, he returned and laid his observations before his fellow horsemen. Plans went forward all winter and handbills were posted throughout the state announcing that $1,000, plus an added percentage, would be given to the winner of the first Kentucky Derby. The race, at that time, was intended to be called, like the English race, "Darby".

On Monday, May 17, 1875, ten thousand lovers of horseracing gathered on the hillside near Churchill Downs to see the race.

Fifteen horses lined up, and at the boom of the starter's drum, sped round the track at a mile and one half distance. The winner was

Wilson Victor In Bates Meet

"Cost of War" Is Subject of Winning Oration

When James Wilson won the Bates oratory contest Tuesday night, it was not the first time his proficiency has been rewarded. Wilson is a transfer student, having come to Maryville from the 1931 class of Tennessee Wesleyan. While at Athens, he was awarded a prize for his excellence in English.

Wilson has been out of school for three years, during which time he was pastor of a Methodist Church in the Holston Conference. He is a native of Chattanooga. When asked what taught him his ability to speak, he replied, "Well, I used to sit out on a creek bank and argue the fish into biting."

Wilson spoke on "The Cost of War". Others in the contest and their subjects were: Arnold Brown and Carl Fisher, "The Art of Living"; Paul Hartman, Douglas Carhart and Ruben Alford, "For Whom Government". The judges of the contest were, Drs. Orr, Knapp and Franklin, and Prof. Davis, all of the college, and Dr. C. W. Henry of Maryville.

Economists Go Afield for Data

Campbell's Class Invades Knoxville Business Houses

Eighteen members of Prof. Campbell's Economics class, now studying Financial Administration, enjoyed a field trip, Wednesday morning through the various business houses of Knoxville.

The group was agorded the courtesy of the Abbott, Proctor and Payne Stock Exchange Co., the Home Beneut Insurance Co., the Goodall Mfg. Co., manufacturers of Palm Beach suits, and the George's Department Store. At each of these companies the the group was instructed in the workings of the respective business in conjunction with their study of Financial Administration.

George's Department Store provided luncheon for the class at the Farragut Hotel at which time a Mr. Jarnegin explained the intricacies of Department Store Administration.

The success of the experiment was such that it is hoped a continued annual practice can be inaugurated whereby future classes will enjoy this same privilege.

Dr. Lloyd, who will address the assembly on Wednesday afternoon, will accompany the chorus.

FORMER MARYVILLE MAN GETS WIDE RECOGNITION

Stacy F. Howell, A. B. Maryville College, 1920, has achieved national distinction for being one of the co-discoverers of the first immune body ever to be produced in crystalline form, it was learned recently from a special dispatch received by Dr. Lloyd.

Together with Prof. James B. Sumner, in whose laboratory Dr. Howell works, the Maryville graduate isolated one of the so-called "immune bodies", little understood substances which promote immunity to disease.

"The discovery is of intense scientific interest because it may lead to addvances in the study of the phenomenon of immunity, the process underlying body resistance", an Associated Press Dispatch says.

Complete details of the discovery can be found in the April 1 edition of the New York Times, page 21.

Miss Tol Will Head Interracial Society

Miss Hendrika Tol, Maryville junior was elected president of the East Tennessee Interracial Society at their annual conference held at Morristown College May 3, 4 and 5. Miss Martna Robison was chosen to serve as secretary for the coming year.

The next meeting will be held at Maryville in October.

PLAN WORK ON CIRCLE DRIVE THIS SUMMER

Architects Make No Provision For Removal of Much Discussed Power Plant

A much changed campus may greet the eyes of returning students next fall if present plans of the administration prove successful.

The feature of the improvements will be the new circular drive about the campus. The blueprints, prepared by a landscape expert, call for a drive beginning with the present drive in front of Bartlett. The route will go behind Thaw and cut across behind Pearsons, going through one corner of the President's lawn. From here it will pass to the north of the Hospital and strike the present drive between the Hospital and Baldwin. From this intersection a straightaway will be run to a spot about even with the northeast corner of Carnegie. From here, the drive will be continued across the present site of the power house, whcih will be moved at some time in the future to make way for the drive.

The present plan does not call for immediate moving of the power plant. The drive now running in front of the post office and Fayerweather, as well as the one between Baldwn and the Hospital, will be filled in and sodded. The present plan is to begin work on the drive this summer, but it is doubtful if the work will be completed before some time next fall.

PSYCH DEPARTMENT RECEIVES GIFT OF AMPLIFYING OUTFIT

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dunning Donate Valuable Apparatus From Kenrad Shops

A radio—vacuum tube—amplifying outfit equipped with an auditorium type dynamic loud speaker has been received recently by the Psychology Department as a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Dunning of Owensboro, Kentucky.

This interesting piece of apparatus has such a wide versatility that it is possible for it to reproduce many of the mystifying effects seen and heard in the General Electric House of Magic at the World Fair.

At present it is being used in connection with a photo-electric cell, which changes light impulses into sound and vice versa.

Is The Chilhowean a Gift or a Business Enterprise? —AN EDITORIAL

Campus feeling has slowly but surely begun to rise—and rightly so—against those so-called clubs and other organizations on College Hill who, having innocently contracted for space and photograph in the Chilhowean early in the year, seek to flee the day of reckoning by disbanding until the following year, or by ignoring the obligation altogether.

This past year more than any other previous one, has found many organizations, which purport to be active, responsible groups, shirking obligations to the yearbook publication, which they took upon themselves by majority vote at the beginning of the college year.

Needless to say, this trend is not in harmony with many of the ideals and purposes upon which Maryville College was founded; namely, honesty in dealings with fellow men, the promulgation of good business tactics, and the pursuit of sound policies wtih reference to future outcome. But rather than rest the judgment of present trends upon those historic sentiments of the past, we would point out the implications of the future.

It has been predicted upon the basis of events during the past few years that the next five years will see the development of many new clubs and other organizations upon the Maryville Campus. Granting this, let us now look at the status of the yearbook.

In the opening months of the college year Mr. Manager and Mr. Editor of the Chilhowean comb the campus for clubs and their photographs with which to "make their book the biggest and best Maryville has ever had". The desire is no more than natural. Unstable Club meets, hears the plans for the coming year, receives the call for yearbook space, and, feeling sure that it will always be a bearer of the roll, gives assent and makes ready to "smile at the birdie". Without more thought Mr. Manager accepts the signed contract, tucks it away in the drawer, and rests back contentedly on the ease with which one man can do business with another.

But this is where he makes his first mistake, for when in the spring he steps into his Simon Legreeish role and with cat-o-nine inquisitiveness asks for the money, in keeping with the contract signed earlier in the year, he runs full force into the fruits of irresponsibility and lack of foresight in club organization. At this point the situation ceases to be one of business enterprise, but rather becomes a personal issue, and as a result Mr. Manager is dodged, blasphemed, and forgotten.

It is hardly necessary for us to point out that with a rise in club population on College Hill there also will be a rise in probabilities that Mr. Manager, under these business policies, will be caught thirsting at the small end of the managerial horn. And this, most certainly, was not embodied in the original plans for the publication of the Maryville College Chilhowean.

With these facts in mind, then, we must finally ask ourselves how this kind of problem will be answered in the future. Shall we abolish the Chilhowean? Shall we deprive those organizations which are willing to support it the opportunity of preserving those memories in this permanent form of college days which have grown dear to them? We think not, for such a policy would be no less than an affront to those yearbook pioneers who, in 1906, produced the first Maryvlle College Chilhowean.

Rather, there is a better way, a course of action which must be worked out by Mr. Manager and Mr. Club consulting together. In order to insure the success of the publication Mr. Manager must ask Mr. Club to substitute foresight for impulse, cooperation for disinterest, and finally, cash for contract. If the size and beauty of the Chilhowean must suffer, it must be a mutual sufferance, for in no other way can the yearbook come into its rightful heritage as a business enterprise, that of unquestionable financial stability.

HISTORY OF THE HAT

Aristides. The owner of the winning horse pushed his way through the crowd to receive the purse and gold cup. And, on that day, the name of the race was changed from "Darby" to "Derby" according to pronunciation. The cup was not the slender, graceful, chalice-like cup one might expect it to be. Instead, it might well have been taken for a gold hat of th derby style, except for the stem and base of the cup. Ever since the day that Aristides won the Derby, Kentuckians, and most southerners, have called the race "Derby".

A great many things, unusual and interestng, have taken place in the sixty one renewals of the Kentucky Derby. Perhaps the strangest thing of all occurred in 1892 when there occurred what is remembered as the "walking Derby". As post time for the race approached, it became evident that the race was to be run over a track hock deep in mud. All owners except three withdrew their horses from the race. As the crowd anxiously awaited the start, the horses came to the starting post The barrier was sprung and—wonder of wonders—the horses started trotting slowly around the track. In bewilderment the crowd looked at each other's faces. All three trainers had given all three jockeys the same orders. The back stretch was reached before the horses did more than canter. The object of the strange orders was to prevent the horses from being exhausted near the start by running in the heavy mud. By walking the horses, the jockeys saved the energies of their mounts and gave the crowd the thrill of their lives when the home stretch was reached and the horses were urged into top speed.

Jockeys have made history in the Derby just as horses have. Only two jockeys have ridden three winners in this great race. One of them was a "cosmopolitan" person. He had the Jewish name of Isaac, and the Irish Catholic name of Murphy. He was neither Jew nor Irish. He was a modern negro. In more recent times, the premier of American jockeys, Earl Sande, has ridden three horses across the line first.

The outstanding figure of the Kentucky Derby is Col. Matt J. Winn of Chicago, president of the Churchill Downs Jockey Club. As a lad of twelve he sat on the seat of his father's grocery wagon on a street near the race track and saw the first Kentucky Derby. He has seen every Derby since then. At seventy-three, he attended the sixty first running of the Derby, this year.

Only one owner has ever owned more than two winning Derby horses. He is Edward Riley Bradley, owner of the Idle Hour Stock Farms, and he has owned four winners. He also holds the distinction of being the only owner to own horses that won the Derby two years consecutively. In 1933, when his Broker's Tip won the race, the jocky of that horse and the jockey of Head Play had a fight as the horses thundered down the stretch, neck and neck. This is the only time such a thing has happened.

Only one filly has ever won the Derby. In 1915 Regret scored that sensational victory. From the small first money of $2,850, the main prize has grown till in 1928, Mrs. J. D. Hertz received more than $55,000 for the victory of her Reigh Count. (Of, course, the depression hit the Derby as it did everything else.) Only one imported horse ever won the Derby. Omar Khayyam, an English horse, won in 1917. Only one cold blooded horse, or horse without pure thoroughbred ancestors, ever won the Derby. He was Black Gold who won in 1924, when a Tennessee horse named Chilhowee, in honor of the nearby Chilhowee Mountains, ran second.

Just as one filly has won the race, so very few women owners have won, though each year finds several women entering horses. Mrs. Lasca Durnell won in 1904. Twenty years later, Mrs. R. M. Hoots won with Black Gold. Last year, Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan won with Cavalcade. Mrs. Sloan is the heiress to the millions of the Dodge Motor Co.

This year, for the first time in many years, a filly, Nellie Flag, went to the post the favorite. But tradition did not fail. Nellie Flag could do no better than fourth place. Omaha, owned by William Woodward of New York, won the race, runnig the mile and quarter in 2:05. Roman Soldier was second, and Whiskolo was third. Whiskolo is owned by the Milky Way Farms of Pulaski, Tenn., which is owned by Mrs. Mars, wife of the late owner of the Milky Way Candy Co.

Such, plus much more, is the lore of the Kentucky Derby. It is this tradition that makes it famous the world over. It is this that makes every Kentuckian love it. Other races may be of more value, but none has the prestige of the great Kentucky Derby. No cup of victory means so much to the winning owner as the cup of a derby hat. It is all this that makes the world stand still and listen when the Kentucky Derby goes on the air.

No woman ever reaches a higher point than to be wise and womanly at one and the same time.

We know some amen corner saints who could write a howling book on "How to Shave Without a Razor".

CORRECTION

In a recent issue of the ECHO the statement appeared that Dra Hunter, Fields, and Miss Gamble attended meetings of the Tennessee Educational Association. Apologizing for this error of fact we make the following correction:

Dr. and Mrs. Fields and Miss Gamble, accompanied by Walter Cloud, Don Harris, and Louis Krainock attended the annual convention of the Southern Society for the Study of Philosophy and Psychology held at Nashville Saturday, April 20.

Two reports of experiments carried on in the Maryville Laboratories were presented to the Society, one by Dr. Fields, entitled "A Report on the Test, Re-test Performance of 38 College Students and 27 White Rats on the Identical 25-Choice Elevated Maze", and the other by Donald Harris, entitled "An Item Analysis of the Maryville College Poetry Test With Respect to Sex and Certain Other "Personality Differences".

The first paper is the result of work done here last year by Clark Lathan, '34. The latter is an outgrowth of the test of poetic effectiveness, more commonly known as the Orr Poetry Test, devised and given by Richard Orr, '34.

WRITERS' WORKSHOP ELECTS

The new members are Lynn Anne Brown, Mary Gladys Brown, Daphne Harris, Shirley Jackson, Dorothy May Lewis, Robert Borcer, Alex Christie, Michael Fogaris, George Kent, John McIntyre, Richard Meadows, and Edward Thom.

A picnic and the formal initiation will be held on Monday afternoon in the college woods. The new members will assume their active duties next year.

Scots Beat L. M. U. Twice To Take Loop Lead

Scotties Divide Twin Bill With Emory-Henry

Drop Nightcap, 6-4, After Late Rally Wins Opener, 7-6 At Emory, Va.

The Highlander baseballers divided a double-header with Emory and Henry at Emory, Virginia, Wednesday afternoon, winning the opening contest 7-6 and losing the nightcap 6-4, in the only games played on a scheduled four-day road trip which was cut short Thursday by a wet field at L. M. U.

In the opener of the two seven-inning tilts, the Highlanders staged a last frame rally to put across three tallies and overcome an early Wasp lead. With the Scots trailing 4 to 5, Loessberg opened the inning with a single. Henry was hit by a pitched ball, and Holloway, Corns, Glen Evers, and Kalman singled to score three runners and give the Highlanders a two-run advantage, which proved just enough to win the game when the Wasps countered once in their half of the seventh.

Jim Holloway found his batting eye again to collect three hits in as many times at bat and Wilbur Loessberg socked a three-bagger and a single in four attempts to set the pace for the Scot hitters.

Score by innings:

		R	H	E
Maryville	000 220 3	7	9	1
E.-H.	401 000 1	6	12	1

Batteries— Maryville: C. Evers and Henry, and G. Evers; Emory-Henry: Barker and Mackey.

Wasps Win Final, 6-4

Poor base running, coupled with weak spots in fielding, cost the Scots the second Emory and Henry bout by a 6-4 margin.

Scot runners were trapped between the bases five times in all, so that almost half of the seven hits were wasted, while the rest were made use of to bring in four scores. Maryville errors placed on base three Wasp runners who scored on following hits.

Cross, Kalman, Holloway, and Corns each hit safely twice for Maryville, and Loessberg and Glen Evers hit once each.

Score by innings:

		R	H	E
Maryville	002 020 0	4	11	3
E.-H.	000 321 x	6	7	2

Batteries— Maryville: Atchison and G. Evers; Emory-Henry: Gitting and Mackey.

LINKS SQUAD MEETS GREEN MEADOW COUNTRY CLUB AT 1:30 P. M.

The Maryville College golf team, composed of Dick Battaglia, Jim Battaglia, Pete Kosloski, and John Grebos, will meet the Green Meadow Country Club this afternoon at 1:30 over the club course in the second match of the season.

A proposed varsity-faculty match last Wednesday was postponed because of bad weather, but the match probably will be played sometime next week. Arrangements for another match with Tennessee have not been completed.

GILMORE COPS PING PONG TOURNEY

John Gilmore defeated O'Neal Gray three out of five sets to carry off first place in the Y. M. C.A. Ping Pong tournament last week.

In the semi-finals, Gilmore won over Mark Andrews and Gray defeated Embry Esbach to reach the final round.

Interclass Cup Won By Sophs

Easy Victory In Track Gives Sophomores "Y" Trophy

Leading the field in most of the events, the sophomore track team defeated the juniors and freshmen yesterday afternoon in the final and deciding event of the interclass series to win the cup awarded annually by the Y. M. C. A. in its athletic program. The sophomores had previously won the football championship, while the juniors won basketball and the freshmen swimming.

The sophs won 9 firsts in the 13 events, and scored 65 points, while the juniors won 4 firsts and 40 points. The frosh scored 28 for last place. Robert Downes, junior, was high scorer with 12 points, while William Swearingen and Vito Kayruhstis, sophomores, were second and third with 11 and 10 respectively.

Baseballers Top L. M. U. Twice In First Series

Glen Evers Wins Opener With Homer In Tenth As Hand And Ashby Bear Down

Coming to bat with two out in the last half of the tenth inning and both teams scoreless, Glen Evers, Scot backstopper, drove the ball far out into right-centerfield, circled the bases, and slid home a split second ahead of the throw in to put a thrilling climax to a red hot ball game as the Scotties nosed out Lincoln Memorial University 1-0 in the first game of the series at Maryville May 8.

For nine and two-thirds innings Ralph Hand of Maryville and Wassam of L.M.U. hurled unhittable balls at the helpless batters, while almost faultless support in the field cut off the few chances either team had to score. The only error made during the game did no damage to the scoring.

With the exception of Evers' spectacular blow, the defense of each team took all the honors. Wassam held the Scots to three widely scattered singles up to the tenth frame, whiffed six batters, and put the side out in order in five of the ten innings. A brilliant keystone combination of Pitzer, 2b, and Sliny, ss, figured in sixteen plays around the second sack without a babble to aid the Railsplitter hurler.

While Wassam and his mates were giving up no resemblance of a run, Ralph Hand and the Highlanders were yielding no ground and waiting for ther time to come. Hand was touched for eight bingles, several of the scratch variety, but only twice did the Railsplitters get more than one hit an inning, and then airtight tossing plus air-tight fielding kept the platter uncrossed. The entire infield of Corns, 1b, Cross, 2b, Henry, ss, and Blazer

Trackmen Close Good Season In T. I. A. A. Meet

Place Second In State Meet And First In Conference

Scoring a total of over four hundred points in six meets, and walking away with the annual conference track championship, the Scot thinlies ended their season the state meet at Cookeville last week, running second to the U. T. trackmen. The Scots lost but one individual meet, that with U. T. earlier in the season.

In the annual conference meet held here this year, the Scots scored thirteen firsts, eight seconds, and numerous thirds and fourths to total 97 2-3 points. Lincoln Memorial University ran second and Milligan third in the conference meet.

Eight Tennessee schools entered men in the annual state meet at Cookeville this year. Maryville nosed second place from Sewanee by three and a fraction points, while Tennessee ran far into the lead, with a total of 65 points, topping the Scots by 32.

Snedecker bested Sledge of U. T. for Maryville's only first at the state meet. He also did this feat for the Scot's lone first over U. T. in the meet at Shields-Watkins.

Maryville's most valuable man this year, as far as the point total is concerned, was Graydon Paul, ace distance runner for the cindermen. Running both the mile and the two-mile in every meet, he nearly always could be counted on for firsts in both. Second to his record comes that of Snedecker, whose points in the middle distances and javelin throw, as well as his work as anchor man in the relay, is worthy of considerable mention. Add to this the double record smashing feat of Loessberg in the broad jump and Johnson's toss of the discus into the college superlatives, the swiftness of Rich, Savitski, and Talmage in the dashes. Such performances far exceed the expeectations of the Scot track followers of this year.

Scots To Play Teachers Next

Scots Have Edge On Bucs With Two Early Wins

The Maryville baseball squad will bring the season to a close next against East Tennessee Teachers Tuesday and Wednesday on the local diamond.

The Highlanders stopped the Buccaneers twice earlier in the season and are favored to win again next week if the pitchers can stop a pair of .400 hitters and the batters can solve the offerings of McCall, star Buc hurler.

"Butter" Atchison or Carl Evers will probably get the pitching assignment n the first contest, while Ashby and Hand will be ready for duty agian in the second game after their triumphs over L. M. U. yesterday, if either is needed.

Netmen Routed By Chattanooga In Season Final

Morgan Carries Off Lone Scot Point In 5-1 Loss To Moccasins

Coach Fischbach's tennis players closed their season yesterday afternoon, losing to the University of Chattanooga netmen by 5-1. Bill Morgan was the sole Maryville winner. The meet was played on the local courts. Results of the matches were:

Rodman beat J. Gillingham by 6-2, 3-6, 6-3.

Tanner beat Scott by 6-4, 6-2

Hindman beat Allen by 6-4, 1-6, 6-0

Waggoner beat E. Gillingham by 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Morgan beat Joniken by 6-1, 6-4

Chattanooga's doubles team of Rodman and Tanner beat Allen and Scott by 5-7, 6-4, 6-1.

The second doubles match was not played because of the lateness of the hour.

Scot Bats Rap 31 Blows For Easy Victories

Ashby Pitches One-Hit Game In Nightcap; Scots Need Only One More Win

Coach Honaker's rampaging Highlander baseball club took undisputed possession of first place in the Smoky Mountain Conference yesterday by annihilating Lincoln Memorial University in both ends of a double-header at Harrogate. The Highlanders need only an even break in the final two-game series with Teachers to clinch the conference title, regardless of the outcome of the remainder of L. M. U. games.

The Scots far outclassed the Railsplitters yesterday, winning the first game 12 to 5 in a free-for-all slugging bee and continuing with the same tactics in the second affair to win by a 9-1 score while Ralph Ashby was turning in a masterful one-hit performance on the mound.

An error and a single with one out in the first inning was all that kept the Scot southpaw from entering the hall of fame with a no-hit, no-run game. From that time on the Railsplitters could not get a cratch of a hit, and the side was retired in order except for three passes.

MARYVILLIANS AT LARGE

The young themists of Miss Heron's English class 104d were having instruction in the observation and differentiation of sound effects.

"Let us try", said she, "to see if we can listen for and catch a sound which we should deem most pleasing."

A heavy quiet settled over the room. And then—Rrrrrrrrrng went the class bell.

"Very pleasing!" quoth they in a body.

When one netman with spectacles meets another without them, that is though going for the former. But when both netmen wear them, that is interesting.

Last week Ed Scott, Highlander netman, was matched against Hodges of U. T. in a be spactacled encounter. The scene was something like this:

The heat of the day was producing a markedly sudorific effect. Scott would stop play and say, "Uh, pardon me, Hodges, but my glasses. . . " And after five or six points had been played, Hodges would stop, signal for time out and massage the lens of his.

Professor Walker had just finished explainng a problem in battery contact to Doc Kimbler. In the pop quiz which followed, Doc was at pains to remember the adequate solution. Professor, noting his quandary, began to chuckle.

"I know I deserve to be laughed at", quoth the Doc.

"But I wasn't laughing at you,' said Walker. "Instead, I have just observed, over on the Bartlett steps, an excellent illustration of contact. I just saw a fellow kissing his girl."

We note with sorrow the fall of our beloved brother, Mr. Edwin Best. He had a "date" to the women's glee club party. It had been our consolation to have at least one man who was different to sort of look up to. (You know, Pieper deserted the ranks recently, too) well (confidentially) Eddie, knowing who you were with we don't blame you. Indeed we wonder why it hadn't come sooner. Keep it up, Ed m'boy, we know you will enjoy it. Miss Kunkel's Best.

The only things lacking on the "Y" hike last week-end were escalators up Gregory Bald (or whatever was the name of that pile of dirt we climbed and some salt. Of course, girls were also lacking. But that was just as well, wasn't it, Fisher, else we couldn't have that swim a la naturelle.

This "columnist' feels the weight of responsibility of his public office and he deems it needful to make mention of the coming migration to Cincinnati on the part of our college chanticleers. Our word to these blythe singers: have a whale of a good time, and watch the street cars.

:—:—:

The latest fad on the campus is a new organization, None Vocale. We don't trust the linotypist to put in the accents n that name, so we leave them off. The club is composed of those whose "worser halfs" participate in the endeavors of the musical organzations of the Hill. It seems that None Vocale will have its regular weekly meetings each Sunday night during Vespers and will hold them on the front benches in the chapel. We'd like to get childish again and dare them so to meet. The framer of the constitution says that "none vocale" means "not vocal". We say, "yes, and that means 'dumb'."

Folger Tells Faculty of Cumberland Project

Male Home Ecs Play Host At Last Faculty Dinner

The faculty banquet held on Monday night, May 13, in the Home Economics rooms, was served by the men Home Economic students.

In keeping with the decoration scheme of Spring flowers was the basket of flowers presented to Miss Armstrong by the faculty in appreciation for her work in organizing faculty banquets.

The speaker for the evening was Dr. D. F. Folger, who told in a most interesting way of the Cumberland Mountain Homestead Project. Dr. Folger is manager of this Government project. The purpose of the plan is to house families from coal mining communities where the mines have been shut down and the families consequently thrown out of work. Each member of the family must indicate his desire to go before the family is allowed to live in this cooperative town. There the people work at various jobs, such as building houses, sawing firewood, digging wells, or at other tasks which go to building up a town. The workers are paid for the most part in what is known as credit hours. This credit goes toward buying their homes and property. They are, however, paid one-third in cash for the work which they do.

Te Government plans to have three hundred and fifty families in the community, though at present there are only two hundred and forty families. One of the objects in building this town is to build up a community with high moral and social ideals. Everything is on a co-operative basis, even the church. There is only one church, and that is non-denominational. All of the marketing for the town is done together by a few people. Dr. Folger seemed to think that this comparatively new experiment was working out very successfully.

L. M. U. SERIES

Scotties Take Second Tilt, 9-1

After being held to such a close score in the first game of the series with L. M. U., the Highlanders unlimbered their big guns in the second contest to pound out ten hits and nine runs as Ralph Ashby was turning in another stellar 4-hit pitching performance to register a 9 to 1 triumph.

The Scot left-hander deserved a shut-out for his splendid work, but poor support in the second inning enabled the Railsplitters to push across an unearned run.

The Scots countered twice in the fourth and sixth innings, and then put on a batting spree in the eighth to send five runners across the plate. This rally was featured by a four-base drive to the bank in left-centerfield by "Toots" Blazer, scrappy third-sacker, with Corns on base.

Blazer's home run, two singles in two times up by Louie Kalman, and two out of three tries by Dick Corns led the Scot hitters.

Score by innings:

L. M. U.	010	000	000	—1	4	2
Maryville	000	202	05x	—9	10	1

The Scots had little trouble finding the batting range and bombarded the L. M. U. pitchers for a total of 31 hits. In the first tilt, Blazer led the attack with four hits, while Kalman and Hand got three each and Henry hit a home run and single.

In the second tilt, Henry and Blazer collected three safeties apiece.

Ralph Hand went the route in the pitcher's box the first game and gave up eleven hits. The Scots were off to an early lead, however, and held a wide margin before the Railsplitters began to hit.

Glen Evers worked behind the plate while Hand was in the box and Dick Corns caught for Ashby.

Highlander Athletic Forces Emerge With Five Crowns

Class Presents Crowning Event Tonite At Eight

Sheridan's 'School For Scandal' Boasts All-Star Cast For The Season

The social season of the year will be climaxed tonight by the presentation by the Class of 1935 of Richard Sheridan's "School for Scandal". The cast of characters contains a list of the best dramatists on the Hill, and the production is expected to eclipse all other presentations of the year. Included among the players are such notables as Krainock, Wissler, Crawford and Dunlap, all of whom have been seen quite frequently in Maryville productions. With such a cast, an excellent performance is assured.

The "School for Scandal" is said to be one of the only three plays in the English language to secure a permanent place in the repertoire of the theatre since the time of Shakespeare. The other two are "She Stoops to Conquer" by Goldsmith, and "The Rivals" by the author of tonight's production. The play was first produced in the Drury Lane Theatre in 1777. The scene is laid in London and the plot deals with life among the nobility of the 18th century. Excellent entertainment and many laughs may be expected from this comedy.

The advertising has caused much comment on the Hill. Not since the Athenian Mid-winter has such an extensive and unique scheme of advertising been carried out.

Experienced actors assert that they "feel" the characters which they impersonate; that if they are playing mean, contemptible parts they feel mean and debased. Here's the message for you! Don't put this down until you get it. There is evreything in ssuming, firmly and presistenely, the part you really desire to play in life's great drama. Consciously or unconsciously, it matters not, in the years to come we shall find ourselves like our models whose part we played on the stage of life.

Highlanders Dominate Honor Selection With 3 Firsts, Two Utilities

Placing three men on the first team and two in the utility infield position, the championship Highlander baseball team dominated the selection of the first annual All-Smoky Mountain Conference team by the coaches last week. Lincoln Memorial University ran second to the Highlanders with three on the first team also and one at the utility outfield post, while Carson Newman and East Tennessee Teachers placed two each.

Dick Corns at first base, Jim Holloway in centerfield, and Glen Evers behind the plate were the Scot representatives on the first out fit, all by easy margins, with the selection of Corns being by unanimous vote. Don Cross was barely nosed out in the competition for second base honors by Pitzer of L. M. U., while John Henry and "Toots" Blazer tied for the utility infield berth.

This team was selected by vote of the coaches of the conference for an All-opponent team, with each vote for the first team counting five points and each vote for a utilty position counting three. The playeres with the highest totals

Welcome To Maryville Alumni

AN EDITORIAL

This closing week of the one hundredth sixteenth year of Maryville College finds many alumni and other friends of the college once more traversing the by-paths and historic hallways which became familiar places to them in earlier years.

Regardless of when they came or from where they came, we are reminded as we notice their appearance here upon College Hill, of a sort of abstract obligation which we recognize as their just dues, for not only are they the alumni of Maryville College, but also they are the individuals who have at one time or another shared in the great fund of the spirit which makes them glad that this is their Alma Mater.

As they spend these closing days of the year with us there is only one thing that we ask. We want them to be quick to recognize, in its many forms, the progress which has been made since last they were present.

With these thoughts in mind, then, we take pleasure in welcoming them back to Maryville.

Bat and Glove Men Sweep Foes For Double Win

Honaker's Men Sweep Conference Schedule With 19 Victories and 4 Defeats

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Editor)

Crashing out a double triumph over East Tennessee Teachers in the final conference series of the 1935 season, Coach Honaker's sensational Highlander baseball team clinched the Smoky Mountain Conference championship last week and laid claim to the state diamond title at the same time, bringing the total number of Maryville championships during the 1934-35 year to five. The Highlanders had previously won conference titles in basketball and rack and the state crown in wrestling.

Living up to their pre-season high rating, the Scots swept through the conference opposition wth comparative ease, winning 10 games while losing 2, and ending the season with a total of 19 victories to 4 losses for one of the greatest Scot records hung up in recent years. The Highlanders base their claim to the state title on a score of 13 triumphs in 15 games against Tennessee teams.

With the returning members of he 1934 squad greatly strengthened by the return of Big Jim Holloway and his blasting war club and of Donald Cross at second base, by the coming of Ralph Ashby and Carl Evers to bolster the pitching staff, and Glen Evers to take over the catching duties while Dick Corns moved over to first base, and by the eligibility of John Henry to fill the shortstop post, the Scots were doped to have a successful season long before the opening game, since the remainder of the 1934 regulars, Ralph Hand and "Butter" Atchison, pitchers, "Toots" Blazer at third base, Wilbur Loessberg and Louis Kalman in the outfield, and Dick Corns behind the plate or on first ase, were among the outstanding performers last year.

Prominent Senior Writer Says It's All a Bit of Rationalization

Wonders If Frosh Feel That Seniors Are Just Moth-Eaten Fossils

By DON HARRIS
(Echo Special Writer)

I refuse to believe that a Senior does not belong to the younger generation. We are mellowly reminiscent just now, but no Weltschmertz, you understand. Yet I wonder if we seem moth-eaten relics to undergraduates and other fry. The other day a Boy Scout rose to give me his seat—the act seemed symbolic. And there was the sweet young thing who asked Krainock and me in all seriousness if we had been with Dewey at Manila. Brethren, are we fossils? A thousand times no. In spirit at least we are not yet ready for the lethal chamber.

Of course we can look back with tolerant amusement at the foibles of our salad days—and what, after all, is so refreshng as a nice fresh foible with salad dressing? Could any of us forget the great drought of 1920-'33, for instance? When dining we kept our bottles hidden under the table. Occasionally we kept ourselves hidden under the table. Some of us, Schmidt and Cloud—but I will mention no names. Many a night we have slept in the wide open spaces with a curbstone for a pillow, our faithful pink elephant tethered to a nearby lamp post and the pale moon circling o'erhead. Ah well! we grow.

FEATURE

I think we seniors are doing pretty well by ourselves. No jobs, no investments, no yachts, racing stables or county estates to worry about, nothing to do but help Mater dry the dishes—what an idyllic existence. And we deserve a lot of commendation. We kept the country out of war by calmly informing the paunchy old jingoes they could do the fighting on their own flat feet.

But perhaps the best illustration of our spirit was our invention of the horse. We had a lot of opposition about that. The hide-bound conservatives clamed it was only a rich man's toy. The religious element asserted it was against the laws of God and man. "Why were we given two feet, if not to operate the clutch and brake?" they asked. "What makes it go?" asked the more practical-minded observers. But Time has vindicated our judgment. The horse, whether you like it or not, (and I, for one, do not) has come to stay.

You will forgive us if we rest on our laurels these last few days. Forgive us if we enjoy them, the fuss of caps and gowns, the return of old friends, the dear duty of signing annuals. Now and again, talking to those who will eventually occupy our chapel seats, forgive us if we have seemed a bit paternal. "Four years we grew." We may be excused for saying, like Krainock in his Grandpa act, "Bless you, my children."

Book Browsing

J. B. Priestley, THE GOOD COMPANIONS, Harper, New York, 1930

A MODERN CLASSIC is Harper's classification of this great contemporary novel. An introduction by Prof. Kendall B. Taft speaks of the book as an "unusual, even a significant novel." The same critic defines the work as "a story of adventure, with the emphasis on characterization."

Priestley's work is comparable to that of Thomas Hardy. The style of Priestley's writing is decidedly simpler and more direct than Hardy's. Although Hardy is supreme in vividness of description, Priestley excels in dialogue. In denouement Hardy is more clever, but Priestley is more logical. In spite of contrasts, a lover of Hardy is certain to be an admirer of this ater English novelist.

The reader is introduced to Jeddah Oakroyd, the principal character, who is a simple Yorkshire tradesman with an amusing dialect, in the initial chapter. The reader listens to every work with delight as the little carpenter leaves his nagging wife to adventure on "t'road". Miss Elizabeth Trant, an attractive young woman who undertakes the support of a Concert Party (a group of travelling players, similar to a vaudeville revue), and Inigo Jollifant, a tempestuous young school teacher, are the other principle characters. This trio meet one another and travel together through out eastern England in the company of entertainers who call themselves THE GOOD COMPANIONS. And they are.

Susie Dean, a saucy, talented dancer whom Inigo does not marry after all: Mr. Jerry Jerningham, likewise talented, but extremely conscious of his beauty; Jimmy Nunn, indigestional, level-headed, veteran trouper; Joe and Mrs. Joe, singers extraordinary; Elsie Langstaff, buxom and blonde; Morton Mitcham, who has been everywhere and told everybody, but who is really "a good egg when sober"... these are THE GOOD COMPANIONS who live their delightful lives under the skilfull directon of Priestley.

The characters are all very clearly delineated, even the most minor ones. The description is very effective. The reader knows just what a "hole" Tewborough is. He becomes well accquainted with real towns—Sheffield, Bruddersford, Sandybay, The Triangle. The reader's pulse beats in time with the click of the train wheels that carry this group of human adventurers on their pursuit of happiness.

Love has but one native atmosphere. It forgets the differences and reveals in its affinities.

Scots Beat Teachers Twice

Kalman Stars Final Game As Highlanders Sew Up Title

Paced by the hitting of Wilbur Loessberg and John Henry in the opener and of Louis Kalman in the final, and by the pitching of Ralph Hand, the Highlander baseballers ended their drive toward the conference championship with 7-6 and 7-3 victories over East Tennessee Teachers on the local diamond May 22 and 23.

Loessbereg and Henry together accounted for five of the seven runs in the opener, with Loessberg scoring four and Henry driving across three of those tallies and one more, including the tying and winning runs with a triple in the eighth. Loessberg got on base five times, being hit by the pitcher in the first inning and getting two walks, a triple and a single. Henry connected for two singles and a three-bagger in five times up, while Don Cross rapped out a three-base blow and a single in three times up.

Ralph Ashby started in the box for the Scotties, but was replaced by Ralph Hand after two triples by the first two men up in the eighth had tied the score and placed the possible winning run on third base. An outfield fly brought the runner in from third, but Hand kept the Buccaneers scoreless the remainder of the way, and got credit for the victory when Henry's three-baser sent the Scot hurler and Loessberg across the plate in the last half of the eighth frame.

In the second contest, Louis Kalman Scot left-fielder, ended his career for Maryville in conference competition by banging out two singles and a triple in his last three times at bat to continue his rapid climb in the batting averages toward the close of the season.

Ralph Hand pitched the first eight innings for the Scotties and yielded only five hits, never being in danger after his triple in the fourth scored two runners and gave the locals a 4-1 lead. This triumph was the sixth of the season for Hand without a setback.

In the final game of the season, the Highlanders turned back the Alumni with ease, pounding out a 15 to 3 decision on April 24.

Some of these near-by days, a daring literary pioneer is going to write a book whose title shall be "The Jungle". It is not to be another literary commercial gusher that tells the story of dumb brutes on their fatal march to death. It will be the harrowing tale of gilded and mirrored rooms where the innocent are slaugthered. Here inhuman mothers, blinded by the glitter of gold and the glamor of genius, drive their daughters through the chutes into palaces whose deep shadows shall never lift.

THE PARADE OF THE CHAMPIONS

Basketball

Basketeers Set Good Example By Blanking Conference For First Title

Playing through the most successful season in Maryville basketball history, the 1935 Highlander hardwood artists romped all over conference opponents to carry off their first Smoky Mountain Conference championship with a perfect record of 13 victories without a defeat, thereby taking the first step in "the parade of the champions." During the season as a whole, the Scots captured 18 decisions out of 23 games.

Coach Honaker built the 1935 basketball machine, which has been described as the best in conference history, around Captain Rex Allen, senior forward, and four sophomores, John Henry, forward, Lee Hannah, center, Thomas Crumbaugh and Jack Overly, guards, with "Butter" Atchison, junior, and John Odell, freshman, doing most of the relief work. This combination proved unstoppable in its dash toward the conference crown.

The Highlanders opened the preseason hostilities with a 34 to 20 victory over Blount Motor on December 10, but lost to the strong Woco Pep quint a week later by a 42-33 count. The following night the Scots defeated Johnson Bible College 38 to 26 at Kimberlan Heights in the final game before the Christmas holidays.

After two weeks off, the Scotties donned their togs again January 4 and dropped a 44-36 decision to Blount Motor the following night. On January 7, the New York Celtics brought their world's champion professional outfit, led by Joe Lapchick, foremost center in basketball to Maryville and checked the Scots 35 to 27 in a fast tilt. Two nights later the locals topped Tennessee January 11 smothered Johnson Bible College under a 3-13 score on the home court in the last warm-up affair.

The Highlanders cut loose with all their power in the conference opener January 14 and swamped Appalachian Teachers 49 to 25. On a two-day trip January 18 and 19, the Scots added two more conference wins, over Tusculum 34-25 and over L. M. U. 44-33.

Glen Roberts and his Emory and Henry Wasps found the Scots almost too good to beat January 23, and were able to eke out only a 38 to 34 triumph. The locals continued their good work the next night to annex their fourth conference win, stopping L. M. U. 45 to 25.

Journeying to Jefferson City January 26, the Highlanders treated the Carson-Newman Eagles to a 46-37 defeat to put another foe out of the unbeaten cicles. On February 1, the Scotties rolled up an easy 55-40 decision over Wesleyan, and three nights later bowled Carson-Newman over again by a 42-37 margin in Alumni Gym.

Following two weeks of light practice during the February Meetings, the Highlanders were victorious over the Milligan Buffaloes, defending conference champions, by 43 to 32 in a stirring battle February 14, and in a return bout February 18, the first of a four-game road trip, the Scots proved their superiority over the other conference teams with a 41-36 conquest. The following night East Tennessee Teachers fell before the Scots 43-29, and King suffered the same fate February 20, losing 48 to 42. After winning the three conference games, the Scots experienced a let-down in the fourth tilt of the trip at Emory, Virginia, and lost to Emory and Henry 45 to 19.

With the conference crown already in the bag, the Highlanders closed the season February 28 with a 58-40 victory over King in Alumni gym, as Captain Rex Allen ended a successful career by looping a total of 26 points during the contest.

Tracksters Ran Away With Conference Meet; Place Second In T. I. A. A.

Following basketball and wrestling in the line of championships, Coach Bob Thrower's cinderpath warriors added another title by overwhelming the conference foes in a meet held at Maryville May 4.

The Highlander trackmen, with Graydon Paul, veteran distance runner who was elected captain at the close of the season, and Stuart Snedeker leading the way in point scoring, totaled over 90 points in each of three dual meets, lost only to Tennessee, won the conference title, and closed the season by placing second in the state meet.

The locals had little trouble topping Chattanooga University 94 to 37 in the first meet of the season at Maryville April 13, but found Tennessee too stiff April 16 and lost to the Vols 92-39 in Knoxville.

Lincoln Memorial University was toppled April 19 by the score of 100 to 26 at Harrogate, and Emory and Henry fared little better April 30 as the Scotties piled up a 96 to 30 triumph at home.

Wrestling

For the fourth consecutive year Coach Bob Thrower led his Highlander wrestling squad to the state championship by winning seven matches and tying one in state competition, while losing to Appalachian Teachers of Boone, North Carolina in another bout.

At the close of the season, Coach Thrower entered two of his grapplers, Ridder and Millsaps, in the National Collegiate Championships at Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, but both lost their first matches in close scraps.

A summary of the season follows:

number of practice sessions low, the Highlanders were able to shut out Hiwassee 5-0 in the curtain raiser here April 2. Three Scot hurlers limited Hiwassee to one safe blow.

After more rain had caused three postponements and finally cancellation of a scheduled game with the Knoxville Smokies, Indiana University came to town and administered a 9-7 defeat to the locals in a ragged tilt April 11, but the Scotties evened the series the following day with a 6-5 win.

In a return game with Hiwassee April 15 the Scots won their second easy victory by a 6 to 3 count.

Another northern team, the University of Cincinnati, invaded the Maryville diamond April 18 and 19 and left on the short end of two games, the Highlanders winning the opener 14 to 11 and the second game 7 to 1.

The conference season was opened at Jefferson City April 20 with a 3-1 loss to Carson-Newman, but the following week, on April 23 and 24, the Scotties took a two-game series from East Tennessee Teachers, in Johnson City, by scores of 8-5 and 18-5, for their first conference wins.

Carson-Newman stopped the locals again by a 6-3 count at Maryville April 25, this being the last conference and state defeat of the season. The Highlanders turned the tables on Carson-Newman two days later, copping a 4-3 decision in

And then we had recognitions and presenting of prizes in chapel yesterday morning. Everybody should know how who Archibald Franklin is. You'd hardly recognize some people's names when the middle one is used.

:—:—:

It amused us to hear of choir members given recognition for regularity in attendance, and then have them absent when it came time to receive the award.

:—:—:

The best prize of the morning, of course, was that one received by Dr. Shine. Twins were quite appropriate at this time when the NRA is being revoked with its limitations on labor. (or, We wonder if there's any connection between twins and the revoking of the NRA with its restrictions on mass production).

:—:—:

It grieves us to see that the faculty is omitted in the distribution of awards. Couldn't we give a prize to the faculty member who forgot the most classes, or the one who slept most in class, or the one who gives the most entertaining leading of the devotional exercises.

:—:—:

Now we're coming to the time of the year when we clean up and find things we'd blamed the neighbors for swiping. We'd like to find the pen we lost, and the grades we've also lost this semester.

:—:—:

Last year at one of the closing meals someone started to sing the Alma Mater. May we suggest that that be eliminated this year, or else and they'll be glad to get rid go hungry for one meal.

:—:—:

And while remembering: there was an auction sale conducted by Bobbie Paxton a couple of years ago. Let's have another one. We announce that there will be an auction sale of used furniture and bric-a-brac in the Carhart Co. room. They don't know about it yet, but they've more junk than anybody else and thye'll be glad to get rid of some. Crump's car is included.

:—:—:

This column wishes to all the seniors a good future with no complications arising thru their college sweethearts. Wonder how many future U. S. presidents and other big shots will be in the bunch. We're not sure of that though we are sure that there'll be a flock of salesmen and maybe gas station attendants. Just a little advce: "He who laughs last, laughs last" and "a ring on the finger is worth two on the phone". That latter piece is from Eddie Best.

:—:—:

We've been decent and never made a crack at Pearsons food, but this is to good to pass up. We've some friends living on the edge of the campus. They're kind hearted and one day they pick up a stray cat and domiciled it with them. Another day they ate in Pearsons and thinking of the hungry brute at home they took the cat over some of Pearsons food. He, cat, took it, innocent creature. Conclusion: the cat disappeared and didn't return for several days. Can it be that a cat has more sense than we college students?

BASE BALL

Jefferson City, and then plastered the Eagles with a 13-3 licking April 30 to even the series at 2-all.

The Emory-Henry Wasps were the next victims of the Scotties as they suffered a pair of setbacks on the Maryville diamond by scores of 12-3 and 7-5 on May 1 and 2 in non-conference games.

The league-leading Lincoln Memorial University Railsplitters blew into town confident of victory May 8, but the Highlanders had other plans, and defeated the Railsplitters in both games of the series, 1-0 and 9-1. The first game was the most thrilling of the season, and was decided by a home run by Glen Evers with two out in the tenth inning, after Hand of Maryville and Wassam of L. M. U. had staged one of the best mound duels of the year, aided by faultless support in the field.

In a return series with Emory and Henry at Emory, Virginia, on May 15, the Scots divided a double header, winning the opener 7-6 and dropping the nightcap 6-4. In another double-header on May 17, this time at Harrogate, the Highlanders gained the conference lead with a double triumph over L. M. U. by the wide margins of 12-5 and 11-1. Ralph Ashby held the Railsplitters to one hit in the second contest.

With only one more victory needed to win the championship, the Highlanders trounced Teachers twice, by scores of 7-6 and 7-3, on the local diamond May 22 and 23, and closed the season the following day with 15-3 walk-away over the Alumni.

Annual Y Retreat Held At Line Springs Hotel

Cabinets Confer on Matters of Importance in Year's Program

Forty-five students, chaperoned by Misses Heron and Jackson, attended the annual retreat for Y. M., and Y. W. cabinets, held at Line Springs Hotel on the week-end of September 7.

Following the opening banquet on Saturday evening, Toast Master Earle Crawford, former President of Y. M. C. A., introduced the following speakers: Dr. Hunter, Alex Christie, Elizabeth Kunkel, and Archibald Pieper. One of the highlights of the evening was a group of songs, sung delightfully by Don McArthur.

The keynote of the conference wa sounded in an address by Dr. Hunter in which he pointed out that the first duty of the cabinet members was their own living of Christian lives.

He was born in India the son of missionaries of the United Presbyterian Church, came to America when a child, is a graduate of Westminster College (Pennsylvania), in the class of 1924, and of the Biblical Seminary, New York; in 1928 he received the degree of Master of Sacred Theology and in 1932, that of Doctor of Sacred Theology from the University of the State of New York through the Biblical Seminary, New York City. Dr. Lloyd Joins Other Officers In Greetings

It is a noble heritage and a wonderful fellowship into which a student enters at Maryville College. Old students return with eagerness; new students come with enthusiasstic hope. A unified campus group, warm friendships, inspiring teachers and counselors, strengthening of body, opportunity to study, broadening of culture, a deepening of spiritual life —all these one may find here.

I am glad to accept this privilege offered by the Editor of The Highland Echo, to extend genuine welcome and greetings. May 1935-1936 be a great year on the old Hill.

RALPH WALDO LLOYD, Pres.

Sometime during the past summer all of you new students were confronted with a decision, adecision in which chose Maryville College. This decision probably will play an important part in the building of your life. In many cases it will probably prove an influence in deciding your life's occupation.

As president of the Athenian Literary Siciety, I feel it an honor to have this opportunity of giving this word of welcome.

For the men there are two societies on the Hill. The Atheenian Literary Society always holds a warm, hearty welcome for both old and new students. I trust that each of you will join one of the societies. We want you to visit both societies before making your choice. Your choice should be made, due not to the fact thot some ambitious member has asked you to become a member of his society, but because you sincerely feel that by doing so you will be happier in the particular group.

With these few words, I wish this ear to be the happiest yet in your life.

David McArthur,
President Athenian Literary Society

HIGHLANDERS FINISH SECOND WEEK OF PREP

Seventeen Lettermen Return To Build Most Promising Outfit in Years

By DICK MEADOWS
(Echo Sports Editor)

With seventeen lettermen, eight reserves of 1934, and twenty-two new candidates in the Scot Camp, and the opening game of the season against the Kentucky Wildcats exactly one week off, Coach Honaker is sending his Highlander football squad through a hard scrimmage this afternoon to close the second week of drill.
